TEXTILE LABOR

Vol. XVII, No. 6

June 1956

BRUCE WILSON
63 AUBURN AVE N E
ATLANTA GA

TWUA

(See Page 2)

Textile Labor 6/57

'Right to Work' Hit at Hearing

NEW ORLEANS—People who agree with TWUA pop up everywhere, even unexpectedly.

C. D. Boartfield, Memphis (Tenn.) Area Joint Board manager, found that out here when he testified at a House of Representatives Education and Labor Committee hearing on a bill to extend the $1 minimum wage to nine million more workers.

Originally Boartfield was called to present the views on extension of the $1 held by TWUA members in New Orleans Locals 394 and 948 and Memphis Locals 606 and 643. But after giving his statement, Boartfield found himself being quizzed by the committee members for over an hour on such subjects as Taft-Hartley, right-to-work laws and southern organizing.

At one point, Boartfield was advocating that Taft-Hartley be given precedence over state right-to-work laws. Suddenly, he was interrupted by Rep. Ludwig Teller (D., N. Y.).

Right-to-work laws, Teller told his fellow committeemen and witnesses, "are nothing but union-busting laws in my opinion."

IUD Digest Spring 1957

No Rights at All

By William Pollock
General President, Textile Workers Union of America

This year the Taft-Hartley Act will celebrate its 10th birthday, and many will be the "greetings" aimed in its direction by the labor movement. None will be as heartfelt as ours, for no other group in American industry has suffered so painfully from the law's impact.

I am not minimizing the difficulties you in other unions have encountered — the obstructions, the legalistic barriers, the anti-strike injunctions, the inconvenience, the expense. Every union and every worker has lost something, but of all the major industrial groups in the country, only the textile workers have lost nearly everything.

As an industrial citizen, the unorganized textile worker is back where he was in 1932; he has no rights at all. And because this is so, the organized workers have lost ground, rather than gained it, in their struggle toward parity with other industries.

Why have textile workers and the cause of textile unionism been hit so much harder than average? The principal reason is this:

A decade ago, when the Taft-Hartley Act was passed, every other basic manufacturing industry in the United States was predominantly organized. That is to say, collective bargaining was the firmly established practice in the auto, steel, electrical, rubber, oil, garment, and other industries, even though large pockets of unorganized workers remained.

Not so in the textile industry, partly because our organizing effort got under way some years after the rest and partly because the nature of the industry itself required a vastly greater number of separate campaigns than others. We came into the Taft-Hartley era with slightly more than one-third of the country's 1.3 million textile workers under contract. Today, ten years and some $10 million later, we represent slightly less than one-third of the million textile workers now in the mills.

We can testify without fear of contradiction that if Taft-Hartley has been a problem to unions in organized industries, it has been a disaster to those whose major organizing job is yet to be done.

Human Terms

I want to tell you why this is so in human terms—by telling you what happens to men and women, supposedly free Americans protected by the Constitution and the laws of the land, when they try to organize today. But first I want to make one other point:

This is not just a problem for the textile workers or for our union. It is not just a problem for the AFL-CIO. It is a problem that should concern every American. For while nearly a million workers and their families are condemned to economic circumstances far below the accepted standard of decency in this country; and while they are denied their most elementary rights as citizens, including freedom of speech, press, assembly, and even religion, the economic and political status of all Americans is imperiled. It was with this in mind that we labeled our industry a "Crisis for America."

Now let us see what it means to be a textile worker and to have no rights at all.

Our scene is almost any textile town in the South. That's where 70 percent of the textile industry is located—less than 15 percent of it organized. A typical textile town is just that—textile and nothing else. Often there is only a single mill: a worker who loses his job must turn to farming, if he can, or pull up roots and move far away.

But even in isolated communities, workers grow restive under hardship and abuse. They know there's a better life to be had; they listen to the radio, look at television (though buying a set may mean long months of installment payments), go to the movies. And almost all of them have heard about the union.

No Protection

So one dark day, when conditions seem less tolerable than ever, a worker or a group of workers write to our Southern office. An organizer is assigned to investigate. He meets with the workers in deepest secrecy—for reasons that will soon be apparent. He tells them that while organizers can help, the workers themselves must do the job of getting names and addresses by department and of talking union among their friends and neighbors. He also tells them the unhappy truth that the union can do little to protect them against reprisals by the boss.

Just what happens next, and when it happens, depends upon the employer's choice of techniques. Sometimes the organizer is stopped by company stooges or by the police on his next visit to town and told that it would be "healthier" for him to go away. But more often than not the first few weeks are quiet.

Thanks to a series of Supreme Court decisions long ago, there is usually no attempt to interfere with the distribution of leaflets at the gates. There are plenty of exceptions, of course. Some communities still try to enforce "anti-littering" ordinances of the kind the court outlawed years back. (The present Department of Justice declines to interfere on the grounds that each such ordinance must be adjudicated separately—a position it takes only on labor matters.) Some employers resort to bat-wielding goon squads at the very start. And, of course, there are the various "licensing" ordinances for organizers which are now being tested in the courts.

Let us assume, however, that leaflet distribution goes along peacefully; that interest among the workers continues to grow; that committees are formed and membership cards distributed. Let us even assume that no special resistance is encountered until the union asks for recognition and petitions for an election.

It should be understood that the timing of the election is entirely up to the employer. If the union petition is filed when fewer than a majority have been signed—few more, say, than the legal minimum of 30 percent—the employer can consent to the election and thus have a vote before the union is ready. But if the union waits until a substantial majority have been signed, the employer refuses to consent, insists upon a hearing, inserts all sorts of nonsensical objections and delays the vote for many months.

200 Fired Last Year

How does the employer use these intervening months?

First, he fires selected leaders of the union group. Did someone say this is illegal? Maybe so, but try to prove it. The present National Labor Relations Board doesn't think so. If there is any other reason the employer can advance for the firing, no matter how flimsy, the NLRB refuses to act.

Some 200 textile workers were fired for union activity in the South last year. Because of the NLRB's ruling, it would have been a waste of time even to file charges in most of the cases. And in the 10 percent or so of the instances in which relief is ultimately obtained in the form of reinstatement with back pay, it will be too little and too late.

As long as seven years ago our union told the Senate that these penalties were no better than a license fee for union busting; and in those days the NLRB hadn't yet been packed with business executives.

But firings are only a beginning. Broadsides are flung at the other workers individually and collectively, not only by the employer, but by the local press, clergy, and merchants. Restrictions on the employer's conduct have virtually been lifted by NLRB interpretation; there are no restrictions at all upon his allies, who can no longer be brought to book unless "agency," in the strictly legalistic sense, can be proved.

Workers are told that the mill will close if the union wins. Those who have joined the union find that they no longer have credit in the neighborhood stores. Often as not they are trailed to and from union meetings. As the election nears they are called in, one by one, to be subjected to promises or threats—or both—by supervisors. Without intending any reflection on the torture endured by American prisoners of war, it is not too much to call this "brain-washing."

Just as bad as what is done to the workers is what the workers are prevented from doing for themselves. They often cannot exercise rights that the rest of us have taken for granted for years.

Freedom of speech? Not about the union, except at the risk of dismissal. Freedom of the press? Only to the extent that leaflet distribution is allowed; for the newspapers in textile communities are violently anti-union in their news and editorial columns alike, and in many cases will not even accept union advertising. The same often applies to local radio, though here a partial remedy is available through the Federal Communications Commission.

Freedom of assembly? One common problem is for workers to find a meeting place; employer pressure prevents them from renting a vacant store, from using any of the public or private halls. More than once the union has pitched a tent at the town outskirts, or held rallies in an open field. Freedom of religion? In one notorious case, leaders of a local religious group came out in favor of the union; within a week, all members of that church had been fired.

No Lie Too Great

Because my concern in this article is the denial of freedom to the workers, I have not attempted to describe other aspects of the employer propaganda. It should be noted for the record that no appeal to racial, national, or religious prejudice is too shocking and no lie is too great for inclusion. The material must be seen to be believed, and even then it's unbelievable.

This, then is a summary of what Southern textile workers are subjected to when they seek to organize. I doubt that I have been able to bring you the full flavor of the anti-union atmosphere. But before you argue that truly union-minded workers should be able to withstand these pressures, let me hark back to something I said at the start.

There is more fear among these workers because—unlike workers in Cleveland or Seattle or Boston—they have no hope of finding another job around the corner. If they are fired, or if the mill shuts down, they will be forced to leave the place that has been their family home for generations.

The wonder is not that the workers can be frightened, but that on so many occasions they overcome their fear. Unfortunately, their courage is not always rewarded. Let's see what can happen when the union has won and, despite the customary employer protest, has been certified.

Darlington Case

One possibility has just been shown by the Darlington (S.C.)

Manufacturing Co., a unit of the far-flung Deering, Milliken chain. No sooner had the 500 workers voted for our union by a narrow margin than the liquidation of the mill was announced. Roger Milliken, the company president, has done this before; so has the nation's largest textile chain, Burlington Industries.

Obviously, this method is available only to chain operations that can spare a unit or two. Less flexible companies use other tactics—primarily a collective bargaining equivalent of the filibuster.

The employer finds it difficult to find time to meet, and then only for short periods. He never comes to grips with issues raised by the union. He digresses, he evades, he tentatively advances counter-proposals and then withdraws them. Eventually it becomes clear that he has no intention of reaching agreement.

This leaves the workers with two choices. Through the union they can file charges of refusal to bargain in good faith. They may even be upheld, three or four years later—by which time the infant union, feeble enough at birth, has long since been strangled by the employer.

The other choice is to strike. Except in special cases it may be even more painful. State injunctions will immediately prevent effective picketing. Strikers will be arrested on flimsy pretexts. Creditors will descend in droves, demanding immediate payment in full of all outstanding amounts, even though installments had been arranged. And because under-employment is still the curse of the South, droves of strikebreakers will be recruited from the marginal farms in the area surrounding the mill. The outcome may be that the strikers will lose their jobs for good—hardly a trade union objective.

I do not maintain that all companies use these tactics or that the tactics invariably succeed. I do say that because of the Taft-Hartley Act and the state laws it has spawned, together with the present attitude of the NLRB and its general counsel, all abetted by widespread public misunderstanding of the labor movement, unorganized workers cannot exercise the right to organize and bargain collectively unless their employer consents. Under such circumstances what ought to be a right becomes a favor—and therefore no right at all.

Who Suffers

This deplorable social situation has an economic equivalent. Average hourly earnings in the textile industry as a whole are $1.51, more than fifty cents an hour below the average for all industry. Even this figure is deceptively high, since it includes relatively well-organized and relatively well-paid workers in synthetic yarn plants, carpet mills, etc. The largest division of the industry, cotton-rayon, with more than half the industry's workers, shows a wage average of only $1.40 in the "better" plants. Because only a minority of the industry is organized, and because it is a diverse, ferociously competitive field, the organized plants cannot go too far beyond the level of the others.

It is not only the workers who suffer. The cost to the community—to merchants and professional people, too—can be read in the per capita income by states, which the IUD Bulletin published recently. The Southern textile states are at the bottom in this and virtually every other economic index. And ironically enough, the mill owners don't really profit much from their own selfishness. Their failure to achieve wage stability has prevented them from achieving any other kind. There are no textile "blue chips" on the stock exchange.

But this is a piece about the workers, not the mill owners, and in concluding it, I would like to add a few words about remedies.

First of all, there is the flagrant deprivation of civil rights. We in TWUA can hardly be blamed for asking, as part of the present civil rights campaign, that workers who are denied their rights for union affiliation be offered as much protection as those who are denied them for their color.

Second, within the general AFL-CIO list of Taft-Hartley amendments there are a few that have special importance to us, such as restoration of the pre-hearing election and a redefinition of what constitutes proper "free speech" for employers. Our general counsel has submitted a report on these matters to Congress.

Finally, and perhaps essential to the achievement of the first two, is a change in the public attitude toward the labor movement, and this, of course, means better public understanding. Just how such an objective can be achieved is not easy to say. It is encouraging to know that the AFL-CIO is deeply interested in the problem; all of us in TWUA hope earnestly that a program is evolved.

Few Americans — and few Southerners, though it's happening all around them—are aware of the extent of the oppression practiced in the South, or of its economic consequences. Somehow they must be told, and we must have confidence that once they learn the facts, they will, like all Americans, take their stand for liberty and the rights of all.

"The facts of life in our economy forced the labor movement to re-evaluate the role of the white-collar worker, and we are still re-evaluating it. We continue to re-evaluate, because we see today that the number of production workers is declining. Therefore, unions composed primarily of production workers will diminish in size. But the number of white-collar workers rises constantly. Therefore, white-collar unions and production unions that encompass white-collar workers will both increase in size. It is obvious today, if it was not so previously, that twenty or thirty years from now there will be extremely few unions left composed entirely of production workers."

—James B. Carey, Secretary-Treasurer, Industrial Union Department

Convention ISSUE

Vol. XIX
No. 6
June 1958

TEXTILE LABOR

The Task Ahead: Rebuild and Revive

BAMA

For the 10th Time Since '39

Clasped hands signify two more years of teamwork for TWUA's top three.

AS A RULE, this column consists of tid-bits about Textile Labor. There isn't much of this sort to pass on this time because we took on an extra chore last month: publicity for TWUA's tenth biennial convention.

Arrangements for a convention as large as ours involve tremendous detail and much sweat. Besides getting a batch of convention material into print before and during the proceedings, we were faced with a new problem: how to get nationwide coverage of our convention out of a distant point like Miami Beach. We never had that problem before because other TWUA conventions were held near textile centers and many papers covered us directly. This time, however, only the Boston Globe assigned a correspondent.

Just Between Us

Our big job, then, was to induce the wire services to assign full-time reporters. Thanks to help from many textile-area publications and from a host of TWUA joint board and local union officers who got their local papers to build up a strong demand for such service, the Associated Press covered our proceedings on a full-time basis. That opened the door to all kinds of publicity, including radio and television. TWUA news ranged all the way out to Seattle and Canada.

Servicing the press and the convention was often an 18-hour daily grind. For instance, our Burt Beck was almost bedded down at the printer, processing resolutions, a convention program and committee reports. Irene Pave's husband, stopping off en route to Puerto Rico, might just as well have kept on going, for all he saw of her. And let's not forget Jimmy Blackwell or Lillian Dreyfus, the department's Gal Friday, who pounded a typewriter until the wee hours of many a morning.

Many minor crises could have developed into major ones had it not been for help from TWUA people outside the publicity department. In this connection, we tip our hats to Alford Dyson, George Powell and their crew of ushers, and to folks like Edythe Staren, Edith Montgomery, Helen McPartland, Paul Swaity, George Perkel, Morris Friedman and George Weber.

Anyway, we managed to live through it. Our rallying cry is: Bring on the next one! Two years from now, of course.

This issue records, within human and mechanical limitations, the highlights and sidelights of TWUA's Miami Beach convention.

For the tenth time since 1939, Textile Labor devotes almost an entire issue to such a story. It is told in a variety of forms on the ensuing pages. They include articles condensed from major addresses, reports on resolutions and the discussions which stemmed from them, and just plain chit-chat. We've also used many photos in the conviction that pictures usually tell the reader far more than words can say.

Although this issue is one-third larger than usual, it demanded careful selection and condensation of material to squeeze the events of TWUA's convention into its 32 pages. Naturally, routine news had to be sidetracked, but we'll resume such coverage next time.

There have been more pulse-throbbing conventions in the past, but this one took a back seat to none for constructive action.

The delegates demonstrated that, despite our many difficulties, TWUA stands united as never before. They underlined this fact by returning all of their leaders to office and through overwhelming agreement on a program to rebuild the union and revive the industry.

For the details, please start on the next page and keep on going.

TEXTILE LABOR

Published Monthly by the TEXTILE WORKERS UNION OF AMERICA
at 99 University Place, New York 3, N. Y.
Affiliated with the AFL-CIO

WILLIAM POLLOCK
General President

JOHN CHUPKA
General Secretary-Treasurer

EMIL RIEVE
Chairman, Executive Council

TEXTILE LABOR is the official publication of the Textile Workers Union of America, AFL-CIO

IRVING KAHAN
Editor

BURT BECK
Managing Editor

All news and features should be mailed to the Editor of Textile Labor, 99 University Place, New York 3, N. Y. Press day, second Wednesday of each month; copy deadline, one week before press day.

Second-class mail privileges authorized at New York, N. Y. Single copy 10¢; yearly $1.20. For Change of Address: Send old address (enclose mailing label) as well as your new address and local number to Circulation Department, Textile Labor, 99 University Place, New York 3, N. Y.

THE KEYNOTE:

Let's Fix Our Eyes On New Horizons

By WILLIAM POLLOCK

FOR THE TENTH TIME SINCE 1939, TWUA is assembled in biennial convention. This is the time for the report of the general president on the state of our union. It is a time for evaluation of the past two years and an appraisal of the future.

Two years ago, when you elected me to the highest office in our union, I told you I had no illusions about this job. I pointed out that I could not singlehandedly change the course of events in our industry and in our union.

But I did pledge that I would not spare myself in meeting the challenges, responsibilities and obligations of my office. I have kept that pledge.

I said then it was my hope and determination to come before you in 1958 with a record that would justify the confidence you have placed in me. I am now about to lay that record before this convention. I won't pretend this is a report of electrifying progress. We all know our union has not enjoyed that kind of success in years. But I honestly feel it reflects an unsparing effort to do all that is humanly possible to overcome the odds that confront textile workers in these trying times.

By what tokens should that record be judged? There are two sides to this type of a coin.

If we look at our union simply as some kind of stock-market operation in which you buy shares with your dues and then sit back to clip coupons, there's even progress of this kind to report.

We began by extending the 6½% pattern in the northern cotton-rayon industry and the 12¢ pattern in the woolen and worsted industry. These patterns were emerging at the time of our last convention.

In 1957 we added fringe improvements in almost all of our cotton mills. In woolens and worsteds, however, we faced for the first time the lack of an industry leader to set a pattern. So we negotiated on a plant-by-plant basis and we made progress in picking up fringe benefits and eliminating inequities.

While this was taking place, the industry was in a deep recession. Employment dropped from 986,000 in 1956 to 846,000 in 1958, a decline of 140,000 jobs. You all know what happened earlier this year. A depression, not only in the textile industry, but in our entire economy, forced us to renew our basic contracts without change.

But on the other side of the ledger were a number of substantial gains. In 1956 we forced the large unorganized mills in the south to grant an average raise of 10¢ an hour. This was vital not only from the standpoint of these workers, but to the goal of eliminating the differential between north and south.

Coupled with the 5¢ raise we had promoted in 1955, we have been directly responsible for raising the pay of all southern textile workers by a total of 15¢ an hour. So while our numerical strength in the south is far short of what we would like it to be, we have had a significant impact in that vital region of our industry.

'The Stronger Our Union, The More Effective Our Voice'

We did even better in our other branches. I won't go into the details here because these facts are available to you in the Executive Council's report to this convention.

So even if we look at our union only in terms of dollars and cents, there have been payoffs, although they are not as large as our members deserve or as we'd like them to be.

There is a tendency to assume that all textile workers are poorly-paid. Actually, we have done reasonably well in many of our divisions. Our rates compare favorably with the general average in all manufacturing when it comes to synthetic yarn, dyeing and finishing, coated fabrics, felt goods, carpets and novelty weaving.

No one need be ashamed of them. But when it comes to our cotton and woolen workers, there is reason to be ashamed.

But I say the shame should be borne entirely by the employers in these mills. Too many of them are dedicated to the substandard wage. Too many compete on the basis of low pay. Too many refuse to share what often are handsome profits with their workers. Too many are dedicated to the proposition that textile workers should not be allowed to organize. And too many are determined to keep them second-class citizens.

This attitude is un-American and anti-Christian as well. We will not tolerate it.

Now let's turn to the other side of that coin I have been talking about.

If the union is not simply a cash-register from which you draw raises, then what else is it? I say it's a way of life and you can't count its value in dollars and cents.

It gives workers dignity and status as human beings. It makes them first-class citizens even if they still draw second-class pay. It gives them a voice in determining their conditions of employment, and in the affairs of their community. It makes them part of a vigorous movement dedicated to work for the common good of both the United States and of Canada.

This, my friends, is the other side of the coin. Now how have we measured up to this standard?

We began this period with a mission: to forcefully bring to the attention of the public the fact that the textile industry is not only a crisis unto itself and its workers, but to everybody else in the United States and Canada.

We did that job well because today there is a much greater awareness in both nations of the need to rehabilitate the textile industry. For the first time there are stirrings in Washington which may help solve the problems of textile workers. A prime example is the fact that the Senate is starting a full-scale study of the textile industry.

There are stirrings in Canada, too. The plight of textiles became an important issue in the recent national elections and, since then, the Canadian Tariff Commission has held hearings on textile problems which may lead to legislative action. So our campaign is having an impact.

But now we have shifted our emphasis. We are concentrating upon producing solutions to our problems, even though most of them lie within the jurisdiction of the industry and the government.

If anyone wonders why our union feels it must produce solutions and answers to management problems, let me say this: Our members have a direct stake in its decisions and its policies: and when management fails to meet its responsibilities, we're going to speak up and say so.

The same applies to the government, because government policies have played a large part in creating the problems we face.

So we have been saying to management: Fix your eyes on new horizons. Show imagination and initiative so textiles can recapture the markets it has lost.

We say: Make textiles an asset to the community instead of a boom-and-bust operation where mills are bought and sold without regard to the public welfare.

We say: Put some sense into a tariff policy that, as it now stands, singles out a basic industry and its workers as an unnecessary sacrifice to foreign policy.

We say: Plug up the loopholes in our tax laws which make it more profitable for industrial pirates to close down textile mills than to operate them.

We say: Give to textiles the kind of help the government furnishes other industries. Provide it with a federal research program to develop new uses and new markets for textiles.

We say: End the distress in communities left stranded by the closing of textile mills.

We say: Unemployment feeds upon unemployment. What ails one section of our economy will eventually spread to all other parts of the economy unless it is cured quickly.

This is what we have been proposing. And we will keep on prodding both industry and government until they meet their responsibilities.

The stronger our union is, the more effective will be its voice and, despite tremendous obstacles, we will continue to make it stronger.

In the last two years, our main emphasis has been where it necessarily belongs—on organizing. Organizing has never been easy. Even under the most favorable conditions, the job has been difficult because the textile industry is the last great frontier of bitter employer resistance. But new obstacles have arisen in the last two years.

There is nothing new in mentioning the Taft-Hartley law as one of those obstacles. Even though it was a very bad law to begin with, it has become even worse in the last two years.

As you know, the National Labor Relations Board is responsible for the administration of labor relations laws. Even when the most fair-minded and best-intentioned men sit on that board, the Taft-Hartley Act ties their hands when it comes to giving workers a fair deal.

The last two years have seen the NLRB completely stripped of all well-intentioned members. The score is now five to nothing—five members promoting the interests of the employers and not a solitary soul left to speak up for the workers.

With that kind of a setup, you can organize only where the employer lets the workers have a free choice. Where the employer resists, the cards are stacked, and in the south, the employer, without exception, resists.

There are many other obstacles. There is the general recession in our economy. When jobs become scarce, workers lose their security and independence and do not respond to organizing. There is the continuous anti-union campaign in textile communities. Municipal leaders and clergymen are mobilized against the union.

And there are the right-to-work laws. I could go on for hours telling you how these laws hurt us, but I won't recite any more details. However, I cannot let this report pass without commenting on still another obstacle. I refer to the activities of the McClellan Committee and the developments which have stemmed from them.

It started off well. It brought to light a disgraceful situation in a handful of unions where criminal and corrupt influences had gained control. The committee gave the AFL-CIO the ammunition to do a job of housecleaning and that job was done.

'Despite it All, We Have Organized'

During all of these proceedings, not a single finger of suspicion was pointed at TWUA. Even so, we have not been unharmed by the presence of corrupt unions. There is another textile union, a much smaller one, and that union became involved with the McClellan Committee.

A lot of scandal was dug up about its leaders and the story made headlines all over the country. It also created a lot of confusion. When there are two unions in the same field, that's confusion enough. When their names are similar, that makes it worse. So, quite often, UTWA, the corrupt union, came out TWUA in the headlines. As you can imagine, that didn't do us any good.

But despite it all, we have organized. In the last two years, we won bargaining rights for 10,292 workers in 167 plants. We signed 182 initial agreements covering 9,636. I know this falls far short of what has to be done. But in this year of 1958, the wonder is that we have been able to organize at all.

I would like to make one more point about the McClellan Committee. Its job was to investigate the improper activities of both labor and management. If any situation needed investigation, it was the conspiracy of southern textile employers to deny workers the right to organize.

We called upon the McClellan Committee to undertake that job. We cited countless instances of fraud, coercion and naked violence employed by southern textile companies. Yet the McClellan Committee said there was nothing to investigate.

We can best judge the impartiality of this committee by the report it issued a few weeks ago on its first year of activity.

There are 150 international unions in this country; the committee found corruption in only five. There are tens of thousands of union officials in this country; the committee turned up evidence against less than 40. There are more than 235,000 union contracts in this country; the committee looked at only 50.

Yet it would lead the public to believe that the handful of cases it uncovered are typical of organized labor in general. Its report consumed nearly 200,000 words and 464 pages. Yet it devoted only 62 words to the outstanding job the AFL-CIO did in cleaning its own house.

These are the puny facts with which the McClellan Committee is trying to indict the whole labor movement. We now see the McClellan Committee serving as the spearhead of a campaign by reactionaries to shackle labor with new laws.

Keynote's finished; Pollock gets gavel from Payton, and tenth TWUA convention starts.

In my opinion, the McClellan Committee should pack up its prejudices and call it a day.

As I said before, our goal is to make textile unionism stronger. A vital way to do it is to form one, united organization of textile workers. That would end the wasteful and costly rivalry between competing unions.

We sought this goal in negotiations with the UTW. Our early talks were fruitless and the reason became clear when corruption was uncovered in that union. We thought the emergence of a new UTW leadership would revive the chance for merger. When President Meany issued such a call last December, we responded to it.

Since then, the AFL-CIO has set up a subcommittee to expedite merger and we have met with the UTW despite the fact that one of its new leaders is a man who once held high office in our own union. He is the man who tried to split our union in 1952 when he lost his bid for TWUA's presidency.

We put aside our personal feelings and negotiated with this man because, above any other consideration, we feel an obligation to do what is best for all textile workers. Our aim is to explore every possibility of an honorable merger. But we want one that will not revive the same conditions which led to our internal difficulties between 1948 and 1952.

We have not made any startling progress. We are very much concerned over the fact that a cloud of suspicion still hangs over the UTW. We are determined that no merger plan shall expose our members to the immoral, unethical and corrupt practices which brought disgrace to the UTW in the eyes of the AFL-CIO and the nation.

But as long as there is the slightest chance of a merger that will protect the interests of the members of both organizations, we will continue to negotiate in line with our pledge that merger shall not fail because of our unwillingness to reach an honorable understanding.

'We Will Be More Than Equal to the Challenges'

This has been a summary of what has happened in the last two years. Now, where do we go from here?

If we were the masters of our own destiny, I could give you some plain answers. But no group can control its own destiny in the face of international tensions and national unrest.

We have an administration in Washington which turns its back on the workingman; we have an administration that rarely holds its own in foreign affairs. Our nation is in deep trouble.

More than five million Americans are out of work. Five million more are on part-time. Industrial production has dropped 12% since last fall, yet the cost of living keeps rising. While all this is going on, what do we get from Washington? An endless stream of cheerful forecasts in an obvious attempt to sweep the depression under the carpet and forget about it.

The times call for much more than just talk. This is the time for the government to inject more buying-power into the economy by cutting taxes, raising Social Security benefits, increasing unemployment compensation, building new housing, schools and highways. This is the time to prime the pump for prosperity by putting America back to work—and Canada, too.

We may not control our destiny, but we certainly can shape it, and that opportunity is knocking on our door right now. Another national election is ahead of us. A new Congress will be chosen.

The climate for unionism is cold; we can warm it up by changing the political complexion in this country. Textile workers have many problems; here's the chance to do something about them. We can do it by undertaking the most intensive political action program in our history. That means getting all of our people to register so they can get behind candidates for public office who represent people, not dollars.

We have built the first permanent, enduring union of textile workers in North America. We have supplied it with ample resources. Our problems are great, but our condition is sound. Our goals are worthy of the greatest effort.

Interested guest is Frank Roche, Florida AFL-CIO head.

I say to you: Let's not be bound by the past. Let's fix our eyes on new horizons. We have the tools. If we all pitch in, we will be more than equal to the many challenges of our times.

This is What it Was Like

It's convention time, so off to Miami Beach are these New England delegates.

Convention is in order and Bill Pollock calls for the next business.

You're okay if you have a room reserved, but . . .

Register here, but wait your turn.

So it's a convention, but office work goes on, even in famed Miami Beach.

Ready, set, go and convention starts.

By WALTER REUTHER
President, United Automobile Workers

Model T Economy Is Really in Trouble

WHY ARE WE IN TROUBLE in America? Well, you don't have to have a degree from an Ivy League university to understand it. It is very simple. We are in trouble because there has developed a serious imbalance between expanded productive power and lagging purchasing power. The only way you can have a full employment, full production economy is by achieving dynamic balance between higher productive power and greater purchasing power. Each time greater productive power is balanced by greater purchasing power on a higher and higher economic plateau, that will give us more of the good things of life.

Unfortunately, the great captains of industry who are making most of the basic decisions don't seem to understand it. These fellows have not learned anything since the 1929 depression. They said then that the problem was overproduction. We have never had overproduction, we will not have overproduction until every family in the world has all the things it needs to make life worthwhile.

You take the home appliance industry. It has suffered mass unemployment for years because it is operating at lower than 60% of its capacity. Is that because every housewife has a deep freeze and a refrigerator and an electric range and a sweeper?

There are enough families in America who need these things to keep the electrical industry operating at full employment for the next 20 years. The trouble is that there are too many families who don't have the money to buy the things they need. That is our trouble.

In 1929 we had a Model T distribution machine that could not keep up with our Cadillac production machine. The old Model T got further and further behind and we got into trouble.

But in 1958 we don't have a Cadillac production machine. We have a supersonic high-octane jet production machine. In '29 we turned out less than $39 billions in our gross national product. Today we have a capacity to turn out $450 billions or more.

So what we need is a high-octane supersonic jet distribution machine that can stay abreast of this high-octane supersonic jet production machine. And the only way you can do that is to see that the people who helped create the wealth made possible by new tools of economic abundance get the purchasing power to buy back the things they know how to make.

You know, when you study economics, the text books tell you that the law of supply and demand regulates our free enterprise economy. When the demand is greater than the supply, then the price goes up until it equalizes between supply and demand. But when the demand is lower than the supply, then the prices come down and they equalize on a lower price level.

It is a good theory excepting those guys in Wall Street and those who run the government in Washington have repealed the law of supply and demand, they don't bother with it any more. They decide how much the consumer is going to pay, unrelated to the law of supply and demand.

That is what is happening in the steel industry. Every time they gave the steel workers a dollar in higher wages, they charged the consumer three dollars in higher prices and blamed it on the steel workers.

They did the same thing in the automotive industry, because this is a part of the propaganda to get the American people to believe that labor unions, in their struggle to get higher wages and a better share of the fruits of economic abundance, have caused inflation.

What are the economic facts? Well, if you take what happened between wages and profits of the big corporations between 1952 and 1957, you will find out who is the culprit, who must bear the responsibility of the present economic recession. If you take the corporations with assets of $100 million or more, and you compare what happened to their profits with what happened to manufacturing wages, the answer is in those figures.

Profits in that period from 1952 to 1957 went up 79.2%. Wages of automobile, steel, textile and all manufacturing workers together went up 19.2% in that period.

The average wage in manufacturing in 1957 was $74.97 a week. If wages had gone up in the same percentage as the profit of the giant corporations, the average manufacturing wage would have been $112.60 a week, or $37.63 higher than it was.

You see, the trouble is that the big business boys are back to the old trickle-down theory that we talked about many years ago. Their idea of the American economy is to give a few on top more than they need, on the theory that if you pile their banquet table higher and higher and higher with the good things of life, some of the crumbs will get brushed off to the people down below.

And our theory is that we ought to cut the legs off that banquet table and lower it so that every family can move its chairs up and eat at that banquet table.

Because in the ultimate you can't make our free enterprise system work unless you are able to create the markets to absorb today's greater abundance. And we will not get for the workers the things they need until the government begins to correct the imbalance. The big business groups, who in cooperation with the government created the imbalance, are not going to correct it. They lacked the wisdom to avoid the problem and they seem to lack the wisdom to solve the problem.

What we need to do is to get the government moving in Washington. There are three basic steps that must be taken. Unemployment benefits must be increased and extended, taxes for low- and middle-income groups must be reduced and social security benefits must be improved.

And how are we going to do these things? We have to work on the bargaining front as economic citizens, and on the political front as political citizens, because the two things go together.

If you said to a textile worker or an automobile worker or a steel worker, "Would you elect a member of the National Association of Manufacturers to be your bargaining committee member to bargain on wages and working conditions and pensions?" he would look at you as though you had rocks in your head. Yet what is the difference between electing a person to bargain on wages and working conditions and electing a Congressman or state legislator who will deal with taxes, unemployment compensation and all these other things?

Just as we elect people to represent us at the bargaining table, we have got to elect people who will represent the interests of all the people in the legislative halls. We are not a narrow economic pressure group trying to make progress at the expense of our neighbors. When we fight for better schools, for Social Security, for slum clearance, for minimum wages, we are fighting for all the people, because we know that we can make progress only as we work to make progress for the whole community. Our enemies, however, keep trying to restrict us.

It is a strange thing. When we support our friends politically in Michigan, we are "dangerous". But I ask anyone who wants to look at the facts to get a list of the gangsters and the crooks whom we are kicking out of the American labor movement and find the politicians that they have been in bed with. You will find that the more corrupt the labor leader is, the more reactionary the politician that he is buddy-buddy with. Because they go together just like that.

Now we have a big job ahead of us. I have been more saddened

Distinguished guest badge goes on Reuther's lapel, and he's ready.

Hands across the border from Clare Easto of TWUA's Canadian staff.

"Howdy, Brother" says a TWUA member to the UAW's Reuther.

by one thing in the failure of the labor movement than by anything else, and that is our failure to complete the job of organizing the unorganized.

This is a task that must be done. The organization of an industry like the textile industry, which represents a difficult challenge, is not the responsibility of TWUA alone. The textile workers have got to carry a share of the burden. But the major portion of that burden has got to be carried by the whole labor movement in organizing the unorganized so that they can have the benefits and the protections that only organization can provide them. As long as there are millions of workers in America unorganized, they are going to be denied their rights, and they represent a continued threat to the standards of the workers who are organized. No one knows that better than the textile workers of America, not the leadership alone, but the fellow in the mill, because he has paid the price for the failure of the American labor movement to complete the job of organizing the unorganized.

But the union is no better, no stronger, than the membership makes it. We need to get more and more people, not to carry their union cards in their pocketbooks but to carry them in their hearts, because they understand what we are trying to do—where we are going—and the kind of democratic tools we need to build with and the weapons that free men and women have got to fight with, when we are compelled to fight.

I say to the textile workers, congratulations on the struggle you have made in the past, on the contribution that you have made. Your road has been hard and rough, but you have demonstrated the will to be equal to that challenge.

Let us join hands with our fellow workers and with men and women of good will everywhere, and let us go forward with the confidence that together we can build that better tomorrow that we dream about, in the image of peace, in the image of freedom, in the image of social justice and in the image of human brotherhood.

Convention is one place to chat with old friends as Chairman Rieve is doing.

IT WAS TWO YEARS AGO that I delivered my final report as your general president. This duty has now been taken over by my successor.

I wish he could have given this convention a more cheerful picture of the last two years. All the economic factors in the nation and in the textile industry are operating against our union. But let me remind you: I was the president of this organization in bad times as well as in good times and I know how it feels. If I had any magic solutions to our problems, I would not have kept them to myself.

For nearly half-a-century I have been trying to improve the lot of the textile workers in this country. I assure you I am still trying.

I also want to assure you that if a way to achieve this can be found, your officers will find it. They need help—your help. I know you will respond, as you have done in the past, to the limit of your strength.

My purpose at this time is to discuss several matters that are important to all of us. Let me begin with our domestic economy.

The average textile worker has plenty of economy. What he needs a little more is money. This year, for a change, the textile worker has plenty of company. All other workers have got themselves a dose of the same economy.

They say misery loves company. I do not believe this applies to you. The fact is that the growing depression as a whole makes it harder than ever for you and our union.

How did this depression come about? Well, it came about because of the present administration's greed and foolishness. It is the first depression in our history that was deliberately invited by the government.

I don't mean the President or the men who really are in charge of our government actually planned to make more than five million workers unemployed.

What they had in mind was a get-rich-quick scheme for their friends, the bankers, to raise interest rates on borrowed money; and they made it harder to borrow so the higher rates would look more reasonable. They knew what they were doing would cause unemployment.

But they had an excuse. The reason they gave the public was that they were fighting inflation. So what happened? The American public stopped buying, even though they had jobs and money in the bank. They stopped buying because our consumer-spending is based on credit through the installment plan.

The so-called tight-money policy

Economic Murder—

By EMIL RIEVE

puts a higher price tag on everything that is sold on installments. So the man who buys a home is squeezed by higher interest on his mortgage; and that's not all. The money-lenders are making millions of dollars out of the government in servicing the national debt.

As they did in 1928 and in 1932, big business and a Republican administration thought they could get away with economic murder, and they were wrong. Now once again there is a danger they will murder our whole economy because it is easier to begin a depression than to stop one. A depression is like a snowball: It gets bigger and bigger as it rolls downhill.

This administration has been living on slogans; the newest one is "Buy now." I think the people are ready to buy. All they need is money to buy things with. All the administration has to do is help get a little more money in the pay envelopes of the American people and it can end this depression.

So it is not enough for the federal government to say: "All right, we will make money cheaper again. We were only fooling you before when we increased interest and made money scarce." It is too late for that.

The administration keeps saying the way to fight the depression is to have confidence. If industry has no confidence in its own administration, then I don't know what can be done to create confidence. The way I look at it, a few more orders would help a lot more than just plain confidence.

For the first time in recorded history we have the spectacle of depression and inflation at the same time. In 1932, like many of you in this room, I ate pork chops that cost 9¢ a pound. If you could lay your hand in those days on a quarter you could buy a meal. Try to do it now. Today, the same week unemployment went above five million, consumer prices reached an all-time high.

This is the payoff. This is how the tight-money program succeeded. When the administration deliberately adopted a policy of producing a little unemployment and a little recession, it gambled with the nation's prosperity for the bankers' profit—and it lost.

But the tragedy is American workers are paying the bill. Another tragedy is that some of the top officials of the administration are not aware there is a depression today. As an example, take Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks. He testified not long ago before the House Appropriations Committee. One of the Congressmen asked Secretary Weeks if he would care to comment on the economic recession, and this was his reply. I want you to listen; it is shocking. His reply was:

"I don't know why we have to be concerned. There is no depression or even a recession. This is just a business lull caused by the Russian Sputnik and the recent severe winter weather."

That was Secretary Weeks' explanation to five million American workers who are seeking employment, and those other millions who are on part-time. Here you have a good illustration of the administration's thinking about the depression.

Unless something is done quickly, American workers will be paying the biggest bill in history. Less than a month from now, the safeguards we built through the New Deal — unemployment compensation and supplementary payments in the auto and steel industries — will be running out by the hundreds of thousands; maybe by the millions.

Interesting lobby exhibits drew attention of delegates, including Rieve and Pollock.

Seems like old times as Rieve and Reuther visit while delegate looks on.

What then? What will happen when five or six million workers no longer have unemployment benefits and, at the same time, are faced with the highest prices in history?

Then the economic question will more than ever become a political question; so let us take a look at the picture in Washington.

It is not a favorable picture and I am not only referring to the Republicans in the White House, but to the Democrats in Congress and in the state capitals.

Unless the Democratic leadership in Congress takes action now on an anti-depression program, the labor movement may be forced to take a new look at its political program. We can not stand idly by while the Democrats try to make a campaign issue out of human suffering without doing anything to relieve it.

I will be more impressed when Speaker Sam Rayburn and the Senate majority leader, Lyndon Johnson, deliver some of those southern Democratic votes for the Kennedy-McCarthy bill for employment compensation, instead of the phony substitutes proposed by the Republicans.

I will be more impressed when these leaders get behind the Forand bill to improve Social Security and support the $1.25 minimum wage, instead of just talking about it.

I will be more impressed when the Democrats act on better schools, on public works and, even before that, on a tax cut for low-income workers.

In brief, what we need and must demand is immediate action to meet this growing depression, and we must demand it not by appeals to a President who is not master of his own house, but to the Democrats who look to us for suport.

Let us remember that our economic problems are not ours alone; they have an impact all over the world.

We have only to turn to a recent speech by Allen W. Dulles to the United States Chamber of Commerce. I am not talking about John Foster Dulles, our Secretary of State who is too busy rushing around and around like a Sputnik to pay any attention to the depression. I am talking about his brother, Allen, who is the director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Allen Dulles was discussing the international perils we are facing. We all know, he said, that the Soviet Union is challenging us on a military basis; but now something new has been added. It is challenging us on an economic basis, too — industrial development as well as foreign trade.

While Soviet production is rising steadily, U. S. production has been shrinking. This is not because we do not have the capacity to outproduce the Russians. It is because we do not know how to use this capacity. So while the Russians are increasing their industrial production, our own production has dropped by $20 billion in less than nine months.

What is the cost to us, as a nation, of such a situation? The undeveloped nations look to the Soviet Union instead of to us. They remember the Soviet Union was an undeveloped nation not long ago, and they think maybe the Russians have found a new formula. So they are inclined to copy the Soviet formula instead of the democratic formula, which they say is too slow.

Now, this is not my opinion. This is the judgment of Allen Dulles. We have only to look at last week's events in South America to realize how accurate it is. Vice President Nixon went down there on a good-will visit. He expected to have flowers tossed to him; instead, they threw stones at him.

This is tragic, and to brush it aside—to say all this is because the Communists inspired it—makes me wonder why we don't do some inspiring ourselves.

It is obvious that the greatest need in our foreign policy is reform in our domestic policy. In Europe, in Africa, in Asia, the best thing we can do for the cause of freedom is to put America back to work.

And now I want to leave with you a message of a more personal kind.

For the third time in succession, this has been a convention of problems; many, it seems, beyond our power to solve. I am sure you are often discouraged because our union has not yet been able to win for textile workers their proper place as industrial citizens.

Let me speak to you as one who remembers when things were worse. I can remember when there was no textile union worthy of the name, and when the hope of building a union was a forlorn hope—a matter of faith and conviction, but not of practical expectation.

Yet that impractical, impossible union was built, and it grew. It grew fast enough and large enough to prove that the need and desire is there, if only the right opportunity is there. We have watched our union grow, and we have watched it shrink to less than half of its greatest size; yet, as this convention proves, we are still very much alive.

I say this to you: Be of good heart; we will grow again in numbers and in strength to a point where textile workers will enjoy the fruit of their labor and the security and comfort they so richly deserve.

Lint from the Loom

MIAMI BEACH—First casualty of the convention was Joseph L. Hueter, Philadelphia Joint Board manager. He tore a ligament in his leg, was bedded down for several days, then hobbled around in a walking cast, equipped with a rubber heel. Joe made sure to tell all and sundry that the heel was not manufactured by O'Sullivan. . . . Ed Corcoran, a TWUA trustee, left the convention early to dash home for the graduation of his son from high school. He also had to leave the last convention, but for an unhappy reason, when his wife took ill. . . . First reporter accredited to the convention was the Florida correspondent for the Daily Forward, a national Jewish language newspaper. . . . One night, when others in the TWUA group were relaxing, guess where Sol Barkin, research director, was? At the public library, with an exciting book of facts and figures.

* * *

Seems like the convention hall was a sea of hats. The Canadian delegates wore snow-white 10-gallon broncobuster stetsons, the Rock Hill (S.C.) group was outstanding in snappy red felt porkpies, and the delegation from Huntingdon (Pa.) Local 1034 came equipped for anything, wearing fibreglass helmets. . . . Victor Ellis, chairman of Old Hickory (Tenn.) Local 1174's COPE committee, couldn't make it to the convention to hear Tennessee's Governor Frank Clement speak. Vic's a state legislator and had to attend a special session of the legislature called by Clement. . . . There was not much evidence of the new chemise style, but one gal dressed in the height of fashion was Erma Dameron, an Amalgamated Clothing Workers staffer who manned the ACWA exhibit booth. . . . At the conclusion of each day's session, products manufactured by TWUA members and exhibited at the convention were drawn for. There were cries of "It's a fix" when the first number, drawn by a Rock Hill delegate, gave the prize to another of the Rock Hill group. Hundreds of prizes were distributed and the exhibit attracted a steady flow of onlookers (see Pages 24-25). . . . As usual, cheeriest and most enthusiastic delegates were Paterson and Passaic dyers. Speaking of dyers, the division hosted a garden party, which was interrupted by rain. Nothing daunted, everyone waited patiently for the downpour to subside, then resumed dancing.

* * *

Mrs. Harold Daoust, wife of a TWUA vice president, hit the newspapers first crack out of the box when she was snapped enticing a porpoise into making a record leap during feeding time at the Seaquarium. . . . Tony Martinez, a former Paterson (N. J.) Local 1733 shop chairman who now runs a motel in Miami Beach, had a reunion with all his old friends. Tony is the father of welterweight contender Vince Martinez. . . . Sad note dimmed the proceedings when word was received of the death of Wade Lynch, TWUA representative, in an auto accident. Condolences were sent to his family from the convention, which also paid tribute to departed members and friends.

* * *

Convention was visited by a retired TWUA Who's Who. Guests were Milton Rosenberg, a former vice president; Arthur Brown, a one-time manager of the Greater New York Joint Board; Harold Griffiths, a past manager of the Bi-County (N.C.) Joint Board, and Joseph "Pop" Yannarelli. . . . The entire Executive Council was reelected, to the tune of rousing applause. The council consists of General President William Pollock, General Secretary-Treasurer John Chupka, Executive Council Chairman Emil Rieve, vice presidents James W. Bamford, J. William Belanger, M. Michael Botelho, Victor J. Canzano, Wesley W. Cook, J. Harold Daoust, Edward F. Doolan, William DuChessi, William Gordon, Neil Griffin, Joseph L. Hueter, George Jabar, James J. Kelly, H. D. Lisk, Joseph J. Miraglia, Boyd E. Payton, Jack Rubenstein, Sol Stetin, William J. Tullar, Herbert S. Williams and trustees Ed Corcoran, William R. Ewing and Mary Vaz.

HEADLINING THE SHOW put on for convention delegates is comedian Herb Shriner, above, a fabulous balancing act, right, and lovely Holly Warren, vocalist, below.

ELECTION'S OVER, and TWUA Executive Council lines up for picture.

Tariffs, Politicians and Us

By JOHN CHUPKA

AS CHAIRMAN of the Tariff Committee of TWUA, I have for quite a few years been involved in trying to present to Congress and to the administration the story and the problems that the question of tariff involves, as far as the textile industry is concerned.

Unfortunately, in spite of the many presentations we have made to the government and before various tariff commissions, Congressional committees, the Office of Defense Mobilization and the Labor Department, we have not made the type of progress or received the sympathy which we feel we should have received from this administration.

I might point out that in a few instances where we have been successful, it has been a long and arduous process. Let me give you an illustration.

The present General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs provides and has provided for many years some safeguards for some of the textile industry. About three or four years ago our union petitioned the government to invoke the 5% escape provisions on the question of woolen imports. It took us, if my recollection is correct, from the day of the filing of the petition until we finally got some relief, a period of almost one and one-half years before the law was administratively invoked.

In contrast to the position of this administration on the question of relief for the textile industry and our membership in this field, I would like to call to your attention the great speed in which this administration acts when some other industry is involved.

During the Suez crisis the American oil industry was asked to fill the void that was created as a result of the closing of the Suez Canal. This meant high production for the oil industry in the United States.

This industry immediately took advantage of that fact by raising prices domestically and for exports also.

After the Suez situation was settled, and the imports started coming in from other countries, the oil industry raised a voice, and protested about the imports and immediately, without a hearing of any kind by the Tariff Commission or by the ODM or any government agency, a voluntary quota system was shoved down the throat of the oil exporters from other countries. They are covered by those quotas and are made to abide by them.

So it gives you an idea of what an administration can do, if it is so inclined, and if it is sympathetic to the problem that is presented to it.

Unfortunately, in our industry that has not been so. We have appeared before various commissions on many fields in the textile industry, and with us it is always a hard prolonged fight. There are before the present Congress certain bills on the question of tariffs.

The legislation that is currently before the Congress is not adequate because it does not provide for quotas. It has been the position of our union, since 1946, that the only reasonable safeguard and proper handling of the import situation is not so much through the question of tariff but rather to set up quotas for various industries and subdivisions of an industry.

We think that is the only logical way that this problem can be approached reasonably and fairly to all concerned.

Time out to greet an oldtimer. Pollock and Chupka say "hello" to retired member Joseph "Pop" Yannarelli.

We feel that subdivisions should be created. In the woolen industry it is true they can invoke the 5% quota and when that is reached they increase the rate from 25 to 45% ad valorem. But instead of doing it on a yardage basis, they have been using the basis of weight, and on that basis last year the actual imports into this country in the woolen industry exceeded a little over 7½% by yardage, but by weight it was only 5%.

That means that the importers, by importing cloth into this country of a lightweight nature, can overcome even the 5% limitation. By importing only lightweight fabrics, they force manufacturers in this country to manufacture the heavier fabric, and on that basis the importers get the edge on us.

I urge each and every one of our delegates and our local unions to continue the work we have been doing in presenting to Congress our position on this very important question.

While I am discussing the hard row we have to hoe in connection with getting Congress or responsible government agencies to recognize our plight, I'd like to go further and take up the whole question of political action, especially in view of what is going on in this country.

Labor is truly at the crossroads today. We are facing an onslaught of anti-labor legislation on the national, state and the county level, and in many instances on the municipal level. We are seeing great industrial states today, highly organized, that are facing a fight against "right-to-work" laws this coming November. A state like Ohio, that has in excess of one million organized members, or a state like California, where the person who is running for the highest office in the state is running on a "right-to-work" platform, are some prime examples.

This program of repression of labor got in full swing when the Eisenhower administration went into office. Yes, I am mindful that their election slogan was the great crusade of peace, progress and prosperity. I, like you, am somewhat reticent to criticize the man who occupies the highest office in our nation because of respect for that office and the importance of it. But after six years of this administration, I do not think we can any longer remain silent on this subject because the stakes are too great, not only for the labor movement, but for America.

A great campaign was put on through the medium of the newspapers, magazines, radio and other media. They offered us a nice tinseled package, wrapped up in brightly colored paper, labeled "Peace, Prosperity and Progress." But instead of getting peace and progress and prosperity, we find today, after six years, after eating out of that package for some time, that we have—and our country has —one big bellyache. And there is only one way that we can cure that. It is not going to be easy, it is not going to be done just by taking a pill and waking up cured ove night.

It means we have a lot of work ahead of us. It means we must correct the mistakes that we made in some of our previous political elections.

Yes, we have the opportunity this year of electing a more liberal Congress. I say we have the opportunity, but I don't think we ought to take it for granted that we are going to do it unless we intend to do a lot of work before the elections come. But even assuming that we do elect a more liberal Congress, that does not mean that our problems are over, because our government has three facets. It has the legislative, the administrative and the judicial. And you can elect the most liberal Congress that we have ever had, but if you have a reactionary administrative power, that means that the administration appoints the people to administer the laws that may be enacted by Congress.

If a government would appoint, as the top man in a police department a person of the nature of an Al Capone, the country would be shocked. Yet the fact remains that today the NLRB is being administered by appointees of the present administration who more truly reflect the philosophy of the National Association of Manufacturers than the unbiased viewpoint which it is supposed to have. And I think we are all aware of that fact.

The stakes for the labor movement are big, the stakes for your union are big, because unless we can elect people to office who are fair and reasonable, we are in for a lot of trouble. Let us not kid ourselves that the gains that we made as a result of collective bargaining cannot be nullified by legislation. We have seen that happen too many times.

I urge each and every one of you take this message to family, friends and neighbors. Warn them of the propaganda that the reactionary forces have been trying to sell us, that it is not for labor organizations to get into politics. This is false because in a democracy, unless you are in politics to stay, then your freedom is jeopardized, and that is where we find ourselves today.

Convention Camera Closeups

White 10-gallon hats distinguish Canadian delegation and they present one to President Pollock.

Delegates, delegates eve hard at work transacting

What have we here? Just Ray Berthiaume modelling the latest in men's cool fashions.

All work and no play makes dull Jacks and Jills, so these delegates are getting set for some fun.

Political action gets a shot in the arm as checks for COPE from Locals 710, 689 and 925 are turned over to Pollock.

Any question about where this group's from?

Serious business deserves serious concentration, and these delegates give it all they've got.

where—some serious, some smiling, but all UA business at the tenth biennial convention.

Think this is a good catch? Canadian delegates who hooked these whoppers insist they have bigger ones at home. But they didn't throw these babies back.

Only a convention brings Californians to Florida.

Session's over, so delegates head for lunch.

Cycles or Circles— Recession or Depression— It All Means Unemployment

By FRANK G. CLEMENT
Governor of Tennessee

FOR 150 YEARS, the textile workers of this nation attempted to band together for their own protection and promotion and for 150 years they met failure. It became almost a by-word in the union halls and outside that it just wasn't possible to build a textile union. But those who said so reckoned without an old American trait: perseverence. Or, if you wish to give it another word, determination. The kind of determination that has built America.

You know what it means to persevere and, through perseverance, you have made progress and this, to me, is the foundation, is the keystone, of the greatness of our nation.

Our country today is in the midst of an economic situation which has been variously described as "an unpleasantness," a "downturn in the economy," a "recession," and even, by some, a "depression." I am not familiar with all of the definitions used by the economists today. I do not claim to be an economist myself (for instance, they now speak about our economy moving in "cycles" instead of running around in circles). It sounds better, but I think it means the same thing.

But this much I do know: there are more than five million of my fellow Americans who are out of work. There are wide areas of our country where economic distress is easily apparent. There are areas in my own state where such a distress is evident. There are basic and important industries in our national economy which are in a depressed state, and I don't need any economist to tell me that these are facts.

In Washington, we've been getting syrupy words that the recession is all over. Well, they're absolutely right; it's all over the country.

There was a day when politicians tried to take credit for a prosperity that they actually had nothing to do with. And, of course, they were careful to avoid getting blamed for any recessions that came along. It must be said that they were not always able to avoid this blame, although they might have no actual responsibility for the hard times.

But we all recognize that our national economy today is much more subject to political control than it was a generation ago. Banking controls, determinative taxation, enormous government buying, all are recognized as factors which can, so to speak, make or break our economy. And today not only are the President and Congress held responsible for our economic health, but even governors come in for a share of this responsibility.

Every American citizen should realize that self-confidence is of the greatest importance in the present situation. And he should realize, too, that he has more reason for confidence in our economy than his forefathers did who defied the wilderness to create this nation. The national economy itself enjoys many stabilizing controls that it did not know in his grandfather's day. And he, as a breadwinner, enjoys the security of organized welfare assistance and unemployment insurance. Doubtless he has some further security in private insurance in its multiple forms. He should realize that the hazards he faces today are not a fraction of what his father and grandfather faced. He should realize that he is far better able to be, that he can be and should be, venturesome in the face of a need for it.

All of these matters you, as American citizens first, and as members of a strong labor union second, realize. Indeed, you have the further security that comes from banding together as a union and in that banding the security that comes from the rights that you fought for and won.

So that when an unfavorable economic condition develops, you, too, have a very important part to play in it, not only as members of a labor movement but more importantly and primarily, as citizens of a great nation.

You know how to fight for what's right and your contribution can be a fighting spirit.

Tennessee delegate makes sure to shake hands with Clement.

Discussion on the floor of the convention dealt mainly with problems directly affecting textile workers. There were 43 resolutions submitted to the convention, and while not all were acted on, a goodly number received serious consideration. On this page, and on pages 21, 23, 27, 28 and 29 are samples of the discussions. Not everyone who spoke could be quoted at length; their pictures grace these pages even if their words do not. Resolutions which could not be acted upon were referred to the incoming Executive Council.

Solomon Barkin: "We were the initiators of the program for helping distressed communities. Because it was our people, together with the coal miners of this country, who have been among the most seriously affected by the closing of mines and mills. We knew the problem when the mills of Lawrence were beginning to close. We have known the problem for years. Mills which have been in existence and employing people one and two and three generations suddenly become lifeless. Plants humming with machines suddenly cease to work and the mill owners sell the machines for scrap or for sale to foreign countries. Local merchants and local businessmen are not interested in our people. All they are interested in is getting just enough business to stay alive, not to bring new businessmen in, not to bring new jobs in, not to give everybody an opportunity. The citizens of local communities do not have the resources, the money and the experience to rebuild these communities. In this period when people are idle, when we are wasting human power and talent and capital, isn't this the job to be done? Isn't this the time to rebuild communities so that those who live in them can have jobs? This is a tremendous issue."

Michael Schoonjans: "We come from the Biddeford-Saco area in Maine, an area that is distressed and has been distressed for a long time. We have gone to Washington and all we got was words and more words. One of the answers was, 'That is too bad for your area, but there are jobs in other areas. Why don't you pack up and move?' Stuart Rothman, the solicitor for the U.S. Department of Labor, gave us a classic answer when we brought to his attention that 1,400 people were going to be put out of work. 'Under our democratic economic system, the firms have a right to close their doors if they see fit' and to hell with the people."

Edmund F. Ryan: "Our economy around Wilkes-Barre, Pa., is based on two industries, both of which are very sick — anthracite coal mining and the textile industry. The anthracite coal mining industry has declined from a high of 175,000 jobs in 1919 to 25,000 today. The textile industry is migrating south. I think it is a disgrace to America that we permit these distressed areas to exist. Let us remember this: It is not only our fight in Biddeford-Saco and in Wilkes-Barre. It is your fight because what is going to happen in those areas in the next ten years is going to affect the jobs of every textile worker and every American."

James McKnight: "The Republican administration defeated this measure in the last session by a very close margin. They defeated it because they called it national planning. But our people in the state of New Jersey don't care by what name they call it. They know it is sorely, very sorely, needed. In 1950 we had 60,000 textile workers in the state. In 1958 we only have 36,000. In Freehold, N. J. our carpet workers are going through a depression. The layoff threatens to make a ghost town out of Freehold. Somebody has to do something, and the only people I know of that ever did anything were the American labor movement."

William J. Michalski: "In my home town of Amsterdam, N. Y., about 3,500 workers have no jobs. Where I work, during the war we had over 5,000 employees. We have now dropped to a little over 2,000. The company has spread out to eight plants, mostly in the south, which are not organized, taking away a lot of work from the department, out of Amsterdam, and bringing it south. We in Amsterdam need this bill badly because we have many skilled workers who have no work."

RESOLUTION No. 29

Area Redevelopment

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED by the tenth biennial convention of the Textile Workers Union of America, AFL-CIO, that we urge Congress to enact the following programs:

1. Area Redevelopment (Douglas Bill, S 964), including the following:
   a. Establishment of a special federal agency to coordinate efforts to assist distressed areas and adminster a comprehensive program.

John B. Pierce

Charles Petraska

William Lillard

John Arpino

John LaPorte

We Need Political Action In Plants and Meetings...

WHAT HAVE the reactionary politicians in their minds? It is clear that their objective is to try to reach rank and file trade unionists by discrediting their leaders. They say to the union members, "I am not against you. I am for the working man and woman. All I want to do is protect you against these labor bosses."

That is the magic term that is being used from coast to coast—protection from labor bosses.

Let's see who is making that kind of statement. They are mainly members of the Senate and House who voted against social security, if you please. They voted for Taft-Hartley. They are out campaigning for a national right-to-work law. They are for everything that is destructive and at the same time they proclaim what a sympathetic heart they have for the trade union movement.

By JAMES McDEVITT

Director, Committee on Political Education, AFL-CIO

There is but one answer to this false logic. We must fight these men through effective political action. The very existence of our organization is dependent on the kind of effort we put forth in the political arena.

We will enter most of the Congressional contests in 1958, putting forth every ounce of energy we have to see, first of all, that we retain those great stalwart friends of ours in Congress, and to add as many new friends as we can.

But all of that is going to be measured in terms of the effort put forth by the local unions.

Make it your business to discuss political education for a brief period, at least, at every meeting of your union. And if you need the services of your state or national COPE organization, drop us a postcard and you will have it. We have literature, ample to cover every phase of our problem. There are 34 separate pieces of political education literature. Our area directors are at your service, as speakers and for handling classes and teaching political education.

You have the leadership of your central bodies and state organizations available to you at the local union level. Don't hesitate to make use of it.

And I hope when we meet again we will be able to report to you that we have had all the success we hoped for in 1958.

...and Union Education In Our Homes and Schools

By AL BARKAN

Assistant Director, COPE

WE FIND when we go to colleges and high schools that the labor attitudes of the students are so hostile, so anti-union, that it is frightening. We have permitted our own children, our own children's minds, to be stolen by our enemies. They have learned about the labor movement not at the kitchen table, not from the mouths of their parents, those parents who made it possible through union conditions for them to go to college—we have permitted the Chamber of Commerce and the NAM to tell them about unions.

BARKAN

What I am appealing to you for, in this hour of labor crisis, when our very future is going to be settled, is to come to the defense of your union. Don't let your neighbors, don't let your families learn about unions from our enemies. We have the facts on our side—what do we have to be ashamed of?

There are some 14,000 international officers in the American labor movement. There are some 440,000 local union officers. The McClellan Committee, after two years of the most intensive kind of digging, using special investigators, using FBI, came up with 34 labor leaders who were false to their trust. What other group—the Chamber of Commerce? the NAM?—could come up with that kind of a record?

The Rieves and the Reuthers, the Pollocks and the Chupkas, are more representative of the real leadership of the American labor movement than the few crooks who are false to their trust.

This is what we should tell our children and our friends. Tell them what the conditions were in your plant before the union got there, and what they are today. Tell them about those early days in Colonial Philadelphia, when the weak struggling first trade union raised its voice—for what? For free public schools for the children of workers. Whether it is free public schools, free libraries, a 40-hour week, 8-hour day, paid holidays, paid vacations, old-age pensions, workmen's compensation, minimum wage, unemployment insurance, supplementary unemployment insurance, sickness insurance, what a glorious story we have to tell and the eternal shame is that we are not telling it.

Brothers and sisters, go back, go back to the west coast, to the south, to the east, and to the north, and talk out, speak up, talk political action, talk in defense of your union, and with God's good help, we will triumph, as we always triumph over our enemies.

Delegates took a firm stand in favor of continued and intensified political activity. Here are some of the speeches in favor; there were none against.

RESOLUTION No. 26
Political Action

1. We reaffirm our belief in political action as an indispensable function of the American trade union movement. No member can possibly have a good excuse for not voting. They are not only failing in their obligation to the trade union movement but also their obligation as a citizen. Political activity on our part is a must and a year round job. Only in this manner can we obtain and maintain the proper function of good government.
2. We pledge every effort and energy to the election to office—fed-

William DuChessi: "Many locals do a good job of collecting money, and then you think the job is over. That is only the start of the job. We have got to set up a registration committee in every local union in our organization. After we have registered our people and their families, on Election Day we have got to set up the machinery to get that vote out. If we do that there is no doubt in my mind as to what the result will be. You all heard what happened in the state of Maine two years ago. That wasn't done by speeches. That was done by the hard work of our organization through its managers, business agents and rank and file committees who went out and worked in a solid Republican state. They helped reelect the Governor, helped elect a Democratic Congressman for the first time — and he's a darn good Congressman. You are going to hear an awful lot on political action in the next six or seven months. We are pleading with you to set up meetings in your joint boards, in your local unions. We will be glad to furnish speakers. Let's start doing the job I know we can do."

Ethel Jenkins: "We realize that all the gains we make at the collective bargaining table can be taken away from us overnight by political reactionaries unless we, too, engage in politics. We ask no special favors, but we do feel that all citizens are entitled to equal representation by our political leaders. And we know that if we are to get this fair treatment we must participate in the selection of these representatives. Through our state AFL-CIO organization we have, for the first time this year, participated in a statewide political program from the precinct level on through the state convention of the Democratic Party, which is the ruling party in North Carolina."

M. L. Wood: "We have proved in our union that even in the south, where everything is against us, we can do a political action job. In 1953 we put on a 10¢ assessment for over 500 members present, and it was unanimous. This year we paid $1 on each member we have. Just Saturday a week ago we set aside another $700 to help elect a decent Governor and Lieutenant-Governor in South Carolina. A few weeks ago we mailed out 1,100 letters to members and former members. Last Thursday I spent 24 hours in Columbia Mills to take care of the registration for Lexington County. The local union paid the registration people. We fed them breakfast, lunch, dinner and midnight snack. We kept them there with just a few hours' break from 8 one morning to 8 the next morning. We succeeded in registering every worker except 17. We've got to get behind that political action or they will tear us to pieces."

Luther Jackson: "I know what political education can do in a town where the people will get out and work. In my plant alone, through political education, and working with the people, we have got a 99% membership. We have a check-off, we have 100% registered voters. Every person who is old enough is registered. I am proud to say that we have 100% COPE collections. We have a Congressman who is one of the best from the south, Rep. Howard T. Cooley of North Carolina. We had one of the greatest labor haters in the state against him, but we sent Cooley back to office."

Robert Gareau: "I have been attending these conventions for 18 years and we have been asking the same thing year after year, and we never got it yet. That indicates one thing to me. I think we are missing the boat on our political action. The only time that labor will get the sort of legislation that we want is when we get down to electing labor representatives to Congress. This resolution should have a section asking the AFL-CIO to try to form in the United States a labor party that would support the aims and the requirements of working people."

J. Robert Oliver

Anna Sullivan

Morris Riger

Edward Doolan

George Eardley

Ethics and Unions

By ARTHUR GOLDBERG
General Counsel, IUD, AFL-CIO

THE TOPIC that I want to bring before you is one that I know causes you great concern. I say that you have great concern because the problem of corruption and ethical practices in the labor movement affects the merger of textile workers, which is so long overdue, and which in a large measure has been delayed because of corruption.

Not in your ranks, and not in the ranks of the people who, like yourself, make up the United Textile Workers of America, but in the leadership of that other organization.

It has been my unhappy lot, as the counsel for the Ethical Practices Committee of the AFL-CIO, to participate in the various hearings held by AFL-CIO into the unpleasant topic of corruption in the labor movement. I say this with great regret, but I say it advisedly, because the problem of corruption in the labor movement, we have learned, is a serious problem indeed. I do not mean by this that the problem is widespread in the labor movement.

You know from your own organization, as I know from most of the organizations in the AFL-CIO, that the trade union movement in America is an honorable movement, that it is made up of men and women in the membership and in the leadership who honorably serve a dedicated cause to improve the lot of human beings.

But we would be less than candid and we would not serve any good purpose by denying that the trade union movement has a serious problem of corruption within it.

It is no consolation to me, and it should be no consolation to you, that the problem of corruption in the trade union movement is part and parcel of the overriding problem of lack of moral standards in our business and, indeed, in our public community. Because while it is true that the misdoings of the few labor leaders who have been called before the Ethical Practices Committee and before the McClellan Committee are few, indeed, compared to what the public knows about misdoings in the business and public communities, nevertheless all of us have a right to expect and to exact a much higher moral standard from the leadership of the labor movement.

It is not and should never be part of the philosophy of the labor movement to make a quick buck, which is the characteristic philosophy and motivating force of the business community. And so any time that there are revelations of corruption in the labor movement, all of us must be deeply concerned because any vestige of corruption that is permitted to remain in the labor movement affects you and affects me as people who are interested in the cause of the decent and honorable trade labor movement.

And it affects you in a very direct and immediate sense. It must be apparent to you that notwithstanding the deep desire on your part to have a single united fighting organization of textile workers, that this has not been brought about, not because of any lack of desire or effort on the part of your officers, but because the other union in this field has been dominated by corrupt and immoral interests.

I have participated in your merger discussions, and I want to bear personal witness to the efforts that have been made by your general president, Bill Pollock, by your chairman, Emil Rieve, and by your secretary-treasurer, John Chupka, and the other members of your negotiating committee, to do whatever is possible to bring about a united organization of textile workers.

It is fortunate in my mind that the earlier negotiations for merger were not consummated. Had they been consummated prior to the time that there came to public light the unsavory and regrettable episodes concerning the leadership of the other union, your organization would have been contaminated with the type of leadership that you do not want and should not have.

TWUA's top three greet IUD's Arthur Goldberg.

And I am sure that in the negotiations that are now under way, your officers and George Meany and the leadership of the AFL-CIO will make sure that before a merger is consummated—and I for one hope and trust that a merger will be consummated—that it will be done between two organizations, one of which, yourself, has a long and proven record of devotion to honest trade unionism, and another which will be then completely purged of any corrupt elements, so that the merger will take place on terms of mutual respect, and on terms of mutual decency.

RESOLUTION No. 17
Organizing

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED by the tenth biennial convention of the Textile Workers Union of America, AFL-CIO, that:

1. We reaffirm our determination and that of our local unions and joint boards to continue, unflaggingly, our efforts to organize the unorganized textile workers.
2. We express our sincere appreciation to the organizing department of the AFL-CIO for their continued aid and cooperation.

Sam Frost: "I remember when I was a little boy, my father came home one day from work and my mother hid him in the closet. Why? Because he had the nerve to attend a union meeting in 1920 and New York City had a law against meetings known as a Conspiracy Act. Workers in those days forgot about the law, they forgot about injunctions, they went out on a picket line, they talked to other workers, and they built a labor movement. Suddenly today we are worried about the NLRB, we are worried about injunctions, we are worried about all sorts of things. We cannot expect help from the government. We have to do the job ourselves."

Boyd Payton: "In almost any textile mill we can quickly sign up 30% of the employees if it is done before the employer learns of the organizing activity. However, it is usually at about the 30% point that the company begins its counter-campaign of coercion and intimidation. Further signing of cards becomes almost impossible. In fact, those who have signed become fearful and refuse to be identified further with the organizing campaign. I am confident that if workers were free to vote for or against the union of their own free will, without employer intimidation, we would seldom, if ever, lose an election. The employer knows of this situation. He looks upon it as a tug of war. He knows that if he allows the rope to become loose, the desire of his workers for organization will pull the line out of his hands and take it forward to their goal, the benefits and protection of a union contract, the brotherhood of workers who have achieved freedom and dignity. So we, too, must keep the line tight. Our greatest possible effort and our greatest possible expenditure of dues money must continue to be made in the field of new organization."

Harold Daoust: "We didn't have an easy job back in the early days of '34, '35 and from '39 on, when this organization was founded. This is the spirit we must recapture. Unless we do, all of the good wages that we have now, all of the good fringe benefits that we have, stand upon the threshold of being lost because of unorganized workers. Madison Avenue slogans are not going to organize the workers, because there is no substitute for hard work. In the Greater Western Canadian Joint Board, the organizing we have done there in the past year has been done by the business agents and the people in that joint board. Nobody is going to give us anything. We have to go out and work and work hard. When we go back to our local unions and joint boards, we must get our committees ready to go out and organize, because every unorganized textile worker is a challenge to us. I urge you, rap on the door of every unorganized textile worker, give him our story and, when we come back two years from now, we will have most of our industry organized."

Garnold Richards: "In organizing you either ring doorbells and knock on doors, visit people, talk it up or you don't get anywhere. We have been through a number of pretty rough years, but it was a little bit rough back in 1926, too. We had to sign people up secretly and we had to promise not to give out the names. That is the way we organized in those days, and there wasn't anybody to help us, either. I am quite sure that if all the members here assembled go back and tell their people that it is either organize or die, we will continue to organize."

Stanley Roberts: "In 1931, in Easton, Pa. we had approximately 26,000 textile workers out of a work force of 52,000. There was no organization, so we decided to organize. We made up a caravan of automobiles and what-have-you and we went from almost one end of Pennsylvania to the other. Not only Pennsylvania, but we also went through northern New Jersey. We were on the road for approximately a month until we finally succeeded in organizing a segment of the people. And I want to say if it were not for organization in the small city of Easton, we would be working for half what we are making today."

Chris Frawley

Dan Gallagher

James Bamford

Irving Epstine

Charles Auslander

Good — Because They're Union-Made

One of the convention sidelights that attracted a great deal of favorable attention from delegates and visitors was an exhibit of products manufactured by TWUA members. TWUA contacted a number of firms which are under contract to our union and manufacture union-made goods, and asked these firms if they were interested in putting on an exhibit of their products at our convention. Twenty-eight firms liked the idea well enough to send representative products. On the mezzanine floor of the Miami Beach Auditorium there were 28 booths at which various union-made products were exhibited for the TWUA convention delegates, alternates, visitors and guests. Most of the manufacturers did not want their goods back. These were given away as attendance prizes after each session. As a result, today there are new union-made neckties, tents, sporting goods and rugs in the homes of lucky TWUA convention delegates.

A Plea for The Little People

By CLAUDE PEPPER
Former Senator from Florida

YOU AND I COULD SEE, when this administration first came to power, that it was a great tragedy, when the world was in a revolutionary ferment, when little peoples were reaching up for their place in the sun of life, when nations were struggling to throw off the yoke of tyranny and colonialism and to rise to the stature of national independence and maturity, that there came to power in the leading country of the Free World a reactionary administration that didn't even know we had little people in America, let alone little people in the world.

And the President of the United States in his last campaign, when our candidates talked about doing something for the little people, he said, "What do they mean by little people? Are there any little people in America? Who is such a little person? Is it you? Is it I?"

Well, it all depends on what you mean by little. If you mean in God's sight, no, we don't have any lesser or any bigger or littler people. If you mean in the sight of the law, we are not supposed to have—we don't always live up to the law—but we are not supposed to have any little people. But when it comes to my ability to compete with General Motors, your ability to bargain equally with the great textile combines of America, a little businessman's ability to compete with General Electric or U. S. Steel, to deny that they are little people is to be blind.

But that very psychology has contributed to the lack of faith that the people of the world today have in America. Somehow they sense that the people running America today don't really feel a kinship with them, and don't really sympathize with their problems.

Somehow we have to restore to the leadership of America the spirit of friendship—friendship for the people in Algeria struggling for independence, the same kind of independence we have, for the people in the Middle East, who want to live a better life without being under the tyranny of a little Hitler. And for the people of South America, a proud people, who want to be true members of the American family.

The problems of America today are not so much problems of the military, or problems of politics, as they are problems of humanity and problems of the spirit.

We do want to help the underprivileged people of the world. We spend billions, we do anything to help them, but somehow we haven't got it over to them that the reason we help them is because it is right.

Too often they think we are trying to buy them. You can't buy gratitude, you know. You remember Shakespeare said, "A loan oft' loses itself and a friend."

Somehow, let's get it over to the people we are helping that we aid them primarily because it is right in the sight of man and in the sight of God.

Nationally, our problem is a little different. It is to get the plenty and the people together . . . to get the plenty in the hands of the people who need it in an honorable and in an American way.

Labor is entitled to an increasing share in the profits of enterprise. It is absolutely essential to the prosperity of farmers and businessmen and industrialists in America that the purchasing power of the people be steadily raised. Wages are not high enough. They don't have nearly enough purchasing power to buy the produce of factory and farm as they should so readily be able to do.

We are constantly working for a program that will provide proper health protection to the people of this country. I realize that we have got to work this out with the doctors, but surely they will recognize that we are not trying to hurt them, we are merely trying to pay their just bills. We don't want anyone to be denied medical care.

Surely we believe in these things. We say we do when we got to church. We believe in the dignity of every man, woman and child. And so when we take part in a political enterprise that seeks to bring these blessings to pass, we are serving the cause of God as well as humanity, and contributing to the strength as well as to the prosperity of our blessed land.

Canadian Group Sounds Off About...

Health Insurance Problems

John Whitehouse: "The need for national health insurance was never more convincing. A Canadian sickness survey that was completed recently shows that while the low-income group reported proportionately far more disabling illness than other income groups, they received much less physicians' care. It is the workers who need health insurance, but constantly when we get to the polls, we find that again it is the workers who reject the very candidates who are prepared to implement the type of health insurance plan that the labor movement advocates. We have got to tie in an effective political action program. We have got to get a Canadian labor party, elect labor candidates and get labor legislation."

Clare Easto: "Way back in 1919 there was a bill brought before the Federal Government to try to get a national health plan instituted for the Canadian people. But we have surely been getting the grand runaround. Just recently the Conservative government, which is now in power, instituted a plan, but it is far short of what the people of Canada need. It is a hospital plan only. It does not cover any surgical, medical, optical or dental expenses. With the textile wages in Canada at only $1.23 an hour, 42½ hours a week, we receive the grand total of $52.28. This certainly is not adequate to pay the exorbitant prices of surgical, medical and dental bills. We urgently need an adequate health insurance program in Canada."

Sidney Emmerson: "We in Canada feel that care of the sick is a government responsibility. We have a plan now, but we are not sure what it is going to do. It is going to be different in every province, but it is a small step in the right direction. It is still going to cost the worker a lot of money to be sick. It has taken labor a good many years in Canada to get the government to go this far, but now that we have got the ball rolling, we intend to make every effort to get this government and all future governments to implement a plan that will give the workers complete coverage. We urge the delegates to this convention to support our program for Canada and to work for a similar program for the U.S."

Unemployment

Rose Cutaia: "I would like to see a simplified form so that these people would understand exactly what they are going to get when they go to the unemployment insurance office. Now they are just giving them a lot of runaround and these people, these poor people, come back to us and say they are disqualified. When we go down as union officers or get in touch with the joint board in Hamilton, they get their claims. I would like to see a simplified form added to this resolution."

Paul Swaity: "To us in Canada, the unemployment situation is a very critical problem. One out of seven employable workers in Canada is unemployed today. These are not figures concocted in labor circles: These are figures according to the national employment service, a government agency. In textile areas, the unemployment is even more severe. Since 1951, one out of every four textile jobs has been eliminated. In Milltown, New Brunswick, since the mill closed several months ago, unemployment benefits have been exhausted. The situation is critical because there is no other industry in the vicinity of Milltown for some 80 miles."

Margaret Ryan: "I have nothing but resentment for the present unemployment insurance act. Workers can be disqualified for six weeks or even indefinitely for the least infraction of the multitude of regulations. Our people in the textile industry are unable to save money on the wages being paid at present, yet when application for benefits is made, hardship and frustration result. We need adequate protection for our people, with higher weekly benefits. We want benefits paid for the full length of unemployment with no strings attached. We want the elimination of the disqualification period."

Labor Laws

Jean Philip: "We suffer, especially in Quebec, from conditions which can be compared with some southern states in the United States. We suffer from conspiracy between the government and management. We have felt the vicious attitude of the Quebec government against our union in Drummondville. A year ago, we had a successful campaign there and signed about 1,600 workers out of 1,800. When we applied for certification, we found that the workers could not be certified because the company opposed it and the company union conspired on the matter of date certification. The company union had re-signed a new contract for three years one full year prior to the expiration of the old contract. Because of the conspiracy between the government and the company, the 1,600 workers are being denied the right to organize a union of their choice. We must protect the right of the workers by federal labor legislation."

The Delegates Take the Floor

Merger

J. William Belanger: "It is regrettable that we always have been faced with splinter movements in this industry of ours. But the fact of the matter is that the Textile Workers Union of America is the only textile union that has made decent progress numerically and financially. We can be proud that we stand as the largest organization of textile workers today, not only in the United States but the world over. Also, we have character and we command respect of our sister unions, and also of the public at large. It is a well-known fact that we need unity to have one driving force in order to take our place among other American industrial workers in terms of wages. When we talk merger with the UTW we are talking about an honorable merger, one that will be for the improvement of the working conditions and wages of men and women in the textile industry. Whenever this type of honorable merger can be brought about, the members of the TWUA merger committee are pledged to work in that direction."

Ethical Practices

Sol Stetin: "I would like to see our ethical practices code pamphlet get into the hands of the school teachers, the boards of education, the libraries and all of the public officials in our community because I think it is a sad commentary that the honorable principles and purposes of the labor movement are being so distorted by the medium of communications in the United States. In our union we established ethical practices policies a long time ago. When we found union officials who had a business on the side we said to our union officials you must make up your mind, either you run your business or you stay in the union. What do you want? I want you to know that your union has adhered to the basic objectives which we have had in our preamble, that we are looking to build a better world of serving our fellow human beings, and not serving the individual pocketbook. I say the labor movement by and large is clean and honest, and those few dishonest individuals are going to be out eventually. Whatever little corruption we have we must wipe out completely so that we can build the kind of a labor movement that will go ahead, and be the leaders in America as we are today, in the moral and spiritual and ethical issues and values of our society."

Strikes

Silas Switzer: "The Virginia Shoe Company is the largest industry in Fredericksburg, Va. We won an election there last September and we began negotiations in October. On Jan. 24, because of the long delay in negotiations, the negotiating committee called on the company to speed things up, and the committee was discharged. On Jan. 27 we had to put a picket line around the plant and that line is still there. I am asking TWUA members to remember the names of the shoes put out by this company so that when we buy shoes we will not buy the brands known as Play Poise, Melville or Husky. Incidentally, these are women's and children's shoes. We have the 'right-to-work' law in Virginia, and some of our members have been arrested, one of them for allegedly calling someone a scab. That's the way the 'right-to-work' law works."

Alton M. Hodgman: "Members of Local 642 at Kendall Mills in Walpole, Mass., are now engaged in a strike. The company has shown profits over these many years that would be the envy of almost any textile company. Now they talk to us about losses — not the type of losses that face some other companies and not the type of losses that our members face as a result of their wages not keeping pace with the rising cost of living. They talk about losses in profits. This year they don't anticipate they will be able to make as many millions as they did last year. I say shame on the company for refusing to grant its employees a fair share of the profits it has made over the years and is continuing to make."

Kohler–O'Sullivan

Felix P. Damore: "The technique now being employed by many employers is to use this provision of the Taft-Hartley law whereby when you are out on strike for monetary benefits, they can conduct an election and deprive the strikers of their votes. When that occurs, the union loses. There are too many members of our union and, I am sorry to say, many local union officers who do not realize the seriousness of this statute. We must adopt a tactic to combat this, and that is an economic one, a boycott of the products that these companies produce. I think we not only should talk about this resolution, but we should do something about it when we get back home."

Rene P. Berthiaume: "Two years ago we spoke to you of our own strike against the Lowenstein Company in Rock Hill. You authorized us to have a boycott and the boycott caught fire. We have the words of Lowenstein himself, condemning our union for the success of the boycott. I want to thank you on behalf of Rock Hill Local 710.... We found some O'Sullivan heels in our town. We found some on our people's shoes. They are hanging on the wall of our union hall. We pull them off, and the members can go back and put on something else besides O'Sullivan. You can't find an O'Sullivan heel in our town today. And that kind of a boycott will be successful."

George S. Boston: "It would be very fitting if we of New York City would use more pressure on the heel situation. We do a lot of walking there and we use lots of heels. We ought to put on a special campaign, in this city of eight and a half millions of people, to cripple the O'Sullivan heel. I, for one, will never again use an O'Sullivan heel until they have bowed their heads to fair labor relations."

Housing

Sam Miriello: "Many of the 13 million families who are living in substandard homes are near textile mills. Here is where the locals can build many monuments to labor, for if this kind of legislation is enacted and the administration releases for construction the 250,000 low-rent public housing units authorized in 1949 but never built, you will have done a service you may well be proud of for many years to come. You should also participate in the cooperative housing program, as we have in Erwin, N. C. On behalf of our delegation and Local 250, you all have a standing invitation to visit Erwin and our project, which we hope to begin sometime in July."

Union Label

Jack Rubenstein: "The union label is another front on which we can advance the basic aims of our organization. That this thought is taking hold is demonstrated by the many requests for information that have been made about the operation of this label within this hall today. In addition, several companies have already accepted the union label and have signed union label agreements. The thing that I want to emphasize is that the union label starts at the plant level with the establishment of a Union Label Committee. From the plant we go outward into the buying market, into the consuming market, and we set up our Union Label Committees to push this important vehicle of union operation and union progress."

William Gordon: "For many years we have been coming to conventions and passing a standard union label resolution. Now for the first time we have a Union Label Department to implement that resolution. That Union Label Department has a yeoman's task before it. We need the cooperation of all the delegates, all of the local unions, joint boards, members and yes, the wives of all our members, because they are very important in the implementation of any program. . . . Go back to your respective plants and ask this simple question: We are producing our goods under union conditions, so why don't we have a union label advertising that fact?"

Foreign Policy

Ralph Cline: "We in the labor movement have fought dictators for years. I joined this union in 1937 because of a dictator. I worked for him. It's a funny thing. They collect our tax money and they send it to the dictators in South America. Then, if the people overthrow the dictator, they bring him to Miami, buy him a nice home and we go on working and paying taxes. We must continue to fight dictatorship in every way possible, because dictators degrade the human being. It doesn't matter to me whether he is a dictator in the labor movement, a dictator in industry or a dictator in the nation. He is still no good."

Tariffs

M. Michael Botelho: "The Subcommittee on Reciprocal Trade has recommended that Congress extend the Reciprocal Trade Act for five years, so prepare yourself for five more years of the trouble we've had since 1947. In 1947, there were 16 million square yards of cotton textiles imported into the United States. In 1957, there were 123 million square yards of cotton imports, not produced under American standards by American workers. There was an increase of 29 million square yards of silk imported from 1947 to 1957, and an increase of 27 million square yards of imported woolens and worsteds. It is high time we tell the President that his program of reciprocal trade arrangements spells danger for our industry."

Legislation

John W. Edelman: "Our union made a pledge when it got the dollar minimum for the industries we cover that the next fight would be for those not covered and we must fulfill that pledge. We cannot make progress until the others are covered. All it needs to break this thing loose in the committee is pressure from the field. It's up to you to do this job. On the unemployment issue, we are fighting to extend benefits for a maximum of 39 weeks. Is there anything more practical than to get an extension of unemployment insurance payments for people standing in breadlines, for 700,000 workers who have exhausted their benefits, and the millions more, many of them in our own union, who are about to run out of benefits?"

We Offer Aid in Textile Probe

TWUA has offered its fullest cooperation to the Senate subcommittee investigating U. S. textile problems.

In a telegram sent from the convention to Sen. John O. Pastore (D., R. I.), subcommittee chairman, General President William Pollock emphasized the union's readiness to help and its belief in the importance of the task.

"The crisis in the textile industry demands a comprehensive investigation which must lead to a legislative program designed to help rebuild the industry on a sound basis," Pollock said.

Convention Wrap-Up

While daddies and mommies work, the kids have fun. Youngsters above belong to Irving Kahan and Harold Daoust, those below to Sy Cohen, and the two at the right are children of Garnold Richards.

Convention press table keeps a-humming. Coverage was fine, with no satellites from nearby Cape Canaveral to snare the headlines.

TWUA exhibit on political action draws attention of top AFL-CIO COPE directors James McDevitt and Al Barkan. They're hearing from Bill Pollock and DuChessi.

"No O'Sullivan heel on this cast," says Joe Hueter. See Page 13 for more details.

Financial support for striking Local 713 gets enthusiastic backing from Local 1034 delegates.

The Finale:

With Teamwork, Nothing Will Stop Us

Below are excerpts from General President William Pollock's closing remarks to the convention:

This convention has set into motion a program to rebuild our union and revive the industry. But even this program is not enough if the textile industry has to operate against the background of a sick national economy.

If the Republicans won't cure it, then the Democrats must. We must not tolerate any further passing of the buck. The formula is political action—and I mean action.

We have another big job to do; that is to make textile management respond to our New Horizons program. I have faith in this program and I shall dedicate myself in the next two years to promote it, to improve it and to expand it. I ask you to also dedicate yourself to this objective.

Management must understand that neither of us can make progress without teamwork. This cannot be achieved until employers accept collective bargaining as the key; and they will get teamwork only when they recognize that high-wage industries are high-profit industries and that almost without exception, high-profit industries accept the principle of collective bargaining.

We need teamwork in our union, too. It is my hope that we will have it in even greater degree in the next two years. If we do, nothing will stop us from achieving the goals we have set for ourselves this week.

Carpet Locals Ask Congress For Domestic Tariff Help

WASHINGTON — TWUA members representing every local in the carpet industry have joined management representatives to ask Congress for tariff protection of the domestic carpet industry. Congressmen were urged to fight for the inclusion of TWUA's program in tariff legislation. This program would protect a defined level of production in the textile industry.

"The carpet industry is located in one-industry towns and we're fighting to save those towns." William M. DuChessi, director of TWUA's carpet division, declared. DuChessi and Harold J. McCormack of A. & M. Karagheusian, Inc., served as group co-chairmen, assisted by John W. Edelman, TWUA Washington representative.

The group cited figures showing that carpet imports, which were about 3% of domestic consumption in 1947, had risen to more than 14% by 1957. If the industry is not protected by the pending Reciprocal Trade Agreements, imports may go up to 25% in the next two years, the group warned Congressmen.

Summer Courses

TWUA will sponsor a week-long leadership training program for locals in the Ohio-Michigan region at Antioch College, Yellow Springs, O., week of July 13-19. Courses include collective bargaining issues, general economic problems and international affairs. Also in preparation are summer schools in the south and one for New England and the mid-Atlantic states.

Holliston Strikers Win; Two Picket Lines Remain

Holliston Mills workers are back on the job under a new, strike-won contract, leaving only two TWUA locals—at the Kendall Company in Walpole, Mass. and the Virginia Shoe Company in Fredericksburg, Va.—walking picket lines at press time.

Raises of 5¢ to 7¢ plus contract improvements ended the three-week strike at Holliston Mills in Norwood, Mass. (Textile Labor, May), according to Alton Hodgman, TWUA representative.

The 420-man Kendall strike in nearby Walpole was touched off May 1 by management's refusal to offer more than token increases despite a $4.5 million profit last year, Hodgman said. Company insistence on seniority clause changes is also at issue.

Picketing also continued at the Virginia Shoe Company, where workers walked out Jan. 24 following the firing of their negotiating committee. Silas Switzer, TWUA representative, reported progress in the national boycott of Play Poise shoes.

GREATER NEW YORK JOINT BOARD members applaud AFL-CIO Community Services Committee at CSC luncheon.

TEXTILE LABOR

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE TEXTILE WORKERS UNION OF AMERICA, AFL-CIO

EMORY F VIA-LABOR CONS
NEW SOUTH
63 AUBURN AVE N E
ATLANTA 3 GA
C

We Cite Seamy Side Of T-H

WASHINGTON—Citing chapter and verse from TWUA's own experiences down south, Benjamin Wyle, TWUA general counsel, has charged southern employers with using their power over civic, business and even religious groups to fight unionism. He called for reform of the Taft-Hartley act to redress the balance between the all-powerful southern employer and the unorganized worker.

Specifically, Wyle urged a Senate labor subcommittee to recommend the following amendments to Taft-Hartley:

¶ Restrict activities of officials and others acting as management agents in effect if not in title.

¶ Authorize mandatory injunctions against unfair labor practices of employers instead of permitting delays that turn NLRB cease-and-desist orders into post-mortems.

¶ Abolish the so-called "free speech" provision to prevent management from coercing workers during organizing drives.

¶ Provide speedy rulings on representation claims.

Wyle offered examples of employer wrongdoing in Porterdale, Ga.; Elkin, N. C.; Perry County, Miss.; Sylacauga, Ala.; Fieldale, Va. and in the Burlington campaign.

John W. Edelman, TWUA legislative representative, also testified before the subcommittee.

EXAMPLES of union-busting, southern style, are shown to Senators by TWUA's Ben Wyle (left) and John Edelman.

Wage Raises Up to 20¢ Keep Pact Bells Ringing

Wage gains ranging up to 20¢ have been won by 500 TWUA members.

The 20¢ package, divided into 10¢ immediately, 5¢ Nov. 1 and another 5¢ Nov. 1, 1959, has been gained by workers at the Carose Finishing Co. in New York City. Other contracts signed by Local 1790 provide 6¢ for Maurice Silvera Co. workers and 15¢, in three annual installments, for workers at Lex Novelty Co. and A. D. Lugin Inc.

Slater System employees in Parkersburg, W. Va. have received a 17¢ package in a contract signed by Local 9 and other Slater System workers in Meadville, Pa. gained 16¢ in a Local 8 contract.

Local 1123 members at the Seaplant Chemical Corp. in New Bedford, Mass. collected 5¢ in an automatic increase under their four-year contract. Local 1276 members at the Potomac Dyeing and Finishing Corp. in Hagerstown, Md. will receive 3¢ Aug. 1 and another 3¢ Nov. 1.

In Paterson, N. J., members of Local 75 have won a 5¢ raise from the Facil Corp., plus improved hospital benefits for employees and dependents and 42 inequity adjustments.

We Urge Industry Protection

General President William Pollock has urged Congress to protect basic domestic industries in its extension of the Reciprocal Trade Agreement Act. A five-year extension was under Senate debate as Textile Labor went to press.

Earlier, Pollock had pressed for the bill's return to committee because it omitted the following provision:

"When the imports of any product of a basic and essential industry are subtracted from the domestic consumption for the immediately preceding year and that balance equals the 1954-57 average annual domestic production, the tariff duty should revert to the rate existing on July 1, 1934. This rate should apply during the balance of the calendar year."

Framed by TWUA, this formula would reconcile the country's domestic and international interests, Pollock said in letters to Congressmen.

Southern Staff Assignments Set

CHARLOTTE, N. C.—Southern organizing and administrative affairs of TWUA, previously centralized under a single office here, have been divided among three regional offices in order to shorten the union's lines of communication and permit greater concentration of effort on nearby targets.

The change was instituted by General President William Pollock to relieve the overtaxed Charlotte office of the burden of handling union affairs stretching all the way from North Carolina to Texas.

Under the new setup, Boyd E. Payton, regional director, will be freed to concentrate the activities of his staff on North and South Carolina, where 350,000 textile workers are still unorganized and the union's greatest potential lies.

A second office will be established for Alabama, Florida and all of Georgia, with the exception of the Rome-Dalton area. The director here will be M. Michael Botelho, a TWUA vice president who formerly was New Hampshire-Vermont director. Likely location of the office will be Atlanta, Ga.

The third office will service Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Texas and the Rome-Dalton area of Georgia. In charge here will be Herbert S. Williams, a TWUA vice president who has served as state director of Tennessee and Alabama in the past. Indications are that this office will be set up in Nashville, Tenn.

Textile Labor 9/58

WINTER QUARTER MEETING OF THE GREATER ATLANTA
COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

March 12, 1957 - 8:00 P. M.

Place of Meeting: Main Auditorium of the Life Insurance Company of Georgia 573 West Peachtree, N. E.

Presiding - The Reverend Samuel Williams, Pastor of Friendship Baptist Church, First Vice-Chairman, Greater Atlanta Council on Human Relations.

AGENDA

1. Prayer .....Reverend Homer McEwen, Pastor Congregational Church

2. Panel Discussion - 20 minutes -
Moderator.....Dr. Paul M. Rilling, Project Director Southern Area Council, YMCA

The Implications of Good Human Relations :

a. Government
1. Mr. Hamm Lokey, Attorney at Law
2. Mr. Muggsy Smith, Fulton County Representative

b. Business and Industry
1. Mr. Phil Hammer, President, Hammer and Company Research Associates
2. Mr. Owen Ray Moore, American Security Insurance Company

c. Social Services
1. Mr. Warren Cochrane, Executive Secretary, Butler Street YMCA

d. Religion
1. Dr. Harry V. Richardson, President, Gammon Theological Seminary

3. "Buzz Session" - 10 minutes
Group Leader.....Mr. Art Levin, Southeastern Regional Director, Anti-Defamation League, B'Nai B'Rith
a. Reports..... 3 minutes each
b. Discussion..... 5 minutes

4. Report of Greater Atlanta Council on Human Relations Activities

2 Minutes

a. Education ..... Mr. Dudley De Groot, Emory University

b. Public Facilities ..... Mr. Joseph Golden, Atlanta University

c. Communications ..... Mr. Whitney Young, Special Consultant

5. Report of Nomination Committee ..... Mr. B. R. Brazeal
Morehouse College

6. Outline of Fund Raising Campaign ..... Mr. T. M. Alexander
Executive Vice-President, Southeastern Fire Insurance Company

7. Announcements ..... Reverend Samuel Williams

8. Adjournment

****

Yes R.

June 5, 1957

The Reverend Robert E. Wilcox
2162 Telfair Street
Augusta, Georgia

Dear Father Wilcox:

Dr. Guy Wells, the Executive Director of the Georgia Council on Human Relations, SRC state affiliate, has told me of his delight at your election as President of the Augusta Chapter. I want you to know that we here in SRC extend to you our thanks for accepting this responsibility.

As a fellow Episcopalian, I am happy to see a priest of the Church taking so courageous a stand. My good friend Cornelius Tarplee of the National Council of the Episcopal Church is working in the Southern area in human relations. You might want to get in touch with him. His address is:

1641 Link Road
Lynchburg, Virginia.

With devoted service and able leadership such as yours, we believe the Georgia Council on Human Relations will play a significant role in helping bring about a more democratic society - one in which the worth of the individual as a child of God will receive due recognition.

Faithfully yours,

Frederick B. Routh
Assistant Director

FBR:mm

State - Georgia

June 5, 1957

The Reverend Robert E. Wilcox
2162 Telfair Street
Augusta, Georgia

Dear Father Wilcox:

Dr. Guy Wells, the Executive Director of the Georgia Council on Human Relations, SRC state affiliate, has told me of his delight at your election as President of the Augusta Chapter. I want you to know that we here in SRC extend to you our thanks for accepting this responsibility.

As a fellow Episcopalian, I am happy to see a priest of the Church taking so courageous a stand. My good friend Cornelius Turplee of the National Council of the Episcopal Church is working in the Southern area in human relations. You might want to get in touch with him. His address is:

1641 Link Road
Lynchburg, Virginia.

With devoted service and able leadership such as yours, we believe the Georgia Council on Human Relations will play a significant role in helping bring about a more democratic society - one in which the worth of the individual as a child of God will receive due recognition.

Faithfully yours,

Frederick B. Routh
Assistant Director

FBR:mm

~~Calhoun~~ States: Georgia

October 24, 1957

Rev. Murdock Calhoun
First Presbyterian Church of Marietta
Marietta, Georgia

Dear Mr. Calhoun:

At the request of Dr. Malcolm Calhoun we are sending you, separately, some materials on the NAACP.

We have entered a gift subscription in your name to our magazine New South. You will find in it an objective and analytical approach to the problems which concern our region.

I am enclosing a little discussion guide put out by the Atlanta affiliate of the Georgia Council on Human Relations. The Georgia Council is the former affiliate of the Southern Regional Council and we still work closely together on a cooperative basis. They would welcome your membership and moral support in these difficult times. As it has been wisely said: "All that is necessary for the triumph of evil is that good men should do nothing." Malcolm tells me that you are a good man and that you are doing good things. And for this, those of us who work for a democratic South in which all people will be respected on the basis of their individual merit are thankful.

Sincerely yours,

Frederick B. Routh
Assistant Director

Enclosures.

FBR:fcl

bc: Mrs. Knox, Georgia Council

December 18, 1957

Rev. Ed. Cahill
605 Boulevard, N.E.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Ed:

Enclosed is a copy of the memo I have just written to Dr. Peters. I discussed with Frances Pauley some revisions of her proposed by-laws for the Atlanta Council and suggested the appointment by you of a continuing committee to negotiate with a similar committee from the Georgia Council. I think the memo is clear on this point, therefore I would suggest that you appoint a continuing committee for this purpose. Without a doubt Mrs. Pauley would make a good member of that committee, though the decision as to personnel of the committee is entirely your prerogative.

With best wishes for the holiday season.

Cordially,

Frederick B. Routh
Assistant Director

Enclosure.

FBR:fcl

February 12, 1958

Georgia Council on Human Relations
63 Auburn Avenue
Atlanta, Georgia

Attn: Mrs. Luesta Knox

Dear Mrs. Knox:

How thoughtful of the Georgia Council to give us so handsome an office-warming present. The plant adds just the right touch of life and greenery to our workaday surroundings. At the moment, it has an honored place in my office, but it is clear to all that it is SRC's evidence of the friendship and mutual support of our two organizations.

Cordially,

Harold C. Fleming
Executive Director

HCF/mf

File

ATLANTA UNIVERSITY

ATLANTA, GEORGIA

March 24, 1958

SCHOOL OF SOCIAL WORK

Mr. Harold Flemings
Southern Regional Council
63 Auburn Avenue, NE
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Harold:

This is a formal reminder (I understand you have received an informal notification) that we are expecting you to participate in our Human Relations Workshop co-sponsored by the Georgia and Atlanta Human Relations Councils. The Workshop will be held on Wednesday, April 9, 10:00 a.m. at All Saints Episcopal Church.

While we hope you will be with us all day, we especially wanted you to review, at the Opening General Session at 10:30 a.m., the "Current Scenes in Georgia as Related to Human Relations." As the parent body, and because of your own knowledge and ability in this area, the Committee was unanimous in its decision.

We shall look forward to seeing you at that time.

Sincerely yours,

Whitney

Whitney M. Young, Jr.

WMY/ww

MEMBER UNITED NEGRO COLLEGE FUND

HBR

File
Mr. Connor

Human Relations Workshop

Co-sponsored by

Georgia Council on Human Relations
and
Greater Atlanta Council on Human Relations

at

All Saints Episcopal Church
Wednesday, April 9, 1958
10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

PROGRAM

Morning Session. . . . . Reverend Edward Cahill, presiding

10:00 a.m. Registration
10:30 a.m. Opening
Introductions
Remarks from State representative
The Current Scene in Georgia. . . . Mr. Harold Fleming
Film: "The Face of the South". .Mr. Art Levin, Leader
Panelists: Dr. Edward Weaver and Dr. Dudley DeGroot
Announcements

Lunch
12:30 p.m.

Workshops (Recorders to be selected by groups)

1:30 p.m. up stairs main room 1. Audio-Visual and Other Tools
Leader, Mr. Art Levin
Resource persons, Dr. Edward Weaver, Mrs. John Corell, and Dr. Dudley DeGroot

Room "B" Top of Stairs 2. Fact Finding and Local Surveys (Including Legislation)
Leader, Mr. Paul Rilling
Resource persons, Dr. Mozell Hill, Dr. John Hope, and Dr. Robert Brisbane

Room "C" past big room 3. Using Community Resources for Limited Objectives
Leader, Mrs. Paschal
Resource persons, Mrs. J. B. Pendergrast, Mr. Whitney Young

Afternoon Session . . . . . Dr. E. C. Peters, presiding

3:30 p.m. Workshop Reports
4:00 p.m. Discussion
4:30 p.m. Summary . . . . . Mr. Fred Routh
5:00 p.m. Adjournment

How to - info
Sharing of Experience
why - info -

Program (Continued)

Evening Session. . . . . Dean B. R. Brazeal, presiding

8:00 p.m. Life of Georgia Auditorium

Speaker. . . . . .Mr. Marion A. Wright

Question Period
Announcements
Adjournment

GEORGIA COUNCIL OF HUMAN RELATIONS

AN AFFILIATE OF THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC.
63 AUBURN AVE., N.E., ATLANTA, GEORGIA
TELEPHONE JACKSON 5-4063

A Council of Georgians dedicated to strengthening Democracy and extending human understanding among all persons in our great State.

April 14, 1958

Mr. Harold Fleming, Executive Director
Southern Regional Council
63 Auburn Avenue N. E.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Mr. Fleming:

May we thank you again for the splendid contribution you made to our program last week by your address at the opening session? We know of your crowded schedule and are consequently especially grateful for your willingness to give us so much of your time.

To us the whole program seemed quite good and we are going ahead with renewed energy and a degree of optimism. We are confident of your continuing interest and support.

Sincerely,

E. C. Peters

E. C. Peters, Chairman
Georgia Council on Human Relations

Edward A. Cahill

Edward A. Cahill, Chairman
Greater Atlanta Council on Human Relations

ECP:EAC/lk

DR. E. C. PETERS
Chairman

DR. J. McDOWELL RICHARDS
Second Vice Chairman

DEAN B. R. BRAZEAL
First Vice Chairman

MRS. A. A. McPHEETERS
Secretary

MR. L. D. MILTON
Treasurer

DR. GUY H. WELLS
Executive Director

DR. MOZELL HILL
Associate Executive Director

CONSULTANTS
DEAN WHITNEY YOUNG
DEAN B. R. BRAZEAL
REV. LUCIUS H. PITTS
DR. RICHARD HENDERSON
DR. E. K. WEAVER

Methodists Name Dr. W. C. Cowart

Dr. Walter Cleveland Cowart, retired member of the North Georgia Conference of the Methodist Church, is the new executive director of the Georgia Council on Human Relations.

Dr. Cowart succeeds Dr. Guy H. Wells, former president of Georgia State College for Women. Dr. Wells resigned to pursue special studies and to plan a trip around the world.

* * *

DR. COWART, a native of Alabama, will asume duties Aug. 1. He received a B.A. degree from Birmingham Southern College, B.D. degree from Yale Divinity School and doctor of divinity degree from Birmingham Southern.

Dr. Cowart was a chaplain in the U.S. Army during World War I. He has been minister of churches in Brussels and Puerto Rico as well as in the United States.

Atl. Journal 7/21/57

CROSS REFERENCE SHEET

NAME OR SUBJECT:

Georgia Council's Executive Board

RE: Statement on violence and intimidation in Dawson, Georgia.

DATE: 9/12/58

SEE:

Correspondence folder marked Violence and Vandalism
Dawson,(Terrell County)Georgia

Leon file

GEORGIA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

63 AUBURN AVENUE, N. E.
TELEPHONE: JACKSON 5-4063
DR. W. C. COWART
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

DR. E. C. PETERS
CHAIRMAN
DEAN B. R. BRAZEAL
FIRST VICE-CHAIRMAN
DR. J. McDOWELL RICHARDS
SECOND VICE-CHAIRMAN
MRS. W. W. WEATHERSPOOL
SECRETARY
MR. L. D. MILTON
TREASURER

September 15, 1958

NEWS RELEASE

For Tuesday Morning Papers

We, the Executive Committee of the Georgia Council on Human Relations, are distressed by the developments in Terrell County which are tarnishing the good name of our state in the eyes of the rest of the nation.

Only recently, the conscience of the nation was shocked by stories of police brutality in the County Seat, Dawson; this was followed by an expose in a Georgia paper of the questionable handling of school equipment in the county. Now, the U. S. Department of Justice, after an investigation by the FBI, has filed suit charging discrimination in voter registration. Among those declared ineligible due to illiteracy were Negro public school teachers. It is disturbing that our state officials, instead of seeking the facts in the situation, have immediately pledged all the resources of the state to the defense of the registration practices in question.

As citizens of Georgia, who believe in adherence to due process of law, we feel there are certain questions which must be raised. Our regard for the good name of our state, our concern for fair play, and our conscience compel us to speak out.

How is it that one state agency, a Board of Registrars, may declare illiterate a group of persons certified as qualified teachers by another state agency, the State Board of Education?

What does this say about the so-called "separate-but-equal" system of education which is so ardently defended as fair?

If, indeed, there is nothing wrong and nothing to hide from public scrutiny, why do state and local officials seek to hinder a thorough and honest investigation of the facts?

The Georgia Council on Human Relations, committed to our democratic form of government and believing in equal justice under law, urges our state officials to honestly examine these questions we raise.

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC.
Atlanta, Georgia

October 31, 1958

MEMORANDUM

To: Mrs. Knox

From: Emory Via

Re: Mr. Al Gross

Al Gross has recently become the business agent for local #122 of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union here in Atlanta. His phone number is JA 2-7696. His business address is:

187½ Trinity Avenue, S. W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Mr. Gross is a non-Southerner who has been working in the region for several years now. He is not yet fully conversant with the Atlanta labor scene but he will be interested in human relations activities. I think it would be good to send him information on both the Georgia and Atlanta Councils. Also, any public or semi-public activities of these groups would be appropriate occasions to extend him an invitation to attend.

Ga. Council on Human Relations

December 9, 1958

Executive Committee- for 1958-1959- first meeting:

Suggested agenda:

1. Who we are, and how our work impinges on that of the Ga. Council.
   Round Robin introduction
2. Mrs. Knox' report as Executive Secretary.
   290 members - (re'd more in quarter than $ paid out)
3. Will Mrs. Hammer be so kind as to keep minutes?
   yes
4. The By-Laws, and regularizing our status. See Article VII.
   Elected non-officer members to Exec Com from Bd. (needs confirmation by Bd at spring meeting)
4'. Decide on a date for five monthly meetings- January through May.
   4th Thursday of each month - 3:00 pm -
5. Mr. Cowart's report as Executive Director.
6. A general discussion of the question: What is our distinctive job this year?
7. Suggestion that between now and the January meeting we be giving thought to the question: Which one or two tasks call most urgently for a special committee?

Paul - use of Bd Members in Council aims -

J. McDowell Richards, Richard Hocking, Lester Rumble, Mrs. Knox, Walter Cowart, Lucius Pitts, Dr. Peters, Jane Hammer — FBR

May 11, 1959

Dr. Carl Hansen
Superintendent of Schools
Franklin Administration Building
13th and K Streets, N. W.
Washington 5, D. C.

Dear Dr. Hansen:

Before any more time elapses, I want to congratulate you on the effective presentation you made over WAGA-TV last week, and to thank you for coming to Atlanta.

From our point of view, the national publicity accorded your appearance here was the best evidence of its importance to better understanding of the Washington desegregation experience. Moreover, the local newspaper account of your exchange with Rep. Davis gave you all the best of it.

Jane and I greatly enjoyed the informal hour or so we spent with you, and I look forward to our next meeting.

Sincerely,

Harold C. Fleming
Executive Director

HCF:ls
Enclosure - 1 (check #100, for $211.84)
P. S. I recall that you were to send us copies of the charts you used here. If you find it possible to do so, I will see that the HOPE people who were interested receive copies.

H.C.F.

STATEMENT OF EXPENSES IN CONNECTION WITH MY TRIP TO ATLANTA, GEORGIA

May 2-3, 1959

Limousine to Washington airport	$2.50
Limousine from Atlanta airport	1.30
Insurance	2.00
Tips	1.00
Hotel	8.64
Meals	4.05
Limousine from hotel to airport	1.30
Limousine from Washington airport to my home	2.50
Transportation, Plane	88.55
Honorarium	100.00
	$211.84

August 5, 1959

Mr. Don West
Douglasville, Georgia

Dear Don:

I am returning your introductory manuscript. I hope you will excuse me for keeping it so long. I lost your exact address and trust that this will reach you.

I have no specific suggestions. I think that the publication you have in mind will be a useful effort. Whenever we can draw from the history of the South factors which will encourage a more constructive approach to these problems we should not fail to do so. The subject matter you plan to treat seems to me not only to be useful but also of considerable interest. I learned several new facts simply by reading this introductory prospectus.

I hope that you are able to find means to carry on this work and I will look forward to reading it.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PMR/sl
Encls. - 1.

Memo . . . FROM THE DESK OF

. . . . HAROLD C. FLEMING . . . .

August 20, 1959

Rev. Michael McDaniel
See: Rel. orgs. - Lutheran

Dear Mrs. Knox:

This Lutheran minister has recently moved to Savannah from North Carolina; is long acquainted with SRC through the Lutheran social action body. I think you will find him worth cultivating.

H. C. F.

Mrs. Luesta Knox
Georgia Council on Human Relations
63 Auburn Avenue
Atlanta, Georgia

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

SECOND SOUTHERN HUMAN RELATIONS SEMINAR

August 9 - September 3, 1959

REPORT TO THE MARSHALL FIELD FOUNDATION

REPORT OF THE USNSA SECOND SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS SEMINAR

University of Illinois
August 9 - September 3, 1959

Leadership is the most important single element in the progress toward desegregation and a finer quality of democratic life in the South. Examples could be cited in Little Rock, Tuscaloosa, Chapel Hill, and other Southern Communities where the presence or lack of a certain quality of leadership has spelled success or failure in attempts to desegregate educational facilities.

With growing pressures and rising tensions, where will this leadership be found? How will such leadership be developed? Who will display the needed leadership tomorrow to avoid the catastrophic events which occurred in Little Rock, Tuscaloosa, or Poplarville yesterday?

"Certainly the youth of the South, and more particularly the educated youth, is sure to retain at least some of its liberal racial ideas as it moves, year by year, into positions of influence and leadership in Southern politics, business, industry, agriculture, and community affairs." William Peters in his book, The Southern Temper suggests this answer.

One answer to the problem, then, is to be found among the educated Southern youth with liberal racial ideas. An effort should be made toward the development of greater knowledge of the situation in the South and the development of leadership ability among this group. As these students establish themselves in Southern communities, they must be prepared to relate their ideas to the situations in which they find themselves. They must have the knowledge which enables them to act, and the techniques which will enable them to exert effective leadership. This educational process for leadership and action describes the purpose of the Southern Student Human Relations Seminar.

SECOND SOUTHERN HUMAN RELATIONS SEMINAR

Fourteen outstanding college students from every section of the South came together for one month in the Second Southern Student Human Relations Seminar to prepare themselves to contribute more effectively to the solution of human relations problems in their respective states, communities, and campuses.

This Seminar met at the University of Illinois, Champaign, Illinois, August 9 through September 3, 1959, sponsored by the United States National Student Association and financed through a grant from the Marshall Field Foundation.

PREPARATION

The Seminar was preceded by an Advisory Committee meeting in Atlanta, Georgia, June 6, 1959, at Atlanta University.[1]. The following persons composed the Advisory Committee for the Second SSHRS:

Dr. Warren Ashby, Chairman
Ray Farabee, SSHRS Director
Reginald Green, USNSA
James McBride Dabbs, SRC
Reverend Will Campbell,
National Council of Churches
Max Heirich, AFSC
Murray Shapiro, ADL
Gloria Haithman '58 SSHRS participant
Martha Morrison, SSHRS

Staff members for the 1959 Seminar were Ray Farabee, Director; Martha Morrison, Assistant Director; and Dr. Warren Ashby, Consultant.

Application forms were sent to approximately thirty five Southern colleges and universities.[2]. From forty-eight applications which were returned, the following persons were selected as participants for the Second Seminar:[3].

---

1. See Appendix A for minutes of Committee meeting and evaluation of '58 Seminar.

2. See Appendix B for application forms.

3. See Appendix C and D for brief biographies of participants and letters to participants.

As preparation for the Seminar, the participants were sent copies of The Southern Heritage by James McBride Dabbs for pre-seminar reading, along with the year's-end summary of school desegregation in the South published by the Southern Education Reporting Service. Each participant was requested to prepare a survey of possible areas of human relations programming at his college and in his home community.

SEMINAR PROGRAM

As stated above, the students attending this Seminar came to prepare themselves to deal with the human relations problems in their respective areas. The curriculum planned for the Seminar was aimed at providing background information about the history and current trends in the South, some introduction to group techniques, and the opportunity for individual study on how to apply this information upon returning home. The resource persons selected for the Seminar are all persons who have had long experience in their respective fields. Many of them are from the South and have had long experience working with the problems of the region, both on campuses and in Southern communities. Seminar sessions were informal, generally following the pattern of a presentation of the topic for the day by the resource person with questions and discussions following. This routine was varied by films, role-playing, panels of the Seminar participants themselves, and work on individual projects.

Throughout the Seminar, evaluation sessions were held, reviewing the ground which had been covered and assessing the participants' feelings about the value of what had been done and additional areas which needed to be dealt with. The program was left flexible enough to pick up any additional topics or to explore any area which the participants felt had not been adequately covered.[4]

---

4. See Appendix E and F for the curriculum outline and budget.

The weekends were left largely free for recreation or the pursuit of individual interests, giving a good balance to the Seminar.

The Seminar participants began arriving on August 8, and were assigned rooms in a separate section of the University dorms. A banquet, followed by a discussion of the work of USNSA and the goals of the Seminar, opened the sessions. Frederick Routh, formerly of the Southern Regional Council opened the next day with presentations concerning the United States in the Twentieth Century and the Changes which have taken place in the South. The same forces which are molding this country have had their effect on the traditional racial patterns in the South and are gradually breaking them down. Dr. C. H. Parrish, Professor of Sociology from the University of Louisville, spoke on the Negro in the changing South and the Negro in the United States. His approach to the changing South showed the importance of the growing problems of the urban areas, especially restrictive housing which affects the patterns of local politics, schools, and the increasing separation between white and Negro. An outstanding development pertaining to the Negro in America has been the growth of racial consciousness. This has brought peculiar problems of its own but, has also produced the incentive leading to their fight for equal civil rights.

Dr. Parrish and Dr. Robert Whitener psychologist at the University of Illinois, dealt with the topics of race and prejudice, giving definitions of "race" from different disciplines and showing the effects of prejudice on those who hold it as well as on those against whom it is directed. Harlan Randolph of the Speech Department from the Ohio State University spoke bluntly and personally of the effects of discrimination on him as a minority group member. For some of the Seminar participants, this was the first time to hear how discrimination affects an individual and his outlook on life.

Sylvan Meyer, Editor of the Gainesville, Georgia, Daily Times, gave an overview of public school desegregation in the South beginning with the Supreme Court school decision of 1954, and dealing with some of the reactions brought on in the Southern states. A film, "The Clinton Story," helped bring home the effects of school desegregation on different elements of the community. This film told the story of the school desegregation crisis in Clinton, Tennessee, as seen through the eyes of various members of the community. Dr. Jack Peltason of the University of Illinois Political Science Department discussed the social and legal precedents to the Supreme Court decision, showing the inevitability of the decision.

Mr. Meyer presented a discussion of the press and public opinion stressing the responsibility of the press to present news in an impartial manner and the possible results when a newspaper chooses to bias its reporting.

Dr. Warren Ashby, the consultant to the Seminar, led a discussion on the ethical aspects of segregation and on the Biblical quotations which are often used to uphold segregation. Some of the passages most commonly used in this way were presented in their true Biblical context, and the Biblical arguments for segregation refuted.

Max Heirich of the American Friends Service Committee in High Point, North Carolina, began the discussions of the topics of desegregation in higher education and the role which students can play on their own campuses. He began with an over-view of the progress of desegregation in colleges and universities and the problems which it raises among students as well as in the faculty and administration and in the surrounding community. Using the University of Alabama as a case study of a desegregation attempt which failed, he examined the various factors involved and pointed out how wise planning could have helped smooth the process.

Ray Farabee and Dr. Ashby outlined common problems which develop between students, faculty and administration when students become interested in taking direct action. They gave suggestions for helping avoid such problems. The Seminar participants became their own resource personnel when a panel of three students discussed campus human relations programming on segregated white and Negro and desegregated Southern campuses, and in a role-playing session directed by Max Heirich. The role-playing centered around students of a desegregated campus who discover that Negro students are refused service at a near-by restaurant. The three sequences presented the students in the restaurant, a bull session back in the dorm, and a meeting with a dean when students' plan for action is presented to him.

Students from different areas then gave descriptions and evaluations of interracial and inter-campus activity which had been tried by students in their areas. Max, using each presentation as a case study, suggested ways of promoting and maintaining such programs and inter-campus organizations.

As the final session on this topic, the Seminar participants broke into five small groups to discuss reports prepared by five of the participants on the main desegregation problem on their campus. Each group worked on suggestions for solutions to the problem presented them and met back in one group to discuss and evaluate the problems and the suggestions offered.

The panels, the reports of problems, and the role-playing brought forth excellent participation and some good original and creative thinking on the part of the participants. They seemed to learn a great deal from these sessions.

Desegregation, Democracy, and Southern politics became the topic of several sessions beginning with a film, "Report from Alabama," dealing with hearings by the Civil Rights Commission on denial of voting rights to Negroes. Paul Rilling of the Southern Regional Council discusses aspects of desegregation in Virginia since the 1954 decision, showing the effects of segregation on politics there, and vice versa. He also presented ideas on what individual citizens can do to help acquire equal civil rights in their own areas.

Mrs. Dorothy Tilly, Director of Women's Work for the Southern Regional Council, outlined the role of the community Church in the South and the statements of national church groups on desegregation in the South. She also spoke on the role of the Southern women in desegregation, both in the past and in the present.

Special meetings of the Seminar occured throughout the attendance of the participants at the United States National Student Association annual student Congress. The Seminar met with Mr. James McCain of the Congress of Racial Equality; Hans Adler, University of Chicago; Robert Kiley, then president of USNSA:Willard Johnson, then International Affairs Vice-President of USNSA: Allard Lowenstein, just returned from Southwest Africa; two participants from the 1958 Seminar; Dr. E. K. Graham, special mediator at the UN, formerly president of the University of North Carolina; and James McBride Dabbs, author of The Southern Heritage. The film "Face of the South" was seen and discussed with a group of foreign students who were anxious to question the Seminar participants about conditions in the South.

The Seminar participants all attended the USNSA Congress as delegates and formed panels to meet with various groups from the Congress which were interested in hearing about the Seminar and in asking questions about the South. These panels were in great demand throughout the Congress and were generally considered to have done an excellent job of presenting not only a view of the Seminar but of the opinions of informed young Southerners about the South.

PROJECTS

An integral and important part of the Seminar experience, the projects, demanded individual and committee work throughout most of the Seminar.

These projects took the form of three booklets concerning race relations on Southern campuses. They were designed to cover three different areas of need and interest for Southern campuses and students:

1. guide lines for interracial programming possibilities on segregated white and Negro campuses;
2. leadership training in certain vital areas of civil rights for segregated Negro campuses;
3. suggestions for campuses which are nominally desegregated but which have problems of discrimination in certain campus and community facilities.

One participant chose to study the possible role of the small community church in the South.

The participants decided on these topics at the end of the first week of the Seminar and divided into groups to work on them during the remainder of the time. They felt that such material prepared by students who had had experience in these areas was very much needed on Southern campuses. Hopefully the booklets would be of such quality that they could be made available through USNSA to campuses requesting such information.

This project served several valuable ends. Not only did it represent the first effort of its kind in campus programming, it also provided the Seminar participants with valuable experience in organizing their own thinking about action possible on Southern campuses. It played a unique role in both the educational and leadership training aspects of the Seminar.[5]

---

5. See Appendix G for one of these booklets.

EVALUATION

Any evaluation of a program of this sort is necessarily partial and incomplete. A true evaluation of its success or worth can only be made when it can be known what changes have come about in the thinking of the participants and in their active participation in human relations problems in their own areas. The only short-range evaluation possible is in terms of what the participants themselves felt about the success and value of the Seminar.

From evaluations written by the participants during and immediately after the Seminar, it is apparent that the Seminar proved to be a worthwhile experience, one which had great effect on their thinking about race relations and their individual roles in the South. One participant termed the Seminar "the most valuable single educational experience of my life." Another stated that the Seminar had served to "expand my views, increase my knowledge, and prepare me as much as possible for action."

The participants pointed out the value to them of a broad background of facts about the South plus study of specific areas of concern, both on campus and in the community. Highly important to all participants was the experience of living, working with and coming to know students of both races. Without exception, all participants said that this provided great insight into the problems which discrimination and desegregation pose for the other race.

Seminar participants were asked to indicate their ideas on what action they hoped to take on returning to their campuses. The participants began this action during the NSA Congress when they shared their experiences, studies and insights with other Congress delegates. This kind of action may seem insignificant until it is realized that in the South much liberal opinion is unexpressed and therefore unheard because individuals with liberal ideas feel themselves to be isolated and alone in their views.

Several of the participants from segregated campuses planned an attempt to set up some form of interracial contact between their own schools and nearby campuses. Two students from a city in which several colleges are located, planned to attempt an interracial inter-campus organization, probably connected with student government. Several students from all-white campuses hoped to have Negro speakers brought to campus, and another wanted to help establish "cultural and academic" exchange between his college and the Negro institution in the same city.

One segregated white and one nominally desegregated university had problems rising from lack of Negro applicants. They were thinking in terms of advertising their colleges among the nearby Negro high schools. Several students from Negro colleges were planning to begin working with campus and community groups placing emphasis on full use of civil rights. One student had in mind organizing a campus student government Human Relations Commission to begin work on desegregating his school. Another from a desegregated campus knew of several campus groups with which he could work in desegregating those areas of campus life and those college-supported community facilities which were still discriminatory.

In brief, the Seminar provided the participants with information and techniques by which to put this information to use. It opened the eyes of most of the white participants to just what the segregated system means in terms of the effect on individual lines and the mockery it makes of Democracy. The Negro participants learned what desegregation means to the "traditional Southerner" and of the growing liberalism of white youth. A basis for honest exchange of opinions and ideas was established early and maintained throughout the Seminar. This enabled the participants to come to know and to trust one another. This attitude, combined with the experience of looking at racial problems in a non-emotional way provides fertile ground for other fruitful contacts and experiences outside the Seminar.

The primary value of the Seminar lay in its effect on the attitudes of the participants. Without exception there was an increased understanding not only of one another and of the other race, but of the importance of the role which Southerners who have had such an experience must play in working out the current problems in the South.

One participant stated that if many more students could have this experience there would shortly be "amazing progress" in race relations. This progress is inevitable at any rate, but these students will serve to hasten that progress on their campuses and in their own communities.

APPENDIX - A -

MINUTES OF SOUTHERN ADVISORY COMMITTEE MEETING

ATLANTA, June 6, 1959

(These minutes are taken out of chronological order and are arranged under the two topics, Southern Seminar and Southern Conference.)

The meeting of the Advisory Committee was held June 6, at Atlanta University, Atlanta, Georgia. Attending the meeting were: Dr. Warren Ashby, Chairman; Ray Farabee, SSHRS Director; Reginald Green, USNSA; James McBride Dabbs, SRC; Rev. Will Campbell, National Council of Churches; Max Heirich, AFSC; Murray Shapiro, ADL; Gloria Haithman, '58 SSHRS participant; Martha Morrison, SSHRS.

Invited but unable to attend: President Benjamin Mays, Morehouse College; Rev. Charles Jones; Dr. C. H. Parrish; Arthur Levin, ADL; Leo Marsh, YMCA; Father Joseph Fichter; Ed Levy, U. N. C.

Southern Seminar

A report of the 1958 Southern Seminar was given by Director Ray Farabee. Farabee reviewed the goals of the Seminar, the method of selection of the participants, advance reading sent to the participants, the curriculum, resource materials, resource persons, procedure used during the daily sessions of the Seminar, participation of Seminar participants in the USNSA National Congress, and results of the Seminar in changes of attitudes on the part of the participants. Gloria Haithman, Seminar participant from Hampton Institute, Virginia, gave an evaluation of the Seminar as it affected her and her ability to meet campus and community situations. One of the most valuable aspects reported was the close contact with students of the other race which enabled her, in part, to overcome the prejudices and misunderstandings engendered by life in a segregated community. Through this contact and through the study of the development of the South's problems was gained greater ability to understand and to work to overcome these problems.

A follow-up report of the Seminar showing concrete effects of the Seminar on Southern campuses and the personal importance of the Seminar to the participants was read. This report was compiled from replies of the 1958 Seminar participants to a questionnaire sent out in April, 1959. (Report attached)

A discussion of the nature of the Seminar and of the goals to be expected of it centered around the question of how much initial commitment to desegregation should be expected of the participants and whether a definite change of individual views toward desegregation should be stated as a goal of the Seminar. The 1958 Seminar was slanted toward promoting desegregation but was honestly open to a wide range of opinion. Among the resource persons used, the conservative stand was not included, but it received articulate presentation from the participants during the Seminar and was a constant factor in the study, discussion and planning which took place. What is essential to the Seminar is a realization on the part of the participants that desegregation is coming and a willingness to work to bring it about in the way which will be best for the campus and community involved.

Though not stated as a specific goal, it is to be hoped that the participants will gain some greater understanding of the necessity of personal involvement in the solving of the South's problems and a greater personal commitment to desegregation. The Seminar leadership should be sensitive to this unstated goal. Also to be hoped for is that the participants will gain a sense of the importance of personal integration and integrity in the midst of the apparent disintegration of personality and social systems in the country and in the South. The participants should be brought to a realization of the dichotomy between democratic principles and the practices of discrimination in the South.

GOALS OF THE SEMINAR

To develop understanding of the problems and complexities of race relations in the South.

To provide a thorough educational experience which will help prepare the students to make responsible contributions to the solution of the problems facing them on their campuses and in their communities.

To provide experience in leadership and training in race relations through the seminar activities and through the program of study.

To provide an atmosphere of honest inquiry in which varying views can be exchanged, a study of the history and current status of the racial problems in the South can be made, and in which individual examination of values can take place on the basis of the study and personal experiences of the seminar.

To develop a better understanding of the democratic ideal as shown in the democratic process.

To prepare the student to work in the community both during his college years and after graduation.

To work out specific campus programming in the light of the needs and the individual situation of the campus.

SUGGESTIONS FOR CURRICULUM

Community

Training in group techniques helpful in bringing about change.

Information on community structure.

Community reaction to desegregation of schools.

Information on community agencies active in human relations work. Encourage the participants to identify with the groups in their own communities and to establish contact with them on their return to their campuses.

Outline possible community action for future reference when the participant himself is a member of the community.

Suggestions for the organization of community groups when no such groups exist.

Campus

Have the participants bring to the Seminar a written report of the status of race relations in their community and on their campus along with a description of any programs which have been carried out or of any groups which are actively working in this field.

Have each participant work out a plan for specific action on his own campus. Seminar leadership might work with each participant as he prepares his program, taking into account the existing situation on each campus and suggesting programs which might be suitable and useful.

RESOURCE MATERIAL

Southern Heritage, James McBride Dabbs
With All Deliberate Speed, Don Shoemaker
Southern Temper, Bill Peters
Story of the American Negro, Ina C. Brown
Guide Book on Desegregation, N. E. A.
Forces For and Against Desegregation in Southern Life, Princeton Press
Southern School News, Year's end summary

RESOURCE PERSONS (not listed on schedule)

Mrs. Louise Pfuetze, University of Georgia
Mrs. Ben (Jean) Russell, Tennessee Civil Rights Commission
Mrs. Robert Boyle. University pf Virginia
Mrs. Ruby Hurley, NAACP, Council of Church Women
Grace Hamilton, Urban League, Atlanta, Georgia
Rev. Joseph Hine, University of Illinois, Religious Programming
Rev. Harry Smith, U.N.C., Religious Programming

The Advisory Committee reviewed last year's Seminar, made suggestions for changes for this year, worked on the curriculum, resource persons, resource materials for the 1959 Seminar.

Southern Conference

Max Heirch, AFSC in High Point, N. C., Chairman of the planning committee for the Southern Conference, reviewed the Conference. The sponsoring agencies, make-up of the steering committee, work of the committee before and during the conference, selection of participating schools, attendance at the Conference, and program of the Conference were reviewed. An evaluation of the Conference revealed that, contrary to hopes for a broad representation of views, the liberal position was the one on which the Conference moved, because of the lack of conservative attendance. The speakers, rather than the workshop sessions, proved to be the focus of the Conference, and there was some lack of communication between the conference participants. However, by the end of the second day, discussion among the participants was more free and was reaching meaningful levels. It is perhaps noteworthy that such conversation did come about in the short time during which the Conference met.

As a direct result of the Conference, there have been encouraging activities in some parts of the South, including active student participation in and initiation of campus and community human relations programming.

FOLLOW-UP

It was felt by the sponsoring organizations and by the participants of the Conference that some form of follow-up is necessary to derive the full benefit from the work which the Conference began. This follow-up probably should not take the form of another South-wide conference, but should be concentrated in campus areas. This limits the cost of the conference, while allowing consideration of specific problems which are of concern to that area. Also, a smaller and more homogenous group would allow for more freedom of discussion.

Suggestions

Area conferences, seminars, or workshops sponsored by a school in an area where there is a cluster of campuses could prove fruitful. There has been the desire for such a conference expressed in Alabama, Mississippi, Texas, Virginia and North Carolina. Such conferences would possibly be welcome in South Carolina, Tennessee and Georgia.

In these conferences, special emphasis should be on acquiring participants who accept the fact of desegregation and who are willing to work on the basis of meeting the problems which desegregation effects, without arguing its rightness or wrongness.

The staff travel of the USNSA officers could possibly be coordinated to help with these conferences.

The '59 SSHRS participants could work on plans for such a conference in their respective areas.

Comments

There was a feeling that there is a need for special work in the area of student programming which is not being provided by organizations now active in the area. A special agency is needed to work with students and to keep track of the work which has been done and which is in progress.

The drawbacks of inter-agency cooperation include shortage of funds beyond the regular programming and office expenses, the fact that each agency has already outlined its program and probably has little time to devote to a new project, and the delays which are involved in clearing any action through each sponsoring body.

Suggestions for contacting Foundation

In view of the difficulties of trying to fit a new program into the already existing programs of the student organization, and in view of the fact that the contribution of funds and staff time from these organizations would be limited, it was suggested that funds be acquired from a foundation (possibly the Field Foundation) to support one person who would spend a year travelling in the South helping students organize a series of area conferences. This person would work in cooperation with all these student organizations, not representing them but using their resources and contacts, and receiving the benefit of their counsel by way of an advisory group which would meet periodically to review the work done and suggest further work. The National Student Association was asked to take the responsibility of seeking funds and for the initial development of the project, working in consultation with the other organizations. USCC, AFSC, ADL, Hillel, SRC, have expressed an interest in the project and would be willing to help with contacts.

Foundations should be contacted on these bases:
There has been held in the South a successful Human Relations Conference involving thoughtful students from all parts of the South who are deeply interested in the problems facing their section.
There is an evidenced need for follow-up to this conference in local campus areas.
There is good indication that the agencies involved in the co-sponsorship of the Conference, plus other Southern student groups, would help with contacts, advice, resources, and consultation in a project to help students in local areas plan and administer seminars or conferences on race relations.
This is a full-time job which could best be performed by a carefully selected person working in cooperation with student groups. This new approach will mean new life engendered in the existing student groups and in their ability to bring about effective human relations programming on the local level where it is most needed.
Such a problem will provide a much-needed continuing basis for inter-agency cooperation, leading to such cooperation in other programs.

INFORMATION ON FINAL EVALUATION OF 1958

SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS SEMINAR

I. Letter sent from Martha Morrison to all '58 Seminar Participants;

Dear SSHRSers:

Enclosed you will find a sheet of questions, some of which will look familiar. They are designed to be an eight-months-after evaluation of the '58 SSHRS. As you notice, they ask for specific answers with emphasis on concrete benefits and actions. Please answer these questions as completely as possible and mail them in self-addressed envelope before the end of April. These evaluations will actually be of more importance than the ones immediately following the Seminar, for they will be some indication of the long-range worth of the Seminar in terms of its concrete benefits and in terms of its effects on students who did not attend the Seminar, but who have benefited indirectly from it.

These evaluations will also be the primary guide for the planning and direction of the '59 Seminar which will be held this August. Ray, Warren, and I have been asked to work with it, and so are especially anxious to hear from you, as to your ideas on what can be done differently or better this year. One idea which has come up is the possibility of spending more time in planning specific campus action and perhaps building the individual projects around the working out of some action possible on the individual's campus. Let us hear from you about this and any other ideas which you have. But mail them by the end of April so that they can be considered during the first planning meeting in May.

The National Human Relations Seminar is in the planning stages, as is the NSA Congress. Try to make one or both of these affairs. Hope to see you sometime this summer.

Information on Final Evaluation of 1958 SSHRS

II. Questionnaire sent out with above letter

1. Have you been able to apply anything learned at the Seminar in a concrete way on your campus or in your community? If so, specifically what has been applied and what was the result on campus or in the community?
2. Has any part of the Seminar experience been of real importance to you personally? (Include all facets of living, working together; discipline of study; recreation; other.) If so, what has been of importance? In what way?
3. In the light of your experiences during the past eight months, what were the most significant subjects studied at the Seminar? Least significant? Why?
4. In the light of your experiences during the past eight months, what subjects would you include for study which were omitted or inadequately covered in '58?
5. What comments do you have on any of the following or what changes would you suggest for the '59 Seminar?
   (1) Goals of Seminar
   (2) Selection of participants
   (3) Procedure during Seminar (schedule, use of various group techniques)
   (4) Resource persons
   (5) Resource material
   (6) Required reading
   (7) Individual projects
   (8) Participation in USNSA Congress
   (9) Meeting during Congress
   (10) Advance preparation for Seminar participants sent out from directors
   (11) Any other

Please answer and return in the enclosed envelope by the end of April.

(See following for results of questionnaire)

1958 Southern Student Human Relations Seminar

Final Evaluation, April 1959

The 1958 Southern Seminar met August 3-29, at Ohio State University, Columbus, and Ohio Wesleyan, Delaware, Ohio. Sponsored by the NSA and financed by a grant from the Marshall Field Foundation, it brought together fourteen students from colleges and universities--Negro, white, and desegregated--throughout the South, for four weeks of intense group and individual study of the problems of race relations in the South. This evaluation was made at the end of the school year following the Seminar in an effort to determine the concrete and personal values of the Seminar and to help determine the extent to which an experience of this sort influences the thinking and actions of a group of Southern student leaders on their own campuses and in their own communities.

Immediately following the 1958 Seminar, an evaluation was carried out which expressed the reactions of the participants to the experience but which did not allow time for a real assessment of its long-range effects. The first evaluation, according to the written statements of the participants, described the Seminar as a unique learning experience--one which promised to contribute much to their thinking and actions. This final evaluation, based on answers of nine of the fourteen participants to the questionnaire attached, points out the areas of study which have proved most valuable to them in their individual situations and which have led to campus programming during this school year. More importantly, it is an indication of changes in individual attitudes toward desegregation brought about largely through the experience of working together and through individual consideration of the dichotomy between the democratic ideal and many practices in the South. Of course, no evaluation of such a project can be the final evaluation. The knowledge, experiences, and understanding gained by the participants will have their effect on not only the participants, but also on those persons with whom they come in contact.

Southern Campus Programming and Action

FLORIDA A&M, TALLAHASSEE. The Seminar participant helped organize a weekly discussion group meeting to exchange views on world happenings, Southern problems and other topics of interest to the students, utilizing speakers, student panels and informal discussions. An active interest in NSA has sprung up because of the reports on the Seminar and NSA Congress.

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, HAMPTON, VIRGINIA. The participant became NSA coordinator of the Student Government and active participation in all the regional functions began. Work with and interest in the student chapter of the NAACP on campus increased with a resulting increase of student interest in civic rights. Interracial contacts came about through an exchange visit between the Wesley Foundations of Hampton and William and Mary and through regional student government meetings.

DILLARD UNIVERSITY, NEW ORLEANS. An increased interest in the work of the NAACP and in student interest in civic rights was evident, along with growing interest in the work of NSA.

WOMAN's COLLEGE, UNC, GREENSBORO, N.C. Student leaders have interviewed members of the Board of Trustees about policy on entertaining Negro guests in the Student Union and on holding interracial conferences on campus. The college is partially integrated, but these are new steps.

SOUTHWESTERN UNIVERSITY, MEMPHIS, TENN. The Seminar participant has found the Seminar experience useful in working with Negro students from the Memphis area on an intra-city student government council. He has explained and discussed NSA's position on desegregation before student groups and with many individual students. The library acquired by each participant has been loaned to interested students.

GEORGE PEABODY COLLEGE, NASHVILLE, TENN. The Seminar participant reported on the Seminar to several student groups and discussed the issues raised with individual students. Work with NSA on the regional level was begun, involving an interracial planning committee for the regional conference.

Community Activity

UNIVERSITY OF TEXAS, AUSTIN, TEXAS. The Seminar participant co-chaired the campus Human Relations Committee which worked with the merchants and restaurant owners in the campus area, asking them to provide service to both white and Negro students of the University. Two restaurants now serve all students.

GEORGE PEABODY, NASHVILLE, TENN. The Seminar Participant spoke to a meeting of the Nashville Human Relations Council on the activities of students in race relations with the result that the Council is seeking ways to work in closer cooperation with the students of the city. The Tennessee Conference on Human Relations is also interested in student activities.

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, HAMPTON, VA. The student NAACP Chapter has been successful in persuading some merchants in the community to remove their "white" --"colored" signs and is working on other projects.

Individual Activities

Participants in last year's Seminar have held positions of responsibility on their campuses and have been active in all areas of student life. Three served as presidents of their student bodies this past year, while at least four more were regional officers of their NSA region. One was editor of the campus paper, one co-chaired the Human Relations Committee, one served as president of the Student Union Board. Besides the student body presidents already mentioned, at least six served on the student governing body of their campus, while records indicated that they were active in many other campus organizations. At least one participant is going into the human relations field professionally. In their positions of campus leadership, the 1958 SSHRS participants exerted a good measure of influence on the opinions and actions of the students around them. From all indications, the experiences of the Southern Seminar entered into their work and into the further development of their ideas in a very real and a very meaningful way.

Personal Evaluations

The personal importance of the Seminar to the participants has been touched on, but its extent is revealed in quotes taken from several of these final written evaluations.

The total Seminar experience was of importance to the participants from Memphis, who saw it as an opportunity for "the people who are in the middle of things to see what they're in." "I feel the attitudes and approach to problems that I learned at the Seminar has been helpful in solving many of our problems," was reported from Austin, Texas. From Tallahassee-"I have learned that people are people and that it is not our color which is keeping us apart." A practical result from the Seminar has had its effect on the participant from Hampton, who says,"I am less self-conscious and sensitive in an inter-racial group. The Seminar provided a concrete, definite, tangible experience that I can refer to as I meet various similar situations."

Most of the fourteen participants had lived in segregated communities with little contact of any lasting or equal nature with members of the other race, and so they were faced with the double strain of adjusting themselves to the new Seminar situation and to the new interracial contact. One participant expressed clearly his feeling that this led to a greater understanding on the part of all the participants as to what the other race felt under newly integrated conditions, because there was some pressure to vocalize these feelings rather than hide them as is usually done. For some of the participants there was a real struggle to begin to work out the newly recognized dichotomy between religious teachings, democratic practice, and the segregation with which they were familiar. The Seminar provided information and experiences useful to those students as well as to those whose convictions were more settled.

This statement was made by the participant from Little Rock, Arkansas. "For those who already had their convictions, the Seminar served as an agent to teach them methods by which they could cope with the problems. For me, the Seminar was the beginning. I do not mean to imply that the Seminar experience converted me from a strict segregationist to 'liberal' in four weeks.

I mean it was important to me because I was beginning to see that there was something terribly wrong when the color of a person's skin could determine his social, economic and political status in the society in which he moved. I knew that this was not true to the ideals of democracy and religion that I had been taught, but I needed to have it proven within myself. The experience of living and working and sharing with Negro students has shown that I cannot become a passive agent in the changes that are to come, but that I must help make those changes. I have realized that my own rights as an individual will not be fully secured until the Negro has achieved his in every facet of living."

And from Greensboro, North Carolina--"I have learned the distinction between differences and barriers and that the former does not necessitate the latter."

The concrete information and program help given by the 1958 Seminar have been important for the background of information which they gave to each participant, but the experience of living and working together has provided a great part of the understanding necessary to make best use of the information gained.

APPENDIX -B-

APPLICATION FORM

Second Southern Student Human Relations Seminar
August 8 till September 3, 1959

A. Please fill out this form as completely as possible. It will be used as the basis for selection of participants in the Southern Student Human Relations Seminar.

B. When space for detailed answers is insufficient, use separate sheet and number your answers according to the number of the questions.

C. All applications and supporting materials must be received by May 15. Notice of selection or rejection will be sent by or on June 1st.

D. Please print or type.

1. NAME Mr. / Mrs. / Miss _____ _____
(LAST) (FIRST) (MIDDLE)

2. SCHOOL_____ _____ _____

3. CLASS AND EXPECTED DATE OF GRADUATION_____

4. CURRENT ADDRESS_____ _____ _____
(STREET AND NUMBER) (CITY) (STATE)

5. ADDRESS DURING SUMMER_____

6. PERMANENT ADDRESS (if different from no.5)
_____

7. WHAT IS YOUR FIELD OF ACADEMIC CONCENTRATION?
_____

8. LIST IMPORTANT EXTRA-CURRICULAR ACTIVITIES AND OFFICES (either on campus or in the community)

9. HAVE YOU HAD ANY CAMPUS, COMMUNITY, OR ORGANIZATIONAL EXPERIENCE IN HUMAN RELATIONS OR INTERRACIAL RELATIONS PROGRAMS OR FORMAL DISCUSSIONS? DESCRIBE.

10. HAVE YOU EVER ATTENDED A USNSA NATIONAL OR REGIONAL CONGRESS OR CONFERENCE?_____
IF YES, PLEASE STATE WHEN AND WHERE.

_____

11. PLEASE LIST THE NAME, ADDRESS, AND POSITION OF ONE FACULTY MEMBER AND ONE STUDENT LEADER IN A POSITION TO EVALUATE YOUR PERSONAL QUALIFICATIONS WHOM YOU HAVE REQUESTED TO SEND US RECOMMENDATIONS.

a. name_____position_____
address
_____

b. name_____position_____
address
_____

12. PLEASE ATTACH A STATEMENT OF 500 WORDS OR LESS INDICATING YOUR REASONS FOR BEING INTERESTED IN THIS PROGRAM.

13. PLEASE HAVE A TRANSCRIPT OF YOUR COLLEGE GRADES SENT TO THE ADDRESS BELOW.

Signature_____

Date of Birth_____

Place of Birth_____

WHEN YOU HAVE COMPLETED THIS FORM, PLEASE RETURN IT IMMEDIATELY TO:

U. S. NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION
3457 Chestnut Street
Philadelphia 4, Pa.

DEADLINE for applications: May 15, 1959.

SELECTION DATE: June 1, 1959.

CONFIDENTIAL

Received_____R/_____

APPLICANT_____

COLLEGE_ _____ _____ _____

RECOMMENDER_____

United States National Student Association

RECOMMENDATION FORM

Scholarship Applicant

You have been requested to recommend this Candidate who is applying to us for a scholarship to the Second Southern Student Human Relations Seminar.

In order that the program be successful, the Selection Committee asks that you give full and frank evaluation of the candidate. Your completion of these questions, and the comments which you add, will be of great assistance in assuring the highest possible quality for the program. It is understood that all information in this evaluation form will be kept strictly confidential.

PLEASE RANK CANDIDATE AMONG OTHER STUDENTS YOU KNOW IN THE FOLLOWING ATTRIBUTES:

	Fair top 60%	Good top 30%	Very Good top 15%	Excellent top 5%
1. General Intelligence
2. Speaking Ability
3. Writing Ability
4. Cocurricular Participation
5. Social Insight

6. Is the candidate an independant thinker?_____
Why do you say this?

Recommendation Form

7. How do you evaluate the candidate's knowledge of and interest in human relations?

8. Are you qualified to comment on the candidate's knowledge of this area language?_____
If so, please compare him to other students and also give some measure of his depth of comprehension of political, cultural, historical and economic factors in interracial relations today:

9. Have you seen examples of the candidate's news reporting and/or writings on substantive affairs? Please comment on his analytical ability, clarity, perception and persuasive ability of his written works.

10. Do you feel that the candidate is, at this moment, sufficiently prepared from his general reading and experience to explain and discuss intelligently contemporary U. S. human relations concerns in a seminar type group?

Recommendation Form

11. How do you evaluate the candidate's personality in terms of:

    a. personal charm and warmth?

    b. maturity and judgment, sense of responsibility?

    c. ability to adjust to unexpected situations among several people who have met for the first time?

12. What do you feel are the reasons for the candidate's extracurricular participation?

Please use a separate sheet to give the selection committee any additional information you wish about the candidate.

RETURN BEFORE MAY 15 TO:

U. S. National Student Association
Second Southern Student Human Relations Seminar
3457 Chestnut Street
Philadelphia 4, Pa.

SIGNATURE _____

POSITION _____

APPENDIX -C-

SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS SEMINAR

1959
PARTICIPANTS

ALEXANDER, ROBERT '62	Box 4023, Duke Station Durham, N. C. R.F.D.#2, Kinston, N.C. Freshman Class Senator; VP Freshman House; Y-Freshman Advisory Council; Sophomore Class Fraternity Senator; Sophomore Class Cabinet; President Pledge Class.
ANDERSON, BERT '60	Sayers Hall, Southwest Texas College, San Marcos, Texas Star Route #1, Marble Falls, Texas Class President; Sophomore Senator; Fraternity President; Student-Faculty Administration Board
APTHORP, JAMES '60	SAE House, Florida State University, Tallahassee, Fla. Route #2, Box 146, Tallahassee, Florida VP of Men's Affairs; Attorney General; VP Fraternity; Southern Student Conference on Human Relations
BASS, VIRGINIA '61	44 Pearson, Maryville College, Maryville, Tenn. Rice, Virginia Class Officer; YWCA; Southern Student Conference on Human Relations
BERGERON, JESSIE MAY '60	980 Taft Place, New Orleans, La. (Loyola University) 2222 Port Street, New Orleans, Louisianna Officer, Debating Society; Catholic Students Mission Crusade

Appendix C
SSHRS 1959 Participants

BOLDEN, KATHERINE '60	Talladega College, Talladega, Alabama 610 1st Avenue, Albany, Ga. College Council; Dorm House Council; Alabama Human Relations Council
BOUISE, ANNE '60	Xavier University, New Orleans, Louisiana 2707 Havana Street, New Orleans, La. Chairman, Xavier NFCCS; Director, national survey of race relations on Catholic college campuses
COLLINS, ROBERT '60	Box 74, Atlantic Christian College, Wilson, N.C. 422 NW 25 Court, Miami, Fla. Editor, campus newspaper; Southern Student Conference on Human Relations; Fraternity President
DAVIS, JACQUELYN '60	Wesleyan College, Macon, Ga. 2918 Victoria Circle, Macon, Ga. College Government Assoc.; Student Senate; Race Relations Committee, YWCA
KENDRICK, DAVID '60	2600 Rio Grande, University of Texas, Austin, Texas 420 S. 14th St., Gatesville, Texas Co-Chairman, Human Relations Commission; Student Assembly
LEWIS, SHELBY FAYE '60	Southern University, Baton Rouge, La. P. O. Box 79, Plain Dealing, La. YWCA; Social Science Honor Society; VP, Social Science Organization

ROBERSON, SHERMAN
'60

Savannah State College,
Savannah, Ga.
2609 West Broad, Savannah,
Georgia
Editor, campus newspaper;
Class President;
Fraternity officer;
YMCA;
Debating Society;
N. Y. Student Editors'
Conference

RUPPERT, RICHARD '61

Spring Hill College,
Spring Hill, Alabama
506 Timothy Avenue,
Norfolk, Va.
Student Government;
Debating Society;
International Relations Club

THORNTON, LUCY
'61

Hampton Institute, Hampton, Va.
209 13th Street, West Point, Va.
President, campus NAACP;
Co-Chairman, SCA;
President, Dorm House Council;
Sorority Officer

MORRISON, MARTHA--Assistant Director of Seminar

George Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn. ('59)
4552 Baltimore Ave., Phila. 43,
Pa. (Univ. Of Penn--'61)
2121 June Drive, Nashville 14,
Tennessee
Former President, Tenn. Student
Christian Council;
NSA Regional Officer;
'58 SSHRS;
Planning Committee, Southern
Student Conference

FARABEE, RAY--Director of Seminar

University of Texas Law School
('61)
2828 San Gabriel, Apt. B,
Austin 5, Texas
Former SBP, University of Texas
Former Student Government VP,
USNSA;

Former President, USNSA;
Chairman, Southern
Student Conference;
Director, '58 SSHRS

ASHBY, WARREN--Seminar Consultant
Professor of Ethics, Womans
College, Greensboro, N.C.
1710 Wright Avenue,
Greensboro
'58 SSHRS Consultant;
Planning Committee, Southern
Student Conference

APPENDIX -D-

SAMPLE LETTER TO PARTICIPANTS

2313 Ninth Street
Wichita Falls, Texas
July 22, 1959

Mr. Richard Ruppert
506 Timothy Avenue
Apartment C
Norfolk, Virginia

Dear Richard:

Two weeks, and we shall be starting the Southern Student Human Relations Seminar (SSHRS). I look forward to meeting you in person at the University of Illinois, Richard. For the moment, I am vacationing in Wisconsin before the Seminar and my return to law school at the University of Texas.

The Seminar will be an intense four weeks of study, discussion, learning -- and fun. I, at least, have found some of the greatest enjoyment in life to be an envolvement in those issues which have great historical importance; and as a Southerner, I think you can fully appreciate the importance of desegregation and improved human relations.

Preparation before the Seminar is very important.

You will soon be receiving The Southern Heritage and a summary issue of the Southern School News. Read these thoroughly -- marking and making notes. Be ready to answer a series of comprehensive questions on the contents of each when you get to Champaign - Urbana.

As further preparation before the SSHRS, I suggest you do the following:

1. READING -- Besides the two pieces sent to you, check local libraries, bookstores, or magazines for supplemental reading on desegregation, segregation, the South and race relations in general.

2. COLLECTION OF MATERIALS -- Bring any materials you can to the Seminar, including newspaper clippings, books, student government reports from Spring Hill, etc.

3. DISCUSSION -- With parents and people in your community about desegregation. This is sometimes hard, but it will be helpful to know the feelings of such people and why they feel the way they do on this issue.

4. SURVEY FOR FUTURE ACTION -- Write two or more pages on what you feel might be done, now and in the future, in your (1) college and (2) community to improve the quality of democratic human relations between people, regardless of their particular color. E. g., what student government might do or what the church might be doing.

If you haven't firmed up your transportation to Champaign, Richard, do so and inform Reg Green on the Specifics. If you have questions, write Reg immediately. (Or you can write to me at [illegible] 1330 Oakcrest Court, Appleton, Wisconsin.)

See you soon!

Sincerely,

Ray Farabee, Director
Southern Student Human Relations Seminar

APPENDIX -E-
SECOND DRAFT

PROPOSED CURRICULUM AND PROGRAM FOR THE
SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS SEMINAR, AUGUST, 3-29

August 3-19 Ohio State University
August 20-29 Ohio Wesleyan University
USNSA National Student Congress

SUNDAY, AUGUST 3
Afternoon

Registration and Assignment of rooms

Night

TOPIC:	Introduction to the Seminar (Dinner Meeting, 6:00 P.M.)
CONSIDERATIONS:	Introduction of Seminar Participants and Personnel; Purpose of Seminar; History and Purpose of USNSA; Discussion of what each participant expects from the Seminar
PERSONNEL:	Ray Farabee, Director of Seminar and President, USNSA
TECHNIQUE:	Presentation by Ray Farabee and group discussion

MONDAY, AUGUST 4
Morning

TOPIC:	America in the Mid-Twentieth Century
CONSIDERATIONS:	Changing Patterns and Attitudes in the U.S.; National and International Challenges to our Democratic system and way of life; American Values and Standards
PERSONNEL:	Dr. Warren Ashby, Consultant to the Seminar, Professor of Ethics, Women's College, U. of N.C.
TECHNIQUE:	Presentation by Dr. Ashby and group discussion

Afternoon

TOPIC: The Changing South

CONSIDERATIONS: History and Background of the South; Segregation; Changing Patterns of Race Relations

PERSONNEL: Frederic Routh, Assistant Director; Southern Regional Council

TECHNIQUE: Presentation, Mr. Routh; Film, "The Face of the South"

Night

READING ASSIGNMENT: Segregation, Robert Penn Warren. Changing Patterns, Southern Regional Council; Black Monday Judge Thomas Brady

TUESDAY, AUGUST 5
Morning

TOPIC: The Changing South

CONSIDERATIONS: Patterns in Different Regions of the South; Factors influencing Southern attitudes and traditions; development of prior considerations presented by Mr. Routh

PERSONNEL: Frederic Routh

TECHNIQUE: Group Discussion

Afternoon

TOPIC: Segregation and Desegregation

CONSIDERATIONS: Arguments for segregation and desegregation; What the Negro wants; Democratic ideals and practices; International implications; What and why the conflicts

PERSONNEL: Discussion leaders

TECHNIQUE: Role Playing and Discussion Groups

Night

READING ASSIGNMENT: Feelings or Fact, Heaton; The Fears Men Live By, Hirsch Race, Gillan, What the Supreme Court Said, Lefav and Davis

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 6

Morning

TOPIC: Race and Prejudice

CONSIDERATIONS: Nature of race; racial prejudices; effects of segregation and desegregation

PERSONNEL: Leading Sociologist or Psychologist
Possibly Dr. Brewton Berry, Ohio State or Dean M. M. White, U. of Kentucky or Dr. C. H. Parish, U. of Louisville

TECHNIQUE: Presentation, group questions and discussion

Afternoon

TOPIC: Supreme Court Decision, May 17, 1954 and May 31, 1955

CONSIDERATIONS: Legal Actions and Developments Leading to Court Decisions; Basis for Court Decisions; Implications of Decisions; Effects and Implementation; Retalitory action by Southern State Agencies and Legislatures

PERSONNEL: Law Professor from Ohio State, or possibly Marion Wright

TECHNIQUE: Factual Presentation, possibly Omnibus film on the Constitution

Night

READING ASSIGNMENT: Selections from Southern School News, pro-segregation literature, pro-integration literature, special report of SRC on pro-segregation groups in the South by Anthony

THURSDAY, AUGUST 7

Morning

TOPIC:	Political Aspects and Pressures
CONSIDERATIONS:	Reactions to the Court Decision; Political Leadership; The Effects of Demigogery; Political Pressures on Individuals; Public Schools and Institutions of Higher Education; Actions of State Legislatures; Civil Rights
PERSONNEL:	John Popham or Mark Ethridge, Louisville Courier Journal or John Sherman Cooper (tentative)
TECHNIQUE:	Presentation and Discussion

Afternoon

TOPIC:	Pressure Groups, Press and Public Opinion
CONSIDERATIONS:	Review of Pressure Groups, Their Activities and Effect; The Role of the Southern Newspaper; Communications and Influencing Public Opinion
PERSONNEL:	Same as above
TECHNIQUE:	Role Playing

Night

READING ASSIGNMENT:	sections of the Negro and the Public Schools, Ashmore; With All Deliberate Speed, Shoemaker; Southern School News; The Louisville Story, Charmicheal

FRIDAY, AUGUST 8
Morning

TOPIC: Desegregation and the Public School System

CONSIDERATIONS: Compliance with the Supreme Court Decision; Status of Segregation and desegregation Throughout the South; Effects of Desegregation in Public Schools; Problems Rising from Desegregation; Consideration of Various Communities which have Desegregated or attempted Desegregation

PERSONNEL:

TECHNIQUE: Film, "A City Decides," "The Clinton Story," Ed. Murrow; Discussion

Afternoon

TOPIC: Desegregation and the Public Schools

CONSIDERATIONS: Same as Above

PERSONNEL: Possibly Dr. Charmichael of Louisville or Mrs. Benita Vallian, Fisk Institute or someother public school administrator from the South

TECHNIQUE: Presentation and Discussion

Night

READING ASSIGNMENT:

SATURDAY, AUGUST 9
Morning

TOPIC: Program Evaluation and Discussion of Individual Projects

CONSIDERATIONS: What has been accomplished during the first week of the Seminar? In what ways may the program be improved? What new Techniques might be used? What are individual projects that might be developed by subdivisions of the Seminar during the next week and during the National Student Congress

PERSONNEL: Staff.

TECHNIQUE:

Afternoon

FREE TIME

Night

Possible visit to Antioch for summer stock production or some other entertainment in the Columbus, Ohio vicinity

SUNDAY, AUGUST 10
Morning

FREE TIME - area religious services

Afternoon

Night

READING ASSIGNMENT: These Have Integrated, Lovejoy; The Quiet Revolution, Rilling; Special assignments from other books and periodicals

MONDAY, AUGUST 11
Morning

TOPIC: Desegregation in Higher Education

CONSIDERATIONS: History of College Desegregation; Distinctions between Higher Education and Public School System; What has Happened When Colleges Desegregate; Student Reactions to Desegregation

PERSONNEL: Paul Rilling, Associate Secretary, Southern Council, YMCA

TECHNIQUE: Presentation by Rilling with group discussion

Afternoon

TOPIC:	The Role of the Student in Desegregation
CONSIDERATIONS:	What Responsibility does the Student Have for Human Relations Problems? What role have students played at various colleges and universities? What form of programming has proved effective?
PERSONNEL:	Student Panel from Seminar, moderated by Rilling
TECHNI UE:	Panel with discussion and buzz groups

Night

READING ASSIGNMENT AND WORK ON INDIVIDUAL PROJECTS

TUESDAY, AUGUST 12
Morning

TOPIC:	Cooperation with Faculty and Administrations
CONSIDERATIONS:	What is the role of faculty and administration in human relations problems on the campus? How can students best cooperate with faculty and administration on these problems? What is the power structure within most college and university systems i.e. State Legislature, Board of Regents, Board of Trustees?
PERSONNEL:	Southern College President or Dean of Students Southern Faculty Member and Dean of Women at Ohio State
TECHNI UE:	Panel presentation with questions and discussion from Seminar

Afternoon

TOPIC: Preparation for Desegregation on the Campus

CONSIDERATIONS: How does the campus prepare for desegregation? What are the roles of the various student organizations and student government; the student newspaper; interview techniques; campus surveys; acceptance and advocacy? What is the responsibility of the administration? Who is the administration responsible to?

PERSONNEL: Same as above

TECHNIQUE: Case studies, Role playing and Discussion

Night

READING ASSIGNMENT: 75th Year Integration Committee Report of the University of Texas; Toward a Democratic Campus; Fraternities Without Brotherhood

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 13
Morning

TOPIC: Campus Integration

CONSIDERATIONS: Integration of new Negro students into living facilities, activities, academic background and standards, human relations programming on the campus

PERSONNEL:

TECHNIQUES: Case studies and role playing

Afternoon

TOPIC: Preparing and Working with the Community

CONSIDERATIONS: Possible community reactions to desegregation; violence; Community pressures; Working with community leaders and law officers; Normal collegiate town-gown antagonisms; survey techniques

PERSONNEL: Possibly Elmer Paul Brock, NCCJ

TECHNIQUES: Presentation by speaker, case studies e.g. ADL case study of LaMar Tech, Beaumont, Texas; Autherine Lucy case study

Night

READING ASSIGNMENT: Segregation and the Bible, Tilson statements by various church organizations; NCCJ publications on group tensions

THURSDAY, AUGUST 14
Morning

TOPIC: Community Discrimination and Integration

CONSIDERATIONS: Problems of discrimination in restaurants; recreation facilities and other establishments; the role of local churches; techniques of working with local merchants and community leaders in ending discrimination

PERSONNEL: Elmer Paul Brock, NCCJ (Tentative)

TECHNIQUES: Discussion and Case studies

Afternoon

TOPIC: Religious Organizations and Programming

CONSIDERATIONS: Stands and resolutions by various religious organizations; the role of the campus religious organization in problems rising from desegregation; integration of the Negro into religious groups; religious programming in the area of human relations

PERSONNEL: Will Campbell, Nashville, Tennessee National Council of Churches (Tentative)

TECHNIQUES: Presentation by Campbell with

SATURDAY, AUGUST 16
Morning

TOPIC: Evaluation and Discussion of Individual Projects

CONSIDERATIONS: What has been gained during the last week of the Seminar? What improvements may be made during the remaining two weeks? What areas need further discussion and attention? What progress has been made on individual projects

PERSONNEL: Staff

TECHNIQUES:

Afternoon

RESEARCH: WORK ON INDIVIDUAL PROJECTS AND FREE TIME

Night

SOME FORM OF RECREATION OR ENTERTAINMENT IN COLUMBUS AREA

SUNDAY, AUGUST 17
Morning

FREE TIME AND RELIGIOUS SERVICES

Afternoon

FREE TIME AND WORK ON INDIVIDUAL PROJECTS

NOTES AND COMMENTS ON SEMINAR PROGRAM:

1. This is a tentative program and curriculum for the Seminar and is subject to change

2. Individual projects will be developed during the first part of the Seminar and will consume a greater part of the participant's time during the second, third, and fourth weeks of the Seminar.

3. Not all resource materials or persons are listed.. Additional material will be assigned for reading other than those listed.

4. The program for Monday, August 18 and Tuesday, August 19 will be developed during the second week of the Seminar after the staff and seminar have had opportunity to evaluate the needs of the group and the way in which the timing of the program is working out.

PAGINATION INCORRECT

5. Reading assignments prior to the first day of the Seminar will be made. The two books, An Epitath for Dixie by Ashmore and With All Deliberate Speed by Shoemaker will be sent to all Seminar participants.

6. The programming for the Seminar during the third and fourth week, i.e. during the National Student Congress will be developed at a later date. It is now beginning to take shape. The Seminar will meet with Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt on the morning of Wednesday, August 27th and with other outstanding public leaders who will also be addressing the National Student Congress. The Seminar will be living and working together during the Congress, but will receive the benefit of participation with approximately two hundred other Southern students and six hundred other student leaders from all parts of the United States. Each seminar participant will have some official status at the Congress, either as an official observer or as a delegate or alternate from his particular member college.

7. Dr. Warren Ashby, Consultant to the Seminar will be present for the full four weeks of the Seminar and will assume the responsibilities as Director of the Seminar during the last two weeks, that is during the National Student Congress when Mr. Farabee will be involved in other responsibilities.

8, It is hoped that the four week Seminar experience will not be the end of this program within itself, but that the knowledge and participation in the Seminar will lead to further action and programming on the campus of each participant.

APPENDIX -F-

BUDGET

Seminar Preparation
Travel by USNSA Staff	450
Secretarial Assistance	400
Administrative Expenses	225
Seminar
Directors salary	350
Room and Board
17 people for 25 days @ $8.	4,080
Travel
17 people @ $100	1,700
Resource materials and working papers	300
Resource people
Travel: 10 people @ $100	1,000
Room and board: 10 people for 3 days @ $8.	240
Advisory Board Meeting
Travel - Staff and Advisors	500
Board	50
Publication of Human Relations Workbook
Secretarial	200
Printing	600
Contingency	500
TOTAL REQUEST	10,595

APPENDIX -G-

STUDENT PARTICIPATION IN COLLEGE DESEGREGATION

1. Introduction: To Campus Leaders in the South

During recent years a far-reaching, quiet revolution has been taking place in Southern colleges and universities. More than half of the institutions of higher education have desegregated and in all but one or two institutions the changes have developed without signigicant incidents. Students have participted wherever these changes have occurred. Indeed, it has often been the quiet, effective attitudes and actions of respected students that has made college desegregation possible.

As the process of desegregation in Southern colleges and universities continues to spread and gain momentum, student leaders find it increasingly necessary to learn more about this issue, the problems which may develop with the desegregation of their own campuses, and how such problems have been dealt with by other schools.

To meet this need, participants in the Second Southern Student Human Relations Seminar sponsored by the National Student Association in 1959 conducted interviews with a number of Southerners familiar with the changing college situation in the South. This report contains the most important information and suggestions obtained. The report should not be viewed as exhaustive but only as a brief source of ideas and suggestions designed to help student leaders in carrying out desegregation on their own campuses.

It is the hope of the Seminar participants that the report will provide helpful guideposts of action to student leaders, administrators and faculty in colleges and universities which are preparing for or engaged in the process of desegregation. Each situation is unique and each person is faced with special problems. However, the experience in many institutions reveals certain principles that provide effective guidance for action and certain problem areas that continually reappear.

2. Basic Principles for Activity

It is important that any student engaged in the quiet revolution understand clearly the principles of his activity. The following norms, first stated and then explained, have been tested in many situations;

(1) All students should receive equal treatment and equal rights.
(2) Publicity can be dangerous and must be carefully controlled.
(3) Effective influence must reach directly to persons who make key decisions.

Corollary: Attitudes are most easily changed by altering behaviour patterns.

(4) Level-headed risk taking is essential.

(1) It is a truism that there is no place for second-class citizenship in the college and that, therefore, all students should be treated equally with equal privileges. But is is the failure to be sensitive to this principle, that, on the one hand, may cause persons to let many forms of discrimination continue, and, on the other hand, may cause preferential treatment to be given to Negroes on previously all-white campuses. It is understandable that a Negro student in a newly desegregated college would be uncomfortable enough without being made the center of attention. Natural behavior in the framework of equality is a key principle.

(2) While those working for desegregation should be sincere and frank it is important that they not create unnecessary tensions by advertising their aims to every listener. Although publicity may be effective in particular circumstances, in most Southern communities it would only create needless disturbance. While it is impossible, therefore to formulate a rule regarding publicity which would apply in every instance, in most cases it has been found best to limit information to those individuals or groups whose awareness is necessary to bring about the desired transition.

(3) Because it is easy for persons in the academic community to talk about problems instead of acting directly, it is important to establish the principle that effective influence must reach those persons who make major decisions, with the corollary that it is much better to change behavior patterns first, effecting in turn, a much quicker change in student opinion. It would be wiser for the student leaders to try to bring pressure upon college authorities than it would be to incite student opinion for or against an issue. In the community, the student is likely to accomplish much more in trying to get a community restaurant to desegregate by attempting to work out an agreement with the restaurant owners than by arousing student opinion to boycott the restaurant.

(4) It is absolutely necessary in areas where desegregation can be brought about that leaders be willing to take important calculated risks. Without level-headed risk-taking nothing can be accomplished. Whether it is the student leaders bringing pressure on the Dean or the Dean on the Board, level-headed risks must be taken if any progress is to be made. Although there is the possibility that some incidents or trouble may arise, this possibility should not prevent positive action. If school officials or student leaders are too timorous to take a careful risk, they will accomplish nothing.

3. Pre-Desegregation Work:

(a) Publicity and Preparation

In preparing for desegregation the principle of limited publicity should be followed. The importance of this is illustrated by the fact that some Southern colleges by carrying out their desegregation plans discreetly and without informing community newspapers, were able to desegregate without incident. One college in the deep South, for example, was desegregated several months before the community was informed. Other S uthern colleges have made the mistake of over-preparing for desegregation on their campuses, thus creating tension among these students, faculty and administration. It has been found by other schools that it is wiser to limit preparation to the student leaders, administration and faculty. The student leaders should be those who can select an effective plan of action without involving the entire student body. Preparation by this group should be thorough, however, in the event any serious trouble should develop.

(b) Encouraging Applicants

An important first step in bringing about desegregation is encouraging Negro students to apply at white colleges. This has been done successfully in several Southern colleges where student leaders worked through the faculty, administration, and religious leaders in stimulating applications. These student leaders made contact with Negro high schools and supplied them with registration materials and information. Some students showed the Negro high school students around their college campuses. This procedure served not only to provide information about the college but also to establish the fact that there were those in the college who would welcome Negro students. Faculty members in the Negro high schools were then asked to select capable students who would meet all college requirements. Once bonafide students applied, their applications were followed carefully by students and college officials to make certain they were judged fairly. This last step is difficult to carry out, but it is important since there have been cases where registrars refused to consider Negro applications because of personal prejudices.

4. D-Day (Desegregation Day)

Experience has shown that in most cases it can be assumed that desegregation will run smoothly, but it pays to be prepared. One college in Florida initiated desegregation without difficulty by operating in the following manner: first, college authorities secured the full cooperation of both the city and campus police force in case any serious difficulty should develop; second, faculty and student leaders were alerted for any kind of trouble and the administration was prepared to deal quickly and firmly with any trouble makers; and, finally, the Negro students were treated like all other students rather than given preferential or special consideration.

5. Major Problem Areas in College Desegregation:

(a) University Housing and Eating Facilities

While almost every desegregated Southern college opened all of their eating facilities to Negro students on the day of desegregation, only a few opened their dorms at the same time.

Those colleges which desegregated their dorms immediately experienced little or no trouble. At one of these colleges an entire section of a woman's dormitory was set aside for Negro women. The better plan seems to be to put two Negroes together in rooms scattered throughout the dormitory. As desegregation continues the process of choosing roommates and rooms should be the same for all students.

When student leaders of one desegregated state university became concerned because of discrimination toward Negroes in university housing they had a conference with one of their deans. This gave the dean, who was liberal-minded on this issue, an opportunity to go to the president and say that students were asking for desegregation of the dorms. In this particular case, such action was all the pressure the president needed to move ahead with the opening of dorms to Negro students.

At several institutions desegregation of the dorms was made easier by starting in the summer session with no public announcement. This area of desegregation is once again a place where silent action is the best policy.

Eating facilities are usually opened to all students when desegregation occurs. In the event that they are not desegregated, responsible students should go in an integrated group to be served and, if they are not served, should appeal the matter to the administration.

(b) Student Government and Student Clubs

While student governments and non-social student clubs are almost invariably integrated in a desegrated college, two different types of problems seem to occur rather frequently. On the one hand the government and clubs may give special consideration to the Negroes. Negro students should be represented in the student government; but they should be represented in precisely the same way as all other students, i.e., as students, not as Negroes.

On the other hand, a club may have a liberal policy but may fail to communicate to all students that they would be welcome to participate in the activities of the club. This may be a special problem for religious foundations, particularly those housed in a local church. Specific, natural and easy, contact must sometimes be made with Negro students in order that there would be no doubt in their minds as to how they would be received.

(c) Seating at College Sponsored Public Events

Many Southern colleges have had, prior to desegregation, a policy of admitting Negroes to a segregated section for public events. Such colleges sometimes have a tendency to continue this policy after desegregation, even placing Negro students in a segregated section of an auditorium or stadium. When this occurred at one university in the South, students organized in student religious groups, student government, and other student clubs to persuade the administration to change the policy. The immediate, direct action was sufficient to cause a change.

(d) Intercollegiate Athletics

While intramural athletics have been integrated almost without exception, the same has not been true of intercollegiate athletics. Since the presence of a star Negro athlete often has a great effect in liberalizing student attitudes, some student leaders have made definite efforts to encourage Negro athletes to apply at their colleges. In one case, efforts have been made to get some liberal alumni to set up scholarships especially for Negro athletes who are outstanding and who would be an asset to the school.

(e) Social Activities and Organizations

The area of social activities is one of the most difficult in which to develop adequate, equal policies. The experience of some universities in the South has been that it is best for all campus-wide social activities to be desegregated at the same time the college desegregates. Experience in some colleges has been that many anticipated problems do not appear when students are given genuine freedom in regard to social activities as in other college matters and understand the unique situation of their college.

Even though private social organizations are usually the last area to cease discrimination, steps have been taken at some Northern and border-state colleges to speed this process. In some cases, either through student government action or administrative decree, those fraternities or sororities having discriminatory clauses in their constitutions are prohibited from starting a new chapter on the particular campus. In more extreme cases the established fraternities have been warned either to get rid of the clauses or else to get off the campus.

(f) Negro Visiting Lecturers and Faculty

The area of visiting lecturers or performers is one that is frequently open; and when Negroes are invited it should not be because they are Negroes but because they are qualified to meet the needs. Students at some colleges have either invited such qualified Negroes or have encouraged faculty members to invite Negroes as exchange or guest lecturers.

Even though students rarely have any direct responsibility for the selection of new faculty members they should be aware of the presence or absence of Negro faculty members at their university and should encourage the administration to consider appointing Negroes on an equal basis with whites.

6. Community Desegregation for Students

(a) Churches

In many college communities throughout the South, students have assisted in the desegregation of community churches simply by going to church in integregated groups. In some cases, this has been done most effectively when neither the minister nor any of the congregation knew of the students' plan. In other cases, where it has been known that a minister was favorable to desegregation, it has been effective to inform him of the plans in order that he might make certain that the students are received as they should be in a church. Here, as in all other examples listed in this report, students must examine carefully their unique situation to decide the proper approach.

(b) Theaters and Restaurants

The best method for bringing about desegregation of theaters and restaurants is often one of close cooperation with the theater or restaurant owner. In one university town, for example, students got a well known community minister to visit the restaurant owner and to invite him to meet with some students. When the students met with him they asked permission to send one Negro and one white student together each evening for one week. The manager agreed to this and arranged to be at the restaurant at the same time the students came in each night. In this way he could observe the reactions of his customers and talk with any who were disturbed. The students agreed not to tell more than just a few students about the plan. This helped to assure the manager that there would not be a large number of Negro students who would suddenly start coming to the restaurant. After one week of successful desegregation, the owner phoned the students and told them it would be agreeable for groups of Negroes to come to the restaurant. After another week or so the word was passed to other Negro students that the restaurant was open to them. Since this restaurant was probably the best in the campus area, the opening was a great victory.

Other methods used by students at the same university had varying degrees of success. (1) Several attempts to get owners of all the local restaurants to attend a meeting so they could establish a common plan for desegregation. This plan met with little or no success. (2) Distribution of cards to students which were to be given by the students to restaurant cashiers indicating they would support any attempt by the owner to desegregate his business. This method also met with little success. (3) A petition was planned but never circulated. It would have been addressed to the owner of a certain key restaurant and would have informed him that all the signers would eat in his restaurant twice a week for the first four or five weeks after he desegregated. (4) A group of students attempted to get service for Negroes by visiting in integrated groups on a regular basis for several weeks. This proved to be effective in several cases but in others only served to antagonize the owners.

These methods which have been attempted in regard to restaurants, or variations of these methods, have also been used in regard to theaters in the university community.

7. Campus Human Relations Committee (Commission)

Every college that desegregates is in need of a Campus Human Relations Committee that would deal directly with discriminationon the campus and in the surrounding community. The commission can be organized in various ways to suit the individual college, but the following important elements should be present: (1) The members of the commission should have the respect of other students, faculty, and administration with a reputation as responsible students. (2) One or more faculty members should be related to the work of the committee. Care should be taken, however, to make certain that there is equality of responsibility for all commission members. (3) In its work the commission should follow the principles described earlier in the report. (4) Regular reports of the commission activities should be made each semester to insure continuity in the work.

8. Conclusion

Students are rarely in a position to make key decisions affecting desegregation in their colleges. But experience has shown that they can frequently speed the process of desegregation by working with decision makers in their colleges and in the surrounding communities. These students have been most effective where they have been both well educated concerning the issues at stake and where they have been well organized.

Also, since the student does not face the danger of economic reprisal such as the loss of his job, he enjoys much greater freedom of expression than any administrative official. In fact, by expressing themselves, the students will usually enable the administrative officials to take a more liberal stand in dealing with the official board of the college or university and with the public at large.

October 30, 1959

Mrs. J. Watkins Dimon
2039-13th Street
Columbus, Georgia

Dear Mrs. Dimon:

It was an interesting and pleasant experience for me to meet with the Columbus Council and to have the opportunity of staying in your beautiful home.

I am sorry that I did not find the opportunity to talk a little more with you at the state meeting in Macon. I was anxious to know if there had been any more adverse publicity and how things were going in general. One of the men from Columbus indicated he had seen a brief write-up of the meeting by Mr. Tyson.

Frances Paulley has recently been to Columbus and brings back discouraging news concerning the Hope unit there, but I guess you are very close to that situation.

Let me know how your plans go for the year and if we can be of further service to you. My regards to Mr. Dimon, the boys, and the dog.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Field Director

PMR/sm
dictated, but not read

Mrs. J. Watkins Dimon
2039 - 13th Street
Columbus, Georgia

Oct. 26, 1959

Dear Mr. Killing,

Thank you for the excellent job you did Thurs. night. You gave us the framework in which to develop a program that can mean something within the community.

It was a joy to have you in our home. The boys asked me several times when are you coming back.

Gratefully,
Armine Dimon

2039-13th St.
Columbus, Ga.
Nov. 3, 1959

Mr. Paul Killing
63 Auburn Ave., N.E.
Atlanta 3, Ga.

Dear Mr. Killing:

Thank you for your letter. I had to be back in Columbus before a late hour, hence my short stay at the State meeting.

Since you were here, we have publicized, have received more adverse publicity through Radio Station WDAK, but have had no other unfavorable reactions to date. After

Mr. Woodall's third blast, I could take it laughing, and without quaking inside.

We have decided to ask Mr. Cahill to postpone his visit until the new year. We - especially Albert Thompson - are already getting the Voter registration emphasis before various groups, and he is working on coordinating the efforts of various groups. He is a fireball, and the Negroes are fortunate to have him as one of their leaders.

If you have some consultant who could give us the ~~help~~ you think we need, please let us know.

We also know the necessity of "doing it ourselves", too. We are eager to get a program, locally oriented, on the slate for 1960.

Thank you again for your help. We want you to come back.

Sincerely,
Armine Dimon

Phone: FA 2-3434

December 23, 1959

Mrs. J. Watkins Dimon
2039 13th Street
Columbus, Georgia

Dear Mrs. Dimon:

I see no reason why you should not reply to the letter from the Training Center. It seems like an awful lot of red tape to go through just for permission to meet in the Center, but the government usually works in mysterious and odd ways. If you have equally good meeting places available elsewhere, you might not want to take the trouble.

Actually, the Georgia Council on Human Relations is no longer affiliated with the Southern Regional Council, although we do cooperate. I would suggest that in case you decide to submit the information requested, you enclose a brochure on the Georgia Council on Human Relations and answer the other questions from a local standpoint. In other words, indicate that the Council group is a unit of the state wide organization.

Mrs. Shapiro informs me that my speech in Columbus January 26 has been cancelled.

Keep us informed about your situation. We are anxious to help in any way possible. Merry Christmas!

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Field Director

PMR/sm
Enc. letter from Training Center
& brochure on GCHR

2039- 13th St.
Columbus, Ga.
Dec. 20, 1959

Mr. Paul Killing
63 Auburn Ave., N.E.
Atlanta 3, Ga.

Dear Mr. Killing:

I'm enclosing a letter which I received today to ask your reaction - your advice. Do you think we should reply or comply? And do you have any composite description of both the Regional Council and the State Council which would be good to include?

We have met once since you were here at the Reserve Center. The very next week, one of the men on duty was found dead there. There was quite a bit in the paper about whether it was a suicide or foul play. I wondered then whether that episode would adversely affect our meeting there.

Elaine Shapiro said you would be in Columbus Jan. 26th. I wish I could say we were meeting that night and ask you to come, but things are uncertain. I do want to talk with you.

My faith is that when a cause is right, some way will open up to perpetuate it and further it. And if that faith is wavering a bit, I'm asking you to help me recharge it.

Sincerely and gratefully,
Armine Dimon

P.S. Please return Secrest's letter.
A.D.

2039- 13th St.
Columbus, Ga.
Dec. 29, 1959

Mr. Paul M. Killing
Field Director
Southern Regional Council
Atlanta 3, Ga.

Dear Mr. Killing:

Thank you for your prompt reply to my letter, and for your suggestions. After Jan. 1st a number of us must seek together the best answer to the future of our Council, including the place of meeting.

Sincerely,
Armine D. Dimon

File

GEORGIA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS
63 Auburn Avenue, Atlanta, Georgia
December, 1959

Dr. J. McDowell Richards, Chairman Walter C. Cowart, Executive Director

Dear Member of the General Assembly:

Because we know of your deep concern for the welfare of all the people of Georgia, and because of the grave responsibility you share with the Governor in the matter of the continuation of public education in our state without interruption, we are sending you the complete text of a letter from our Executive Committee to Governor Vandiver on December 15, 1959.

Sincerely yours,

The Executive Committee

The text of the letter follows:

"Dear Governor Vandiver:

The purpose of this letter is to extend greetings and congratulations, to express appreciation and to make a request. We congratulate you and your administration for the forthright way in which you have approached so many matters of deep and vital interest to the citizens of Georgia, and we are grateful for the service you have rendered in so doing.

We appreciate your interest in public health and your efforts to improve the conditions of mental patients within the state. We also commend your concern in other areas such as the state purchasing program and the improvement of our schools, including both better salaries for teachers and a more inclusive curriculum. There is evidence that your administration is eager to accept and to discharge all its rightful responsibilities.

We also share with you and the members of the General Assembly deep concern that our public schools shall not only be strengthened, but shall continue to function without interruption. Acutely aware of the tremendous loss suffered in neighboring states when public schools closed, we feel sure that there is enough intelligence, reason, genuine courtesy and goodwill in Georgia to support you and the legislature in making whatever adjustments need to be made to comply with the rulings of the Federal Courts without sacrificing the educational welfare of a single Georgia child.

Realizing, as we must, that Federal laws operate in the area of public schools in Georgia as in other Southern states, and aware of the Federal Court's ruling as to the schools in the city of Atlanta, we implore you to seek ways and means within the law by which we may avoid the tragedy that overtook the states of Virginia and Arkansas.

Having done all within your legal powers to keep your campaign commitments and to maintain in force the state laws regarding segregation in the public schools, we believe that you can now honorably appeal to the people of the state to accept in good faith the superior rulings of the United States Government relative to schools to the end that these may be kept open for all citizens regardless of race, religion or creed.

With every good wish to you personally and with deep concern for the welfare of Georgia and her people,

We are yours sincerely,

The Executive Committee

J. McDowell Richards, Chairman
(signed for the committee)

Dr. J. McDowell Richards
Dr. Richard Hocking
Rev. Lucius H. Pitts
Mrs. Philip Hammer
Mr. Don L. Hollowell
Rev. Lester Rumble

Dr. F. D. Funderburg
Rev. Judson G. Jackson
Mr. Frank Hutchings, Sr.
Rev. C. Leon Smith
Mr. Thomas Hargrave
Mrs. SueJette Crank

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA 4, PA. • BAring 2-1106 • CABLE, NATSTUD - PHILADELPHIA, PA.

MEMO

From: Richard A. Rettig, President, USNSA
To: Members of USNSA's Southern Advisory Board
Re: SSHRS Report, 1959

Enclosed is a copy of the recently-completed report to the Marshall Field Foundation for the Second Southern Human Relations Seminar.

Although completion of the report has been delayed for several months, we are sure that you will be interested in examining it. A copy of the report is in the foundation's hands.

Again let me thank you for your continuing support and interest in the work of the National Student Association.

If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact Miss Connie Curry, Director of the Project, or myself.

Richard Rettig

ASSOCIATED WITH American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U S Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • Young Adult Council • Nat'l Citizens Committe for UN Day • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

OFFICERS

President
RICHARD A. RETTIG
University of Washington

Assistant to the President
M. SUZANNE TUOHY
College of St. Teresa

•

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Vice President
TIMOTHY L. JENKINS
Howard University

Program Vice President
DAN L. JOHNSTON
Westmar College

Program Vice President
DONALD R. SMITH
University of Texas

Administrative Assistant
ROBERT M. WALTERS
Lehigh University

Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

West Coast Office
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

•

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

Vice President
JAMES C. SCOTT
Williams College

Administrative Assistant
RICHARD M. MILLER
University of Minnesota, Duluth

Assistant
MANUEL ARAGON, JR.
San Francisco State College

Campus Administrator
HARVEY K. FLAD
University of Colorado

Director, Foreign Student Leadership Project
DONALD F. CLIFFORD
Catholic University of America

•

Educational Travel, Inc.
20 West 38th Street
New York 18, New York

2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

•

NATIONAL ADVISORS

Ralph J. Bunche
Under-Secretary
United Nations

John Cogley
Staff Administrator
The Fund for the Republic

James M. Dabbs
President
Southern Regional Council, Inc.

Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame

Russell Kirk
Editor, Modern Age

Ralph McGill
Publisher
Atlanta Constitution

Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University

Harold E. Stassen

O. Meredith Wilson
President
University of Minnesota

•

Chairman
National Advisory Board
CARL M. GRIP, JR.
Dean of Men
Temple University

Chairman
Financial Advisory Board
RUTH HAGY BROD

January 22, 1960

Mr. Carson Pritchard
West Georgia College
Carrolton, Georgia

Dear Carson:

The recent Tuskegee Institute Report on Race Relations in the South - 1959, lists the Carroll Service Council organization among the organized "opponents of civil rights." I was under the impression that the Service Council was related to your activity and that the listing of the Council in this connection was probably an error. If so, I would like to call it to the attention of the people in Tuskegee. What about it?

In case you have completely lost touch with me, I was in Virginia last year with the Virginia Council on Human Relations, and moved back to Atlanta this year with the SRC. I hope we can get together some time soon and compare notes on things. Give me a call next time you are in Atlanta, which will probably be sooner than I will be in Carrolton.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Field Director

PMR/sm

file copy

March 4, 1960

The Rev. James A. Budd
2430 Brentwood Place
Augusta, Georgia

Dear Mr. Budd:

I very much enjoyed the opportunity of meeting with the Augusta Council recently and appreciated your hospitality. The group seemed well balanced, included some real leadership and demonstrated a fine spirit. I hope that I can have further contact with the group in the future and that you will feel free to call on us for any help or assistance you need.

It has been suggested that Augusta might be a good place to hold some form of interracial workshop of the sort that is annually held in Atlanta. Perhaps some Augusta representatives may participate in the Atlanta workshop this year.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Field Director

PMR/sm

March 18, 1960

Mr. Sylvan Meyer, Editor
Gainesville Times
Gainesville, Georgia

Dear Sylvan:

Les indicated to me that you are searching for new possibilities on the Advisory Committee and I get the same word from the HOPE people. Frances Pauley will be sending you some names of persons she has flushed out of the woods recently on her travels in connection with the Sibley hearings.

Here are a few names of persons who either have worked with or been in sympathetic contact with the Georgia Council on Human Relations or SRC. I understand that you are not interested in ministers or women. You may be overstocked with ministers, but I would question your not being willing to consider one additional female member. I am thinking in terms of Mrs. Stewart Colley of Grantville, former president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, and of the United Church Women of Georgia, and director of the women's division of the Carmichael campaign of 1956.

Here are some male suggestions, most of whom will be known to you, but you may not have thought of them in this connection.

W. W. Watts of Thomasville. Business man, Presbyterian layman active at state level, for many years - probably still is. Directed Foreign Student Exchange program for Georgia Rotary Club.

Cecil Cook of Valdosta. Heads own CPA firm, Presbyterian layman, Antioch alumnus, native of Ohio

Dr. Guy Wells of Statesboro. You may think him too controversial for the Committee, but he has a strong commitment and excellent contacts throughout the state as you know.

Charlie Gowen of Brunswick. Why not?

Byrd Daniel, physician of Statesboro.

I assume you are looking primarily for additional white members. An able Negro from the Southern part of the state would be Harold Stinson, Keysville. He is head of Boggs Academy, Negro Presbyterian high school, and currently working on his Ph.D. at Peabody. Another Negro of excellent reputation is Frank Hutchings of Macon, an undertaker and long-time leader in the struggle for civil rights.

We won't mention ministers and other women.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Field Director

PMR/sm

College in the Country

March 25, 1960

Mr. Paul Rilling
Southern Regional Council
Wesley Memorial Building
63 Auburn Avenue
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Paul:

I am sending the name and address of Dr. Hjelm about whom we talked yesterday. He will read a paper at the Southeastern Psychological Association in Atlanta March 31. He will be in Atlanta from March 30 - April 1.

His address is:

Dr. Howard F. Hjelm
Research Coordinator
Cooperative Research Branch
Office of Education
Department of Health, Education, and Welfare
Washington 25, D.C.

I am sure he would see you. His schedule, I know, is quite filled.

Best -

Carson

Carson Pritchard

JCP/em

SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS SEMINAR

FINAL REPORT

March 31, 1960

Grant:		$10,749.53
Expenditures:
Travel - USNSA Staff	$ 506.73
Secretarial	249.46
Administration	342.17
Directors salary	813.40
Seminar Room and board	3,567.61
Travel - Seminar	1,220.70
Materials and working papers	342.47
Travel - Resource	952.22
Room and board - resource	17.50
Travel - Advisory Board	89.34
Board - Advisory Board	45.75
Publications - Secretarial	83.80
Publications - Printing	307.00
Contingency	176.67	8,714.82
Underexpended Balance		$ 2,034.71

Signed _____

Title _____

Date _____

April 11, 1960

Mr. Sylvan Meyer, Editor
Gainesville Daily Times
Gainesville, Georgia

Dear Sylvan:

It has just occurred to me that Dr. Rufus Harris, new president of Mercer, served on the Louisiana Civil Rights Commission and might be willing to serve here.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Field Director

PMR/sm

2039- 13th St.
Columbus, Ga.
June 3, 1960

Mr. Paul Killing
Southern Regional Council
63 Auburn Ave., N.E.
Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Mr. Killing:

We will soon be making plans for another year. I'm am trying to get all the ideas possible for program and action another year.

Do you have any suggestions of something we might use as a book or some study for our meetings to stimulate ideas and action? And what have other councils done when they have been under fire in the areas of the least controversy? We need all the help we can get now.

Sincerely,
Armine D. Dimon

June 9, 1960

Mrs. J. Watkins Dimon
2039 13th Street
Columbus, Georgia

Dear Mrs. Dimon:

Paul Rilling is in Europe and will not return until the first of July. I feel quite certain that he will have some program suggestions for your group at that time.

In the meanwhile, I have learned from our Research Department that we are expecting next week a new pamphlet which your group might find useful as a basis for discussion. It will be titled "School Desegregation - the First Six Years," and will be mailed as the May issue of New South. This is a revised and brought up to date Next Steps in the South, in case you are familiar with that publication of ours. It will include a bibliography for further reading in the whole area of human relations which might be of interest to your group.

We will see that you get one of these pamphlets as soon as they are ready, and if you need additional copies they can be furnished at the cost of 20¢ each.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Timothy Miller
secretary to Paul Rilling

2039- 13th St.
Columbus, Ga.
June 22, 1960

Mrs. Timothy Miller
Southern Regional Council
Room 432, 63 Auburn Ave., N.E.
Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Mrs. Miller,

I am enclosed check to cover cost of my subscription to New South. I'd also like 5 additional copies of Next Steps in the South. If you have them before next Tues., I'd like to get them for a meeting that night.

Thank you for your letter.

Sincerely yours,
Armide D. Dimon

June 23, 1960

Mrs. J. Watkins Dimon
2039 13th Street
Columbus, Georgia

Dear Mrs. Dimon:

We are mailing today, first-class, the requested five copies of ~~the~~ pamphlet School Desegregation: the first six years (the name on the up-dated Next Steps has been changed. I have passed on your check for subscription renewal and for the cost of the pamphlet.

If we can be of additional help, please let us know.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Timothy Miller
secretary to Paul Rilling

copy of original + ans to Dr. Zowart 7/11/60

July 7, 1960

Mrs. J. Watkins Dimon
2039 - 13th Street
Columbus, Georgia

Dear Mrs. Dimon:

I understand that you made a significant contribution to the HOPE workshop here in late May. I am sorry that I was in South Carolina that week-end and missed you on that occasion.

Your letter of June 3 asking for program advice is not an easy one to answer. It is difficult to build a strong organization with an effective program when you find yourself under fire even in peripheral areas which customarily would arouse little controversy.

I think the major contributions that Council groups have been able to make in areas of interracial tension are: to keep open a channel of communication and joint planning, to strengthen the morale of a beleaguered Negro community, by providing support and encouragement from white friends, to perform a trouble shooting role in the case of specific incidents or problems, to serve as "the other voice" in the public forum, and to do a job of education for its own members.

I think that a local group is better advised to concentrate on local and state concerns rather than to use a disproportionate amount of time listening to speeches about the national situation. Several groups have found it quite valuable to concentrate on a study of their own community. Such a study often turns up surprising information and helps the group pinpoint the major needs and potential trouble spots. Sometimes findings have been published in a fairly objective way and have had some impact on public awareness. I know that you have done some of this type of study already in Columbus.

You mention possible books for study. I know of no single book I would recommend for a series of meetings, but certainly there are several that would bear study or reporting for 1 - 3 sessions. Some of these would be:

Harry Ashmore, An Epitaph for Dixie
J. M. Dabbs, The Southern Heritage
Kyle Haselden, The Racial Problem in Christian Perspective
W. H. Nicholls, Southern Tradition and Regional Progress
William Peters, The Southern Temper

You already have our recent publication, "School Desegregation - the First 6 Years." I am also sending a copy of three SRC reports dealing with the recent sit-in controversy which might provide useful program material.

If I can be of any further help, I hope you will let me know. I will be happy to come to Columbus again in the near future, or to recommend speakers around the state who might be of value to your group.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Field Director

PMR/sm

July 15, 1960

Mrs. Betty Harris
HOPE, Inc.
Atlanta National Building
50 Whitehall
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Betty:

Paul asked me to send you the information about getting the Helen Hill Miller reprints from the Harvard Business Review. The cost will be $39.70 for the first 100 copies and $20.00 per hundred after that. They may be ordered from:

Mr. John F. Chatman
Associate Editor
Harvard Business Review
Soldiers Field
Boston, Massachusetts.

Hope you have had a good vacation.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Timothy Miller
secretary to Paul Rilling

July 19, 1960

Mrs. Philip Hammer
3483 Ridgewood Road, N. W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Jane:

As a starter may I suggest that the Personnel Committee of the Georgia Council give consideration to the following persons as possible, future, full-time directors.

(1) Mrs. Liza Paschall. I don't know whether Liza's commitments to her study program for the coming year are sufficient to disqualify her for a full-time job or not. Clearly, her commitment, her administrative experience, and her statewide contacts make her a person worthy of consideration.

(2) Mrs. William Pauley. There are few white people who have shown as much continuing concern or have been so successful in interracial personal contacts as has Frances Pauley. Again, she has administrative experience in the League of Women Voters, HOPE, and other civic activities. Her work with the World Affairs Study Program and with HOPE have given her statewide contacts in addition to those she brings from the League. She was approached on this several years ago, and I believe indicated that she felt unwilling to take on this kind of a burden.

(3) Mr. Val Mixon. Val is a native Georgian, about 27. He has a Master's degree from Emory in Political Science and is currently working in insurance and teaching in the evening at Georgia State College.

Although making a good income, Val is dissatisfied and is going to go on to a career in teaching unless we find an opening for him in human relations. We are impressed with his general attitude and references, although he has no direct experience in this field. We are getting a full biographical sketch from him.

(4) Mr. William F. Eger. Biographical data on Mr. Eger is enclosed. I have not met Mr. Eger, but Harold has chatted with him and feels that he is worthy of some follow-up and consideration.

(5) Miss Pamela Coe. Miss Coe is currently working, through the summer, on a research project for SRC. She is a native of Memphis, Tennessee where her mother is an outspoken, liberal member of the school board. She is 25 years of age, and has completed graduate work in Anthropology. She is probably too young and inexperienced as a woman for this particular job, but is interested in human relations as a career and would like to be interviewed for this job. A thorough biographical sketch is enclosed.

There are a number of applications in our files of persons not known to me personally. Some of these would seem to merit consideration. I am writing to several to determine whether or not they are still available and will pass any information I receive on to you.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PMR/mf
Enclosures - 2.

2039-13th St.
Columbus, Ga.
August 2, 1960

Mr. Paul Killing
Room 432
63 Auburn Avenue, N.E.
Atlanta 3, Ga.

Dear Mr. Killing:

Thank you for your letter with the very helpful and workable suggestions — also for the reports on the sit-in demonstrations.

We meet again in September. We will feel free to call on you.

Sincerely,
Armine Dimon

August 4, 1960

Mrs. Philip Hammer
3483 Ridgewood Road, N.W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Jane:

William Scholl, for whom I sent you a biographical sketch the other day, called this morning to say he would not be interested in being considered for the position. I think the salary scared him!

Good luck in your searching.

Sincerely,

Sarah Miller
secretary to Paul Rilling

HOPE, Inc.
714-715 Atlanta National Building
50 Whitehall Street, S. E.
Atlanta, Georgia

August 5, 1960

Mr. Paul Rilling
Southern Regional Council
63 Auburn Avenue
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Paul:

The present state of HOPE, Inc., points toward a real need for some reorganization on the Board and Committee level. I will consider it a great personal favor if you will meet with me (and those listed at close of letter) on Wednesday, August 10, 8:00 P. M., in my home.

In the meantime, put on your "thinking cap," and be ready to suggest people who would be good prospects to serve as Chairman of a committee on nominating, finance, staff and office, legislative. It has also been suggested that we might add persons representing labor, church, women's organizations, civic groups, and PTA.

You may come up with other ideas. At any rate, I believe you will agree that we must widen the ranks of our small Executive Committee, made even smaller by the recent resignation of Maxine Friedman as Treasurer. Anne Nabors is now acting in that position.

As you know, a number of suggestions have been made as to fall and winter projects. We must decide on definite recommendations which can be made to the Board of Directors as soon as possible. This is the second urgent matter on which I need your help.

When you receive this, please call Betty (JAckson 5-8460) and let her know that you will be present. You have been hand-picked for this important job, so please don't disappoint me!

Cordially,

Fran

Mrs. Thomas M. Breeden

Betty Harris
Muriel Lokey
Judy Neiman
Lanier Randall

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

THE THIRD SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS SEMINAR

August 1 - September 1, 1960

REPORT TO THE MARSHALL FIELD FOUNDATION

March, 1961

CONTENTS

1. Preparation for and Operation of the Seminar..... 1

2. The Meaning of the Seminar by Constance Curry..... 5

3. Observations by the Seminar Consultant, Reverend Will D. Campbell..... 8

4. Seminar Curriculum and Schedule..... APPENDIX A

THE THIRD SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS SEMINAR

The Third Southern Student Human Relations Seminar was held from August 1-21, 1960, at the University of Minnesota, in conjunction with the 13th National Student Congress, August 22 - September 1. The Seminar was a part of the total program of the Southern Student Human Relations Project, which is financed by a grant from the Marshall Field Foundation and administered by the United States National Student Association.

The purpose of the Seminar, as stated in the letter of announcement was to provide for Southern student leaders an extensive study of human relations in the South, for constructive application in their college and community life. The Seminar included sixteen students from white segregated colleges, recently desegregated colleges, and predominantly Negro colleges in nine Southern states.

Constance Curry, Director of the Southern Project, was responsible for the direction of the Seminar, with Robert Alexander of Duke University as Assistant Director and the Reverend Will D. Campbell, Associate Executive Director, Department of Racial and Cultural Relations, National Council of Churches, as Consultant to the Seminar.

PREPARATION FOR THE SEMINAR

Preparation for the Seminar began in March, when letters of announcement, application forms and summaries of the 1959 Seminar program were sent to approximately 200 contacts in the South. Persons receiving this mailing included student government leaders at NSA member colleges in the South, participants at previous Seminars, members of the Southern Advisory Committee, and faculty members and administrators who had been recommended by various human relations agencies.

A total of 37 applications was received, and selections were made by May 20th. Members of the Selection Committee were Reverend Will D. Campbell, Seminar Consultant; Constance Curry, Seminar Director; Leon Marion, World University Service; and Paul Rilling, Southern Regional Council. As suggested by the Southern Advisory Committee, selections were made with attention to leadership potential in the field of human relations and with consideration of the following:

(1) Geographical location of college
(2) Balance of men and women participants
(3) Balance of Negro and white participants
(4) Whether or not the college had participated before
(5) Personal interviews (10 of the 16 participants were interviewed or known personally by NSA staff or Advisory Committee members)

The following students were selected:

Valerie Brown, Texas Christian University, Fort Worth, Class '62
William Caldwell, Loyola University, New Orleans, Class '64
Sandra Cason, University of Texas, Austin, Graduate student
Robert Catlett, Virginia Polytechnic Inst., Blacksburg, Class '63
John Cook, North Carolina State College, Raleigh, Class '61
Henrietta Eppse, Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., Class '63
Maruta Jurbergs, Siena College, Memphis, Tenn., Class '61
Lois Martin, Hampton Institute, Hampton, Va., Class '61
Mrs. Clarice Miller, Arkansas A. M. & N., Pine Bluff, Class '61
Charles McDew, South Carolina State Coll., Orangeburg, Class '62
Ira Robinson, Florida A. & M. University, Tallahassee, Class '61
John Weatherly, Mercer University, Macon, Ga., Class '62
Robert Williams, Dillard University, Macon, Ga., Class '61
Jerry Wilson, Wake Forest College, Winston-Salem, N. C., Class '61
Carolee Wood, Greensboro College, Greensboro, N. C., Class '61
Mrs. Martha Alexander, Duke University, Durham, N. C., Class '62

From May through July a great deal of time was spent in developing the Seminar curriculum and program.[1] At the suggestion of the Southern Advisory Committee, the total Seminar time was lengthened from two weeks to three weeks with the hope that more time could be spent on techniques of action in campus and community situations. The curriculum was based largely on the 1959 curriculum, and planning was done in consultation with Rev. Campbell, Ray Farabee (1958, 1959 Seminar Director), and other members of the Advisory Committee. Several new topics for study were included, such as the "sit-in" movement and its meaning for human relations in the South.

During this period speakers and resource persons were invited to participate in the Seminar, final arrangements were made with the University of Minnesota for room, board and meeting facilities, and resource materials were gathered. Each participant received a selected bibliography and the following materials to be read before coming to the Seminar:

(1) Seeds of Time by Henry Savage
(2) Go South to Sorrow by Carl Rowan
(3) The Strange Career of Jim Crow by C. Vann Woodward
(4) Southern Schools: Progress and Problems (Southern Education Reporting Service)
(5) June issue of Southern School News
(6) "Status of School Segregation-Desegregation in the Southern and Border States" (Year's end summary of the Southern School News)

The Consultant, Rev. Campbell, also wrote to each participant before the Seminar, giving them names of human relations personnel in their areas and suggestions on information they might try to gather in their communities.

---

[1] See Appendix A for Curriculum and Schedule

Much of the material listed, as well as resouce material used during the Seminar, was received without cost or with discounts from the Southern Regional Council, the Anti-Defamation League, the American Friends Service Committee, the Group for the Advancement of Psychiatry, the Southern Education Reporting Service, the American Jewish Committee, the Congress on Racial Equality and the NAACP.

THE SEMINAR IN OPERATION

The Seminar began on the afternoon of August 1st with registration and assignment of rooms. Participants, staff and resource persons were housed in one wing of Centennial Hall, and all meetings took place in a lounge in the same wing. Meals were served in the cafeteria of the same dormitory, and the University extended library facilities to participants, as well as the recreational facilities in the Student Union Building.

Seminar participants and personnel were introduced at a banquet on the first evening, and Mr. Carl Rowan of the Minneapolis Tribune addressed the group on "America in the Mid-Twentieth Century."

For the next three weeks the Seminar generally followed the same pattern. The group met at 9:00 A.M. and 1:30 P.M. each weekday, and after a brief presentation from the resource person there was a question period and discussion by the students. The content of the topical presentations developed from a very general and historical background of race relations in the South, through various factors involved in bringing about changes, i.e., the Church, legal procedures, industry, to specific methods that students might employ in human relations work on their campuses or in their communities. The above pattern was supplemented by films, role-playing, panel discussions and assigned reading.

The majority of the resource persons stayed at the Seminar at least one day and night and were able to meet and talk with the students on an informal basis. The following were resource persons or speakers for the Seminar:

Mr. Carl Rowan, Reporter, Minneapolis Tribune
Dr. William Van Til, Professor of Education, New York University
Mrs. Wilma D. Stokeley, well-known Southern writer, co-author of Neither Black Nor White
Dr. Herman H. Long, Race Relations Department, American Missionary Association Division, Board of Home Missions, Congregational Christian Churches
Dr. Arnold Rose, Department of Sociology, University of Minn.
Mr. George Barrett, Attorney, Nashville, Tennessee
Mr. Paul Rilling, Field Director, Southern Regional Council
Mr. Ben Segal, Education Director, International Union of Electrical Workers

Reverend James Lawson, Nashville, Tennessee
Mr. Arthur Levin, Director, Southern Office, Anti-Defamation League
Miss Jean Fairfax, Southern Programs, American Friends Service Committee
Mr. Marion A. Wright, Vice-President, Southern Regional Council
Mr. Ronnie Dugger, Editor, Texas Observer

A list of assigned reading was given to each participant, and the materials were given out each day to be read in preparation for the following day's lecture and discussion. This reading material was supplemented by a library that included books and pamphlets on curriculum topics, materials of various human relations agencies and samples of literature used by White Citizens Councils and similar groups.

The addition of the third week to the Seminar program made it possible to have free time on weekends and most evenings and gave ample opportunity for participants to be together on a purely social basis. The bridge games, bull sessions, bowling and singing, and some planned activities, such as birthday parties for three of the students, comprised a very meaningful part of the total experience of the Seminar.

PARTICIPATION IN THE 13th NATIONAL STUDENT CONGRESS

Although attendance at the Congress was not obligatory this year, Seminar participants were encouraged to remain, and fourteen of the sixteen students stayed for the Congress from August 21 - September 1. During these ten days the students became fully integrated into all Congress activities as voting delegates, alternates or observers. Participants often acted as resource persons in the workshops on human relations and were most active in the writing and passing of resolutions on school desegregation, voting rights, the sit-in movement and other issues which called for legislation by the Congress. Most of the students were also very active in their regional group activities during the Congress, and two of the participants were elected as chairmen of their regions for the school year.

THE MEANING OF THE SEMINAR

The true meaning of the Third Southern Student Human Relations Seminar did not lie in the resource persons and their presentations, or in the great amount of assigned reading, or even in the fact that the Negro and white students were together--many for the first time. All of these were certainly factors in the success of the Seminar, but the true meaning lies in what actually happened to those sixteen students during the four-week period and what has been happening to them since then.

An idea of some of the reactions to the Seminar experience can best be given by quoting from some of the evaluations made by the students themselves.

"The Seminar has given me a new faith that there are people of our generation in our own area who want to solve this problem. I have engendered a sympathy for many of the white people in the South who are not free to accept the Negro as an equal because of social, economic and political pressures. And even more important for me, the Seminar has affirmed that the struggle in which we find ourselves--the one for equality of man and for human dignity--is indeed a just one."

"The Seminar has been meaningful to me mainly because it has put me in contact with people who care. This has come primarily from the Negroes rather than the whites, but contact with whites who are perhaps less liberal than I, has caused me to draw upon inner resources in realizing the necessity of being patient without being dishonest."

"The daily contact of the Seminar has provided an opportunity for exchange of ideas and the dispelling of many doubts that I have had about white persons. At the same time, I have found myself in the situation of being in daily contact with a white person who does not really accept me, but of having to struggle to understand him and to harbor no resentment against him."

"Upon coming to this Seminar, I considered myself quite a liberal on the race question. However, the presentations here have summoned up buried prejudices that I have harbored and not even been aware of. I have realized that living in the South among white Southerners who preach myths about the Negro has made it impossible for me to discern fact from myth in every instance, and this realization will be of great help to me in future discussions with segregationists. Moreover, no matter how liberal my ideas might have been, until the Seminar, and the chance to mix socially with Negroes, I had never felt the emotional experience that such close association can bring."

"Until the Seminar, it had never occurred to me that Negroes might be prejudiced. As a leader of the sit-in movement, I had pretty much decided that the struggle in the South was that of the Negro on the side of good against the petty white bigots on the side of evil. Here at the Seminar, I have suddenly realized that I am as prejudiced about some things and as quick to stereotype as the worst white segregationist. I am having to re-orient my entire feelings about the struggle in which I am engaged."

One of the Seminar participants wrote the following in a report that she made when she returned to her campus:

"Certainly the high peak of realization for me at the Seminar was the day when the group did role-playing in a sit-in situation. We all volunteered for parts, and I took the part of a Negro sit-inner. I sat down at the counter and asked for a cup of coffee--then fury broke loose. All of a sudden I was a 'dirty nigger,' being shoved off the stool,and someone was running her hand through my hair, saying, 'Aw, isn't that lovely?' And the girl who did this to me was a Negro--she had to go through this day after day simply because the world saw her only as a black blob. I was horrified at the realization of what it means to be denied the right to be a person..."

"The Seminar also taught me that one doesn't learn a great deal about human relations through study. One learns about human relations through relating himself to other humans. When I think of some of the people at the Seminar that I came to know and love, I realize that for the first time in my life I was associated with a group of people who loved and accepted me for what I was. I had to wear no mask. In fact, in such a situation, we were all forced to rip off our masks sooner or later."

Although, as Director of the Seminar, I often found myself enmeshed in mechanics and organizational details, I was still able to see a phenomenal growth and development in practically every student. This does not mean that by the end of the Seminar the white students loved all Negroes, or vice-versa, but instead, the students loved or hated each other purely on the basis of what they were as human beings. This, of course became possible only after each student had shed any forced pretenses of liberalism or sophistication on the racial question and after everyone had stopped being "nice to each other." Although the participants generally acknowledge the harmfulness of racial segregation, it was the common sharing of joy and anger and tears that brought true acknowledgement of each other as human beings and the commitment to somehow make this kind of sharing possible in the South.

The second measure of the meaning of the Seminar is the manner in which the Seminar experience has carried over into the lives of the participants. The Seminar Consultant and I agreed that the students should not feel that their experience had equipped them with all the tools to go back and "reform the South," and we emphasized this fact throughout the Seminar. Although the group continually asked, "But what can we do and how do we do it," the students came generally to the understanding that the improvement of human relations is not always a question of "doing," but actually of "being". Moreover, this kind of understanding has indeed proved fruitful, since it is safe to say that practically every participant has continued his interest in human relations, and at least twelve of them have made specific contributions in human relations work on their campuses or in their communities.

I have been in contact with the students in the months since September and have described below some of the various activities in which they have been engaged.

Some of the participants have become very much involved in the direct action of the Southern Student Movement. The student at South Carolina State College is the leader of the movement in that state and was jailed for sitting-in last fall. He wrote a letter from the jail to the Seminar participant at Texas Christian University, and that student had the letter put in the campus newspaper. This, of course, aroused a great deal of discussion on that campus, which is white and segregated.

At the University of Texas the Seminar participant was instrumental in the formation of a student action group that has been concentrating on theater desegregation in Austin. The actions of this group have caused nation-wide interest in this aspect of desegregation, and many other areas have followed its example. This same student has also visited Fayette and Haywood Counties in Tennessee and has been working to arouse student interest in helping these counties. The participant from Hampton Institute has been taking an active part in the Virginia Student Movement and in theater desegregation efforts in Hampton.

Many of the other students have been actively engaged in human relations education. The participant from Loyola University has been serving as NSA Chairman of four Southern states, and he sponsored last fall in New Orleans, the first NSA conference to bring together students from these states. Human relations was one of the main topics of discussion in the conference program. Likewise, the participant from Florida A & M is NSA Chairman for Florida and Georgia and is holding a conference this spring, which includes a human relations workshop.

At Greensboro College, the participant has helped to start a campus Human Relations Seminar, which meets weekly for lectures and discussion on various aspects of human relations. In Memphis the participant from Siena College has directed her efforts toward the formation of a student inter-racial group that will meet on a regular basis. In Texas and North Carolina Seminar participants have helped to organize and have attended state-wide human relations conferences, and two of the white students, from Mercer University and Virginia Polytechnic Institute, have invited one of the Negro participants to speak on their campuses. Finally, many of the students have written and are continuing to write articles on human relations for campus publications.

This is not an exhaustive list, but it will give some idea of the different kinds of outlets that the students have found. Generally speaking, as Director of the Southern Student Human Relations Project, I could not be more pleased with the relationship and carry-over from the Seminar to the work of the Project. In the past months this relationship has meant that I have solid contacts in nine Southern states--contacts who are willing to cooperate with the Project and on whose work the Project has been able to build.

--Constance Curry

OBSERVATIONS BY THE SEMINAR CONSULTANT

It was my privilege to serve as consultant to the annual Southern Student Human Relations Seminar held on the campus of the University of Minnesota during the month of August. I now propose to offer some brief and random observations and comments on the Seminar. It is not often that a staff person sees himself become so existentially enmeshed in the group process that he does not trust the validity of his reactions. Thus, I do not vouch for the objectivity of my remarks. I do, however, believe that the personal involvement was fortunate for the life of the Seminar--indeed, I can see no other justification for the very presence of a consultant, for there was certainly no dearth of leadership on the academic level. I accepted the invitation to serve in the capacity of a consultant only after the careful warning that my bias is that human relations cannot be taught but only caught. Therefore, the combination role of buffoon-father confessor which seemed finally to be imposed upon me as a consultant should not have been surprising.

ADVANCE PLANNING

The thorough and painstaking planning and preparation of Miss Curry and her assistant left little to be desired so far as the mechanics of the Seminar was concerned, for it was careful and exact in every detail. This is a remarkable feat when it is realized that to successfully accomplish this is like setting up a small university in two months, complete with faculty, quarters and administration. Never did I observe the slightest confusion in organization and logistics. Important decisions which had not been made in advance were quickly made on the spot, and only because the machinery ran so smoothly did the students not realize what a monumental task had been accomplished for their sake and convenience.

SELECTION OF PARTICIPANTS

The fact that only sixteen persons can be selected makes it imperative that they be chosen with great care. The files of previous Seminars offered a number of persons on the several campuses whose judgment could be trusted, and in most cases this proved to be a safe trust. It is my belief, however, that all of the students finally selected should be interviewed by someone familiar with the nature and purpose of the Seminar. Earlier Seminars held the philosophy that to attract students of a conservative persuasion and attempt to develop in them the leadership qualities they brought was desirable. This was not true of the Seminar under discussion; however, contact persons from earlier years had not been apprised of that fact. This was in no case disastrous, but came very close in one case. Therefore, I would hope that all contact persons know exactly the kind of student they are supposed to recruit. This, of course, is assuming that next year's Seminar will have the same philosophy.

This will be left to the Director and her committee, but I would warn that the only problem of building the Seminar around "leadership training" might result in developing some very fine leaders for the white resisters and their movements.

FACULTY PERSONNEL

Most of those invited to serve in this capacity did a fair to excellent job. Some of them obviously had not taken the assignment seriously and appeared unprepared and occasionally with no idea as to what they were expected to do. I think this could be avoided by (1) offering a modest honorarium if this is possible, so that the Director can be more demanding and not feel like a charity case (2) have a suggested outline for what the Director hopes to accomplish in that session (3) cutting the number of resource people.

GENERAL OBSERVATIONS AND SUGGESTIONS

With regard to reducing the number of resource persons as suggested in the last paragraph, I think this is desirable for several reasons. One criticism I had of the Seminar was that the participants did not all take seriously their own responsibility. I do not believe that there was a single person in attendance who was not influenced by the deep emotional involvement they all experienced, but emotional involvement must be distinguished from physical exhaustion. One can justify a certain amount of "partying" as being part of the social process and as being necessary to the goals of the Seminar. I am not suggesting that the overall format left them with little to do except react to what the resource people threw at them. I would suggest that each participant be expected to make a major presentation to the group on some subject which would be assigned to him well in advance. This would cut down on the need for so many resource people and would give the group considerable sessions when there is no "outsider" present to whom they have not yet adjusted. It would also make it more of a "seminar" and less of a series of lectures.

I would also suggest that the library be located in a place where all the participants could read at once and at an assigned period. The excellent library which the Director put together and transported to Minnesota was used by most to great advantage. Others got a speaking knowledge of the literature in the field. I believe, however, that it would be more conducive to serious study if the students had one period assigned for this purpose. This might mean cutting down on classroom hours, but I think this too would be helpful, for I got the feeling that we overscheduled somewhat.

I have no further suggestions, but would like to express my appreciation to NSA and staff for the opportunity of working with this project. I know of no more significant contribution to the total work of improving human relations in the South than this gathering of sixteen students and sending them back more than ordinarily prepared for and certainly far more committed to the task of making this region of the country more just and democratic in every area of society. Never before have I had the happy privilege of seeing such mammoth growth in such a short period in the lives of that many people. I have been in touch with most of them, and the reports of their activities are thrilling, exciting and encouraging. I trust that it will be possible for NSA to continue sponsoring these Seminars and commend the Association for the wisdom shown in initiating this project.

--Reverend Will D. Campbell

SEMINAR CURRICULUM AND SCHEDULE

THIRD SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS SEMINAR

August 1 - August 21, 1960

Centennial Hall, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minnesota

MONDAY, AUGUST 1

Afternoon — Registration and assignment of rooms - Lobby, Centennial Hall

6:30 p.m. — Banquet - Introduction of Seminar participants and personnel

Address: "America in the Mid-Twentieth Century"
Mr. Carl T. Rowan, Reporter, Minneapolis Tribune

TUESDAY, AUGUST 2

9:00 a.m.

TOPIC: The National Student Association and the Southern Student Human Relations Seminar

CONSIDERATIONS: The history and purpose of NSA; the purposes of the Seminar and Southern Project; discussion of what each participant expects from the Seminar

PERSONNEL: Curtis Gans, National Affairs Vice-President, NSA, and Constance Curry, Seminar Director

1:30 p.m.

TOPIC: The Meaning of Human Relations

CONSIDERATIONS: Inter-group relations as a specific aspect of human relations; inter-group relations as a developing vocational field

PERSONNEL: Dr. William Van Til, Professor of Education and Chairman of the Department of Secondary Education, New York University

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 3

9:00 a.m.

TOPIC: The Changing South

CONSIDERATIONS: History and economics of the South; the effects of industrialism; changing patterns of race relations; factors affecting Southern attitudes

	PERSONNEL:	Mrs. Wilma D. Stokeley, well-known Southern writer, co-author of Neither Black Nor White
1:30 p.m.	TOPIC:	The Changing South (continued)
	CONSIDERATIONS:	Role of segregation in the South; patterns in different regions of the South; arguments put forth for and against racial practices in the South
	PERSONNEL:	Mrs. Stokeley

THURSDAY, AUGUST 4

9:00 a.m.	TOPIC:	The Negro in America
	CONSIDERATIONS:	History of the Negro in the U. S.; the Negro community; misconceptions about the Negro; effects of segregation; the NAACP and efforts to secure equal rights; the work of the Urban League
	PERSONNEL:	Dr. Herman H. Long, Director, Race Relations Department, American Missionary Association Division, Board of Home Missions, Congregational Christian Churches
1:30 p.m.	TOPIC:	The Negro Community in the South
	CONSIDERATIONS:	Effects of changes in the South on the Negro community; on attitudes toward Negroes; Negro leadership and new forces that are emerging
	PERSONNEL:	Dr. Long

FRIDAY, AUGUST 5

9:00 a.m.	TOPIC:	Race and Prejudice
	CONSIDERATIONS:	Nature of race; racial prejudice; sociological effects of segregation
	PERSONNEL:	Dr. Arnold Rose, Department of Sociology, University of Minnesota
1:30 p.m.	TOPIC:	Race and Prejudice (continued)
	CONSIDERATIONS:	Psychological aspects of prejudice; discrimination, segregation, effects on individuals
	PERSONNEL:	Dr. Rose

SATURDAY, AUGUST 6

9:00 a.m. Evaluation of first week of Seminar program. (Discussion of evaluations written by each student in answer to the following questions):

(1) Thus far in the Seminar, what do you feel the Seminar has offered you educationally, socially, spiritually?

(2) Up to this point, what criticisms would you offer?

(3) What would you like to learn from the Seminar? What areas not on the curriculum would you like to see scheduled?

(Free time until Monday morning)

MONDAY, AUGUST 8

9:00 a.m.	TOPIC:	Supreme Court Decisions and Legal Aspects of Desegregation
	CONSIDERATIONS:	Legal history of segregation; the Constitution and bases for court decisions; effects and implementation; retaliatory action by Southern State governments.
	PERSONNEL:	Mr. George Barrett, Attorney, Nashville, Tennessee
1:30 p.m.	TOPIC:	Continuation of morning discussion
	PERSONNEL:	Mr. Barrett

TUESDAY, AUGUST 9

9:00 a.m.	TOPIC:	Public School Desegregation
	CONSIDERATIONS:	Compliance with the Supreme Court decision in various sections of the South; effects of and problems in desegregation in public schools; study of communities that have desegregated successfully
	PERSONNEL:	Mr. Paul Rilling, Field Director, Southern Regional Council
1:30 p.m.	TOPIC:	Desegregation in Higher Education

	CONSIDERATIONS:	History of college desegregation; reaction of students, faculty, administration and community; problem areas and power structure involved, i.e. state legislature, Board of Regents, Board of Trustees
	PERSONNEL:	Mr. Rilling

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 10

9:00 a.m.	TOPIC:	Southern Politics; Precinct to Party
	CONSIDERATIONS:	Ward politics - the grass roots; the decision-makers, the absence of the two-party system in the South; the role of the South in the national parties
	PERSONNEL:	Mr. Rilling

(Free Time)

THURSDAY, AUGUST 11

9:00 a.m.	TOPIC:	The Moral and Ethical Aspects of Segregation
	PERSONNEL:	Reverend Will Campbell
1:30 p.m.	TOPIC:	Race and the Bible; Race and the Church
	PERSONNEL:	Reverend Campbell

FRIDAY, AUGUST 12

9:00 a.m.	TOPIC:	Labor and the South
	CONSIDERATIONS:	Industrialization; relation between labor and the race question
	PERSONNEL:	Mr. Ben Segal, Education Director, International Union of Electrical Workers
1:30 p.m.	TOPIC:	Employment Practices in the South
	CONSIDERATIONS:	Federal employment; employment in industry, professions and public services
	PERSONNEL:	Mr. Segal

(Free time until Monday morning - picnic to nearby river on Saturday)

MONDAY, AUGUST 15

9:00 a.m.	TOPIC:	Techniques of Action
	CONSIDERATIONS:	The student sit-in movement - history, interpretation and significance; meaning of non-violence; case studies of different communities; relation to faculty, administration, and Negro and white adult community (Role-playing in a lunch counter sit-in)
	PERSONNEL:	Reverend James Lawson, Nashville, Tennessee
1:30 p.m.	TOPIC:	Techniques of Action (continued)
	CONSIDERATIONS:	Jail vs. bail; boycotts, picketing; voter registration
	PERSONNEL:	Reverend Lawson
7:00 p.m.	TOPIC:	Techniques of Action (continued)
	CONSIDERATIONS:	Impact of sit-in movement on white campuses; responsibility of Southern white students; future of movement and opportunities for cooperation
	PERSONNEL:	Reverend Lawson, Constance Curry

TUESDAY, AUGUST 16

9:00 a.m.	TOPIC:	Anti-Semitism in the South
	CONSIDERATIONS:	History of Anti-Semitism; relation between growth of Anti-Semitism and progress in integration - reasons for this; recent incidents and reactions; role of ADL
	PERSONNEL:	Mr. Arthur Levin, Director, Southeastern Office, Anti-Defamation League
1:30 p.m.	TOPIC:	Continuation of morning discussion
	PERSONNEL:	Mr. Levin

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 17

9:00 a.m.	TOPIC:	Campus Human Relations Programming

	CONSIDERATIONS:	What responsibility does the student have in human relations programming; possibilities at Negro, white and desegregated colleges; role of student government and other campus organizations
	PERSONNEL:	Bob Alexander, Assistant Seminar Director; panel of Seminar participants
1:30 p.m.	TOPIC:	Inter-racial Programming
	CONSIDERATIONS:	Inter-racial work camps; metropolitan inter-collegiate groups; state student Christian movements; NSA regional programming
	PERSONNEL:	Seminar participants

THURSDAY, AUGUST 18

9:00 a.m.	TOPIC:	Cooperation with the Community
	CONSIDERATIONS:	Community reactions to campus desegregation and human relations programming; violence and community pressures; working with community leaders and law officers
	PERSONNEL:	Miss Jean Fairfax, National Representative of Southern Programs, American Friends Service Committee
1:30 p.m.	TOPIC:	Cooperation with the Community (continued)
	CONSIDERATIONS:	Organizations working in human relations in the South; various programs in which students may participate - merit employment, etc.
	PERSONNEL:	Miss Fairfax

FRIDAY, AUGUST 19

9:00 a.m.	TOPIC:	Closing address; "The Student's New Role"
	PERSONNEL:	Mr. Marion A. Wright, Vice-President, Southern Regional Council

SATURDAY, AUGUST 20

9:-- a.m.	TOPIC:	The Southern Press and Public Opinion

CONSIDERATIONS: The role of the Southern press; general attitudes of Southern editors; the influence of their newspapers on public opinion

PERSONNEL: Mr. Ronnie Dugger, Editor, The Texas Observer (Mr. Dugger was in Minneapolis to speak to a group of student editors on this date and was asked to speak at the Seminar, although the closing session had been held.)

1:30 p.m.

1. Summary of Seminar and Final Evaluation (Discussion of final evaluation papers of participants in which they evaluated all aspects of the Seminar, including application processes, contact before the Seminar, Seminar speakers, reading material and library facilities, and the curriculum and scheduling in general.)

2. Orientation and Preparation for the Thirteenth National Student Congress (discussion of purposes and program of the Congress. Participants were given a chance to choose the workshops and legislative committees they wished to attend.)

Note: There were also several evening programs scheduled which included the use of audio-visual aids, such as the Rumor Clinic, a recording of the story of Cassius Marcellus Clay, and the films, "Face of the South" and "Report from Alabama."

National Council of the Young Men's Christian Associations

OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

OFFICERS
SOUTHERN AREA COUNCIL
DR. HUGH B. WILCOX
PRESIDENT
J. FRAN BABBITT
VICE PRESIDENT
DR. R. T. NELSON
VICE PRESIDENT
EDWARD M. VINSON
VICE PRESIDENT
CHARLES R. YOUNTS
TREASURER
ROSS E. CHASTEEN
RECORDING SECRETARY
VIRGIL P. STEWART
ASST. RECORDING SECRETARY

THE SOUTHERN AREA COUNCIL
(ALABAMA, FLORIDA, GEORGIA, KENTUCKY, LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI, ASHEVILLE, N. C. TENNESSEE AND VIRGINIA)
706 STANDARD BUILDING
ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA
JACKSON 1-0352

OFFICERS
SOUTHERN AREA BOARD
LEONARD F. HURLEY
CHAIRMAN
SHELBY R. ROGERS
VICE CHAIRMAN
CHARLES R. YOUNTS
TREASURER
JOHN S. KENNEDY
SECRETARY

September 22, 1960

Mr. Paul Rilling
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Paul,

I thank you for inviting me to attend the meeting of the several agencies. It was a very illuminating experience for me. Furthermore, our conversatinn at lunch helped me a great deal in my effort to understand the situation.

I shall hope to see you again and often.

Yuurs sinc erely,

Thornton

Thornton W. Merriam
Leadership Development Project

TWM:mh

One more question: Do your state representatives issue news bulletins? If so how can I get on the mailing lists?

T.

Help Bring The "Y" Up To Date.... For Youth!

$450,000 New Building Fund Campaign $450,000

NINTH STREET BRANCH COLUMBUS, GEORGIA YMCA

CAMPAIGN HEADQUARTERS, 521 - 9TH STREET
PHONE FA 2-8125

September 26, 1960

OFFICERS
NINTH STREET BRANCH Y.M.C.A.

SANDY D. ALLEN, CHAIRMAN
S. P. CHARLESTON, VICE CHAIRMAN
A. W. THOMPSON, 2ND VICE CHAIRMAN
ROBERT THREATT, SECRETARY
W. A. TALLEY, TREASURER
A. J. McCLUNG, EXECUTIVE SECRETARY

CAMPAIGN EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

S. P. CHARLESTON, COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN
A. W. THOMPSON, COMMITTEE VICE CHAIRMAN
ROBERT THREATT, COMMITTEE SECRETARY
W. A. TALLEY, COMMITTEE TREASURER
GORDON H. KITCHEN, CAMPAIGN CHAIRMAN
REV. E. D. BRYSON, ASSOC., CAMPAIGN CHAIRMAN
REV. T .W. SMITH, ASSOC., CAMPAIGN CHAIRMAN
MITCHELL THOMAS, JR. MEETINGS CHAIRMAN
W. M. THOMAS, CHAIRMAN, TEAMS ORGANIZATION
MORRIS A. CLARKE, VICE CHM., TEAMS ORGANIZATION
REV. J. C. COOK, CHAIRMAN, CHURCH COOPERATION
C. W. DuVAUL, CHAIRMAN, SPEAKERS BUREAU
DR. J. H. ANDERSON, COMMITTEE OF MANAGEMENT
GEORGE FORD, COMMITTEE OF MANAGEMENT
SAMUEL BYRD, COMMITTEE OF MANAGEMENT
MRS. BLANCHE BALDWIN, SPECIAL GIFTS COMMITTEE
WILLIAM BATTLE, CHAIRMAN, PUBLIC RELATIONS
MRS. HELEN BURNETT, CHAIRMAN, WOMEN'S COMMITTEE
MRS. MARGARET BELCHER, ASSOC. CHM. WOMEN'S COMMITTEE
SANDY D. ALLEN, CHAIRMAN, EX-OFFICIO

CITIZEN'S COMMITTEE

J. L. SCONIERS, SR., CHAIRMAN
MRS. SUSIE ALLEN
MRS. LULA ASHE
J. B. BALDWIN
ED BORDERS
DR. E. A. BRYANT
DR. E. B. COFFEE
REV. J C. COOK
C. W. DuVAUL
FELIX EDMONDS
MRS E. E. FARLEY
REV. A. W. FORTSON
DR. D. W. GALLIMORE
REV. J. C. GATES
MRS. LYDA HANNAN
MRS. I. A. JONES
MRS. MABEL KIMBROUGH
REV. C. K. KNIGHT
MRS. LIZZIE LUNSFORD
D. P. NESBITT
DR. W. S. ODUM
MRS. ERLYNE OGLEN
MRS. MABEL PREISTER
DR. W. A. REID
G. F. RIVERS, SR.
GEORGE SEALEY
D. T. SLATER
AUSTIN SUMBRY
MRS. A. S. TERRY
WILLIAM WEBB
MRS. ELIZABETH WINSTON
MRS. ROSA COBB YOUNG

Mr. Paul Rilling
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
63 Auburn Avenue North East
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Mr. Rilling:

I am writing at the request of the Columbus Human Relations Council to find out the available dates in October that you could meet with our group.

Mrs. Dimon reported that you had previously indicated that you might be able to visit with us in October. Since I have been appointed Program Chairman for October, it would be helpful to me at this time if we could plan our meeting at the time of your visit.

If your schedule will permit a visit in October, please let me know immediately.

Very truly yours,

A. J. McClung

A. J. McClung
Executive Secretary

AJMcC:jt

October 3, 1960

Mr. A. J. McClung
Executive Secretary
Ninth Street Branch, YMCA
521 9th Street
Columbus, Georgia

Dear Mr. McClung:

I am sorry to say that my schedule for October is such that I will not be able to meet with the Columbus Council this month.

If you have not already completed your arrangements for the November meeting, I could come most any time during the second or fourth week of that month. The first two weeks of December are also fairly free as of the moment.

I look forward to coming to Columbus fairly soon and hope we can get together on a date.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PMR/sm

Help Bring The "Y" Up To Date.... For Youth!

$450,000 New Building Fund Campaign $450,000

NINTH STREET BRANCH COLUMBUS, GEORGIA YMCA

CAMPAIGN HEADQUARTERS, 521 - 9TH STREET
PHONE FA 2-8125

OFFICERS
NINTH STREET BRANCH Y.M.C.A.

SANDY D. ALLEN, CHAIRMAN
S. P. CHARLESTON, VICE CHAIRMAN
A. W. THOMPSON, 2ND VICE CHAIRMAN
ROBERT THREATT, SECRETARY
W. A. TALLEY, TREASURER
A. J. McCLUNG, EXECUTIVE SECRETARY

CAMPAIGN EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

S. P. CHARLESTON, COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN
A. W. THOMPSON, COMMITTEE VICE CHAIRMAN
ROBERT THREATT, COMMITTEE SECRETARY
W. A. TALLEY, COMMITTEE TREASURER
GORDON H. KITCHEN CAMPAIGN CHAIRMAN
REV. E. D. BRYSON, ASSOC., CAMPAIGN CHAIRMAN
REV. T .W. SMITH, ASSOC., CAMPAIGN CHAIRMAN
MITCHELL THOMAS, JR. MEETINGS CHAIRMAN
W. M. THOMAS, CHAIRMAN, TEAMS ORGANIZATION
MORRIS A. CLARKE, VICE CHM., TEAMS ORGANIZATION
REV. J. C. COOK, CHAIRMAN, CHURCH COOPERATION
C. W. DuVAUL, CHAIRMAN, SPEAKERS BUREAU
DR. J. H. ANDERSON, COMMITTEE OF MANAGEMENT
GEORGE FORD, COMMITTEE OF MANAGEMENT
SAMUEL BYRD, COMMITTEE OF MANAGEMENT
MRS. BLANCHE BALDWIN, SPECIAL GIFTS COMMITTEE
WILLIAM BATTLE, CHAIRMAN, PUBLIC RELATIONS
MRS. HELEN BURNETT, CHAIRMAN, WOMEN'S COMMITTEE
MRS. MARGARET BELCHER, ASSOC. CHM. WOMEN'S COMMITTEE
SANDY D. ALLEN, CHAIRMAN, EX-OFFICIO

CITIZEN'S COMMITTEE

J. L. SCONIERS, SR., CHAIRMAN
MRS. SUSIE ALLEN
MRS. LULA ASHE
J. B. BALDWIN
ED BORDERS
DR. E. A. BRYANT
DR. E. B. COFFEE
REV. J C. COOK
C. W. DuVAUL
FELIX EDMONDS
MRS E. E. FARLEY
REV. A. W. FORTSON
DR. D. W. GALLIMORE
REV. J. C. GATES
MRS. LYDA HANNAN
MRS. I. A. JONES
MRS. MABEL KIMBROUGH
REV. C. K. KNIGHT
MRS. LIZZIE LUNSFORD
D. P. NESBITT
DR. W. S. ODUM
MRS. ERLYNE OGLEN
MRS. MABEL PREISTER
DR. W. A. REID
G. F. RIVERS, SR.
GEORGE SEALEY
D. T. SLATER
AUSTIN SUMBRY
MRS. A. S. TERRY
WILLIAM WEBB
MRS. ELIZABETH WINSTON
MRS. ROSA COBB YOUNG

October 5, 1960

No. 10

Mr. Paul Rilling
Director of Field Activities
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
Room 201, 5 Forsyth Street
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Mr. Rilling:

Thank you for your kind letter of October 3rd responding to the invitation to visit with our local Council.

We regret that conditions will not permit you to visit with us this month. However, during a telephone conversation with Mrs. Dimon today, we decided that a visit from you during the second week in November would be more preferable than the other periods suggested in your letter. Since we do not know your commitments during the second week in November, we would like for you to select a date and we will make our plans accordingly.

Please give us your decision as early as possible.

Sincerely yours,

A. J. McClung

A. J. McClung
Executive Secretary

AJMcC:jt

October 10, 1960

Mr. A. J. McClung
Executive Secretary
YMCA, Ninth Street Branch
Columbus, Georgia

Dear Mr. McClung:

I appreciate your invitation to be with you for your November meeting. I think I would suggest Thursday evening, November 10. If this does not prove convenient, I can probably come on Friday, November 11.

I will save the date of November 10 until I hear further from you.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PMR/sm

Help Bring The "Y" Up To Date.... For Youth!

$450,000 New Building Fund Campaign $450,000

NINTH STREET BRANCH COLUMBUS, GEORGIA YMCA

CAMPAIGN HEADQUARTERS, 521 - 9TH STREET
PHONE FA 2-8125

OFFICERS
NINTH STREET BRANCH Y.M.C.A.

SANDY D. ALLEN, CHAIRMAN
S. P. CHARLESTON, VICE CHAIRMAN
A. W. THOMPSON, 2ND VICE CHAIRMAN
ROBERT THREATT, SECRETARY
W. A. TALLEY, TREASURER
A. J. McCLUNG, EXECUTIVE SECRETARY

CAMPAIGN EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

S. P. CHARLESTON, COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN
A. W. THOMPSON, COMMITTEE VICE CHAIRMAN
ROBERT THREATT, COMMITTEE SECRETARY
W. A. TALLEY, COMMITTEE TREASURER
GORDON H. KITCHEN CAMPAIGN CHAIRMAN
REV. E. D. BRYSON, ASSOC., CAMPAIGN CHAIRMAN
REV. T .W. SMITH, ASSOC., CAMPAIGN CHAIRMAN
MITCHELL THOMAS, JR. MEETINGS CHAIRMAN
W. M. THOMAS, CHAIRMAN, TEAMS ORGANIZATION
MORRIS A. CLARKE, VICE CHM., TEAMS ORGANIZATION
REV. J. C. COOK, CHAIRMAN, CHURCH COOPERATION
C. W. DuVAUL, CHAIRMAN, SPEAKERS BUREAU
DR. J. H. ANDERSON, COMMITTEE OF MANAGEMENT
GEORGE FORD, COMMITTEE OF MANAGEMENT
SAMUEL BYRD, COMMITTEE OF MANAGEMENT
MRS. BLANCHE BALDWIN, SPECIAL GIFTS COMMITTEE
WILLIAM BATTLE, CHAIRMAN, PUBLIC RELATIONS
MRS. HELEN BURNETT, CHAIRMAN, WOMEN'S COMMITTEE
MRS. MARGARET BELCHER, ASSOC. CHM. WOMEN'S COMMITTEE
SANDY D. ALLEN, CHAIRMAN, EX-OFFICIO

CITIZEN'S COMMITTEE

J. L. SCONIERS, SR., CHAIRMAN
MRS. SUSIE ALLEN
MRS. LULA ASHE
J. B. BALDWIN
ED BORDERS
DR. E. A. BRYANT
DR. E. B. COFFEE
REV. J C. COOK
C. W. DuVAUL
FELIX EDMONDS
MRS E. E. FARLEY
REV. A. W. FORTSON
DR. D. W. GALLIMORE
REV. J. C. GATES
MRS. LYDA HANNAN
MRS. I. A. JONES
MRS. MABEL KIMBROUGH
REV. C. K. KNIGHT
MRS. LIZZIE LUNSFORD
D. P. NESBITT
DR. W. S. ODUM
MRS. ERLYNE OGLEN
MRS. MABEL PREISTER
DR. W. A. REID
G. F. RIVERS, SR.
GEORGE SEALEY
D. T. SLATER
AUSTIN SUMBRY
MRS. A. S. TERRY
WILLIAM WEBB
MRS. ELIZABETH WINSTON
MRS. ROSA COBB YOUNG

October 17, 1960

Mr. Paul Rilling
Director of Field Activities
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street - Room 201
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Mr. Rilling:

We appreciate your kind acceptance of our invitation to meet with the Columbus Council on, Thursday evening, November 10th.

I have talked with Mrs. Dimon about the available dates (November 10th and 11th) that you could visit with us. As a result, we decided to accept the Thursday evening date of November 10th.

Since the meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Blanche Baldwin, it is the desire of Mrs. Dimon that you should come by her home so that she might accompany you to the meeting.

Sincerely,

A. J. McClung

A. J. McClung
Executive Secretary

AJMcC:jt

2039-13th St.
Columbus, Ga.
Oct. 24, 1960

Mr. Paul Killing
Room 201, 5 Forsyth St., N.W.
Atlanta 3, Ga.

Dear Mr. Killing:

It is good to know that you are coming to Columbus on Nov. 10th. We will be happy to have you eat with us that night - and also spend the night.

We need the strongest shot in the arm you can give us - the Negroes are more eager to push forward; the whites have withered away more since our public meeting. But I am confident we will find others.

For publicity, what can we say you will talk about?

I feel an inspired word or idea from you can really point to something which will give us a "thrust forward."

Maybe we need some very specific examples of what other groups, in a similar setting, have done. Also, we need to have pointed out even the value of just talking together — sharing ideas and experiences.

And the local imperatives are always good when they are aligned with our position in the world crisis. Whatever you feel is good for us, I am sure will be.

Looking forward to seeing you and hearing you again.

Sincerely,

Armine D. Dimon

2039- 13th St.
Columbus, Ga.
Nov. 15, 1960

Mr. Paul Rilling
Room 201, 5 Forsyth St., N.W.
Atlanta 3, Ga.

Dear Mr. Rilling;

Thank you again for coming, for bringing us up to date on the regional picture, and for inspiring us to get ahead with our community study.

You said to remind you of the notes you took - specifically the memo to send us helps on how to make a study of our area.

Have thought of you as we have followed the New Orleans story.

We will look forward to your next visit that includes our boys.

Sincerely,
Armine Dimon

Reprinted from: The Reporter, November 24, 1960

A Movie with a Message

PAUL JACOBS

WITH THE ACTIVE HELP of the House Un-American Activities Committee, a commercial film company in Washington, D.C., has sold five hundred prints of a movie called Operation Abolition during the past few months at $100 each. Although the committee has attempted to disguise its role, it is responsible for much of the production of the film, which presents a distorted version of demonstrations that were staged by a group of college students when the committee had hearings in San Francisco last May on the subject of alleged Communist activities in northern California.

The movie is made up almost entirely of newsreel shots, filmed by TV cameramen who covered the events for stations KRON and KPIX in San Francisco. After the hearings had been completed, two committee staff members—William Wheeler, chief West Coast investigator, and Fulton ("Buddy") Lewis III, went to the television stations with subpoenas for all the newsreel film that had been shot during the demonstrations. They then selected the footage they wanted and had prints made of it, telling the stations that the film was needed for "documentation." Neither the studios, the staff photographers, nor the reporters were paid for their film, although Operation Abolition is ostensibly a commercial venture.

The prints were sent to Washington, where the committee staff edited the film and wrote a commentary for it. After that had been done, film and commentary were turned over to a commercial film company, Washington Video Productions, to be made into a movie.

"Buddy" Lewis assisted the company with the technical work on the film, and the narrator's voice is his. Representatives Francis E. Walter (D., Pennsylvania), chairman of the committee, and Gordon Scherer (R., Ohio), a committee member, both appeared as commentators. The film was then made an official House document and advertised by the committee in a special publication, "The Communist-Led Riots Against the House Committee on Un-American Activities in San Francisco, May 12-14, 1960."

The film itself opens without any of the usual credits. Instead, Congressman Walter launches immediately into the main theme of the picture, which is to suggest that the demonstrations were Communist-inspired and Communist-led. In the attempt to prove this assertion, both the narration and the way the film clips were edited deliberately distort a number of facts.

For example, separate sequences have been run together in Operation Abolition to give the impression of mob action, and the film shows students displaying defiance after police warnings, although actually the demonstrations occurred at a completely different time. And the police use of fire hoses on the students is justified on the basis of the claim that the students attempted to rush police barricades inside the City Hall, where the committee was holding its hearings. But no film accompanies the commentary about this alleged attempt; in fact, photographs taken at the time show the students seated on the floor and in the corridors when the hoses were turned on them. After the riots were over, the sheriff of San Francisco County said: "There was no act of physical aggression on the part of the students."

The film has received wide distribution. The Saturday Evening Post recommends it, with the claim that "For once the facts are pictorially recorded for all to see!" The National Review has plugged it, pointing out that it is "available from the HUAC." A retired admiral has written letters on behalf of it and some Republican candidates used it during their campaigns. Prints have been bought by a number of corporations, including the Schaefer Brewing Company of New York and the Standard Oil Company of California, which purchased ten prints to show to its employees. The staff of Washington Video Productions say that requests for prints of the film are coming in so fast they can hardly keep up with them.

IN ARIZONA, the film is being handled by the Phoenix Anti-Communist Committee. According to officials of the American Civil Liberties Union in Arizona, high-school social-studies teachers are being urged to show the movie, P.T.A. groups have been approached, and college libraries have been informed that prints are available to them. A Phoenix TV station has run the film, and an ad plugging the TV showing was run in a local paper, paid for by the Lions Club.

When the Arizona A.C.L.U. protested against the showing of the film at a P.T.A. meeting without any indication that a number of students who had participated in the demonstration disagreed with the film's presentation of the events, members of the group were warned of vague but dire consequences that might follow if they continued in their protests.

Students at the University of California in Berkeley have prepared a detailed answer to the movie which they are distributing wherever they can. William Wheeler of the House committee staff has admitted on a Los Angeles TV program that there were distortions in the film.

Some of the students may have misbehaved, but no evidence has been offered proving that their original demonstration was under the control of the Communist Party. Although Operation Abolition seems to be doing well at the box office, this unusual venture of the House Committee on Un-American Activities into moviemaking is not apt to win any prizes for accuracy.

 Copyright 1960, The Reporter Magazine Company

Cutting-Room Floor

Copyright 1960, The Washington Post Company

Distributed by:
U.S. National Student Association
3457 Chestnut Street
Philadelphia 4, Pennsylvania

THE COMMITTEE ON UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES

OF THE U.S. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Prepared and distributed by:

U.S. National Student Association
3457 Chestnut Street
Philadelphia 4, Penna.

INTRODUCTION

Why this report?

If one single national concern can said to have captured the interest of the American student during the past semester, that concern must be the work of the Committee on Un-American Activities of the U.S. House of Representatives. The reasons for this upsurge in student interest are varied and complex, to be sure, but a number of influencing factors can be isolated:

1. The student demonstrations against the hearings held by the House Committee on Un-American Activities (HUAC) last May in San Francisco were the first manifestations of student concern in this area. Although those demonstrations remain highly controversial to this day, they did serve to bring the issue into the forefront of student concern.

2. Since the student demonstrations last spring, the Committee has devoted a good portion of its time and effort to the demonstrations and other manifestations of international student protest. A report, written by FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover and circulated by the Committee, first drew national attention to the May incident. Soon to follow was a Committee-produced film, "Operation Abolition." A reported 1,000 copies are currently being circulated, and the film has been shown on countless campuses, with the inevitable result of inspiring student interest in both the demonstrations and the Committee's operations.

3. Perhaps the most heatedly-debated and most controversial resolution to emerge from the 13th National Student Congress this past summer was that on the House Committee on Un-American Activities. It was only natural that the intense level of debate would cause students to bring the issue back to their campus for continued discussion.

4. The increased political interest attributed to today's college students has undoubtedly provoked many college men and women to examine this highly controversial topic, independent of the possible provocations listed above. The year 1959 saw the Committee hold one of its rare investigations of youth activities--that of American participation in the Vienna Youth Festival. At the same time, the cases of students such as Edward Yellin and faculty members such as H. Chandler Davis and Lloyd Barenblatt come to the public attention. As the "unsilent generation" recovered its voice, students found the topic of Congressional investigations was both pertinent and significant--a natural topic for discussion and debate.

What is contained in this report?

There are two distinct issues involved in the current debate on the Committee's work. The most significant in terms of long-range interest, is that of the Committee's right to conduct investigations in manner which it has done for the past two decades. The issues of more immediate concern, which have brought the discussion to many campuses, are the student demonstrations in San Francisco and the subsequent movie and report issued on those demonstrations. It is important to note that these are two distinct issues, but in a sense they are also closely related. The Committee and its supporters point to the demonstrations as an example of Communist infiltration and agitation, and cite the "riots" as a good example of the necessity for vigilance against domestic subversion. On the other hand, the Committee's foes cite the HUAC film and report as typical of the Committee's unjust tactics. The circumstances surrounding the production of the film, in particular, have provided a significant amount of ammunition for those who argue that the Committee is willing to resort to techniques not usually accepted in the United States House of Representatives.

Where do we go from here?

The 13th National Student Congress passed a resolution calling for reform of the Committee in four specific areas, and noted that if reform cannot be achieved, abolition would be the only alternative. Proponents of reform and/or abolition have recognized, for the past several years, that there would be two means to achieve their ends: through the judicial branch and through the legislative branch of the federal government.

For many years, the effort was concentrated on the judicial branch of government--the United States Supreme Court, in particular. Holding the committee's modus operandi to be unconstitutional, first under the fifth amendment and then under the first amendment, a stream of witnesses have paraded their cases before federal district courts, then federal circuit courts of appeal, and finally before the Supreme Court. No less than thirty cases are currently pending in the federal court system, many of them in the Supreme Court. The latest, decision of the high court, in the case of Lloyd Barenblatt, has restored a measure of constitutionality removed from the Committee by the prior Watkins decision. The cases of Carl Braden and Frank Wilkinson have been argued before the court within the past few months and a decision is expected early this year.

Recently, however, the Committee's foes have changed their method of attack. In addition to working in the courts, they have sought to have the Committee's parent body, the House of Representatives, exercise its powers of control.

Leading this attack has been Congressman James Roosevelt (D-Cal.) whose speech on the floor of the House last spring became the rallying cry for the reform-abolition effort. Roosevelt and the few Congressmen who were brave enough to publicly side with him, have offered a number of alternatives for the House in this area. A few of the most likely possibilities are:

1. Abolition of the Committee.
2. Removal of the Committee from its present form as a completely independent body to a sub-committee position under the House Judiciary Committee, where responsible control could be exercised.
3. Rewording of the Committee's mandate to specifically limit its powers of investigation.
4. Reconstituting the Committee with a more responsible membership.
5. Cutting the Committee's appropriation so that it would be forced to limit itself to its legislative purpose.

While Roosevelt first attempted to have the Committee abolished, he soon realized that he would be able to muster little Congressional support because, as one Congressman put it, "it's hard to vote against Communism."

This year, rather than introduce a resolution calling for abolition which would attract only a minimal amount of support in a roll call vote, Roosevelt decided to attempt to cut the Committee's budget. Currently operating on a $327,000 annual budget, the Committee has more funds than almost any other similiar group. A series of newspaper articles on Congressional spending last year showed that the HUAC had used its funds in a most extravgant manner. Thus, Congressmen would now be able to vote for economy as well as for civil liberties.

Roosevelt's tactics this year are as follows: He had asked the House Administration Committee, the committee to which such requests are sent, to hold public hearings on the Committee's budget. The Chairman of the Administration Committee, Omar Burleson (D-Tex.), refused to grant open hearings but did agree to closed hearings at which members of the House would be allowed to testify. These hearings are expected to come up within the next month, with floor debate anticipated on the appropriation after it leaves the committee.

What can you do?

Student groups interested in reform or abolition can work with Roosevelt and the Congressmen attempting to contain the Un-American Activities Committee in the following manner:

Contact your local Congressman, either the Representative from your home district or the Representative from your college area. Let him know that there is support behind him if he desires to testify before the Administration Committee. Encourage him to do this. He already knows what he can expect from the "superpatriots" if he attempts to side with Roosevelt, so your voice must be equally strong. If he's unwilling to testify before the Administration Committee (any Congressman can request this) ask him to at least vote for a decreased budget, as the first step toward reform of the Committee on Un-American Activities. Even the staunchest foes of the Committee admit that the change cannot come overnight, but the effort must be started in ernest now.

Following this introduction are a number of pertinent documents which should aid in a campus discussion of the Committee and its work. Despite the fact that USNSA has been opposed to the Committee for the past several years, as attempt has been made to present a balanced picture of the highly controversial topic. USNSA hopes that this material will serve as a sound base for campus discussion of this issue.

RESOLUTION

HOUSE UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES COMMITTEE

FACT: The House Committee on Un-American Activities has, within the last twenty-two years, conducted investigations into alleged subversive activities. The rules of the House of Representatives direct the Committee to make investigations of:

> The extent, character, and objects of Un-American propaganda activities; the diffusion of foreign or domestic propaganda within the United States which attacks the principle of our form of government as guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States;
> all other questions in relation thereto which would be of assistance to the Congress in preparing remedial legislation.

These mandates of the House to the House Committee on Un-American Activities have been construed to attack the principle of freedom of access to all information and opinion on political subjects, a principle vital in a free society. In practice, the investigations of the committee have thwarted the very freedoms which the Committee claims to protect and preserve--freedom of assembly, of the press, and of speech.

The United States Constitution attempts to preserve the integrity of the nation by concuring specific rights to individuals and organizations. The House Committee on Un-American Activities, in attempting to preserve the nation's integrity, is in fact detrimental to that integrity insofar as it violates personal rights and endangers free expression. The Committee has sometimes cast suspicion on individuals and organizations, including teachers and universities, by:

1) denial of the right to meet one's accuser and cross-examine him.
2) denial of the right of due process.
3) assumption of guilt through association.
4) use of Congressional investigatory powers in possible usurption of the functions more appropriate to either the Executive or the courts.

The Committee has cast suspicion on individuals and organizations by violating the precept of due process through denying the accused the right to face his accuser and cross-examine him and through assumption of guilt by association.

In many instances, the Committee's activities have caused economic and social sanctions to be applied against those whom it has attempted to discredit.

The function of the apprehension of criminals belongs with the executive branch, specifically the FBI. The process of determining guilt or innocence is a function of the courts. The positive functions of the House Committee on Un-American Activities have traditionally been subsumed by the other committees of the Congress, primarily the Judiciary Committee, which is directed to make investigations leading to legislation dealing with political crimes the function of the courts, and civil liberties.

PRINCIPLE: USNSA reaffirms its belief in the right of the individual to express any opinion in a free and open debate without fear of later incrimination. The fear of later incrimination is detrimental to academic freedom.

USNSA expresses its belief in due process of law as specified in the United States Constitution and reaffirms its opposition to guilt by association.

USNSA further believes in the separation of the three branches of government, the legislative, the executive and judicial as set forth in the United States Consitution and believes that this must be upheld to insure a democratic government and society.

DECLARATION: USNSA disapproves of certain practices of the Committee on Un-American Activities on the grounds that:

1. The fear of possible Committee investigation endangers the progress of intellectual inquiry and exchange of those ideas which are made available only through personal association with individuals of diverse and sometimes unpopular opinions

2. These practicies have often violated the precept of due process of law by denying the witness the right to face his accuser and have further led to guilt by association.

3. These practices have sometimes violated the separation of powers of government as set forth in the Constitution by usurping judicial and executive powers.

4. The Committee has not lived up to the original purposes for which it was instituted, that of investigations essential to the initiation of legislation.

USNSA strongly recommends that the House Committee:

1. Have strong indications that any individual whom it summons be able to contribute significantly to the legitimate functioning of this committee.

2. Allow the accused to face his accuser and be fully informed of the reasons for which he was called to appear before the committee.

3. Terminate its policy of publishing the lists of those called to appear before it prior to the time of the hearings.

4. Restrict itself to its original purpose for which it was created, that of investigation for the purpose of initiating legislation.

USNSA strongly urges that unless these conditions in section 2 of the DECLARATION are fulfilled the House Committee on Un-American Activities be dissolved and its legislative functions be officially assumed by those committees of the House which are at present executing many of its functions.

ACTION: USNSA urges that all its member campuses support the revision or subsequent abolition of the House Un-American Activities Committee as expressed in the preceding DECLARATION. We urge the support of such bills as that of Representative James Roosevelt, which calls for the modification and/or abolition of House Un-American Activities Committee, by such means as letter-writing campaigns to members of the Eighty-seventh Congress.

MANDATE: The Thirteenth National Student Congress directs the National Affairs Vice-President to direct an extensive, informative campaign on the House Un-American Activities Committee to all member campuses and to send a copy of this resolution to every member of the Eighty-seventh Congress.

"OPERATION ABOLITION"

FACT:

The film, "Operation Abolition", prepared under the auspices of the House Committee on Un-American Activities (HUAC) and dealing with the May, 1960 student demonstrations against the HUAC in San Francisco is being widely distributed both within and without the academic community. The film is designed to leave the definite impression that:

1. Acts of violence were perpetrated by the students.
2. The students were used as tools by Communist party members in an attempt to subvert the United States government.
3. Student demonstrations, in general, are suspect, regardless of their origin and the principle to which they are directed.
4. The film further implies that student demonstrations are of force subversive or subverted merely because their immediate aim coincides with the immediate goals of allegedly subversive organizations.

Student participation in the demonstration and accounts of the incident in the San Francisco Chronicle and the Reporter magazine have stated this film to be a mis-representation of the facts. A member of the HUAC's investigative staff has admitted that the film does, in fact, contain distortions.

At no time has there been direct testimony under oath--by police officers, newspaper reporters, students, or observers--that they were witnesses to violence on the part of any student or students. The narration makes frequent reference to acts on the part of the students that are not borne out by the visual part of the film, thereby leaving false or unsupported impressions unfavorable to the student participants. Inspite of attempts on the part of the film's narrators to establish a cause-and-effect relationship between the activities of the students and concurrent Communist party activity, no evidence to support such a connection is presented either in the film or elsewhere.

PRINCIPLE:

The USNSA upholds the responsibility of groups and organizations within the academic community to avoid misrepresentation, half-truths and untruths and upholds the freedom of the academic community against intimidation and false accusations by governments or other organizations.

DECLARATION:

The USNSA holds the film "Operation Abolition" to be an effort to falsely accuse members of the academic community of subversive activity and to deny students the freedom of political activity.

The USNSA requests the television stations from whom the films were subpoenaed to make available their complete films of the demonstration.

MANDATE:

The national office is mandated to distribute this resolution to HUAC; agencies and organizations distributing or showing the film "Operation Abolition"; and member schools. It is further mandated to conduct an extensive campaign to refute the false impression of this film and to negate the dangerous myths it creates and perpetuates.

Guilt by Subpeona

by Patrick Murphy Malin

Executive Director, American Civil Liberties Union

THE SUBPOENA served by the House Un-American Activities Committee (HUAC) on biologist William Sherwood in 1957 bore not a single mark to distinguish it from others that had heralded grief for hundreds of people. Yet Sherwood took poison rather than submit to what he believed would be a humiliating public interrogation.

Of course not even the powerful House Committee, whose prescribed task is to investigate "un-American propaganda activities," could directly cause a man to take his own life. But the direct and indirect power of the Committee—wielded through public exposure accompanied by harsh questions that rob witnesses of dignity, followed often by loss of livelihood, social ostracism, sometimes even prison—can create such fear that, in Sherwood's case, it brought him to his desperate act.

The forty-one-year-old research scientist, who, according to his wife, had sown his youth with voluble concerns about Fascism that the Committee labeled "ultra-radical," put the blame directly at the Committee's hearing-room door. His farewell note to his wife and four children said: "My life and my livelihood are now threatened by the House Committee. I would love to spend the next few years in laboratories and I would hate to spend them in jail."

But, cruel as it may sound, this man's death, and the pain suffered by hundreds of others ensnared by the HUAC, are not the fundamental reasons such probes must be abolished. Just as the heart attack of another witness under interrogation, Joseph Klein, a launderer — whose counsel was evicted for laughing when California's Democratic Congressman Clyde Doyle said he asked questions in order to help legislate intelligently—cannot be entirely the fault of the HUAC. It is not these personal tragedies that have caused scores of national organizations and millions of Americans to be outraged by the Committee and its imitators. While the Committee's ravages arouse disgust with its antics, and sympathy for those pilloried, the continued existence of the Committee poses a threat to American traditions far more ominous than personal tragedy. It undermines the very foundation of our democratic system, the First Amendment's guarantees of freedom.

Raging around the purposes and practices of the House Un-American Activities Committee—progenitor of Senator Joseph McCarthy's and Senator James Eastland's enterprises, plus several state and local facsimiles—is the age-old torrent of controversy between freedom and order.

You can have order—by itself—in a dictatorship, until there is a revolt against its tyranny. You can have freedom—by itself—in anarchy, until society collapses. What the founding fathers of the American republic attempted was to combine order and freedom in a democracy, guaranteeing the people's liberties by the Bill of Rights, the cornerstone of which is the First Amendment.

The Constitutional guarantees of free speech and association do not entitle the conscious or unconscious agents of the Soviet Union to commit acts of espionage, sabotage, violence, or treachery against the American government and people. There is a line of "clear and present danger" on which even a democratic government and a free society must dig in for their own defense — as Lincoln did during the Civil War.

But the House Un-American Activities Committee is not dealing with Lincoln's real wartime military danger. Opponents of the Committee, no less concerned than the Committee itself about cold war conflicts, see quite clearly the Communist menace to democratic institutions. But they see also with equal clarity the actual, present, repeated mutilation of democratic institutions by this Committee and its imitators. And they have a greater faith than the Committee in the innate strength which freedom alone brings to democracy. The Committee's opponents see the danger of burning the entire house down in a reckless attempt to get at its termites.

It is madness to undermine, ourselves, the very principles of freedom of which the Communists would deprive us. A country that punishes belief and association is not merely a country with a lesser degree of democracy, it is on the way to being no democracy at all.

Reprinted from The Progressive, Madison, Wisconsin

By the American Civil Liberties Union, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York 10, N.Y.

Whenever members of the House Un-American Activities Committee are under attack, they proudly point to the Alger Hiss case as the prime example of successful probing for actual acts of subversion. No one denies that the Committee, along with many other public and private agencies, has, over the years, dramatically called attention to the machinations of the Communist apparatus. But the price paid for these alarms has been staggering. For the sake of revealing Communist activities — already publicized and counteracted by nearly every American institution, organization, and publication — the Committee's interrogators have not only ruthlessly overridden the delicate human right of freedom of speech and association, but have violated principles of justice and fair play painfully and expensively established by the American Revolution.

Since Congress cannot constitutionally come right out and forbid the expression of ideas, however well organized (organization is what the HUAC usually means when it uses the evil-sounding term, "conspiracy"), the Committee does the job by exposure, inviting patriotic public excoriation of persons deemed "un-American." So the wrath of the community is unleashed. A Seattle man, identified as a Communist by a HUAC witness but never subpoenaed, was hounded by a woman who called his employer every day for several weeks until he was fired; his union, the Molders, did not intervene. In Buffalo, even though an auto worker was freed by the courts on the contempt charges originated by the Committee, his fellow employes walked out on their jobs in an effort to get him fired — although his United Auto Workers Union local supported him.

It is profoundly disturbing to realize that the Committee—an arm of Congress—does with impunity what Congress itself is expressly forbidden to do. It is equally disturbing to know that the Committee has spawned dozens of state and municipal counterparts — little HUACs — which carry subversive hunts to the point of dangerous absurdity. In the South, for instance, state investigating bodies such as Virginia's Committee on Offenses Against the Administration of Justice, viewing "un-Americanism" as they logically would understand the word, have used investigations to harass the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and other racial-justice organizations. Even membership in the American Civil Liberties Union is cited by state attorneys-general and little HUACs as clear evidence of "subversion."

This points up the nagging problem of words like "un-American." As President Truman's Advisory Committee on Universal Military Training said: "An epithet is not an argument. Un-American means simply that it has not been done in America. If Americans want it, it becomes American." But, too frequently, any reform is labeled un-American. Representative Martin Dies, Texas Democrat, the first HUAC chairman, often —quite rightly from his point of view — interpreted un-Americanism as "New Deal." Yesterday and today, Committee members, in their search for Communist influence, still confound economic with political philosophy, and sometimes badger men and women with "socialistic" interests in medical care, or public housing, or public education.

Such confusion automatically brings Committee scrutiny into the intellectual and moral worlds most concerned with social reform, fermentation of thought, unrestricted inquiry into knowledge, creative mental processes. This is where the Committee has struck hardest and has done its worst damage. Time and time again Committee members and investigators have denounced the Protestant clergy for alleged ties to Communism, helping to create a climate that could result in the adoption of a California law, happily later invalidated by the Supreme Court, requiring churchmen to sign loyalty oaths before their churches could obtain tax exemptions.

In 1953 the House Committee released to the press without comment a statement by Benjamin Gitlow of its staff that "ministers who carried out the instructions of the Communist Party, or collaborated with it, were limited in number. The outstanding ones among them were Judah L. Magnes, John Haynes Holmes, and Stephen S. Wise." Gitlow's statement, in reference to matters that occurred thirty years before his testimony, provided no opportunity for personal rebuttal of this outrageous canard by Rabbis Magnes and Wise, who were dead; Dr. Holmes did what he could to set the record straight.

Teachers—aware of the hundreds of their colleagues who have been hauled before the HUAC, or named publicly by the Committee as suspected subversives, and whose contracts were not renewed or who were dismissed from long-time positions—have become timid in stating, even for classroom discussion, ideas that someone later might interpret as subversive. Supreme Court Justice Douglas deplored this development, saying, "There can be no real academic freedom in that environment. Where suspicion fills the air and holds scholars in line for fear of their jobs, there can be no exercise of the free intellect."

Professor Andrew Deinum was fired by the University of Southern California for refusing to implicate people he knew in the past. He told the Committee: "You can be sure that if I had at any time pursued activities inimical to the best interests of my adopted home, I would immediately have gone to the proper authorities. The mentioning of names would save me a great deal of practical trouble, but it would smash me inside and ruin me as a man. It would have taken from me my ability and authority as a teacher. I have tried to be a scholar all my life."

At one point, in 1949, the Committee reached to the very edge of book-burning, when it solicited lists of textbooks and reading lists from dozens of universities. And all it ever accomplished in its 1959 abortive investigation of California school teachers was that, of 111,500, four stopped teaching. "Also included were teachers of retarded children, and this seems a little far-fetched since it is so difficult to teach retarded children anything, let alone Communism," commented Eleanor Roosevelt. A good deal of the intellectual stagnation of the postwar period, from which students are only now beginning to recover, may be traced to the Committee and emulating school boards who have hacked away at the American tradition of academic freedom.

Writers and others in various communication fields have been brought before the Committee in profusion. Under the "or else" spur of Committee exposure, not only have periodicals, movies, and television systematically excluded Committee-labeled suspects by means of a blacklist, but, even more pernicious, the pressure has caused a self-imposed pre-censorship by the mass media. Symptomatic of the entire authors-versus-subversive-hunters conflict was Representative James Roosevelt's question to his colleagues in the House in February, 1959: "What good did it do to the free world to subject this talented man [playwright Arthur Miller] to criminal prosecution because he refused to name [associates of] ten years ago?" The "good" done by the Committee's exposure to creative thought had been stated already by film producer Robert Rossen, in his unintentionally and painfully revealing "confession" before the Committee: "I did a lot of thinking. I don't think, after two years of thinking, that any one individual can even indulge himself in the luxury of individual morality."

What the Committee has done to government servants is indescribable, mainly because a large part of the damage cannot yet be assessed. Scientific leaders such as Dr. Stanley Livingston, president of the American Federation of Scientists, have noted the loss in top research personnel, of scientists who did not enter government service because of the fear they might be publicly embarrassed, or their careers ruined, because they had once spoken and cooperated with what the Committee now defines as the wrong men and the wrong group. As for people already in government service, they too dare not provoke controversy lest the HUAC subpoena await them, and creative administration is stifled by fear.

But a paper-thin majority of the Supreme Court of the United States does not view the transgressions of the Committee in the same light. Chief Justice Warren's encouraging dictum condemning "exposure for exposure's sake" in the 1956 Watkins decision was followed in 1959 by a five to four ruling that the HUAC mandate was constitutional. In approving the contempt conviction of Lloyd Barenblatt, the Court assessed the danger of the Communist menace and concluded that it was so threatening that it outweighed Barenblatt's rights under the First Amendment. The Vassar psychology teacher, who had lost his original job and four others in quick succession, was released in April, 1960, after serving five months in Federal prison for his mistaken understanding of the First Amendment.

In the hope of eventual reversal of the close decision of the Supreme Court, the American Civil Liberties Union still argues that the mandate of the Committee is unconstitutional. Remembering that the Court in 1954 reversed its 1898 segregation decision, and in 1956 modified its 1951 decision upholding the Smith Act, the ACLU believes the true security of the nation lies in these words of Justice Hugo Black's dissenting opinion: "The real interest in Barenblatt's silence is the interest of the people as a whole in being able to join organizations, to advocate causes and make political 'mistakes' without later being subjected to governmental penalties for having dared to think for themselves."

The dispute among the Justices reaches to the essence of the controversy about the HUAC. Buried deep in twenty-three years of accumulated befuddlement lies the root of a confusion that has cast its shadow all over America: Congress' mandate to the Committee. In 1938, Congressman Dies launched an investigation of what he considered to be unsavory and dangerous "activities"; in 1945, Mississippi's Democratic Congressman John Rankin was responsible for elevating the Dies inquiry to standing-committee status.

The present mandate of the House Un-American Activities Committee reads, in part: "The Committee on Un-American Activities, as a whole or by subcommittee, is authorized to make from time to time investigations of (i) the extent, character, and objects of un-American propaganda activities in the United States, (ii) the diffusion within the United States of subversive and un-American propaganda that is instigated from foreign countries or of a domestic origin and attacks the principle of our form of government as guaranteed by our Constitution . . ." (Italics added.)

It is no wonder that zealous Congressmen who seek to carry out that mandate involve the HUAC in matters which other people—with different understanding of these vague words—believe the First Amendment expressly has forbidden Congress to tamper with.

Webster's dictionary defines propaganda as: "Dissemination of ideas, information, gossip, or the like, for the purpose of helping or injuring . . ." Propaganda is an attempt to persuade; an argument. Although the dictionary could easily be describing the expression of unvarnished truth, there is no doubt that the word conveys the pejorative meaning of a distortion of facts for ulterior ends.

The jails would overflow with politicians, salesmen, reporters, and husbands if every man who altered the interpretation of facts to his own advantage could be brought to account by law. But many such transgressors can be. Slander, libel, misleading advertisements—a host of distortions are prohibited today. But political propaganda? The warp and woof of ideological disputation?

The ACLU believes that propaganda, in and of itself—even Communist propaganda—falls within the protection of the First Amendment and its guarantee of freedom of speech and press. If Congress consequently may not abridge these freedoms, Congressional committees—which exist to examine the need for legislation and how existing legislation is administered—certainly are out of bounds in examining matters about which Congress may not legislate. When Communist propaganda is linked to imminent illegal acts, then investigation is proper—though the main defense against genuine acts of espionage or sabotage lies in professionally trained counter-intelligence agents, in the FBI, and in the military services.

From this fallacious, misleading, and provocative mandate springs a corollary disregard for fair legal procedures. In December, 1956, after reviewing a tape recording of a HUAC hearing which sought to expose Communist backing of the drive against the McCarran-Walter Immigration Act, the Board of Governors of the California State Bar found the proceedings ". . . of such a character as to pose a threat to the right to appear by counsel and to the proper independence of the bar." Attorneys representing witnesses before the Committee were ejected for insisting on making objections for the record. Some were addressed by the Committee as "comrade."

The list of irresponsible accusations (many of which would be legally slanderous, except for Congressional immunity) is endless—and could be easily avoided. Take the case of the doctor, publicly accused of being a member of a Denver Communist cell at a certain time in the past, who proved he was then studying medicine in the East; or the two students from New York and New Jersey identified as Communists by Pennsylvania's Democratic Representative Francis E. Walter, who forced Walter to retract his accusation, although, of course, the retraction came after all the harm had been done. Such accusations caused a political atmosphere in America that Walter Lippmann keenly described: "There is a kind of smog in what should be the clean and open air of this free land, a smog that makes men nervous, makes them afraid to speak their minds, makes them not sure to dare to keep their minds open."

So brazen has the Committee been in its exposure drive that it has attempted to blunt the effectiveness of individuals and organizations who seek an end to restrictive legislation. The Committee attempted to establish that the struggle against the McCarran-Walter Immigration Act was prompted in large measure by Communists. The American Civil Liberties Union of Northern California commented in 1956: "We don't need public hearings to discover that a handful of Communists have seized upon our harsh and discriminatory immigration laws as a means of making political hay." Unfortunately, the ACLU said, investigation of these Communists opposing the immigration laws tars all the other people who oppose these laws with a "red" brush—including even Presiden Eisenhower, who wished to ameliorate some of the harsher provisions.

The public often has been confused and led to believe, falsely, that many worthy, important, and even vital liberal and progressive movements, organizations, and individuals are genuinely suspect. The result has been incalculable harm to the orderly liberal development of the democratic process, so necessary to the maintenance of the free traditions of our democracy.

The audacity of the Committee recently reached new heights when it questioned an individual because he was organizing opposition to the Committee itself. The Wilkinson case, in which a one-year jail sentence for contempt was imposed, is now before the Supreme Court, again testing the Committee's power.

Lately the HUAC — subpoenaing commercial television news films — aided in the creation of a film about the students who demonstrated against the Committee in San Francisco last May. Distorted to make it appear that the students rioted only at the instigation of known and recognizable Communist agitators (when in fact the county sheriff remarked about the peaceableness of the crowd), the film all-too-effectively tries to show that the movement to abolish the HUAC is directed by Communists—notwithstanding the lengthy list of clearly non-Communist persons and groups who have called for an end to the Committee.

Ordinarily, the excesses of individuals connected with an enterprise might not be a fit subject of reproach to the enterprise itself. In the case of the House Un-American Activities Committee, however—beginning from a misleading and dangerous mandate through its transgressions of fundamental legal principle and simple morality—the excesses in great degree are symptoms of an organic disease. They result from the very spirit of the Committee. Accusations hurled at the Protestant clergy en masse are not simply the mistakes of over-zealous aides, later fired, but the product of a systematic affliction. One Committee member, California's Republican Representative Donald Jackson, last year accused the National Council of Churches, in dead seriousness, of promoting obscene books written by Communist sympathizers.

Before he left the Committee to become a judge, counsel Robert Arens helped stage what is known as the "Peregrinations of Mr. Fishman." In each of ten hearings about the country, Fishman, a deputy collector of customs, accompanied by a locked mailbag, was asked by the Committee counsel to open the bag "for the first time" and withdraw the first material to come to hand. Each time Mr. Fishman unlocked the bag, withdrew a package, and, like a Twentieth-Century Archimedes, greeted his discovery with an exclamatory: "Foreign propaganda!" Thus, in dramatic and expenses-paid fashion did the Committee demonstrate that the mail was chock-full of "foreign propaganda." (When, much earlier, the suspicious eye of the Committee's annual report was cast upon the flood of foreign mail between Buffalo and Communist Poland, the statisticians at the Census Bureau hastened to inform the Committee that 300,000 people of Polish descent lived in Buffalo.) Arens, by the way, recently questioned President Eisenhower's patriotism because he introduced his grandchildren to Khrushchev.

Although the Committee can be depended upon to make mistakes and spur the rising cry to abolish it, a movement given vocal leadership by Representative Roosevelt in his stirring recounting to Congress on April 25, 1960, of the Committee's wrongs, Americans cannot depend on the courts and political leaders alone to carry on the struggle. The people themselves must understand the danger and call on their legislators to act. We must heed Justice Learned Hand's admonition that we not "rest our hopes too much upon constitutions, upon laws and upon courts . . . Liberty lies in the hearts of men and women; when it dies there, no constitution, no law, no court can save it; no constitution, no law, no court can even do much to help it."

Throughout the world, the image of America as an exuberant crusader for liberty is vanishing. It is being replaced by an image of tired men fearful of domestic shadows. Much of the tarnishing of our prestige abroad results from the depredations of the House Un-American Activities Committee and its emulators throughout the nation. I am convinced that a new President, a new Administration, and a new Congress could do no better in seeking to restore the image of a freedom-loving America than to launch the 1960's by abolishing this fearsome Committee. Such action would be a signal the world over that McCarthyism, at long last, is dead and buried.

A SELECTION OF RECENT EDITORIALS FROM THE WASHINGTON POST - TIMES-HERALD

November 26, 1960

FORGERY BY FILM

A propaganda movie called Operation Abolition, confected in large part by the House Committee on Un-American Activities, is now being given wide commercial distribution. The movie presents a mendaciously distorted view of the demonstrations staged by a group of college students when the committee held hearings in San Francisco last May. This is a flagrant case of forgery by film.

The film warps the truth in two important respects, First, it suggests as its main thesis that the demonstrations were Communist-inspired and Communist-led. Diligent inquiry has led us to a conviction that this charge is wholly unjustified. It cannot be asserted of course, that no Communists took part in the demonstrations. But the main body of students who picketed the Committee hearings in protest were inspired only by their own valid and thoroughly creditable indignation at the Committee's conduct; and they were led by fellow-students loyal to American ideals and acting in accordance with that loyalty.

Second, the film attempts to represent the rioting which followed the student protest as resulting entirely from student violence and disorder. In point of fact, the San Francisco police acted with altogether needless brutality, turning fire hoses on students whose protests were not flagrantly unruly. In an article telling about the film in the current issue of The Reporter, Paul Jacobs, a respected West Coast newsman, explains how the distortion was acomplished:

> Both the narration and the way the film clips were edited deliberately distort a number of facts. For example, separate sequences have been run together in Operation Abolition to give the impression of mob action, and the film shows students displaying defiance after police warnings, although actually the demonstrations occurred at a completely different time...

November 30, 1960

SECURITY UPSIDE DOWN

That curious little film fraud--a movie called Operation Abolition--concocted by the House Committee on Un-American Activities and given commercial distribution with the Committee's blessing--is now being shown to employes not only by private industrial concerns but by Government agencies as well. The film gives an elaborately edited-and elaborately distorted-view of the student demonstrations against the Committee in San Francisco last May. It was shown last week, according to a letter published here Tuesday, to employes of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

When a corporation buys a print of this film, it is guilty of nothing worse than wasting money that belongs to its stockholders and time that its employes could use much more profitably for a coffee break. But when a Federal agency buys the film, it is wasting taxpayers' money and wasting it for a purpose which is essentially improper. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare is not an advertising agency for the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

It is still more disquieting to suppose, as our correspondent suggested, that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare shows this film in order to promote national security. For the aim and impact of the film is to discourage dissent. Student protests against the HUAC may be a threat to the committee; but they are not a threat to the Nation. On the contrary, they are a heartening symptom of reviving national health.

January 4, 1961

Sacred Cow

The House Committee on Un-American Activities has been continued,-almost

After the riots were over, the sheriff of San Francisco County said: "There was no act of physical aggression on the part of the students."

The film is made up of newsreel shots subpenaed by the Committee and edited by members of its staff who also supplied a highly loaded running commentary. The committee then turned this conncoction over to a commercial film company which, according to Mr. Jacobs, has sold 500 prints of it during the past few months at $100 each. The film was made an official House document and advertised by the Committee in a special publication. In every respect--in its distribution for private profit, in its falsification of facts, in its whitewashing of the Un-American Activities Committee--this film makes a dirty joke of the congressional investigating power.

December 20, 1960

WHY?

Arlington County's school administrators and social science teachers are to consider the question whether the House Un-American Activities Committee film, Operation ABolition, should be shown to students in Arlington's social studies classes. The first question they ought to ask themselves in this connection is the simple question, "Why?" What constructive educational purpose can be served by giving youngsters this highly colored and questionable account--prepared by the Un-American Activities Committee itself--of a San Francisco student demonstration against the Committee.

The film is a piece of propaganda. By editing and arranging newsreel pictures and by an exceedingly slanted running commentary, delivered by a member of the Committee staff, two false impressions are created: first, that the riot which took place in San Francisco last May was instigated, organized and led by Communists; second, that violence by the students required the San Francisco police to turn fire hoses on them and eject them by force from the City Hall.

without question or protest, as a regular feature of the 87th Congress. Created 23 years ago to deal with what was supposed then to be a crisis of Communist infiltration into the Federal Government, it became a standing committee of the House in 1945 and has been ever since that date a political sacred cow, milked by many and challenged only by the most doughty of congressional Don Quixotes.

For the sake of the record and out of a sense of responsibility to our readers, we shall set down once more the reasons why we think that the conduct of the Un-American Activities Committee constitutes an abuse of the congressional investigating power and a danger to the public welfare:

1. The Committee often functions as a kind of public pillory to punish men by publicity for offenses which the Constitution forbids Congress to make punishable by law. It "exposes" men who express opinions or indulge in associations of which the Committee disapproves, carelessly calling them--or allowing witnesses under the cloak of congressional immunity to call them Communists or Communist-sympathizers or Communist dupes.

2. The Committee, as a consequence of this conduct, sometimes operates as a serious restraint on freedom of expression and freedom of association. It makes Americans fearful of uttering opinions for which the Committee may consider subversive.

3. From its inception, the Committee has misconceived and distorted the nature of the Communist problem in the United States. By identifying as "Communist" all sorts of heterodoxy, radicalism, New Dealism and progressivism, it has managed not only to place a stigma on many good and honest causes but also to make the Communists seem more powerful than they actually are and to give them credit as instigators for causes in which they were, at most, mere fellow travelers.

Since the Un-American Activities Committee has been reestablished, there is no point in arguing whether it should have been continued. But the record contains ample reason why the House ought to bring its wandering Committee to book by insisting upon a more modest appropriation and by defining the Committee's scope and procedures far more strictly than has been the case so far.

The truth about the first is that Communists had nothing whatever to do with the instigation, organization or leadership of the student demonstration; it was an expression of legitimate protest against the efforts of the HUAC to pillory a number of California teachers, and the only proved Communists present seemed to be those subpenaed by the Committee as witnesses. The truth about the second is that some of the students inside the City Hall (those marching outside in the picket line were uniformly well-mannered and orderly) began to chant when they were denied admittance to the hearing room, and the police reacted with altogether needless ferocity.

The Committee on Un-American Activities making a political fight for its existence. The public schools should not be made a battleground for that fight. And certainly they should not be sponsors of a film which, as the Milwaukee Journal aptly put it, "far from being a tool against communism, is a tool against the American right to dissent."

The following exchange of letters was printed in the December 28, 1960 issue of the Washington Post-Times-Herald:

REP. WALTER DEFENDS UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES GROUP IN "ABOLITION" FILM

Chairman Francis E. Walter of the House Un-American Activities Committee has taken severe issue with three of our editorials (Nov. 26, Nov. 30, and Dec. 20) which criticized Operation Abolition, the film prepared by the Committee about the student riots in San Francisco last May.

In order that readers may judge the editorial criticisms and Mr. Walter's answers in context, we publish below the complete exchange of correspondence on the subject.

Dec. 9, 1960

Mr. J. Russell Wiggins, Executive Editor
The Washington Post
1515 L. Street, N.W.
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Wiggins:

Upon my return from Geneva, Switzerland, where I attended the Session of the Council of the Intergovernment Committee for European Migration, I found the enclosed cartoon and editorial both having appeared in The Washington Post on Nov. 30.

Having been accused of a "curious little fraud," I wish to obtain from you an explanation regarding the alleged "doctoring of the film, including an indication of specific parts of the newsreel which you believe were deleted or altered.

Sincerely yours,
(signed)
Francis E. Walter, M. C.

Dec. 16, 1960

The Hon. Francis E. Walter
House of Representatives
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Walter:

This is in reply to your letter of Dec. 9. An example of the kind of distortion to which our editorial referred and to which the cartoon alluded revolved about the identification of Harry Bridges with the City Hall disturbances.

Those on our staff who viewed the film gained the distinct impression that the narration and the pictures identified Bridges as a very active and present participant in the so-called riots. I do not have the exact quote of the narration at hand, but the version quoted by Herb Caen in the San Francisco Sunday Chronicle pretty well fits the recollection of the members of our staff. That quote is: "Among the Communist leaders who had an active part in the San Francisco abolitionist campaign and the protest demonstration were Harry Bridges, who you see here being escorted out of the City Hall by police officials moments before the rioting broke out."

The testimony of three different persons with whom we were in touch was that Bridges was not at the City Hall at the time the rioting broke out but was eating lunch at a restaurant not far away, and that by the time he got to the City Hall, the thing was all over.

It seems to us also that the fact that 67 of the 68 arrested persons were released, after being charged with disturbing the peace and resisting arrest, indicates that the facts were not exactly in accord with those as presented in the film. Our attention has been called to a statement from several sources that Mr. Wheeler, of the Committee staff, has admitted that the film has inaccuracies and distortions.

These are some of the considerations that led us to the comment to which you refer.

Sincerely yours,
(signed)
J.R. Wiggins

Dec. 23, 1960

Mr. J. Russell Wiggins
Executive Editor
The Washington Post
1515 L Street, N. W.
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Wiggins:

Your statement in your letter of Dec. 16 that you have been in touch with three different persons who say that Harry Bridges was not in the San Francisco City Hall but eating lunch at a nearby restaurant when the rioting broke out, and it had ended by the time he arrived at City Hall, in no way negates the statement in the film, "Operation Abolition," that:

"Among the Communist leaders who had an active part in the San Francisco "abolution" campaign and the protest demonstrations was Harry Bridges, whom you see here being escorted out of City Hall by police officials moments before the rioting broke out."

The film, as the above quotation from its narration clearly indicates, does not associate Bridges with the rioting but only with the protest demonstrations. Your statement that your staff members who viewed the film "gained the distinct impression" that it identified Bridges as "a very active and present participant in the so-called riots," does not speak well for their memory nor for their attentiveness to what they hear--qualities which are quite important to accurate reporting.

A variety of sources attest to the accuracy of the film's statement that Bridges "had an active part in.... the protest demonstrations":

The San Francisco Examiner had newsmen on the scene. It reported (May 14, 1960, Sec. 1, P.5, Col. 1):

"(Bridges) had been haranguing a group of people still in the rotunda, and crying, 'I'm going to get a gang up and see the Mayor!!'"

The San Francisco NewsCall Bulletin also had reporters on the scene. It reported (May 13, 1960, P. 1, Col. 8):

"(Bridges) was hustled out of the City Hall by police today after he started to address a group of demonstrators at the bottom of the main stairway inside the rotunda."

J. Edgar Hoover in his report on the riots, Communist Target-Youth, stated:

"Order had been restored when Harry Bridges, president of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, suddenly appeared on the scene. Demanding to know what part firemen had played in the use of the fire hoses, Bridges commented that he would see if the firemen's pay could be cut. The day's activities closed with Archie Brown joining Bridges and shouting, 'You tell them, Harry; they'll listen to you!'"

If you had checked with the Committee on the Bridges matter, you would have been informed frankly--as other news media representatives have been--that the film commentary is in error in stating that Bridges was escorted from the City Hall before the rioting broke out. This unfortunate, but honest and decidedly minor, error has the effect in a sense, of "clearing" Bridges to a certain extent; because it removes him from the scene before the violence broke out. This fact hardly fits in with your implications about the manner in which the film has been "distorted" and the sinister motives for the alleged distortions.

Your second point. You state:

"It seems to us also that the fact that 67 of the 68 arrested persons were released, after being charged with disturbing the peace and resisting arrest, indicates that the facts were not exactly in accord with those as presented in the film."

Your writing here is rather vague and fuzzy, particularly for a newspaper editor, but I presume you mean by the above that the fact that 67 of the 68 arrested were released, indicates that they were not guilty as charged.

Inasmuch as you have editorially claimed "diligent inquiry into the San Francisco matter, however, I find it difficult to believe that this is really what you could mean. Surely you must know that Judge Albert J. Axelrod of the San Francisco Municipal Court stated in his decision on the case that, as far as the arrestees were concerned, there were "enough facts to justify a conviction on at least two grounds," but then went on to state three reasons why he was dismissing the charges against the arrestees:

(a) A conviction on any one of the counts could carry with it "a stigma which could well haunt them every time they applied for a responsible position either in private industry or in the government service." The Judge said that in the past he had received numerous appeals from young men and women to erase convictions on their records because they were hampering their chances for employment, but that he had been helpless to aid them.

(b) A mass trial of the defendants would not only be costly in a monetary sense, "but would play directly into the hands of those who create the unrest and do everything in their power to upset our democratic processes and way of life."

(c) He believed the defendants had already been punished sufficiently and said, "I am hopeful that they have learned the errors of their ways and that there will be no repetition of their type of conduct."

This statement, coupled with hundreds of feet of film footage shot on the scene by local TV cameramen--portraying many of the arrestees engaged in rioting, disturbing the peace and resisting arrest (the three charges against them) "and with the accounts of numerous newsmen on the scene, leaves no doubt that, on the matter of the arrestees, the film presentation is "exactly in accord" with the facts.

Your final effort to justify your vicious editorials about the film is based on a statement "from several sources" that a Committee staff member has admitted the film contains "inaccuracies and distortions." If you had truly made "diligent inquiry" into the film, you would have found, as other people have, (see for example the Palo Alto Times of Nov. 30) that the film contains absolutely no distortions, that the staff member in question had not himself used the word "distortions," and that he had stated only that there were three insignificant time sequence errors in splicing together the thousands of feet of film that make up the picture.

I do not ask you to publish this letter but, inasmuch as you fail in your letter of Dec. 16 to produce a shred of evidence that would justify your charges that I am a party to forgery, fraud, falsification, and warping of the truth, ask that you publish the attached letter as my official reply to the three editorials

The Washington Post has published on the Committee film Operation Abolition.

Sincerely Yours,
(Signed)
Francis E. Walter

*Apparently Judge Axelrod supports the Committee claim that the riots were Communist-instigated.

The Editor
The Washington Post,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Editor:

In three editorials and one cartoon The Washington Post has made vicious attempts, to discredit the motion picture Operation Abolition, a documentary film of the Communist-led riots against the House Committee on Un-American Activities in San Francisco on May 13, 1960.

The Washington Post editorials have labeled this film a "falsification of facts," forgery by film," "mandaciously distorted"; highly colored and questionable," "a piece of propaganda," and a "curious little film fraud" with a "highly loaded running commentary." They have charged that the film "warps the truth" and "make a dirty joke of the congressional investigating power."

The Washington Post claims that it has made "diligent inquiry" to ascertain the truth concerning the San Francisco riots and that this truth contradicts the Committee's film on two basic points.

The first point is that the main thesis of the film is "wholly unjustified." You correctly describe its main thesis as being "that the demonstrations were Communist-inspired and Communist led." The truth, you claim, is "that Communists had nothing whatever to do with the instigation, organization, or leadership" of the student rioters.

What are the facts on this matter?

The San Francisco Chronicle of May 18, 1960, made the following statement concerning Mayor George Christopher of San Francisco:

"Mayor Christopher agreed that a 'great majority' of the student demonstrators' were 'dupes of the Communists.' "

The San Francisco Examiner of May 18, also referring to Mayor Christopher, reported:

"The Mayor said that in his opinion last Friday's riot was Communist-directed and that for the most part, 'unknowing and misguided students' were innocent pawns of trained Communist agitators skilled in crowd control tactics."

Thomas Cahill, Chief of Police for the County and City of San Francisco, testified before the Committee on May 14 that his security unit has advised him that "a number of those who seemed to whip those people in the group (outside the hearing room) into a mob frenzy, were individuals who had been hostile and who had testified at the hearing."

Michael J. Maguire, San Francisco Police Inspector who was in charge of a police unit assigned to maintain order at the hearings, testified before the Committee the same day. The following exchange took place while he was on the witness stand:

"Committee Counsel: Did you...observe the activities among the young people who had been assembled here in the hall, by certain people who were known by you from confidential sources to be members of the Communist Party?

"Mr. Maguire. Yes, sir.

"Committee Counsel: Did you see agitational activities among the young people by Merle Brodsky, who was ejected twice from this committee hearing?

"Mr. Maguire. Yes, sir."

"Committee Counsel. Did you see agitational activities among the young people by Archie Brown, who likewise has been identified as a member of the Communist Party and who likewise has been twice ejected from this hearing room because of his disturbance of the proceedings?

"Mr. Maguire. Yes, sir."

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, who is certainly in a better position to know the truth about the San Francisco riots than anyone else in the country, prepared an official report on the riots, Communist Target--Youth," which was published as a document of this Committee last summer. In explaining why he had prepared this report, Mr. Hoover wrote: "...It is vitally important to set the record straight on the extent to which Communists were responsible for the disgraceful and riotous conditions which prevailed during the HUAC hearings. It is vitally important that not only the students involved in that incident, but also students throughout the Nation whom Communists hope to exploit in similar situations, recognize the Communist tactics which resulted in what experienced West Coast observers familiar with Communist strategy and tactics have termed the most successful Communist coup to occur in the San Francisco area in 25 years."

In his report, Mr. Hoover devoted five pages to factual material on just how the Communist Party went about planning the demonstrations and then carrying them to a successful conclusion. The evidence he presented is too extensive and detailed for me to quote or even summarize here. The following brief, generalized statements from his report, however, flatly contradict the "truth" advanced by The Washington Post and completely support the Committee film:

"An officer warned that fire hoses would have to be used if the crowd did not disperse, but the crowd, instigated by Communists who had maneuvered themselves into strategic positions, became more unruly." (P. 8).

"Immediately after the affair ended, the party's national leader, Gus Hall, congratulated the West Coast comrades for the intiative and leadership they displayed at all stages of the demonstrations." (P. 9).

"The Communists demonstrated in San Francisco just how powerful a weapon Communist infiltration is. They revealed how it is possible for only a few Communist agitators, using mob psychology, to turn peaceful demonstrations into riots." (P. 10).

"Looking at the riots and chaos Communists have created in other countries, many Americans point to the strength of our Nation and say 'It can't happen here. The Communist success in San Francisco in May 1960 proves that it can happen here." (PP 10-11).

Mr. Hoover also mentioned the riots in the course of major address he delivered on Oct. 18, 1960. He said in the address:

"The diabolical influence of communism on youth was manifested in the anti-American student demonstrations in Tokyo. It further was in evidence this year in Communist-inspired riots in San Francisco, where students were duped into disgraceful demonstrations against a congressional committee.

"These students were stooges of a sinister technique stimulated by clever Communist propagandists who remained quietly concealed in the background. These master technicians of conspiracy had planned for some time to use California college students as a 'front' for their nefarious operations. This outburst was typical of these cunning conspirators who constantly play active, behind-the-scene roles in fomenting civic unrest in every conceivable area of our society."

The second major charge The Washington Post has made against the Committee film is that it distorts the fact by attempting to represent the rioting as resulting from student violence which "required the San Francisco police to turn fire hoses on them and eject them by force from the City Hall."

You claim that the truth is that the San Francisco police "reacted with altogether needless ferocity" when some students "began to chant when they were denied admittance to the hearing room."

That is your claim. But what were the conclusions of every newspaper in San Francisco which had reporters on the scene during the riots? Here are a few excerpts of the truth as they found it:

San Francisco Examiner.

"The riot apparently was triggered shortly before 1:30 p.m. when the mob rushed the door of the Supervisors chambers.

"When all the seats in the chamber were filled, Patrolman Ralph Schaumleffel, on duty at the door, closed it, informing the crowd there were no more seats.

"The mob then climbed over the barricades and stormed the door, knocking Schaumleffel down.

"Then, the officer said, while he was on his back a student....grabbed the policeman's nightstick and hit him over the head with it.

"Inspector Mike Maguire of the Intelligence Detail then grabbed a fire hose and ordered it turned on." Saturday, May 14, 1960.

San Francisco News-Call Bulletin: "The hearing room was packed, and the mob in the corridors and rotunda was becoming more and more unruly.

"Judges in upstairs courtrooms were complaining the racket was interfering with due processes of law.

"Patrolman Ralph Schaumleffel, 33, standing guard, was trampled underfoot as a stampede to the hearing room began.

"One of the mob...wrested the policeman's billy club from his hand and walloped him on the head.

"Another kicked him in the groin.

"The mob smelled blood, and the riot was on." Saturday, May 14, 1960

San Francisco Chronicle:

"Friday afternoon's mob of 200--mostly students, but not all of them innocents in the art of mass demonstration--threatened to force its way into the Un-American Activities Committee meeting room against the orders and warning of the police. What, we wonder, does the concept of 'law and order' mean to these students? What do the sight of a policeman's uniform and the sound of his command mean? Apparently, to this mob, nothing but a challenge to get more stubborn and defiant.

"The performance by college and university students in so ill-mannered, boorish and obviously dangerous a way gets no sympathy from us as an exercise of youth groping to understand and improve the democratic process." Editorial, May 16, 1960.

Perhaps the most interesting of all the news accounts of the riot is one by the students themselves, describing events which occurred during the first day of the hearings. The official University of California student newspaper. The Daily Californian, stated on page one, Friday, May 13:

"Fights and violence erupted at the House of Un-American Activities Committee yesterday in San Francisco...much of it sparked by the University students."

Attempting to support your claim that the students were not guilty of violence, you quoted the following statement from an article by one Paul Jacobs, which was published in The Reporter magazine of Nov. 24, 1960:

"After the riots were over the sheriff of San Francisco County said: "There was no act of physical aggression on the part of the students.'"

On Dec. 6, 1960, Sheriff Matthew C. Carberry, sheriff of the County and City of San Francisco, issued the following statement concerning the above quote attributed to him by Mr. Jacobs:

"I did not make that statement. I do not know the author of the article, Paul Jacobs, and have never spoken to him and have never been interviewed by him."

"I was on the scene on Thursday and Friday (May 12 and 13) up to luncheon time when I went for a luncheon conference with the Chairman of the Committee, Mr. Willis. The disorders took place during luncheon and I was in no position to know anything about them.

"I did not make that statement."

In summary, the findings which resulted from the "diligent inquiry" of The Washington Post are contradicted by FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover; the Mayor, Sheriff and a police inspector of San Francisco; the San Francisco Chronicle, Examiner, News-Call Bulletin and The Daily Californian; by Judge Albert Axelrod and also, of course, by the moving picture record of exactly what happened in San Francisco, filmed not by the Committee on Un-American Activities but by TV stations KRON and KPIX of that city.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed)
Francis E. Walter

On December 28, 1960, the day it printed the exchange of letters with Congressman Walter, the Washington Post printed its fifth editorial on the House Committee and its film:

"DISTORTIONS"

In his letters printed elsewhere in this newspaper today, Rep. Francis Walter asserts that the film Operation Abolition 'contains absolutely no distortions" and that the staff member who had admitted it contained such defects "had not himself used the word 'distortions.'" In a television show over KCOP-TV, Los Angeles, a teaching assistant at the University of California referred to distortions in the film. William Wheeler, an investigator for the House Un-American Activities Committee taking part in the program asked, "What are you trying to prove by this?" The following exchange then took place:

Mr. White: That the film has inaccuracies and distortions.

Mr. Wheeler: I've admitted that.

Mr. White: You've admitted that?

Mr. Wheeler: Certainly.

Mr. Walter offers some carefully selected quotes from the San Francisco press to refute this newspaper's assertion that the San Francisco police 'reacted with altogether needless ferocity." Like the film Operation Abolition itself, he omits all the material showing the other side of the picture. For instance San Francisco Chronicle reporter Geroge Draper wrote:

> I did not see any of the kids actually fighting with the police. Their resistance was more passive. They would simply go limp and be manhandled out of the building . . . I saw one slightly built lad being carried by two husky officers. One held the boy's shirt, the other had him by the feet. He was struggling, but he was no match for the two bigger men. Then from nowhere appeared a third officer. He ran up to the slender boy firmly held by the other two officers and clubbed him three times on the head. You could hear the hollow smack of the club striking. The boy went limp and was carried out.

Nor does Mr. Walter mention the report of another eyewitness, Mel Wax, a special correspondent of the New York Post.

> Never, in 20 years as a reporter, have I seen such brutality . . . San Francisco police hurled women down the staircase, spines bumping on each marble stair.

To Mr. Walter, it is an admitted but "decidedly minor" distortion in the film that Harry Bridges was represented as being on the scene just before the rioting broke out when, in point of fact, he did not arrive until after it was all over. "Honest" this error may have been; but it was more than unfortunate. For it contributed considerably to the deceptive and distorted message of the film that the student demonstration was inspired and led by Communists.

Communists may have tried to claim the credit which Mr. Walter accords them. Unquestionably the affair got out of hand, and no one condones the rowdiness that ensued. But the truth is that the demonstration was inspired by distaste for the Un-American Activities Committee. And it was led by students who intended nothing more than an orderly protest--an inalienable political right in the United States.

THE UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT: TWO VIEWS OF THE COMMITTEE'S WORK

Throughout the history of the United States, the Supreme Court has often been called upon to render its judgement in those areas where government security and individual freedom are in conflict. Since the inception of the Un-American Activities Committee, in 1938, the nation's high court has ruled on the constitutionality of the Committee's work a number of times Some of the more recent decisions which touch upon the question of governmental investigation of individual loyalty include Sweezy v. New Hampshire, NAACP v. Alabama, Uphaus v. Wyman, Watkins v. United States, and Barenblatt v. United States. The last two cases are of particular importance because they specifically pertain to the work of the Un-American Activities Committee, and because they are the most recent rulings in this area.

The Watkins decision, handed down on June 17,1957, ruled that the Committee was, in fact, overstepping its bounds. Chief Justice Warren delivered the opinion of the Court. Justices Burton and Whittaker did not participate in the decision, Justice Frankfurter concurred in a separate opinion, and Justice Clark dissented. Following are excerpts from the majority decision, which reviews the Committee's history, as well as discusses its current practices:

We start with several basic premises on which there is general agreement. The power of the Congress to conduct investigations is inherent in the legislative process. That power is broad. It encompasses inquiries concerning the administration of existing laws as well as proposed or possibly needed statutes. It includes surveys of defects in our social, economic or political system for the purpose of enabling the Congress to remedy them. It comprehends probes into departments of the Federal Government to expose corruption, inefficiency or waste. But broad as is this power of inquiry, it is not unlimited. There is no general authority to expose the private affairs of individuals without justification in terms of the functions of the Congress. This was freely conceded by the Solicitor General in his argument of this case. Nor is the Congress a law enforcement or trial agency. These are functions of the executive and judicial departments of government. No inquiry is an end in itself; it must be related to and in furtherance of a legitimate task of the Congress. Investigations conducted solely for the personal aggrandizement of the investigators or to "punish" those investigated are indefensible.

It is unquestionable the duty of all citizens to cooperate with the Congress in its efforts to obtain the facts needed for intelligent legislative action. It is their unremitting obligation to respond to subpoenas, to respect the dignity of the Congress and its committees and to testify fully with respect to matters within the province of proper investigation. This, of course, assumes that the constitutional rights of witnesses will be respected by the Congress as they are in a court of justice. The Bill of Rights is applicable to investigations as to all forms of governmental action. Witnesses cannot be compelled to give evidence against themselves. They cannot be subjected to unreasonable search and seizure. Nor can the First Amendment freedoms of speech, press, religion, or political belief and association be abridged.

In the decade following World War II, there appeared a new kind of congressional inquiry unknown in prior periods of American history. Principally this was the result of the various investigations into the threat of subversion of the United States Government, but other subjects of congressional interest also contributed to the changed scene. This new phase of legislative inquiry involved a broad-scale intrusion into the lives and affairs of private citizens. It brought before the courts novel questions of the appropriate limits of congressional inquiry. Prior cases, like Kilbourn, McGrain and Sinclair, had defined the scope of investigative power in terms of the inherent limitations of the sources of that power. In the more recent cases, the emphasis shifted to problems of accommodating the interest of the Government with the rights and privileges of individuals. The central theme was the application of the Bill of Rights as a restraint upon the assertion of governmental power in this form.

It was during this period that the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination was frequently invoked and recognized as a legal limit upon the authority of a committee to require that a witness answer its questions. Some early doubts as to the applicability of that privilege before a legislative committee never matured. When the matter reached this Court, the Government did not challenge in any way that the Fifth Amendment protection was available to the witness, and such a challenge could not have prevailed. It confined its argument to the character of the answers sought and to the adequacy of the claim of privilege.

A far more difficult task evolved from the claim by witnesses that the committees' interrogations were infringements upon the freedoms of the First Amendment. Clearly, an investigation is subject to the command that the Congress shall make no law abridging freedom of speech or press or assembly. While it is true that there is no statute to be reviewed, and that an investigation is not a law, nevertheless an investigation is part of lawmaking. It is justified solely as an adjunct to the legislative process. The First Amendment may be invoked against infringement of the protected freedoms by law or by law-making.

Abuses of the investigative process may imperceptibly lead to abridgment of protected freedoms. The mere summoning of a witness and compelling him to testify against his will, about his beliefs, expressions or associations is a measure of governmental interference. And when those forced revelations concern matters that are unorthodox, unpopular, or even hateful to the general public, the reaction in the life of the witness may be disastrous. This effect is even more harsh when it is past beliefs, expressions or associations that are disclosed and judged by current standards rather than those contemporary with the matters exposed. Nor does the witness alone suffer the consequences. Those who are identified by witnesses and thereby placed in the same glare of publicity are equally subject to public stigma, scorn and obloquy. Beyond that, there is the more subtle and immeasurable effect upon those who tend to adhere to the most orthodox and uncontroversial views and associations in order to avoid a similar fate at some future time. That this impact is partly the result of non-governmental activity by private persons cannot relieve the investigators of their responsibility for initiating the reaction.

The Court recognized the restraints of the Bill of Rights upon congressional investigations in United States v. Rumely. The magnitude and complexity of the problem of applying the First Amendment to that case led the Court to construe narrowly the resolution describing the committee's authority. It was concluded that, when First Amendment rights are threatened, the delegation of power to the committee must be clearly revealed in its charter.

Accommodation of the congressional need for particular information with the individual and personal interest in privacy is an arduous and delicate task for any court. We do not underestimate the difficulties that would attend such an undertaking. It is manifest that despite the adverse effects which follow upon compelled disclosure of private matters, not all such inquiries are barred. Kilbourn v. Thompson teaches that such an investigation into individual affairs is invalid if unrelated to any legislative purpose. That is beyond the powers conferred upon the Congress in the Constitution. United States v. Rumely makes it plain that the mere semblance of legislative purpose would not justify an inquiry in the face of the Bill of Rights. The critical element is the existence of, and the weight to be ascribed to, the interest of the Congress in demanding disclosures from an unwilling witness. We cannot simply assume, however, that every congressional investigation is justified by a public need that overbalances any private rights affected. To do so would be to abdicate the responsibility placed by the Constitution upon the judiciary to insure that the Congress does not unjustifiably encroach upon an individual's right to privacy nor abridge his liberty of speech, press, religion or assembly.

Petitioner has earnestly suggested that the difficult questions of protecting these rights from infringement by legislative inquiries can be surmounted in this case because there was no public purpose served in his interrogation. His conclusion is based upon the thesis that the Subcommittee was engaged in a program of exposure for the sake of exposure. The sole purpose of the inquiry, he contends, was to bring down upon himself and others the violence of public reaction because of their past beliefs expressions and associations. In support of this argument, petitioner has marshalled an impressive array of evidence that some Congressmen have believed that such was their duty, or part of it.

We have no doubt that there is no congressional power to expose for the sake of exposure. The public is, of course, entitled to be informed concerning the workings of its government. That cannot be inflated into a general power to expose where the predominant result can only be an invasion of the private rights of individuals. But a solution to our problem is not to be found in testing the motives of committee members for this purpose. Such is not our function. Their motives alone would not vitiate an investigation which had been instituted by a House of Congress if that assembly's legislative purpose is being served.

Petitioner's contentions do point to a situation of particular significance from the standpoint of the constitutional limitations upon congressional investigations. The theory of a committee inquiry is that the committee members are serving as the representatives of the parent assembly in collecting information for a legislative purpose. Their function is to act as the eyes and ears of the Congress in obtaining facts upon which the full legislature can act. To carry out this mission, committees and subcommittees, sometimes one Congressman, are endowed with the full power of the Congress to compel testimony. In this case, only two men exercised that authority in demanding information over petitioner's protest.

An essential premise in this situation is that the House or Senate shall have instructed the committee members on what they are to do with the power delegated to them. It is the responsibility of the Congress, in the first instance, to insure that compulsory process is used only in furtherance of a legislative purpose. That requires that the instructions to an investigating committee spell out that group's jurisdiction and purpose with sufficient particularity. Those instructions are embodied in the authorizing resolution. That document is the committee's charter. Broadly drafted and loosely worded, however, such resolutions can leave tremendous latitude to the discretion of the investigators. The more vague the committee's charter is, the greater becomes the possibility that the committee's specific actions are not in conformity with the will of the parent House of Congress.

The authorizing resolution of the Un-American Activities Committee was adopted in 1938 when a select committee, under the chairmanship of Representative Dies, was created. Several years later, the Committee was made a standing organ of the House with the same mandate. It defines the Committee's authority as follows:

> "The Committee on Un-American Activities, as a whole or by subcommittee, is authorized to make from time to time investigations of (i) the extent, character, and objects of un-American propaganda activities in the United States, (ii) the diffusion within the United States of subversive and Un-American propaganda that is instigated from foreign countries or of a domestic origin and attacks the principle of the form of government as guaranteed by our Constitution, and (iii) all other questions in relation thereto that would aid Congress in any necessary remedial legislation."

It would be difficult to imagine a less explicit authorizing resolution. Who can define the meaning of "un-American"? What is that single, solitary "principle of the form of government as guaranteed by our Constitution"? There is no need to dwell upon the language, however. At one time, perhaps, the resolution might have been read narrowly to confine the Committee to the subject of propaganda. The events that have transpired in the fifteen years before the interrogation of petitioner make such a construction impossible at this date.

The members of the Committee have clearly demonstrated that they did not feel themselves restricted in any way to propaganda in the narrow sense of the word. Unquestionably the Committee conceived of its task in the grand view of its name. Un-American activities were its target, no matter how or where manifested. Notwithstanding the broad purview of the Committee's experience, the House of Representatives repeatedly approved its continuation. Five times it extended the life of the special committee. Then it made the group a standing committee of the House. A year later, the Committee's charter was embodied in the Legislative Reorganization Act. On five occasions, at the beginning of sessions of Congress, it has made the authorizing resolution part of the rules of the House. On innumerable occasions, it has passed appropriation bills to allow the Committee to continue its efforts.

Combining the language of the resolution with the construction it has been given, it is evident that the preliminary control of the Committee exercised by the House of Representatives is slight or non-existent. No one could reasonably deduce from the charter the kind of investigation that the Committee was directed to make. As a result, we are asked to engage in a process of retroactive rationalization. Looking backward from the events that transpired, we are asked to uphold the Committee's actions unless it appears that they were clearly not authorized by the charter. As a corollary to this inverse approach, the Government urges that we must view the matter hospitably to the power of the Congress--that if there is any legislative purpose which might have been furthered by the kind of disclosure sought, the witness must be punished for withholding it. No doubt every reasonable indulgence of legality must be accorded to the actions of a coordinate branch of our Government. But such deference cannot yield to an unnecessary and unreasonable dissipation of precious constitutional freedoms.

The Government contends that the public interest at the core of the investigations of the Un-American Activities Committee is the need by the Congress to be informed of efforts to overthrow the Government by force and violence so that adequate legislative safeguards can be erected. From this core, however, the Committee can radiate outward infinitely to any topic thought to be related in some way to armed insurrection. The outer reaches of this domain are known only by the content of "un-American activities." Remoteness of subject can be aggravated by a probe for a depth of detail even farther removed from any basis of legislative action. A third dimension is added when the investigators turn their attention to the past to collect minutiae on remote topics, on the hypothesis that the past may reflect upon the present.

The consequences that flow from this situation are manifold. In the first place, a reviewing court is unable to make the kind of judgment made by the Court in United States v. Rumely, supra. The Committee is allowed, in essence, to define its own authority, to choose the direction and focus of its activities. In deciding what to do with the power that has been conferred upon them, members of the Committee may act pursuant to motives that seem to them to be the highest. Their decisions, nevertheless, can lead to ruthless exposure of private lives in order to gather data that is neither desired by the Congress nor useful to it. Yet it is impossible in this circumstance, with constitutional freedoms in jeopardy to declare that the Committee has ranged beyond the area committed to it by its parent assembly because the boundaries are so nebulous.

More important and more fundamental than that, however, it insulates the House that has authorized the investigation from the witnesses who are subjected to the sanctions of compulsory process. There is a wide gulf between the responsibility for the use of investigative power and the actual exercise of that power. This is an especially vital consideration in assuring respect for constitutional liberties. Protected freedoms should not be placed in danger in the absence of a clear determination by the House or the Senate that a particular inquiry is justified by a specific legislative need.

We are mindful of the complexities of modern government and the ample scope that must be left to the Congress as the sole constitutional depository of legislative power. Equally mindful are we of the indispensable function, in the exercise of that power, of congressional investigations. The conclusions we have reached in this case will not prevent the Congress, through its committees, from obtaining any information it needs for the proper fulfillment of its role in our scheme of government. The legislature is free to determine the kinds of data that should be collected. It is only those investigations that are conducted by use of compulsory process that give rise to a need to protect the rights of individuals against illegal encroachment. That protection can be readily achieved through procedures which prevent the separation of power from responsibility and which provide the constitutional requisites of fairness for witnesses. A measure of added care on the part of the House and the Senate in authorizing the use of compulsory process and by their committees in exercising that power would suffice. That is a small price to pay if it serves to uphold the principles of limited, constitutional government without constricting the power of the Congress to inform itself.

Two years after the Watkins decision had been handed down, on June 8, 1959, the Supreme Court announced its ruling on a petition for certiorari in the case of Lloyd Barenblatt, a former student at the University of Michigan, and a faculty member at Vassar College.

In this case, the Court modified its earlier decision which had held the Un-American Activities Committee to be acting unconstitutionally. The Court now introduced the concept of balancing individual and government interests, and ruled here that the government interests were of such importance as to override the individual's interests. This case stands today as the Court's position on the Committee's work. Additional cases are now pending, and several decisions are expected within the next few months.

In a 5-4 dedcision, Justice Harlan delivered the majority opinion. Following are excerpts from this opinion:

Once more the Court is required to resolve the conflicting constitutional claims of congressional power and of an individual's right to resist its exercise. The congressional power in question concerns the internal process of Congress in moving within its legislative domain; it involves the utilization of its committees to secure "testimony needed to enable it efficiently to exercise a legislative function belonging to it under the Constitution." The power of inquiry has been employed by Congress throughout our history, over the whole range of the national interests concerning which Congress might legislate or decide upon due investigation not to legislate; it has similarly been utilized in determining what to appropriate from the national purse, or whether to appropriate. The scope of the power of inquiry, in short, is as penetrating and farreaching as the potential power to enact and appropriate under the Constitution.

Broad as it is, the power is not, however, without limitations. Since Congress may only investigate into those areas in which it may potentially legislate or appropriate, it cannot inquire into matters which are within the exclusive province of one of the other branches of the Government. Lacking the judicial power given to the Judiciary, it cannot inquire into matters that are exclusively the concern of the Judiciary. Neither can it supplant the Executive in what exclusively belongs to the Executive. And the Congress, in common with all branches of the Government, must exercise its powers subject to the limitations placed by the Constitution on governmental action, more particularly in the context of this case the relevant limitations of the Bill of Rights.

The congressional power of inquiry, its range and scope, and an individual's duty in relation to it, must be viewed in proper perspective. The power and the right of resistance to it are to be judged in the concrete, not on the basis of abstractions. In the present case congressional efforts to learn the extent of a nation-wide, indeed world-wide problem have brought one of its investigating committees into the field of education. Of course, broadly viewed, inquiries cannot be made into the teaching that is pursued in any of our educational institutions. When academic teaching-freedom and its corollary learning-freedom, so essential to the well-being of the Nation, are claimed, this Court will always be on the alert against intrusion by Congress into this constitutionally protected domain. But this does not mean that the Congress is precluded from interrogating a witness merely because he is a teacher. An educational institution is not a constitutional sanctuary from inquiry into matters that may otherwise be within the constitutional legislative domain merely for the reason that inquiry is made of someone within its walls.

SUBCOMMITTEE'S AUTHORITY TO COMPEL TESTIMONY

At the outset it should be noted that Rule XI authorized this Subcommittee to compel testimony within the framework of the investigative authority conferred on the Un-American Activities Committee. Petitioner contends that Watkins v. United States, nevertheless held the grant of this power in all circumstances ineffective because of the vagueness of Rule XI in delineating the Committee jurisdiction to which its exercise was to be appurtenant.

The Watkins case cannot properly be read as standing for such a proposition. A principal contention in Watkins was that the refusals to answer were justified because the requirement of 2 U.S.C. - 192 that the questions asked be 'pertinent to the question under inquiry' had not been satisfied. This Court reversed the conviction solely on that ground, holding that Watkins had not been adequately apprised of the subject matter of the Subcommittee's investigation or the pertinency thereto of the questions he refused to answer. In so deciding the Court drew upon Rule XI only as one of the facets in the total mise en scène in its search for the "question under inquiry" in that particular investigation. The Court, in other words, was not dealing with Rule XI at large, and indeed in effect stated that no such issue was before it, That the vagueness of Rule XI was not alone determinative is also shown by the Court's further statement that aside from the Rule "the remarks of the chairman or members of the committee, or even the nature of the proceedings themselves, might sometimes make the topic clear." In short, while Watkins was critical of Rule XI, it did not involve the broad and inflexible holding petitioner now attribututes to it.

Petitioner also contends, independently of Watkins, that the vagueness of Rule XI deprived the Subcommittee of the right to compel testimony in this investigation into Communist activity. We cannot agree with this contention, which in its furthest reach would mean that the House Un-American Activities Committee under its existing authority has no right to compel testimony in any circumstances. Granting the vagueness of the Rule, we may not read it in isolation from its long history in the House of Representatives. Just as legislation is often given meaning by the gloss of legislative reports administrative interpretation, and long usage, so the proper meaning of an authorization to a congressional committee is not to be derived alone from its abstract terms unrelated to the definite content furnished them by the course of congressional actions. The Rule comes to us with a "persuasive gloss of legislative history," which shows beyond doubt that in pursuance of its legislative concerns in the domain of "national security" the House has clothed the Un-American Activities Committee with pervasive authority to investigate Communist activities in this country.

The essence of that history can be briefly stated. The Un-American Activities Committee, originally known as the Dies Committee, was first established by the House in 1938. The Committee was principally a consequence of concern over the activities of the German-American Bund, whose members were suspected of allegiance to Hitler Germany, and of the Communist Party, supposed by many to be under the domination of the Soviet Union. From the beginning, without interruption to the present time, and with the undoubted knowledge and approval of the House, the Committee has devoted a major part of its energies to the investigation of Communist activities. More particularly, in 1947 the Committee announced a wide-range program in this field, pursuant to which during the years 1948 to 1952 it conducted diverse inquiries into such alleged Communist activities as espionage; efforts to learn atom bomb secrets; infiltration into labor, farmer, veteran, professional, youth, and motion picture groups; and in addition held a number of hearings upon various legislative proposals to curb Communist activities.

In the context of these unremitting pursuits, the House has steadily continued the life of the Committee at the commencement of each new Congress; it has never narrowed the powers of the Committee, whose authority has remained throughout identical with that contained in Rule XI; and it has continuingly supported the Committee's activities with substantial appropriations. Beyond this, the Committee was raised to the level of a standing committee of the House in 1945, it having been but a special committee prior to that time.

In light of this long and illuminating history it can hardly be seriously argued that the investigation of Communist activities generally, and the attendant use of compulsory process, was beyond the purview of the Committee's intended authority under Rule XI.

We are urged, however, to construe Rule XI so as at least to exclude the field of education from the Committee's compulsory authority. Two of the four dissenting judges below relied entirely, the other two alternatively, on this ground. The contention is premised on the course we took in United States v. Rumely, where in order to avoid constitutional issues we construed narrowly the authority of the congressional committee there involved. We cannot follow that route here, for this is not a case where Rule XI has to "speak for itself, since Congress put no gloss upon it at the time of its passage," nor one where the subsequent history of the Rule has the "infirmity of post litem motam, selfserving declarations."

To the contrary, the legislative gloss on Rule XI is again compelling. Not only is there no indication that the House ever viewed the field of education as being outside the Committee's authority under Rule XI, but the legislative history affirmatively evinces House approval of this phase of the Committee's work. During the first year of its activities, 1938, the Committee heard testimony on alleged Communist activities at Brooklyn College, N. Y. The following year it conducted similar hearings relating to the American Student Union and the Teachers Union. The field of "Communist influences in education" was one of the items contained in the Committee's 1947 program. Other investigations including education took place in 1952 and 1953. And in 1953, after the Committee had instituted the investigation involved in this case, the desirability of investigating Communism in education was specifically discussed during consideration of its appropriation for that year, which after controversial debate was approved.

In this framework of the Committee's history we must conclude that its legislative authority to conduct the inquiry presently under consideration is unassailable, and that independently of whatever bearing the broad scope of Rule XI may have on the issue of 'pertinency' in a given investigation into Communist activities, as in Watkins, the Rule cannot be said to be constitutionally infirm on the score of vagueness. The constitutional permissibility of that authority otherwise is a matter to be discussed later.

PERTINENCY CLAIM

Undeniably a conviction for contempt cannot stand unless the questions asked are pertinent to the subject matter of the investigation. But the factors which led us to rest decision on this ground in Watkins were very different from those involved here.

In Watkins the petitioner had made specific objection to the Subcommittee's questions on the ground of pertinency; the question under inquiry had not been disclosed in any illuminating manner; and the questions asked the petitioner were not only amorphous on their face, but in some instances clearly foreign to the alleged subject matter of the investigation--"Communism in labor."

In contrast, petitioner in the case before us raised no objections on the ground of pertinency at the time any of the questions were put to him. It is true that the memorandum which petitioner brought with him to the Subcommittee hearing contained the statement, "to ask me whether I am or have been a member of the Communist Party may have dire consequences. I might wish to . . . challenge the pertinency of the question to the investigation," and at another point quoted from this Court's opinion in Jones v. Securities & Exchange, language relating to a witness; right to be informed of the pertinency of questions asked him by an administrative agency. These statements cannot, however, be accepted as the equivalent of a pertinency objection. At best they constituted but a contemplated objection to questions still unasked, and buried as they were in the context of petitioner's general challenge to the power of the Subcommittee they can hardly be considered adequate, within the meaning of what was said in Watkins, supra, to trigger what would have been the Subcommittee's reciprocal obligation had it been faced with a pertinency objection.

We need not, however, rest decision on petitioner's failure to object on this score, for here "pertinency" was made to appear "with undisputable clarity." First of all, it goes without saying that the scope of the Committee's authority was for the House, not a witness to determine, subject to the ultimate reviewing responsibility of this Court. What we deal with here is whether petitioner was sufficiently apprised of "the topic under inquiry" thus authorized "and the connective reasoning whereby the precise questions asked relate to it." In light of his prepared memorandum of constitutional objections there can be no doubt that this petitioner was well aware of the Subcommittee's authority and purpose to question him as it did. In addition the other sources of this information which we recognized in Watkins, leave no room for a 'pertinency" objection on this record. The subject matter of the inquiry had been identified at the commencement of the investigation as Communist infiltration into the field of education. Just prior to petitioner's appearance before the Subcommittee, the scope of the day's hearings had been announced as 'in the main communism in education and the experiences and background in the party by Francis X. T. Crowley. It will deal with activities in Michigan, Boston, and in some small degree, New York." Petitioner had heard the Subcommittee interrogate the witness Crowley along the same lines as he, petitioner, was evidently to be questioned, and had listened to Crowley's testimony identifying him as a former member of an alleged Communist student organization at the University of Michigan while they both were in attendance there. Further, petitioner had stood mute in the face of the Chairman's statement as to why he had been called as a witness by the Subcommittee. And, lastly, unlike Watkins, petitioner refused to answer questions as to his own Communist Party affiliations, whose pertinency of course was clear beyond doubt.

Petitioner's contentions on this aspect of the case cannot be sustained.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONTENTIONS.

Our function, at this point, is purely one of constitutional adjudication in the particular case and upon the particular record before us, not to pass judgment upon the general wisdom or efficacy of the activities of this Committee in a vexing and complicated field.

The precise constitutional issue confronting us is whether the Subcommittee's inquiry into petitioner's past or present membership in the Communist Party transgressed the provisions of the First Amendment, which of course reach and limit congressional investigations.

The Court's past cases establish sure guides to decision. Undeniable, the First Amendment in some circumstances protects an individual from being compelled to disclose his associational relationships. However, the protections of the First Amendment, unlike a proper claim of the privilege against self-incrimination under the Fifth Amendment, do not afford a witness the right to resist inquiry in all circumstances. Where First Amendment rights are asserted to bar governmental interrogation resolution of the issue always involves a balancing by the courts of the competing private and public interests at stake in the particular circumstances shown. These principles were recognized in theWatkins case, where, in speaking of the First Amendment in relation to congressional inquiries, we said: "It is manifest that despite the adverse effects which follow upon compelled disclosure of private matters, not all such inquiries are barred. . . The critical element is the existence of, and the weight to be ascribed to, the interest of the Congress in demanding disclosures from an unwilling witness." More recently in National Association for the Advancement of Colored People v. Alabama, we applied the same principles in judging state action claimed to infringe rights of association assured by the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, and stated that the " 'subordinating interest of the State must be compelling' " in order to overcome the individual constitutional rights at stake. In light of these principles we now consider petitioner's First Amendment claims.

The first question is whether this investigation was related to a valid legislative purpose, for Congress may not constitutionally require an individual to disclose his political relationships or other private affairs except in relation to such a purpose.

That Congress has wide power to legislate in the field of Communist activity in this Country, and to conduct appropriate investigations in aid thereof, is hardly debatable. The existence of such power has never been questioned by this Court, and it is sufficient to say, without particularization, that Congress has enacted or considered in this field a wide range of legislative measures, not a few of which have stemmed from recommendations of the very= Committee whose actions have been drawn in question here. In the last analysis this power rests on the right of self-preservation, "the ultimate value of any society." Justification for its exercise in turn rests on the long and widely accepted view that the tenets of the Communist Party include the ultimate overthrow of the Government of the United States by force and violence, a view which has been given formal expression by the Congress.

On these premises, this Court in its constitutional adjudications has consistently refused to view the Communist Party as an ordinary political party, and has upheld federal legislation aimed at the Communist problem which in a different context would certainly have raised constitutional issues of the gravest character. On the same premises this Court has upheld under the Fourteenth Amendment state legislation requiring those occupying or seeking public office to disclaim knowing membership in any organization advocating overthrow of the Government by force and violence, which legislation none can avoid seeing was aimed at membership in the Communist Party. Similarly, in other areas, this Court has recognized the close nexus between the Communist Party and violent overthrow of government. To suggest that because the Communist Party may also sponsor peaceable political reforms the constitutional issues before us should now be judged as if that Party were just an ordinary political party from the standpoint of national security, is to ask this Court to blind itself to world affairs which have determined the whole course of our national policy since the close of World War II, affairs to which Judge Learned Hand gave vivid expression in his opinion in United States v. Dennis, and to the vast burdens which these conditions have entailed for the entire Nation.

We think that investigatory power in this domain is not to be denied Congress solely because the field of education is involved. Nothing in the prevailing opinions in Sweezy v. New Hampshire, stands for a contrary view. The vice existing there was that the questioning of Sweezy, who had not been shown ever to have been connected with the Communist Party, as to the contents of a lecture he had given at the University of New Hampshire, and as to his connections with the Progressive Party, then on the ballot as a normal political party in some 26 States, was too far removed from the premises on which the constitutionality of the State's investigation had to depend to withstand attack under the Fourteenth Amendment. This is a very different thing from inquiring into the extent to which the Communist Party has succeeded in infiltrating into our universities, or elsewhere, persons and groups committed to furthering the objective of overthrow. Indeed we do not understand petitioner here to suggest that Congress in no circumstances may inquire into Communist activity in the field of education. Rather, his position is in effect that this particular investigation was aimed not at the revolutionary aspects but at the theoretical classroom discussion of communism.

In our opinion this position rests on a too constricted view of the nature of the investigatory process, and is not supported by a fair assessment of the record before us. An investigation of advocacy of or preparation for overthrow certainly embraces the right to identify a witness as a member of the Communist Party, and to inquire into the various manifestations of the Party's tenets. The strict requirements of a prosecution under the Smith Act, are not the measure of the permissible scope of a congressional investigation into "overthrow," for of necessity the investigatory process must proceed step by step. Nor can it fairly be concluded that this investigation was directed at controlling what is being taught at our universities rather than at overthrow. The statement of the Subcommittee Chairman at the opening of the investigation evinces no such intention, and so far as this record reveals nothing thereafter transpired which would justify our holding that the thrust of the investigation later changed. The record discloses considerable testimony concerning the foreign domination and revolutionary purposes and efforts of the Communist Party. That there was also testimony on the abstract philosophical level does not detract from the dominant theme of this investigation--Communist infiltration furthering the alleged ultimate purpose of overthrow. And certainly the conclusion would not be justified that the questioning of petitioner would have exceeded permissible bounds had he not shut off the Subcommittee at the threshold.

Nor can we accept the further contention that this investigation should not be deemed to have beem in furtherance of a legislative purpose because the true objective of the Committee and of the Congress was purely "exposure." So long as Congress acts in pursuance of its constitutional power, the Judiciary lacks authority to intervene on the basis of the motives which spurred the exercise of that power."It is, of course, true," as was said in McCray v. United States, "that if there be no authority in the judiciary to restrain a lawful exercise of power by another department of the government, where a wrong motive or purpose has impelled to the exertion of the power, that abuses of a power conferred may be temporarily effectual. The remedy for this, however, lies, not in the abuse by the judicial authority of its functions, but in the people, upon whom, after all, under our institutions, reliance must be placed for the correction of abuses committed in the exercise of a lawful power." These principles of course apply as well to committee investigations into the need for legislation as to the enactments which such investigations may produce. Thus, in stating in the Watkins case that "there is no congressional power to expose for the sake of exposure," we at the same time declined to inquire into the "motives of committee members," and recognized that their "motives alone would not vitiate an investigation which had been instituted by a House of Congress if that assembly's legislative purpose is being served." Having scrutinized this record we cannot say that the unanimous panel of the Court of Appeals which first considered this case was wrong in concluding that "the primary purposes of the inquiry were in aid of legislative processes." Certainly this is not a case like Kilbourn v. Thompson, where "the House of Representatives not only exceeded the limit of its own authority, but assumed a power which could only be properly exercised by another branch of the government, because it was in its nature clearly judicial." The constitutional legislative power of Congress in this instance is beyond question.

Finally, the record is barren of other factors which in themselves might sometimes lead to the conclusion that the individual interests at stake were not subordinate to those of the state. There is no indication in this record that the Subcommittee was attempting to pillory witnesses. Nor did petitioner's appearance as a witness follow from indiscriminate dragnet procedures, lacking in probable cause for belief that he possessed information which might be ehlpful to the Subcommittee. And the relevancy of the questions put to him by the Subcommittee is not open to doubt.

We conclude that the balance between the individual and the governmental interests here at stake must be struck in favor of the latter, and that therefore the provisions of the First Amendment have not been offended.

We hold that petitioner's conviction for contempt of Congress discloses no infirmity, and that the judgment of the Court of Appeals must be affirmed.

Dissenting in Barenblatt decision were Chief Justice Warren and Justices Black, Douglas, and Brennan. The following excerpt from their opinion, written by Justice Black, indicates the current minority position on the court:

The First Amendment says in no equivocal language that Congress shall pass no law abridging freedom of speech, press, assembly or petition. The activities of this Committee, authorized by Congress, do precisely that, through exposure, obloquy and public scorn. The Court does not really deny this fact but relies on a combination of three reasons for permitting the infringement:
(A) The notion that despite the First Amendment's command Congress can abridge speech, and association if this Court decides that the governmental interest in abridging speech is greater than an individual's interest in exercising that freedom, (B) the Government's right to "preserve itself," (C) the fact that the Committee is only after Communists or suspected Communists in this investigation.

(A) I do not agree that laws directly abridging First Amendment freedoms can be justified by a congressional or judicial balancing process. There are, of course, cases suggesting that a law which primarily regulates conduct but which might also indirectly affect speech can be upheld if the effect on speech can be upheld if the effect on speech is minor in relation to the need for control of the conduct. With these cases I agree. Typical of them are Cantwell v. Connecticut, and Schneider v. Irvington. Both of these involved the right of a city to control its streets. In Cantwell, a man had been convicted of breach of the peace for playing a phonograph on the street. He defended on the ground that he was disseminating religious views and could not, therefore, be stopped. We upheld his defense, but in so doing we pointed out that the city did have substantial power over conduct on the streets even where this power might to some extent affect speech. A State, we said, might "by general and non-discriminatory legislation regulate the times, the places, and the manner of soliciting upon its streets and holding meetings thereon." But even such laws governing conduct, we emplasized, must be tested, though only by a balancing process, if they indirectly affect ideas. On one side of the balance, we pointed out, is the interest of the United States in seeing that its fundamental law protecting freedom of communication is not abridged; on the other the obvious interest of the State to regulate conduct within its boundaries. In Cantwell we held that the need to control the streets could not justify the restriction made on speech. We stressed the fact that where a man had a right to be on a street, "he had a right peacefully to impart his views to others." Similar views were expressed in Schneider, which concerned ordinances prohibiting the distribution of handbills to prevent littering. We forbade application of such ordinances when they affected literature designed to spread ideas. There were other ways, we said, to protect the city from littering which would not sacrifice the right of the people to be informed. In so holding, we, of course, fou d it necessary to "weight the circumstances." But we did not in Schneider, any more than in Cantwell, even remotely suggest that a law directly aimed at curtailing speech and political persuasion could be saved through a balancing process. Neither these cases, nor any others, can be read as allowing legislative bodies to pass laws abridging freedom of speech, press and association merely because of hostility to views peacefully expressed in a place where the speaker had a right to be. Rule XI, on its face and as here applied, since it attempts inquiry into beliefs, not action--ideas and associations, not conduct, does just that.

To apply the Court's balancing test under such circumstances is to read the First Amendment to say "Congress shall pass no law abridging freedom of speech, press, assembly and petition, unless Congress and the Supreme Court reach the joint conclusion that on balance the interests of the Government in stifling these freedoms is greater than the interestvof the people in having them exercised." This is closely akin to the notion that neither the First Amendment nor any other provision of the Bill of Rights should be enforced unless the Court believes it is reasonable to do so. Not only does this violate the genius of our written Constitution, but it runs expressly counter to the injunction to Court and Congress made by Madison when he introduced the Bill of Rights. "If they (the first ten amendments) are incorporated into the Constitution, independent tribunals of justice will consider themselves in a peculiar manner the guardians of those rights; they will be an impenetrable bulwark against every assumption of power in the Legislative or Executive; they will be naturally led to resist every encroachment upon rights expressly stipulated for in the Constitution by the declaration of rights." Unless we return to this view of our judicial function, unless we once again accept the notion that the Bill of Rights means what it says and that this Court must enforce that meaning , I am of the opinion that our great charter of liberty will be more honored in the breach than in the observance.

But even assuming what I cannot assume, that some balancing is proper in this case, I feel that the Court after stating the test ignores it completely. At most it balances the right of the Government to preserve itself, against Barenblatt's right to refrain from revealing Communist affiliation. Such a balance, however, mistakes the factors to be weighed. In the first place, it completely leaves out the real interest in Barenblatt's silence, the interest of the people as a whole in being able to join organizations, advocate causes and make political "mistakes" without later being subjected to governmental penalties for having dared to think for themselves. It is this right, the right to err politically, which keeps us strong as a Nation. For no number of laws against communism can have as much effect as the personal conviction which comes from having heard its arguments and rejected them, or from having once accepted its tenets and later recognized their worthlessness. Instead, the obloquy which results from investigations such as this not only stifles "mistakes" but prevents all but the most courageous from hazarding any views which might at some later time become disfavored. This result, whose importance cannot be overestimated, is doubly crucial when it affects the universities, on which we must largely rely for the experimentation and development of new ideas essential to our country's welfare. It is these interests of society, rather than Barenblatt's own right to silence, which I think the Court should put on the balance against the demands of the Government, if any balancing process is to be tolerated. Instead they are not mentioned, while on the other side the demands of the Government are vastly overstated and called "self preservation." It is admitted that this Committee can only seek information for the purpose of suggesting laws, and that Congress' power to make laws in the realm of speech and association is quite limited, even on the Court's test. Its interest in making such laws in the field of education, primarily a state function, is clearly narrower still. Yet the Court styles this attenuated interest self-preservation and allows it to overcome the need our country has to let us all think, speak, and associate politically as we like and without fear of reprisal. Such a result reduces "balancing" to a mere play on words and is completely inconsistent with the rules this Court has previously given for applying a "balancing test," where it is proper: "The courts should be astute to examine the effect of the challenged legislation. Mere legislative preferences or beliefs . . .may well support regulation directed at other personal activities, but be insufficient to justify such as diminishes the exercise of rights so vital to the maintenance of democratic institutions."

(B) Moreover, I cannot agree with the Court's notion that First Amendment freedoms must be abridged in order to "preserve" our country. That notion rests on the unarticulated premise that this Nation's security hangs upon its power to punish people because of what they think, speak or write about, or because of those with whom they associate for political purposes. The Government, in its brief, virtually admits this position when it speaks of the "communication of unlawful ideas." I challenge this premise, and deny that ideas can be proscribed under our Constitution. I agree that despotic governments cannot exist without stifling the voice of opposition to their oppressive practices. The First Amendment means to me, however, that the only constitutional way our Government can preserve itself is to leave its people the fullest possible freedom to praise, criticize or discuss, as they see fit, all governmental policies and to suggest, if they desire, that even its most fundamental postulates are bad and should be changed; "Therein lies the security of the Republic, the very foundation of constitutional government." On that premise this land was created, and on that premise it has grown to greatness. Our Constitution assumes that the common sense of the people and their attachment to our country will enable them, after free discussion, to withstand ideas that are wrong. To say that our patriotism must be protected against false ideas by means other than these is, I think, to make a baseless charge. Unless we can rely on these qualities--if, in short, we begin to punish speech--we cannot honestly proclaim oursleves to be a free Nation and we have lost what the Founders of this land risked their lives and their sacred honors to defend.

(C) The Court implies, however, that the ordinary rules and requirements of the Constitution do not apply because the Committee is merely after Communists and they do not constitute a political party but only a criminal gang. "The The long and widely accepted view," the Court says, is "that the tenets of the Communist Party include the ultimate overthrow of the Government of the United States by force and violence." This justifies the investigation undertaken.

By accepting this charge and allowing it to support treatment of the Communist Party and its members which would violate the Constitution if applied to other groups, the Court, in effect, declares that Party outlawed. It has been only a few years since there was a practically unanimous feeling throughout the country and in our courts that this could not be done in our free land. Of course it has always been recognized that members of the Party who, either individually or in combination, commit acts in violation of valid laws can be prosecuted. But the Party as a whole and innocent members of it could not be attainted merely because it had some illegal aims and because some of its members were lawbreakers. Thus in De Jonge v. Oregon on stipulated facts that the Communist Party advocated criminal syndicalism--"crime, physical violence, sabotage or any unlawful acts or methods as a means of accomplishing or effecting industrial or political change or revolution"--a unanimous Court, speaking through Chief Justice Hughes, held that a Communist addressing a Communist rally could be found guilty of no offense so long as no violence or crime was urged at the meeting. The Court absolutely refused to concede that either De Jonge or the Communist Party forfeited the protections of the First and Fourteenth Amendments because one of the Party's purposes was to effect a violent change of government.

Later, in 1948, when various bills were proposed in the House and Senate to handicap or outlaw the Communist Party, leaders of the Bar who had been asked to give their views rose up to contest the constitutionality of the measures. The late Charles Evans Hughes, Jr., questioned the validity under both the First and Fifth Amendments of one of these bills, which in effect outlawed the Party. The late John W. Davis attacked it as lacking an ascertainable standard of guilt under many of this Court's cases. And the Attorney General of the United States not only indicated that such a measure would be unconstitutional but declared it to be unwise even if valid. He buttressed his position by citing a statement by J. Edgar Hoover, Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and the declaration of this Court in West Virginia Board of Education v. Barnette, that:

> "If there is any fixed star in our constitutional constellation, it is that no official, high or petty, can prescribe what shall be orthodox in politics, nationalism, religion, or other matters of opinion or force citizens to confess by word or faith or act their faith therein."

Even the proponent of the bill disclaimed any aim to outlaw the Communist Party and pointed out the "disadvantages" of such a move by stating that "the Communist Party was illegal and outlawed in Russia when it tool over control of the Soviet Union. Again, when the Attorney General testified on a proposal to bar the Communist Party from the ballot he said, "an organized group, whether you call it political or not, could hardly be barred from the ballot without jeopardizing the constitutional guarantees of all other political groups and parties."

All these statements indicate quite clearly that no matter how often or how quickly we repeat the claim that the Communist Party is not a political party, we cannot outlaw it, as a group, without endangering the liberty of all of us. The reason is not hard to find, for mixed among those aims of communism which are illegal are perfectly normal political and social goals. And muddled with its revolutionary tenets is a drive to achieve power through the ballot, if it can be done. These things necessarily make it a political party whatever other, illegal, aims it may have. Significantly until recently the Communist Party was on the ballot in many States. When that was so, many Communists undoubtedly hoped to accomplish its lawful goals through support of Communist candidates. Even now some such may still remain. To attribute to them, and to those who have left the Party, the taint of the group is to ignore both our traditions that guilt like belief is "personal and not a matter of mere association" and the obvious fact that "men adhering to a political party or other organization notoriously do not subscribe unqualifiedly to all of its platforms or asserted principles."

The fact is that once we allow any group which has some political aims or ideas to be driven from the ballot and from the battle for men's minds because some of its members are bad and some of its tenets are illegal, no group is safe. Today we deal with Communists or suspected Communists. In 1920, instead, the New York Assembly suspended duly elected legislators on the ground that being Socialists, they were disloyal to the country's principles. In the 1830's the Masons were hunted as outlaws and subversives, and abolitionists were considered revolutionaries of the most dangerous kind in both North and South. Earlier still, at the time of the universally unlamented alien and sedition laws, Thomas Jefferson's party was attacked and its members were derisively called "Jacobins." Fisher Ames described the party as a "French faction" guilty of "subversion" and "officered, regimented and formed to subordination." Its members, he claimed, intended to "take arms against the laws as soon as they dare." History should teach us then, that in times of high emotional excitement minority parties and groups which advocate extremely unpopular social or governmental innovations will always be typed as criminal gangs and attempts will always be made to drive them out. It was knowledge of this fact, and of its great dangers, that caused the Founders of our land to enact the First Amendment as a guarantee that neither Congress nor the people would do anything to hinder or destroy the capacity of individuals and groups to seek converts and votes for any cause, however radical or unpalatable their principles might seem under the accepted notions of the time. Whatever the States were left free to do, the First Amendment sought to leave Congress devoid of any kind or quality of power to direct any type of national laws against the freedom of individuals to think what they please, advocate whatever policy they choose, and join with others to bring about the social, religious, political and governmental changes which seem best to them. Today's holding, in my judgment, marks another major step in the progressively increasing retreat from the safeguards of the First Amendment.

It is, sadly, no answer to say that this Court will not allow the trend to overwhelm us; that today's holding will be strictly confined to "Communists," as the Court's language implies. This decision can no more be contained than could the holding in American Communications Assn. v. Douds. In that case the Court sustained as an exercise of the commerce power an Act which required labor union officials to take an oath that they were not members of the Communist Party. The Court rejected the idea that the Douds holding meant that the Party and all its members could be attainted because of their Communist beliefs. It went to great lengths to explain that the Act held valid "touches only a relative handful of persons, leaving the great majority of persons of the identified affiliations and beliefs completely free from restraint." "While this Court sits," the Court proclaimed, no wholesale proscription of Communists or their Party can occur. I dissented and said:

> "Under such circumstances, restrictions imposed on proscribed groups are seldom static, even through the rate of expansion may not move in geometric progression from discrimination to arm-band to ghetto and worse. Thus I cannot regard the Court's holding as one which merely bars Communists from holding union office and nothing more. For its reasoning would apply just as forcibly to statutes barring Communists and their respective sympathizers from election to political office, mere membership in unions, and in fact from getting or holding any job whereby they could earn a living."

My prediction was all too accurate. Today, Communists or suspected Communists have been denied an opportunity to work as government employees, lawyers, doctors, teachers, pharmacists, veterinarians, subway conductors, industrial workers and in just about any other job. Barsky v. Board of Regents. In today's holding they are singled out and, as a class, are subjected to inquisitions which the Court suggests would be unconstitutional but for the fact of "Communism." Nevertheless, this Court still sits!

A REFUTATION: THE SAN FRANCISCO STUDENTS DESCRIBE THE MAY 13 DEMONSTRATIONS

The following point-by-point refutation of the "Operation Abolition's" charges is made by the Bay Area Student Committee for the Abolition of the House Committee on Un-American Activities:

It is impossible to list all the inaccuracies and distortions in the film. We have already discussed some of the more flagrant misrepresentations, but there are many others. Let us examine a few:

1. The film asserts that a "directive" was issued by the Students for Civil Liberties (SCL) telling students to "laugh out loud" at the Committee, and was published on the front page of the student newspaper, the Daily Californian at the University of California at Berkeley. The truth is that the newspaper, in a legitimate news article, reported an opinion which was expressed in an open meeting of SCL. This suggestion was not adopted by any organization participating in the demonstrations. The Oakland Tribune, which was the first source of the report that this was a student directive published by the Daily Californian, published a retraction, admitting that its report of such student "directive" was not true. The Saturday Evening Post (October 1, 1960), has also corrected its publication of this falsehood.

2. The film asserts, "Among the Communist leaders who had an active part in the San Francisco demonstrations were Harry Bridges, who you see here being escorted out of City Hall by police officials moments before the rioting broke out." While we think that the report published under the auspices of the HUAC by J. Edgar Hoover contains as many distortions of the events as the film and is primarily a piece of propaganda, let us look at Mr. Hoover's report of this event: "Order had been restored when Harry Bridges, President of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, suddenly appeared on the scene!" The emphasis has been added, and the point is clear, both of these assertions cannot be true. In this matter of Harry Bridges, which is one of the few instances where the Hoover report is accurate, it is the report by Mr. Hoover which is correct.

3. The film asserts, "Shortly after 11 o'clodk (Thursday) Chairman Willis is forced to ask police to eject Archie Brown, several students and Merle Brodsky from the hearing room." The fact is, that while Archie Brown was ejected on Thursday morning, no one else was. The young lady shown in the film was ejected on Friday morning as was Brodsky. Several other students were ejected at this time. The reason, they told reporters, was that one of them smiled at something said during the hearings. Observers who were present verify this report. (Another interesting aspect of this incident is that no attempt was made by the Committee to fill the dozen or more seats vacated by the ejected students with those people who had waited in line since the early morning, in spite of the promise which had been made by the HUAC that any seat which became vacated would be filled by a person waiting for admission.) This telescoping of time may be but a seemingly minor inaccuracy, but it shows the film's intention to distort the true nature of the demonstrations against the HUAC. It contributes to the overwhelming record of distortions which places the film in the category of false propaganda, which reveals its complete inadequacy as evidence, and which negates its claim to be an honest documentary. Again and again this technique of dubbing-in scenes out of order is used to misrepresent the occurences during the days of the hearings. Several scenes (the large crowd scenes and all the scenes with mounted policemen) which were filmed Saturday, one day after the police riot, are presented as if they were from Thursday or Friday. Certainly one cannot obtain a true impression of the events as they occurred if the film presents scenes which did not take place at the time the film would have us believe they took place. The scene showing students clapping and singing as they descended the staircase occurred at the end of the hearings on Thursday, not at the noon break on the way to the Union Square Rally as the film asserts, and is another example of the dishonesty of the film.

4. While the actions by the subpoenaed people inside the hearing room on Thursday (fully 24 hours before the police riot) did develop into a demonstration against the Committee, the original purpose of lining up before the railing was to present a petition to Congress, a right guaranteed by the Constitution, on behalf of the people standing before the Committee. The petition read: "We petition this arm of the United States Congress either to move to a larger hearing room or to open its doors on a first come, first served basis." It was only when Chairman Willis refused to consider this petition for redress of grievances that the petitioners pressed their opposition to the Committee and its refusal to regard their request. As pointed out above, this distortion is compounded by the use of a "doctored" sound track, and the absurd implication that this demonstration inside the hearing room on Thursday set off the demonstrations outside the hearing room on Friday.

5. The film asserts that on Friday, 200 from the general public were admitted to the hearings. Mr. Wheeler had admitted that during the Thursday morning session when the percentage of the general public in the hearing room was the highest, only one-fourth of the room was filled by people without passes. On Friday morning, all impartial observers agree, no more than 30 people were admitted without white passes. These same observers estimate the maximum admitted from the general public on Friday afternoon to be 15.

6. The film asserts that one of the songs the demonstrators sang was "lifted from the old Communists' People's Song Book." The fact is that this song, "We Shall Not be Moved," was originally a religious spiritual and is well known to people acquainted with folk music. It is, in fact, the theme song of many of the sit-in demonstrators in the South. Certainly, contrary to the insinuations in the film, the mere use of a song does not characterize the policies of the singers. This is certainly true when the film deliberately misreports the source of the song for the purpose of innuendo.

7. The sound-track of the film asserts that the use of the fire hoses was prompted by a rush of the demonstrators over the police barricades during the time a policeman was beaten. It is significant that no film shots of this alleged event are shown in the movie. The reason is simple: none exist. All pictures taken at the start of the hosing show the demonstrators seated, separated from the police by barricades which have not been disturbed. For instance, the picture in the May 23 edition, LIFE magazine shows this scene which points up the gross misrepresentation of the facts by the film. In the LIFE photograph, the hoses are turned on although most of the students are not yet wet. You will notice in this photograph that the students are either seated or are moving away from the barricade. There is no action in the photograph to substantiate the allegations made in the movie although this photograph was taken only a split second after the hoses were turned on. There was no rush for the barricades; no policeman was beaten. Photographs, eye-witness affidavits, and sound recordings all testify to the truth of this. On KQED-TV in San Francisco, Sheriff Matthew Carberry told the public the true version of the events: "There was no act of physical aggression on the part of the students."

8. The film would have us believe that the police gave notice that the building would have to be cleared, that they gave warning that hoses would be used. This is not true. Sound-tapes taken on the spot when Sheriff Carberry spoke to the demonstrators, one hour and fifteen minutes before the hosing, show that he told them they could remain in the building. During this one hour and fifteen minute period before the hoses were turned on, no official spoke to the group about any matter. No order to disperse was given, no warning was offered. Instead, hoses were turned upon the group of seated demonstrators.

9. The film asserts that the sit-down by the students was called by "Communist agitators" after the hoses were turned on. This is a lie on two counts:

   a. The sit-down was called moments before the hoses were used in order to demonstrate to the police who were deliberately preparing the hoses, that the demonstrators' intention was to be non-violent.
   b. Contrary to the film's vicious innuendo, the call for the sitdown, regardless of its source, was a responsible action designed to prevent panic. In point of fact, the call for a sitdown came from responsible student leaders who had become known to the demonstrators and who were respected by them. At least one of the two or three who suggested the sit-down was a student who had spent all the morning urging the police to take action which would prevent violence of any sort and who had been spurned by the police who seemed intent upon their own inept policies. Seeing that the police would take no responsible action, these students did what the authorities refused to do: they insured an orderly and legitimate demonstration, and their suggestions were complied with by the demonstrators.

10. The film asserts that "four students suffered minor injuries, eight policemen are injured to the point where they require hospitalization." The fact is, as reported in the San Francisco newspapers, that one student suffered a ruptured eardrum, two had head injuries requiring several stitches, one girl's tooth was knocked out, one man's back was injured to the point where an operation is necessary. The injuries to the police are as follows: two heart attacks and one stroke (perhaps a comment more upon the physical condition of the police rather than upon the "violence" of the students), one bump on the head, one bitten thumb, and one wrenched back.

11. The film asserts, "One of the Communist professional agitators arrested is Vernon Bown, who was in 1954 among the notorious 'Louisville Seven', charged at that time with sedition, destruction of property, conspiring to destroy property to achieve a political end, and contemp of court." The truth is that the HUAC itself, in its Friday morning hearing, indicated that Vernon Bown is not a member of the Communist Party. Less ironic and more flagrantly defamatory is the statement about Mr. Bown's court "record". The film omits the vital background in the case. Mr. Bown was guarding the home of a Negro family which had been threatened by racists in a Southern state. The house was subsequently bombed by a group of segregationists in an automobile, and Bown was indicted for the bombing. The charge was sedition (to overthrow the Southern State), and the destruction of property with which he was charged was the destruction of the house he was attempting to protect. What the film does not tell us is that the laws under which Bown was indicted were declared un-Constitutional by the United States Supreme Court. The film did not tell us that these charges were thrown out by the courts, and that Vernon Bown was never convicted of these "crimes". It is a sacred American principle that a man is innocent until proven guilty, but the HUAC, in its attempts to justify its own existence, disregards this principle. Furthermore, it is frightening that a branch of the House of Representatives, which is financed supposedly to discover "facts", would purposely distort the facts in a case in which the truth is a matter of public record. We maintain that the flagrant distortions exhibited in this film are indicative of the traditional HUAC contempt for the intelligence of the American public.

12. The film asserts that the demonstrators were "duped" by a handful of Communist agitators. Nevertheless, beyond this assertion no evidence is presented. No arrests of "Communist agitators" were made at the time of the demonstrations, nor have any been made subsequently. Surely, if "agitators" did incite the demonstrators to riot, this is a crime, and if the film's assertion that these people are known is true, why have no arrests been made on this charge? The answer is clear: the assertion by the film is untrue, and even the makers of the film, the HUAC and the law-enforcement agencies have been unable to produce any evidence to substantiate this irresponsible charge. It is certainly difficult to believe, in the absence of any real evidence to the contrary, that high-ranking students from some of the nation's finest colleges and universities could be "dupes" of any group. To prove this assertion requires a great deal more documentation than has been offered by those who have attempted to discredit the San Francisco demonstrations.

13. The film asserts that it presents the true testimony of William Mandel, but it is clear from the film that much of what Mr. Mandel said to the Committee was edited out of the film. Even more important than this flagrant attempt to doctor the record is the significance of the fact that not one of the charges voiced against William Mandel or against any of the other dissenting witnesses was based upon evidence presented before the Committee and displayed by them. The Committee bases its attacks upon allegedly unimpeachable informers, but it has consistently been afraid to present these dubious "sources" for examination. Typical of the Committee's procedure, no evidence against these people was presented, no witnesses against them were produced, no cross-examination was permitted. The Committee's procedure, far from being based upon the concepts of Anglo-Saxon jurisprudence which guarantees fair play to the accused, the Committee's methods are totalitarian in concept: unidentified, irresponsible, unevaluated and nameless reports are given as the source of unsubstantiated charges. The Committee denied the accused the right to know and refute his calumniators.

Reprinted from: The Reporter, November 24, 1960

A Movie with a Message

PAUL JACOBS

WITH THE ACTIVE HELP of the House Un-American Activities Committee, a commercial film company in Washington, D.C., has sold five hundred prints of a movie called Operation Abolition during the past few months at $100 each. Although the committee has attempted to disguise its role, it is responsible for much of the production of the film, which presents a distorted version of demonstrations that were staged by a group of college students when the committee had hearings in San Francisco last May on the subject of alleged Communist activities in northern California.

The movie is made up almost entirely of newsreel shots, filmed by TV cameramen who covered the events for stations KRON and KPIX in San Francisco. After the hearings had been completed, two committee staff members—William Wheeler, chief West Coast investigator, and Fulton ("Buddy") Lewis III, went to the television stations with subpoenas for all the newsreel film that had been shot during the demonstrations. They then selected the footage they wanted and had prints made of it, telling the stations that the film was needed for "documentation." Neither the studios, the staff photographers, nor the reporters were paid for their film, although Operation Abolition is ostensibly a commercial venture.

The prints were sent to Washington, where the committee staff edited the film and wrote a commentary for it. After that had been done, film and commentary were turned over to a commercial film company, Washington Video Productions, to be made into a movie.

"Buddy" Lewis assisted the company with the technical work on the film, and the narrator's voice is his. Representatives Francis E. Walter (D., Pennsylvania), chairman of the committee, and Gordon Scherer (R., Ohio), a committee member, both appeared as commentators. The film was then made an official House document and advertised by the committee in a special publication, "The Communist-Led Riots Against the House Committee on Un-American Activities in San Francisco, May 12-14, 1960."

The film itself opens without any of the usual credits. Instead, Congressman Walter launches immediately into the main theme of the picture, which is to suggest that the demonstrations were Communist-inspired and Communist-led. In the attempt to prove this assertion, both the narration and the way the film clips were edited deliberately distort a number of facts.

For example, separate sequences have been run together in Operation Abolition to give the impression of mob action, and the film shows students displaying defiance after police warnings, although actually the demonstrations occurred at a completely different time. And the police use of fire hoses on the students is justified on the basis of the claim that the students attempted to rush police barricades inside the City Hall, where the committee was holding its hearings. But no film accompanies the commentary about this alleged attempt; in fact, photographs taken at the time show the students seated on the floor and in the corridors when the hoses were turned on them. After the riots were over, the sheriff of San Francisco County said: "There was no act of physical aggression on the part of the students."

The film has received wide distribution. The Saturday Evening Post recommends it, with the claim that "For once the facts are pictorially recorded for all to see!" The National Review has plugged it, pointing out that it is "available from the HUAC." A retired admiral has written letters on behalf of it and some Republican candidates used it during their campaigns. Prints have been bought by a number of corporations, including the Schaefer Brewing Company of New York and the Standard Oil Company of California, which purchased ten prints to show to its employees. The staff of Washington Video Productions say that requests for prints of the film are coming in so fast they can hardly keep up with them.

IN ARIZONA, the film is being handled by the Phoenix Anti-Communist Committee. According to officials of the American Civil Liberties Union in Arizona, high-school social-studies teachers are being urged to show the movie, P.T.A. groups have been approached, and college libraries have been informed that prints are available to them. A Phoenix TV station has run the film, and an ad plugging the TV showing was run in a local paper, paid for by the Lions Club.

When the Arizona A.C.L.U. protested against the showing of the film at a P.T.A. meeting without any indication that a number of students who had participated in the demonstration disagreed with the film's presentation of the events, members of the group were warned of vague but dire consequences that might follow if they continued in their protests.

Students at the University of California in Berkeley have prepared a detailed answer to the movie which they are distributing wherever they can. William Wheeler of the House committee staff has admitted on a Los Angeles TV program that there were distortions in the film.

Some of the students may have misbehaved, but no evidence has been offered proving that their original demonstration was under the control of the Communist Party. Although Operation Abolition seems to be doing well at the box office, this unusual venture of the House Committee on Un-American Activities into moviemaking is not apt to win any prizes for accuracy.

 Copyright 1960, The Reporter Magazine Company

Cutting-Room Floor

Copyright 1960, The Washington Post Company

Distributed by:
U.S. National Student Association
3457 Chestnut Street
Philadelphia 4, Pennsylvania

TEXT OF LETTER FROM HONORABLE JAMES ROOSEVELT TO MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, 87th CONGRESS

December 31. 1960

Dear Colleague:

On April 25th, 1960, I addressed the House on the subject of the Un-American Activities Committee. I asked for abolition of the Committee and supported my recommendation with two principal arguments.

First, I pointed out that the Committee has served no useful purpose. It has not been a bulwark against subversion; it has not helped to immunize us against espionage or sabotage. In terms of legislation actually adopted by this House, its output has been somewhere between minute and invisible. (I say this with full recognition of the fact that this virile Committee claims it has fathered virtually all Acts of Congress aimed against Communism.) It has frittered away our time and squandered our money. It has given us nothing of value.

Since the onus must be on a committee of Congress to justify its existence, this argument alone should have persuaded us to abolish the Un-American Activities Committee.

But I noted in my April speech that the case against the Committee is even more compelling. For, apart from accomplishing nothing constructive, the Committee has done positive damage to this House--and to this Nation. It has helped to poison the invigorating atmosphere which once encouraged the flourishing of democratic dissent. It has blackened our reputation abroad, and at home it has frightened into silence citizens who may have something important to say. Its methods have been reprehensible. This House and this Nation have been made to suffer.

Nothing that has happened since April has caused me to modify my opinion. The Committee has continued to do no good; it has also continued to do much harm. It should be noted, however, that the Committee staff director, Mr. Arens, who was responsible for some of its most outrageous behavior, has now been replaced by an attorney whose past record of courtesy to witnesses is encouraging.

In these intervening months, the Committee has made a tremendous effort to obscure the real issues posed by its activities. It has done this through a massive propaganda effort designed to prove that all its opponents are Communists. If the Committee has proved its point, it has done so by employing a brand of logic not accepted in the United States since the Salem witch trials. The basic canon of this resurrected logical system is very simple. It goes this way: the Committee is anti-Communist; anyone who opposes the Committee is, therefore, an anti-anti- Communist; since the product of two negatives is a positive, anyone who opposes the Committee is a Communist, or, at the very least, a dupe of the Communists.

I suppose that the next step will be for the Committee to make the obvious point that anyone who fails to oppose its critics with sufficient vigor is a Communist. If Orwell's "1984" has not already arrived, neither does it seem too far away.

The heroic campaign to make the nation safe for the Un-American Activities Committee has now led to the production of a motion picture, "Operation Abolition," as a documentary of this House. The film concerns itself mainly with the demonstrations which took place in San Francisco last May against the Un-American Activities Committee. Its major thesis is that the Communists want to see the Un-American Activities Committee abolished. However, it never for one second acknowledges that others, - many others, - who are neither Communists nor Communist dupes also are in favor of the same objective for thoroughly legitimate reasons and in a thoroughly legitimate fashion. The film never for one second acknowledges that the Committee, which has made repeated forays into California in the past, itself provided an opportunity and set the stage for a thoroughly unfortunate affair which reflects no credit on all parties concerned including a committee of this House. The copywriters for an important industry in my home state tell us that movies are better than ever, but it is doubtful that "Operation Abolition" will be cited as an example. No oscars are in prospect, and there probably will be no awards either for accuracy, honesty--or modesty. Yet the film has one further distinction that deserves to be recorded: this is the first time, as far as I know, that a House Document has been used to make a profit for a commercial enterprise.

There stands before you today what we have been told is a contradiction-in-terms: One who can with sincerity condemn both Communism and the Committee on Un-American Activities.

Let me assure my colleagues that I am not a minority of one. There are others versatile enough to fight--and ultimately to win--a two-front war: against Communism and against this Committee. Someday--very soon, I hope--there will be enough of us in this House to relegate the Committee to the dustbin of history.

Meanwhile, however, it is still politically dangerous for many members of Congress to express by means of a direct vote their innermost feelings about the Committee. I know, because they have told me. This, I think, presents a challenge to the press, to other members of the intellectual community, and to all who have the power to inform--or to misinform-- the public. May I express the hope that they will rise to the occasion and perform their educating task honestly and well so that soon it will be possible for Congressmen to vote their convictions and do away with this Committee. Newspapers like the New York Times, the SanFrancisco Chronicle, the Washington Post and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch have already shown the way. So have many reputable organizations, such as the United States National Student Association, the American Civil Liberties Union, the American Jewish Congress, to name but a few. May their numbers increase.

Until that day, I do not plan to move formally again for the abolition of the Committee, lest the resulting vote mislead the public into thinking that this Committee really has the backing of this House. I will also not prejudice adoption of the liberal legislative program pledges in the Democratic platform by putting my colleagues on the spot at this time.

However, we cannot await the millenium, and therefore I make the following suggestion as a step in the right direction. Next month we shall be examining the appropriations requests of our various committees. My recommendation is that we scrutinize the budget of the Un-American Activities Committee with the greatest care in a public hearing before the House Administration Committee. All of us are against non-essential government spending. We have both the right and the duty to use the taxpayer's money wisely. In line with this philosophy, we should give the Committee every dollar it can justify--but not a cent more. I shall formally ask the Chairman of the House Administration Committee to hold hearings on the budget request of the House Un-American Activities Committee and to give ample notice of this proceeding.

If we scrutinize the budgetary request of the Committee with care--as we do with regard to the budgets of other committees--I am confident that we will save a considerable sum of money. And, as a happy by-product of our economy drive, we will limit the power of this Committee to embarrass our Nation, to humiliate its citizens and to tarnish the good name of this House.

A very Happy New Year to you.

Cordially yours,

JAMES ROOSEVELT

From the New York Post, January 6, 1961

REP. ROOSEVELT TO ASK CUT FOR WALTER GROUP

Washington, Jan. 6 (AP)--- House critics of the Committee on Un-American Activities have been invited to testify why they think the Red-hunting group's budget for this year should be pared down.

One of them, Rep. James Roosevelt (D-Calif.), said yesterday he would seize the opportunity to express his views at closed hearings.

The invitation came from Rep. Omar Burleson (D-Tex.), chairman of the Administration Committee, which passes on the budgets of all House committees. The full House has final say but usually follows the Administration Committee's recommendation.

Burleson turned down a request from Roosevelt for public hearings on the Un-American Activities Committee's budget but assured him in a letter made public yesterday that he and any other House members who wanted to appear in opposition at a closed hearing would be permitted to do so.

Roosevelt said the committee has sought to stamp out dissenting opinion in the U.S. and has damaged the reputation of the country abroad.

The committee annually gets one of the healthier appropriations in the House. It received $327,000 each year of the last Congress and its chairman Rep. Walter (D-Pa.), has indicated he will seek a similar sum this session.

NORTH CAROLINA STATE STUDENT LEGISLATURE-1960
Submitted by: Woman's College of Duke University

Resolution To Abolish The U. S. House Of Representatives Committee on Un-American Activities

Whereas the investigations of the House Committee on Un-American Activities have thwarted the very freedoms which the Committee claims to protect--freedom of assembly, of the press, and of speech; and

Whereas the Committee has used the powers of a regular court without guaranteeing witnesses the rights and safeguards of a court; and

Whereas the Committee's activities have cast suspicion on individuals and organizations, thereby causing economic and social sanctions to be applied against the accused, who, in many cases, are found to be innocent; and

Whereas the fear of possible Committee investigation endangers the progress of intellectual inquiry by the Committee's assumption of guilt by association; and

Whereas the Committee violates the precept of due process of law by denying the accused the right to face his accuser; and

Whereas the Committee has not lived up to the original purpose for which it was instituted, that of investigations essential to the institution of legislation; therefore

Resolved, That House of Representatives Rule X, subsection 1(q), which reads: "There shall be elected by the House, at the commencement of each Congress, the following standing committees: (q) Committee on Un-American Activities to consist of 9 members" be deleted and the following sections be relettered. That House Rule XI, entitled Powers and Duties of Committees, subsection (q) be deleted, which reads "(1) Un-American activities. (2) The Committee on Un-American Activities, as a whole or by subcommittee, is authorized to make from time to time investigations of (i) the extent, character, and objects of un-American propaganda activities in the United States, (ii) the diffusion within the United States of subversive and un-American propaganda that is instigated from foreign countries or of a domestic origin and attacks the principle of the form of government as guaranteed by our Constitution, and (iii) all other questions in relation thereto that would aid Congress in any necessary remedial legislation.
"The Committee on Un-American Activities shall report to the House (or to the Clerk of the House if the House is not in session) the results of any such investigation, together with such recommendations as it deems advisable.
"For the purpose of any such investigation, the Committee on Un-American Activities, or any subcommittee thereof, is authorized to sit and act at such times and places within the United States, whether or not the House is sitting, has recessed, or has adjourned, to hold such hearings, to require the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books, papers, and documents, and to take such testimony, as it deems necessary. Subpenas may be issued under the signature of the chairman of the committee or any subcommittee, or by any person designated by any such chairman or member."

Why should Congress abolish the House Un-American Activities Committee ?

HERE ARE FOUR REASONS:

1

Testimony of American Civil Liberties Union before the Democratic and Republican Platform Committees, June 21 and July 20, 1960

The high water mark of civil liberties conflict in the last 20 years has been the invasion by many congressional investigating committees of First Amendment rights. Going far beyond the congressional fact-finding function, they became an instrument of fear and repression in their ceaseless drive to purge the nation of "un-American" political thoughts and associations.

Trial-by-publicity in a circus atmosphere, rather than calm judicial judgment in legally-protected court trials, sapped the strength of the First Amendment. The picture abroad of the United States as the champion of political diversity and fair treatment was sorely damaged at a time when we needed to rally the free world to the democratic standard, and our national security was actually weakened by the indiscriminate undermining of our faith in the freedom on which our democratic society rests. The protection of the nation against subversion should be handled as what it really is, a police problem for the professionally-trained specialists of our law-enforcement agencies.

The most effective contribution your convention can make to strengthen freedom of speech and association would be to support abolition of the House Un-American Activities Committee, the Committee which illustrates so vividly the terrible assault on the First Amendment in the past two decades. Now in its 23rd year, the Committee has left in its path the ruin of personal careers; weakened morale of government workers; unnecessary expenditure of public funds; intrusion into the affairs of private industry (such as the sensitive mass communications industry) and religion; and, above all, a threat to Americans that to believe in and act on what the First Amendment says can bring public exposure and economic and social penalty.

In recent weeks, opinion in support of Congressman James Roosevelt's plea that the House of Representatives abolish the Committee is making itself heard. In addition to the American Civil Liberties Union, such other widely-respected national organizations as the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union (AFL-CIO), the American Federation of Teachers (AFL-CIO), the American Jewish Congress, the Commission on Social Action of Reform Judaism, the United States National Student Association, and the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom have backed Congressman Roosevelt's appeal. Already on record as opposing the House Committee are the Episcopal Diocese of California, the California State Labor Federation (AFL-CIO), and the National Council of Churches. Many of the nation's leading newspapers recognize the threat that the House Committee poses. The New York Times, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, The Washington Post and Times Herald, the Des Moines Register-Tribune and the San Francisco Chronicle have editorially attacked the Committee's operations.

We urge that the convention pledge its support at the opening of the 87th Congress in January, 1961 to a resolution (a) abolishing the Committee; (b) withdrawing its financial appropriations; (c) or transferring its function to the House Judiciary Committee.

and . . .

Published by the American Civil Liberties Union
156 Fifth Avenue, New York 10, N.Y.
January, 1961

2

Since the letter below was written, the United States Supreme Court decided on June 8, 1959 by one vote, 5 to 4, that the mandate of the House Committee is constitutional. The decision made clear, however, that individual cases would be carefully examined to prevent the ruling from becoming a weapon to stifle individual expression. The ACLU will work toward the Supreme Court's re-examining its decision in future cases so that the dissenting words of Justice Hugo L. Black will eventually become the majority opinion of the Court: "I agree that despotic governments cannot exist without stifling the voice of opposition to their oppressive practices. The First Amendment means to me, however, that the only constitutional way our Government can preserve itself is to leave its people the fullest possible freedom to praise, criticize or discuss, as they see fit, all governmental policies and to suggest, if they desire, that even its most fundamental postulates are bad and should be changed; 'Therein lies the security of the Republic, the very foundation of constitutional government.' On that premise this land was created, and on that premise it has grown to greatness. Our Constitution assumes that the common sense of the people and their attachment to our country will enable them, after free discussion, to withstand ideas that are wrong. To say that our patriotism must be protected against false ideas by means other than these is, I think, to make a baseless charge. Unless we can rely on these qualities—if, in short, we begin to punish speech—we cannot honestly proclaim ourselves to be a free Nation and we have lost what the Founders of this land risked their lives and their sacred honors to defend."

House Committee's Mandate Held in Conflict With First Amendment

The New York Times.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 3, 1956.

Legislative Investigations

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEW YORK TIMES:

You will not be astonished to learn that the American Civil Liberties Union still believes that the letter and spirit of the First Amendment make the mandate of the House Committee on Un-American Activities unconstitutional or unwise, or both. That has been the Union's belief ever since the committee was established in the late Nineteen Thirties.

Its current mandate is to investigate "the extent, character and objects of un-American propaganda activities * * * diffusion * * * of subversive and un-American propaganda * * * instigated from foreign countries or of a domestic origin * * * and all other questions in relation thereto that would aid Congress in any necessary remedial legislation."

Inside or outside its mandate, the committee has heretofore usually limited its investigation of opinion and association to that which it has held to be related to illegal action. But large parts of the questioning in the recent hearings on two activities of The Fund for the Republic—the John Cogley report on blacklisting and the Plymouth Friends Meeting library award — have overstepped even the committee's own established boundaries.

Improvement in Procedures

So this is the time to urge that no committee with such a mandate should be appointed when the new Congress convenes next January. (There are other committees on internal security, with much better mandates.)

The committee has concluded some proper inquiries, including the Hiss investigation of 1948, and its procedures are much better than they were. But the basic trouble is what it has been from the start: the committee's mandate is bad.

This is the fault of the successive Congresses which have supplied its mandate, phrased entirely in terms of "un-American propaganda" — propaganda as such, whether or not related in terms of "clear and present danger" to illegal acts. Such acts, and propaganda so related to them, are proper matters for Congressional investigation; and, as the A.C.L.U. has frequently pointed out, the conspiratorial-action part of the Communist party's activities can properly be prohibited and punished.

But "propaganda" as such—speaking or writing in and of itself, whatever its source and however offensively "un-American" to Congress, as well as to you and me — is not a proper matter. Congress cannot constitutionally legislate about propaganda, in and of itself; therefore it cannot constitutionally investigate propaganda, in and of itself.

Any citizen or group of citizens—as citizens—and our alert and independent newspapers have the right to investigate and expose and denounce the speaking and writing of any other citizen or group of citizens. But that is utterly different from having any branch of a democratic government in a free society undertake such a task; it is the exact opposite.

Past Protests

The American Civil Liberties Union has been saying this all along, always with the sole concern of civil liberties. For example, in the autumn of 1939 it protested an inquiry by the Temporary National Economic Committee into the views on monopoly legislation held by officers of the Jones & McLaughlin Steel Corporation. In the winter of 1954-1955 it protested a report by the House Committee on Un-American Activities about the expression of opinions by what are often called 'neo-Fascist" or "hate" groups.

Our courts have properly been very careful about circumscribing the powers of legislative investigation, perhaps leaning over backward in not yet deciding the central First Amendment question of the constitutionality of "exposure" per se. But there are signs that they may soon come to grips with that question.

In the Quinn decision of May, 1955, Chief Justice Warren said that "the power to investigate is subject to * * * recognized limitations. It * * * must not be confused with any of the powers of law enforcement; these powers are assigned under our Constitution to the Executive and the Judiciary. * * *"

Beyond Judicial Decision

Whatever the legal situation may be at any particular moment, men do not live by judicial decisions alone. Men who want to keep their society free and their government democratic must constantly remind themselves that not everything which may be constitutionally permissible is practically wise. Legislative wisdom is even more fundamental to a free society than judicial correctness.

The problem of keeping Congressional investigations within proper bounds concerns more than "un-American propaganda." It can involve freedom of the press, on which a democratic society so much depends.

A few weeks ago a House Appropriations subcommittee invited The St. Louis Post-Dispatch to answer questions concerning its editorial "Losing the Peaceful Atom." The newspaper declined the invitation, declaring that if an editor were to answer official questions as to how his opinions were formed, or the sources on which they were based, this would encourage other committees to ask other editors similar questions.

We emphatically agree that this development would place freedom of the press under Congressional inquiry and jeopardize the flow of information to the public.

If there is an armament stalemate between the democratic nations and the Communist nations, it is even more than ever true that the best defensive and offensive weapon in the arsenal of democracy is its unique capacity for truth and intelligence. Truth and intelligence are best served not by the interference of government with any propaganda in and of itself but by the people's triumphant refutation of the falsehood and stupidity of totalitarian tryanny.

PATRICK MURPHY MALIN,
Executive Director, American Civil Liberties Union.

New York, July 31, 1956.

and . . .

3

The New York Times.

A Shaky Reed To Lean On

Just as the Senate had ultimately to take responsibility for the outrages committed in its name by the late Senator McCarthy, so the House is responsible for the actions of Representative Walter's Un-American Activities Committee.

This is the fundamental point, as we see it, of Representative James Roosevelt's massive attack on the committee in a House speech a few days ago, reinforced by the American Civil Liberties Union's decision at its recent biennial conference in Chicago for a "maximum effort" to abolish it. Fortified by ample appropriations almost automatically renewed each year by the House, the committee pursues its heresy hunt, endangering constitutional guarantees in the process, weakening at home and abroad America's reputation as the land of the free—and all to what avail?

If the security of this nation were dependent on the kind of exposure for exposure's sake that the committee has repeatedly indulged in, whether investigating actors in New York or school teachers in California, then our country would really be in a dangerous condition. But few disinterested persons can any longer believe that this is where the real danger lies. It lies less in gumshoe subversion than in the corrosion of domestic complacency, less in the absurd handful of Communist doctrinaires who may still exist among us than in the unconscious tendency of many Americans to accept a second-place position in the world so long as it is cushioned in luxury.

There are dangers to the United States, emanating directly from Russia; but their true meaning is obscured rather than illumined by the antics of Un-American Activities committees. For such positive subversion as exists, the F.B.I. is sufficient. The United States no longer needs—if it ever did need—the aimless pursuit of heresy that has led to a present total of nearly forty "First Amendment" cases, of which four of the principals are actually now in prison. —April 30, 1960

NEW YORK Herald Tribune

Mr. Walter's Road Show

Their investigations into Congressional spending peccadilloes have led reporters Don Oberdorfer and Walter Pincus into some strange activities of the House Un-American Activities Committee, which has an "investigative" fund this year of $327,000.

Winding up their copyrighted series in the Knight newspapers, the two reporters described the many appearances at committee hearings of one Irving Fishman, deputy collector of customs at the Port of New York. No less than ten times Mr. Fishman was carted, at public expense, to hearings in various cities around the country. His role was to break open a sealed sack of incoming foreign mail and dramatically produce what would be described as Communist propaganda. This would then be offered as a horrible example of why legislation such as committee chairman Francis Walter wants—to tighten controls on incoming mail—is needed. And each time it would be presented as something new, the committee members acting out their part in the talking charade just as if they hadn't already seen, heard and done, the same thing repeatedly.

Not only is this a questionable use of the taxpayers' money, but it is clear evidence of the perversion of the hearing process by Mr. Walter's Un-American Activities Committee. Hearings are supposed to gather evidence for legislative use, not to propagandize the public, at public expense and using the power of subpoena, on behalf of any Congressman's pet project. Congressman Walter's traveling road show has obviously been traveling on the wrong track. —June 14, 1960

San Francisco Chronicle

THE VOICE OF THE WEST

Faced Down On A Gross Slander

To report that a member of the House Un-American Activities Committee has launched a new, contemptible slander against a repectable group of American clergymen is no shattering novelty; among the fanatical vendettas which this committee has never let up on is its longstanding effort to blacken the name of the National Council of Churches.

Representative Donald L. Jackson, Republican of Los Angeles, is the latest committee member to take up the smearbrush and go to work, well protected, of course, by his immunity from libel. Jackson, who will retire this year, at no very great loss to California's representation in Washington, charged the National Council of Churches with promoting obscene books written by Communist sympathizers.

When Representative Edith Green of Oregon faced him down on this denunciation Jackson was unable to name one book on any list of the National Council that had been found obscene by the Post Office Department. The facts, brought out by Mrs. Green, are that the National Council of Churches in 1957 published a pamphlet recommending 260 publications dealing with the American Negro. This is a very full sort of documentation of the race problem for which no apology, in Congress or anywhere else need be made by anybody. If some of the writers on the racial conflict in America do not meet with Jackson's approval because their names appear on his committee's lists as Communists, that is irrelevant to documentation.

The National Council of Churches is being mercilessly harried by the Un-American Committee for concealing Communists under the pulpit. Yet the council declares it has never had a Communist party member or sympathizer among its officers or staff or executives and defies anyone to prove the contrary. Here is a direct challenge that Representative Jackson and his colleagues have conveniently evaded.—April 24, 1960

and . . .

4

Such eminent Americans as these, who support the defense of America against all kinds of totalitarianism, are deeply concerned that the House Un-American Activities Committee's attack on freedom of speech and association robs the United States of its real security — faith in our principles of freedom.

At the present time a 45-minute film called "Operation Abolition" is being shown in private organizations, public schools and PTA's, the military branches, and government agencies. As an organization which abhors censorship, the ACLU does not advocate suppression of the film. At the same time, we endorse this editorial of The Washington Post, and urge that persons responsible for the film's showing clearly present the important principles involved in opposition to the Committee.

The Washington Post

Forgery by Film

A propaganda movie called Operation Abolition, confected in large part by the House Committee on Un-American Activities, is now being given wide commercial distribution. The movie presents a mendaciously distorted view of the demonstrations staged by a group of college students when the Committee held hearings in San Francisco last May. This is a flagrant case of forgery by film.

The film warps the truth in two important respects. First, it suggests as its main thesis that the demonstrations were Communist-inspired and Communist-led. Diligent inquiry has led us to a conviction that this charge is wholly unjustified. It cannot be asserted, of course, that no Communists took part in the demonstrations. But the main body of students who picketed the Committee hearings in protest were inspired only by their own valid and thoroughly creditable indignation at the Committee's conduct; and they were led by fellow-students loyal to American ideals and acting in accordance with that loyalty.

Second, the film attempts to represent the rioting which followed the student protest as resulting entirely from student violence and disorder. In point of fact, San Francisco police acted with althogther needless brutality, turning fire hoses on students whose protests were not flagrantly unruly. In an article telling about the film in the current issue of The Reporter, Paul Jacobs, a respected West Coast newsman, explains how the distortion was accomplished:

> Both the narration and the way the film clips were edited deliberately distort a number of facts. For example, separate sequences have been run together in Operation Abolition to give the impression of mob action, and the film shows students displaying defiance after police warnings, although actually the demonstrations occurred at a completely different time . . . After the riots were over, the sheriff of San Francisco County said: "There was no act of physical aggression on the part of the students."

The film is made up of newsreel shots subpenaed by the Committee and edited by members of its staff who also supplied a highly loaded running commentary. The Committee then turned this concoction over to a commercial film company which, according to Mr. Jacobs, has sold 500 prints of it during the past few months at $100 each. The film was made an official House document and advertised by the Committee in a special publication. In every respect—in its distribution for private profit, in its falsification of facts, in its whitewashing of the Un-American Activities Committee—this film makes a dirty joke of the congressional investigating power.—November 26, 1960

Ernest Angell
Thurman Arnold
Roger N. Baldwin
Alan Barth
Dean John C. Bennett
Francis Biddle
Judge John O. Bigelow
Dr. Eugene Carson Blake
Dr. Sarah Gibson Blanding
Catherine Drinker Bowen
Dr. Robert K. Carr
Stuart Chase
Grenville Clark
Prof. Henry Steele Commager
Prof. George S. Counts
Prof. Robert E. Cushman
J. Frank Dobie
Melvyn Douglas
Morris L. Ernst
Prof. Ralph F. Fuchs
Lewis Galantiere
Lloyd K. Garrison
Prof. Walter Gellhorn
Dr. Frank P. Graham
August Heckscher
Prof. Mark DeW. Howe
Quincy Howe
Palmer Hoyt
Dr. Robert M. Hutchins
Gerald W. Johnson
Dan Lacy
Max Lerner
Dr. Millicent C. McIntosh
Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn
Walter Millis
Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr
Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer
Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam
James G. Patton
Gerard Piel
A. Philip Randolph
Elmer Rice
Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt
Elmo Roper
Prof. Arthur Schlesinger, Jr.
Lillian E. Smith
Norman Thomas
J. Waties Waring
Edward Bennett Williams

WHAT CAN YOU DO TO EXPRESS YOUR OPINION ON THE HUAC?

- Write your Congressman urging him to support the ACLU position.
- Write a letter to your local newspaper editor explaining the harm of the HUAC.
- In your local organizations when the HUAC problem is discussed, or the "Operation Abolition" film shown, present the "other side of the story" and ask that they invite a local ACLU speaker to explain the principled opposition to the HUAC.
- Contact your local ACLU office for other materials and suggestions for action.
- Join the ACLU!

AMERICAN CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION
156 Fifth Avenue, New York 10, N.Y.

Please enroll me as a NEW MEMBER of the ACLU.

Here is my $..... membership contribution, 50¢ of which is for one year of CIVIL LIBERTIES.

PLEASE PRINT CLEARLY

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

CITY ..... ZONE ..... STATE .....

Occupation .....

ADDITIONAL MATERIALS AVAILABLE

With the increase in national interest in the House Committee on Un-American Activities, a number of organizations have published lowcost material pertinent to the Committee's work and current efforts to abolish it. The National Student Association, has attempted to draw together, in one list, a significant sampling of those materials available. The list below is as comprehensive as possible, but listing of any group's publications in no manner signifies USNSA endorsement of any organization's efforts in this or any other area.

Requests for all publications listed below should be made to the organization listed, not to USNSA.

A. Available from:
United States National Student Association
3457 Chestnut Street
Philadelphia 4, Pennsylvania

1. Reporter-Herblock reprint
A reprint of Paul Jacobs' article, "A Movie with a Message," from the November 24, 1960 issue of The Reporter, backed by a reprint of the Herblock cartoon, "Cutting-Room Floor," from the Washington Post.
Price: 1¢ each, plus postage.

2. "The House Committee on Un-American Activities"
Additional copies of the report you are now reading are available in quanitity.
Price: 50¢ each, 3 for $1.00

B. Available from:
American Civil Liberties Union
156 Fifth Avenue
New York 10, New York

1. "The Dragon Slayers"
A 12-page reprint from the April 25, 1960 Congressional Record of Congressman James Roosevelt's speech calling for abolition of HUAC on the floor of the House of Representatives.
Price: 10¢ each, $6.00 per hundred

2. "Why Should Congress Abolish the Un-American Activities Committee?"
Excerpts from the ACLU's testimony to the 1960 Democratic and Republican platform committees; text of the 1956 ACLU letter to the New York Times on the unconstitutionality of the HUAC mandate; several editorials calling for Committee reform or abolition; and suggestions for individual action.
Price: 5¢ each, $3.00 per hundred

3. "A Movie With a Message"
   Reprint of The Reporter magazine article on the film.
   Price: 5¢ each, $3.00 per hundred

4. "Guilt by Subpoena"
   Reprint of an article by ACLU Executive Director Patrick Murphy Malin, summarizing the civil liberties abuses of the Committee over the years, from the January 1960 issue of The Progressive magazine.
   Price: 5¢ each, $3.00 per hundred

C. Available from:
   Committee on Un-American Activities
   House of Representatives
   Washington 25, D.C.

1. "Communist Training Operations: Communist Activities and Propaganda Among Youth Groups"
   Transcript of the hearings held by the Committee in February and March of 1960 concerning U.S. participation in the Vienna Youth Festival and previous festivals.

2. "Communist Target--Youth: Communist Infiltration and Agitation Tactics"
   A report on the San Francisco student demonstrations, written for the Committee by FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover. In this report, Hoover claims that the student demonstrations were communist led and inspired.

3. "The Communist-Led Riots Against the House Committee on Un-American Activities in San Francisco, Calif., May 12-14, 1960, H. Rept. 2228, October 7, 1960.
   A transcript of the narration of the film, "Operation Abolition," including copies of several of the documents referred to in the film, as well as a picture of the demonstrations.

4. Annual Report for 1960
   Annual Report for 1959
   The Committee's report to the House of Representatives, describing the scope of its work for the calendar year. The reports contain excerpts from most of the hearings and reports issued during that year.

5. "The House Committee on Un-American Activities: What it is, What it does" (Catalog number Y4,Unl/2: Unl/12/958)
   A comprehensive defense of the Committee's work and its approach to the problem of Communism.

6. A more complete list, containing several dozen publications, may be obtained from the Committee without charge

Note: Prices for all publications listed above may be obtained from the Committee

D. Available from:
National Committee to Abolish the Un-American Activities Committee
617 North Larchmont Blvd.
Los Angeles 4, California

1. "My Beliefs and Associations are None of the Business of This Committee"
   The contempt of Congress case of Carl Braden; how legislative inquisitions stifle integration and social progress.
   Price: 10¢ each, $60.00 per thousand

2. "Resolutions and Editorials in Opposition to the Un-American Activities Committee"
   A collection of 50 editorials and resolutions.
   Price: 50¢ each, plus postage

3. "Congressmen James Roosevelt's Historic April 25 Speech--For Abolition of the JUAC"
   A one-page summary of excerpts from the speech, and a page of supporting editorials.
   Price: $5.00 per thousand, plus postage

4. "Time for Abolition"
   A brief description of the efforts made to abolish the HUAC; a listing of individual, organizational, and press criticism of the Committee; and excerpts from the two recent Supreme Court decisions.
   Price: Upon request

5. Other materials available on request.

E. Available from:
Bay Area Student Committee for the Abolition of the House Committee on Un-American Activities
2317-B McGee Street
Berkeley 3, California

1. "Analysis of the 'Hoover Report'"
   A student refutation to FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover's published allegations that the San Francisco demonstrations were Communist inspired and led.
   Price: 35¢ each

2. "In Search of the Truth"
   A student refutation, point by point, to the HUAC film, "Operation Abolition." Also contained are descriptions of the preparation for the student protest, reprints of newspaper editorials, and reprints of The Reporter magazine article and the Herblock cartoon on the film.

Price: 15¢ each, $3.00 per thousand

3. "Black Friday"

An extensive description of the planning of the San Francisco demonstrations, the events of the three days, and the subsequent newspaper coverage. Reprinted from "The Californian"

Price: 25¢ each

4. "Why it Happened in San Francisco"
"14,000 to 1, But the Inquisition Goes On"

Two articles, reprinted from the June, 1960 issue of Frontier magazine, which discuss both the student protest and the abolition effort.

Price: 25¢ each

5. A 33 1/3 rpm long play record, cut from tapes made in San Francisco on the day of the student demonstrations, May 13, 1960. The record presents a picture of the demonstrations somewhat different from the widely-circulated film, "Operation Abolition."

Price: $2.00 each, 3 for $5.00

6. Other materials available on request.

Note: Bulk rates available on BASCAHCAU materials. On all materials listed above add 15¢ postage for 1-3 items, 25¢ for 4-6 items, 35¢ for 7 or more items.

F. Available from:

Emergency Civil Liberties Committee
421 Seventh Avenue
New York 1, New York

1. "For Abolition of the Inquisitorial Committees of Congress"

An appeal for abolition of the HUAC, written by Harvey O'Connor

Price: 5¢ each

2. "Lloyd Barenblatt v. United States: Dissenting Opinions"

A complete record of the Black and Brennan dissents in the Barenblatt case

Price: 25¢ each, $15.00 per hundred

3. "The Watkins Decision of the U.S. Supreme Court"

A complete record of both the court decision and the Clark dissent in the Watkins case

Price: 25¢ each, $15.00 per hundred

4. Other materials available on request

G. Available from:
National Student Committee for Civil Liberties
Room 2A
325 West 100th Street
New York 27, New York

1. "The Un-American Committee in San Francisco"
A reprint from the Autumn 1960 issue of New University Thought containing three articles describing the protest against the May hearings of the HUAC in San Francisco, as well as containing a partial transcript of those hearings.
Price: $8.00 per hundred, bulk prices on request.

H. Available from:
Committee of First Amendment Defendants
P.O. Box 564
Radio City Station
New York 19, New York

1. "Behind the Bars for the First Amendment"
Descriptions of the cases of the 36 Americans currently facing prison sentences for their refusal to answer questions put to them by Congressional investigatory groups.
Price: Upon request.

RECENT NEWS CONCERNING THE HOUSE COMMITTEE ON UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES

Prepared by the United States National Student Association

1) By a vote of 4/2 to 6, the House of Representatives defeated a move to cut the Committee's appropriation for the coming year, and thus restrict its activities. The move to cut the appropriation was headed by Congressman James Roosevelt (D-Cal.), who has been leading Congressional opposition to the Committee. The approved appropriation calls for $331,000 for the Committee's operations during the coming year.

2) A sharply divided Supreme Court handed down a 5-4 decision affirming the Committee's constitutional right to investigate subversion. The decision sent Frank Wilkinson and Carl Braden, both of whom had refused to cooperate with the Committee on first amendment grounds, to jail for a year. The arguments presented on both sides of the case by the Court were especially vigorous.

3) The Department of Defense announced that it was now preparing a new film to replace the Committee's highly-criticized version of the San Francisco demonstrations. Although the Defense Department indicated no criticism of the current film, "Operation Abolition," it was understood that the new film would replace "Abolition" for all Army, Navy, and Air Force showings.

4) The National Council of Churches of Christ, meeting in convention, approved a resolution citing the distorions in "Operation Abolition" and urging its membership to present the "other side" if the film were shown.

5) University of California student Robert Meisenbach goes on trial this month, charged with starting the San Francisco "riot" last spring. The film "Operation Abolition," the report of FBI director J. Edgar Hoover, and statements by local authorities have insisted that Meisenbach was responsible for rushing a police officer and hitting the officer with his club, thus necessitating the use of fire hoses outside the Committee hearing room. The prosecution, reportedly, will charge Meisenbach with the officer after, not before, the hoses were turned on, thus refuting the charge that students started the "riot".

HIGH COURT BACKS HOUSE RED PANEL IN CONTEMPT CASES

5-4 Rulings Broadly Uphold Investigating Power and Sustain 2 Convictions

Black in Sharp Dissent

Finds Freedom Imperiled by Decisions Jailing Critics of Congress Committee

(From the New York Times, Tuesday February 28, 1961)

Washington, Feb. 27--A bitterly divided Supreme Court upheld in broad terms today the investigating power of the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

By votes of 5 to 4 the court affirmed the contempt convictions of two critics of the House group who refused to testify about possible Communist affiliations. They were Frank Wilkinson of Los Angeles and Carl Braden of Louisville, Ky.

The dissenters charged that the court had opened the way for the House committee to intimidate its critics by investigating them. The majority said the mere fact that a man was a critic did not immunize him from inquiry if the committee had reason to think he had Communist affiliations.

Justice Hugo L. Black, in two passionate and despairing dissents, accused the majority of following "a constitutional doctrine that is steadily sacrificing individual control."

Finds Freedom Imlperiled

"It is already past the time," Justice Black said, "when people who recognize and cherish the life-giving and life-preserving qualities of the freedoms protected by the Bill of Rights can afford to sit complacently by while those freedoms are being destroyed by sophistry and dialectics."

The majority opinions in both cases were written by Justice Potter Stewart. Joining him were Justices Felix Frankfurter, Tom C. Clark, John Marshall Harlan and Charles E. Whittaker.

Justice Black's dissents were joined by Chief Justice Earl Warren and Justice William O. Douglas. Justice Douglas wrote separate dissents in both cases, joined by the other two, and in the Braden case by Justice William J. Brennan Jr. In the Wilkinson case Justice Brennan wrote his own dissent.

40 Other Cases Pending

More than forty other contempt of Congress cases are now at various stages in the lower courts. While today's decisions do not necessarily mean that all these other witnesses will lose their legal fights, certainly their chances look dimmer.

The significance of the decisions is that a firm and consistent, albeit narrow, majority of the Supreme Court refuses to put tight legal or constitutional limitations on Congressional investigating committees.

The same five-man majority upheld the contempt conviction of Lloyd Barenblatt in 1959. That case in effect cut back on the sweep of the court's decision in 1957 in the case of John T. Watkins, when the court said a Congressional committee must inform witnesses of the purpose of its questions.

Justice Stewart went out of his way today to disassociate himself and the court from the House committee. In stating his Braden opinion in the courtroom he added at the end this comment, which did not appear in the printed text:

"Of course it is unnecessary for me to say that these opinions do not imply any personal views as to the wisdom or unwidsom of the creation or continuance of this committee."

The Wilkinson and Braden cases started the same day - July 30, 1958, in Atlanta. Both men appeared that day before a subcommittee of the House group, refused to answer questions and were cited for contempt. Upon conviction, each drew a year in prison.

Fought the Committee

Mr. Wilkinson, a former housing official in Los Angeles, had been campaigning against the Un-American Activities Committee and had gone to Atlanta to arouse opposition to it. He contended that he was subpoenaed only because he was such an opponent.

He was asked whether he was a member of the Communist party. He declined to answer that or any other questions on the ground that Congress could not constitutionally inquire into such matters of beliefs and association.

Justice Stewart found that the committee had a legitimate legislative purpose--the investigation of Communist infiltration and propaganda in the South. And he said Congress had authorized such an inquiry.

He then rejected the argument that the committee was not authorized to investigate its own critics.

"We can find nothing to indicate," Justice Stewart said, "that it was the intent of Congress to immunize from interrogation all those (and there are many) who are opposed to the existence of the Un-American Activities Committee."

Justice Stewart also dismissed the contention that, whatever the general purpose of its Atlanta hearings, the committee had called Wilkinson only to "censure him because he was a critic.

'Speculation Avoided'

He said the circumstances "do not necessarily lead to the conclusion that the subcommittee's intent was personal persecution." And in any case, he went on, "it is not for us to speculate as to the motivations of individual members of the subcommittee."

Finally, Justice Stewart said there was no constitutional barrier because Wilkinson was engaging in legitimate political activity. Congress, he said, has the right to look into Communist "manipulation and infiltration" of such activities.

Justice Douglas argued in his dissent that the committee had subpoenaed Wilkinson because he was a critic. And he said that the House resolution setting up the committee should be construed not to include such an investigation.

Unless "it is 'Un-American' to criticize, impeach and berate the committee and to seek to have it abolished," Justice Douglas said, the House had given the committee no power to investigate its critics.

Justice Brennan in his dissent said that "the dominant purpose" of calling Wilkinson was "not to gather information in aid of law-making" but to harass him. He rejected that as not a valid legislative purpose.

Intimidations Foreseen

Justice Black's dissent was on constitutional grounds. He said the result of the committee's investigations - especially investigations of critics - would be to intimidate all who disagreed with it and perpetuate its own power.

[illegible] people in our [illegible] who will have the courage to speak out against such a formidable opponent," Justice Black wrote.

"If the present trend continues, this already small number will necessarily dwindle as their ranks are thinned by the jails.

"Government by consent will disappear to be replaced by government by intimidation because some people are afraid that this country cannot survive unless Congress has the power to set aside the freedoms of the First Amendment at will.

"I can only reiterate my firm conviction that these people are tragically wrong. This country was not built by men who were afraid and it cannot be preserved by such men."

Probable Cause Found

Justice Stewart emphasized in his opinion that the committee must have probable casue to call a witness. Here, he said, there was such cause, since another witness had identified Wilkinson as a Communist.

But Justice Black scoffed at this reasoning. He said many public officials, including Supreme Court justices, were called Communists these days. He suggested that the committee could always find someone to label as a Communist a person it wanted to investigate because he was a critic of the committee.

Mr. Braden, a former newspaper man, was once prosecuted for sedition in Kentucky in a case growing out of his part in moving a Negro family into a home in a white area of Louisville. He, too, contended he was subpoenaed only as a critic of the committee.

He refused to answer several questions. The only one considered by the court today was whether he was a Communist when he wrote a letter urging people to write to Congress against pending anti-sedition legislation.

Relied on Watkins Case

Braden argued that his refusal to answer should not be considered willful contempt because he had relied on the Watkins case in good faith. Justice Stewart dismissed that contention.

Justice Douglas's dissent went on that point, saying that Braden was entitled to rely on the Watkins decision since he had been questioned before the Barenblatt case had limited it. Justice Black again went on constitutional grounds.

Rowland Watts of New York argued for Wilkinson and Kevin T. Maroney for the Government in that case. Leonard B. Boudin of New York and John M. Coe of Pensacola, Fla., represented Braden, and J. Walter Yeagley argued for the Government.

Tonight Wilkinson issued a statement saying:

"We will not save free speech if we are not prepared to go to jail in its defense. I am prepared to pay that price."

An editorial from the New York Times

Wednesday, March 1, 1961

THE COURT AND CONGRESS

The Supreme Court, dividing 5 to 4, has once again upheld the power of the House Committee on Un-American Activities to make witnesses say whether they are members of the Communist party. The Watkins case of 1957, which implied that Congressional investigations were subject to severe constitutional limits, is a fading landmark. The court holds instead to the path it laid out in 1959 when it affirmed the contempt conviction of a teacher, Lloyd Barenblatt, for refusing to answer the committee's questions.

Those who believe, as we do, that the Committee on Un-American Activities has been an instrument of repression and a disgrace to Congress are bound to be moved by the eloquent words of yesterday's dissenters. In all likelihood, as the dissenters said, the two witnesses involved, Frank Wilkinson and Carl Braden, were subpoenaed largely because they were critics of the committee. Nor does it help to say, as the majority did, that the committee had cause to call them because other witnesses had identified them as Communists; Justice Black noted that it is too easy to call someone a Communist today.

Moreover, the majority says that the court cannot speculate on the motives of committee members for calling a witness. If that is so, then all the committee need do is state a remotely plausible official reason for an inquiry, and the fact that it may really be harassing its critics is put beyond judicial scrutiny.

But it is easy to attack the Supreme Court for its resolution of what are, after all, extremely difficult problems in law and government. The issues are not so simple as the dissenters suggested, nor is their tone of despair altogether justified.

For one thing, it must be remembered that the only governmental action here was a request for information from the citizen. If the question about party membership tends to inhibit freedom of belief, still it is infinitely less repressive than, for example, bringing a criminal prosecution against a man solely because he is a member of the Communist party. That issue is also before the court, and still awaits decision.

Nor has the majority forsworn all judicial control over Congressional inquiries. All it has said here is that, after laying some groundwork, a committee may ask a witness about present Communist party membership. Other questions and other circumstances, such as clearer indications of a committee campaign of intimidation, may produce different legal results. Many other contempt cases are now in or approaching the Supreme Court, and it is to be hoped and expected that the court will deal with them particularly, on their facts.

There is, finally, the argument against relying on the courts to correct the excesses of Congressional committees. Congress, for all its faults, is a representative arm of Government, and it must be allowed to govern. Those who want the courts to stop this committee might feel differently if the judiciary interfered with an investigation into, say, racketeering or payola or price-fixing. In the long run the corrective to the excesses of the House Committee on Un-American Activities must come from Congress itself, and from the American people.

HOUSE VOTES FUND FOR RED INQUIRIES

Backs Unit on Un-American Activities by 412 to 6

(From the New York Times, Thursday, March 2, 1961)

Washington, March 1--The House of Representatives, in an endorsement of its Committee on Un-American Activities, gave the investigating group $331,000 today to carry on its work in the current year. The vote was 412 to 6 for the appropriation.

The action followed an exchange in which the committee chairman, Francis E. Walter, charged that Representative James Roosevelt apparently did not share the view that communism was evil and un-American.

Mr. Roosevelt, Democrat of California, had charged in The Congressional Record that the committee was "a bad institution, which was tended to grow worse in its depredations on our liberties as well as on our democratic reputation in the world today."

Mr. Walter, Democrat of Pennsylvania, discussing Mr. Roosevelt's statement, told the House:

"I was staggered at the extent to which it was based on faulty reasoning, distortion, falsehood and total failure to comprehend even remotely the nature of communism."

"The only way I can interpret his statement is that he objects to the fact that the committee operates on what it believes to be a self-evident principle that communism is evil and un-American. Apparently he does not share that view."

Mr. Walter said that as far as he was concerned "there are no two sides" to communism. This statement drew applause from the House and some from the galleries.

But Representative William Fitts Ryan, Democrat of Manhattan, supported Mr. Roosevelt. He said, "many thoughtful, responsible, sincere citizens share my belief that the Committee on Un-American Activities has violated fundamental rights and privileges on which our nation is founded."

Amendment Bid Fails

Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Ryan tried to open the bill to amendments. They were defeated, 272 to 4, Representatives Robert W. Kastenmeier, Democrat of Wisconsin, and Thomas L. Ashley, Democrat of Ohio, casting the other yes votes.

Mr. Roosevelt then moved to send the bill back to committee with instructions to write in a limitation that he said had already been placed on all other House investigating committees. There was a ban on investigating anything already under inquiry by another committee.

This was shouted down.

Voting against the bill on final passage were Representatives Roosevelt, Ryan, Kastenmeier, Ashley, Edith Green, Democrat of Oregon, and Barratt O'Hare, Democrat of Illinois.

When Mr. Walter took the well of the House to defend the appropriation, members gave him an unusual standing ovation. This presumably was partly an endorsement of his committee and partly a tribute to him. He announced earlier this week that we would not seek re-election after the current Congress.

'COPS SUPPRESSED REPORTS ON RIOT'

(From The San Francisco Chronicle, February 19, 1961)

Police Chief Thomas J. Cahill and Inspector Thomas F. Fitzpatrick, head of his intelligence squad, will be hailed into Superior Court tomorrow and accused of withholding evidence in the House Un-American Activities Committee riots.

The charges were filed over the week end, The Chronicle learned by Jack K. Berman, attorney for Robert Meisenbach, 22-year-old University of California student accused of starting the riot by striking a policeman.

The hearing will be held at 9:30 a.m. before Superior Judge Harry J. Neubarth at the Hall of Justice.

Two police reports are involved. One was by Michael J. Maguire, the sergeant who ordered fire hoses turned on the students in the City Hall rotunda.

The other was by Assistant Inspector Cecil M. Pharris. It told of the alleged attack by Meisenbach on Police Officer Ralph Schaumleffel.

The San Francisco Police Department and the Federal Bureau of Investigation have contended that the Meisenbach attack sparked the riots. After his assault, they said, hoses were turned on to restore order and clear the City Hall rotunda.

Meisenbach pleaded not guilty to an assault charge. He will be tried next month.

Berman, his lawyer, asked last month for all police reports dealing with the riots, and the Police Department was ordered to make them available.

Cahill and Fitzpatrick said no reports by Maguire and Pharris dealing with the Schaumleffel incident existed.

According to their affidavits, they do not have "any police reports, written and/or recorded statements, or any police officer witness to the attack and Officer Ralph Schaumleffel, other than the reports of the officer victim and Police Officer Thomas Walsh . . ."

Berman has not only seen the "nonexistent" Maguire and Pharris's reports, The Chronicle learned, but he has photostatic copies of them.

The reason he wanted Cahill and Fitzpatrick to officially produce them, and admit they were filed, is because both Maguire and Pharris say Meisenbach attacked Schaumleffel before the hoses were turned on, which is contrary to the arguments to be used by the district attorney.

The district attorney's office, according to reliable reports, will contend Meisenbach hit the policeman after the hosing. The sequence would not alter the charge, but this significant contradiction in the prosecution's case, Berman hopes, would shake the entire structure of the DA's case.

Maguire, in the report that allegedly was suppressed by the Police Department, declared:

"I heard one of the group shout, 'Let's get the cops and take the doors' and with that they stormed the barricades, knocking an officer, Ralph Schaumleffel, to the floor with his own club. Many of the students were using their fists and feet in a highly hysterical manner. To bring this situation under control, water was used and the fighting was stopped."

The "non-existent" Pharris report stated:

"They were shouting at the top of their lungs and a few of the agitators were hollering, 'Get the cops,' and 'Crash the doors.' Also, many of the mob were cursing us and the committee. At this time the fire hoses were taken off the racks and laid on the floor. The officers that were outside the barricades and on the sides were particular targets of abuse, and at approximately 1:20 p.m. Officer Ralph Schaumleffel, Co. E, was attacked by the crowd and had his police baton taken from him.

"This baton was used to strike the officer on the head by one Robert J. Meisenbach. This seemed to rouse the crowd, and they tried to get through our barricades and lines to force their way into the hearing room. General rioting then ensued. The mob was driven back to the landing at the top of the grand staircase with the help of fire hoses . . ."

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA 4, PA. • BAring 2-1106 • CABLE, NATSTUD - PHILADELPHIA, PA.

MEMO

To: Members of USNSA's Southern Advisory Board
Re: Student action concerning the House Committee on Un-American Activities

In response to a number of requests from members of the Southern Advisory Board, we are enclosing a copy of working papers the National Student Association office has prepared on the current student protest against the House Committee on Un-American Activities, and the Committee-produced film, "Operation Abolition."

The yellow sheets contain supplementary material, issued since publication of the larger booklet. Additional quantities of both items are available to members of the Southern Advisory Board in limited numbers.

Also enclosed is a copy of a letter being sent to students who continue to inquire about this issue. We would emphasize that this issue remains a crucial one on many college campuses, despite the recent decisions by the Supreme Court and the House of Representatives. Any work you can do in this area would certainly be of value.

Finally, the reprint of the Reporter magazine article and the Herblock cartoon, enclosed in the working papers, is available in quantity to cambat the film. Priced at 100 for $1.00, it can be obtained from this office.

Please let us know if we can be of further help to you in this or any other matter.

Robert Walters
Administrative Assistant

ASSOCIATED WITH: American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U. S. Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • Young Adult Council • Nat'l Citizens Committe for UN Day • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

OFFICERS

President
RICHARD A. RETTIG
University of Washington

Assistant to the President
ELIZABETH R. GARMAN
Skidmore College

•

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

Vice President
JAMES C. SCOTT
Williams College

Administrative Assistant
RICHARD M. MILLER
University of Minnesota, Duluth

Assistant
MANUEL ARAGON, JR.
San Francisco State College

Campus Administrator
HARVEY K. FLAD
University of Colorado

Director, Foreign Student Leadership Project
DONALD F. CLIFFORD
Catholic University of America

•

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Vice President
TIMOTHY L. JENKINS
Howard University

Program Vice President
DAN L. JOHNSTON
Westmar College

Program Vice President
DONALD R. SMITH
University of Texas

Administrative Assistant
ROBERT M. WALTERS
Lehigh University

Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

West Coast Office
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

•

Educational Travel, Inc.
20 West 38th Street
New York 18, New York

2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

•

NATIONAL ADVISORS

Ralph J. Bunche
Under-Secretary
United Nations

John Cogley
Staff Administrator
The Fund for the Republic

James M. Dabbs
President
Southern Regional Council, Inc.

Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame

Russell Kirk
Editor
The University Bookman

Ralph McGill
Publisher
Atlanta Constitution

Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University

Harold E. Stassen

•

Chairman
National Advisory Board
CARL M. GRIP, JR.
Dean of Men
Temple University

Chairman
Financial Advisory Board
RUTH HAGY BROD

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA 4, PA. • BAring 2-1106 • CABLE, NATSTUD - PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Thank you for your recent inquiry concerning the House Committee on Un-American Activities, and the Committee-produced film "Operation Abolition." As you probably know, student groups throughout the country have been leading the responsible fight for reform or abolition of the Committee during the past several months.

Despite a number of somewhat discouraging developments during the past several weeks, most of the concerned students have indicated that they not only plan to remain true to their principles during the coming year, but many have rededicated themselves to this particular challenge.

Responsible critics of the Committee on the adult level, both in the Congress and in many communities have promised to continue in their effort to show to the American people the danger which this type of governmental activity poses to our personal liberty.

During the year, Congressmen will continue to point out Committee excesses which come to their attention. Other organizations, such as the American Civil Liberties Union, have planned an extensive educational campaign which will hopefully provide a greater base for popular support of this cause next year.

The National Student Association certainly hopes that, if you too believe in the necessity of curbing Congressional investigations, you will join in what will undoubtedly be a long struggle. Any number of campus programs can continue to arouse interest in this issue--petitions circulated among students and faculty, speeches, panels, showing the film, meetings, etc.

The attached newsletter provides a brief rundown on the most recent developments in this area. In addition, we have enclosed copies of several newspaper articles pertinent to these developments. Finally, a copy of NSA working papers, prepared several months ago, is also enclosed for your benefit. If you have further questions on this topic please feel free to contact us.

Very truly yours,

Robert Walters

ASSOCIATED WITH American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U S Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • Young Adult Council • Nat'l Citizens Committe for UN Day • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

OFFICERS

President
RICHARD A. RETTIG
University of Washington

Assistant to the President
M. SUZANNE TUOHY
College of St. Teresa

•

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Vice President
TIMOTHY L. JENKINS
Howard University

Program Vice President
DAN L. JOHNSTON
Westmar College

Program Vice President
DONALD R. SMITH
University of Texas

Administrative Assistant
ROBERT M. WALTERS
Lehigh University

Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

West Coast Office
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

•

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

Vice President
JAMES C. SCOTT
Williams College

Administrative Assistant
RICHARD M. MILLER
University of Minnesota, Duluth

Assistant
MANUEL ARAGON, JR.
San Francisco State College

Campus Administrator
HARVEY K. FLAD
University of Colorado

Director, Foreign Student Leadership Project
DONALD F. CLIFFORD
Catholic University of America

•

Educational Travel, Inc.
20 West 38th Street
New York 18, New York

2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

•

NATIONAL ADVISORS

Ralph J. Bunche
Under-Secretary
United Nations

John Cogley
Staff Administrator
The Fund for the Republic

James M. Dabbs
President
Southern Regional Council, Inc.

Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame

Russell Kirk
Editor, Modern Age

Ralph McGill
Publisher
Atlanta Constitution

Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University

Harold E. Stassen

O. Meredith Wilson
President
University of Minnesota

•

Chairman
National Advisory Board
CARL M. GRIP, JR.
Dean of Men
Temple University

Chairman
Financial Advisory Board
RUTH HAGY BROD

Greenville S.C. self survey
"Negro Citizen in Arlington
Second Look at Atlanta

December 6, 1960

Mrs. J. Watkins Dimon
2039 - 13th Street
Columbus, Georgia

Dear Mrs. Dimon:

I am so very sorry to wait so long to send you material and ideas for your community study. As you can imagine I have been pretty much on the road and will be so this week. I will be in the office for the remainder of December and the first two weeks in January, I believe.

I am sending on the study that was done by a Negro group here in Atlanta and also an earlier one done by a group similar to yours in Greenville, South Carolina. Needless to say, you would not have to do an elaborate job or have the results necessarily printed in so fancy a fashion.

When I have time I will send on in addition a list of suggested questions. In hopes of helping you get underway earlier, let me just say that I think the things you would look into would include the following: public schools, how equal are the actual facilities including curriculum, laboratory, etc. Public facilities such as parks and playgrounds; are they segregated or open to all? If segregated, are the facilities equally available and of equal quality? The same questions should be asked about public transportation and other public facilities such as hospitals, health clinics, etc. Employment, public and private: to what extent is public employment open to qualified Negroes? how many private businesses in the Columbus area have government contracts? to what extent do these and other private businesses permit qualified Negroes to be involved in their training programs, employ them for non-traditional jobs, allow them to become promoted, etc. I will go more into detail next week.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Field Director

PMR/sm
Enc.

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA 4, PA. • BAring 2-1106 • CABLE, NATSTUD - PHILADELPHIA, PA.

December 19, 1960

Mr. Paul Rilling
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Paul:

As I mentioned to you the other day, we were not able to plan a meeting of the Southern Advisory Committee for December, since this has been such a full month on everyone's schedule. Instead, we will be holding the meeting in January, and the tentative date is Tuesday, the ~~17th~~ 31st. I am waiting to see if this date is at all acceptable to the few professors on the Committee, since most of them have classes.

In any case, it will be a one day meeting, and I will be sending you particulars on where and what time, as soon as I hear from more of the members. In the meantime, would you please return the enclosed post card, and for heaven's sake, put it down on your calendar as a tentative engagement.

You will find enclosed a brief report on the Project--some of the Advisors in June asked that I keep them informed--especially those who are farther away and that I never see. I know that you shall fall on this report and consume every word of it with glee, since I rarely every see you.

I don't really need to write you this last part, since I could tell you over the phone, but in any case, I do want to thank you for all the help that you have been to me and to the Project during the past twelve months. Since the very beginning, and including the imposition of that extra work at the Seminar, your advice and aid have been invaluable. Since this is the Christmas season as well as the anniversary of the Southern Project, I shall take the liberty to express this deep gratitude and to also wish you the happiness that does lie somewhere in the meaning of Christmas.

Love,

Connie

Constance Curry
Southern Project Director

P.S. I know you won't do this, but please send me any agenda suggestions for the Advisory Committee meeting.

ASSOCIATED WITH American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U S Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • Young Adult Council • Nat'l Citizens Committe for UN Day • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

NATIO
Vice Pre
TIMOTH
Howard
Program
DAN L. JO
Westmar Co
Program Vice
DONALD R. S
University of T
Administrative A
ROBERT M. WALT
Lehigh University

Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E
Atlanta 3, Georgia

West Coast Office
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
JAMES C. SCOTT
Williams College
Administrative Assistant
RICHARD M. MILLER
University of Minnesota, Duluth
Assistant
MANUEL ARAGON, JR.
San Francisco State College
Campus Administrator
HARVEY K. FLAD
University of Colorado
Director, Foreign Student Leadership Project
DONALD F. CLIFFORD
Catholic University of America

Educational Travel, Inc.
20 West 38th Street
New York 18, New York
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

NATIONAL ADVISORS
Ralph J. Bunche
Under-Secretary
United Nations
John Cogley
Staff Administrator
The Fund for the Republi
James M. Dabbs
President
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame
Russell Kirk
Editor, Modern Age
Ralph McGill
Publisher
Atlanta Constitution
Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University
Harold E. Stassen
O. Meredith Wilson
President
University of Minnesota

Chairman
National Advisory Board
CARL M. GRIP, JR.
Dean of Men
Temple University
Chairman
Financial Advisory Board
RUTH HAGY BROD

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA 4, PA. • BAring 2-1106 • CABLE, NATSTUD - PHILADELPHIA, PA.

December 27, 1960

Dear Friend:

The United States National Student Association is pleased to send you one copy each of the 1960-61 Codification of Policy and the 1959-60 Summary Report. In these two publications you will find the past work of the Association described fully, as well as the prospects for the coming year spelled out in the resolutions of the 13th National Student Congress.

During the course of the 1960-61 year, many issues will be facing the students of the country ranging from the Moscow Youth Forum to the National Defense Education Act. You will be informed at irregular intervals of the course of action that USNSA is pursuing with respect to each of these important issues.

The staff of the National Student Association invites you to keep in contact with events by personal correspondence as well as through the several mailings that you will receive.

Best wishes for the coming New Year.

Sincerely yours,

Richard A. Rettig

Richard A. Rettig
President

ASSOCIATED WITH American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U. S. Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • Young Adult Council • Nat'l Citizens Committe for UN Day • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

OFFICERS

President
RICHARD A. RETTIG
University of Washington

Assistant to the President
M. SUZANNE TUOHY
College of St. Teresa

•

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Vice President
TIMOTHY L. JENKINS
Howard University

Program Vice President
DAN L. JOHNSTON
Westmar College

Program Vice President
DONALD R. SMITH
University of Texas

Administrative Assistant
ROBERT M. WALTERS
Lehigh University

Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

West Coast Office
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

•

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

Vice President
JAMES C. SCOTT
Williams College

Administrative Assistant
RICHARD M. MILLER
University of Minnesota, Duluth

Assistant
MANUEL ARAGON, JR.
San Francisco State College

Campus Administrator
HARVEY K. FLAD
University of Colorado

Director, Foreign Student Leadership Project
DONALD F. CLIFFORD
Catholic University of America

•

Educational Travel, Inc.
20 West 38th Street
New York 18, New York

2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

•

NATIONAL ADVISORS

Ralph J. Bunche
Under-Secretary
United Nations

John Cogley
Staff Administrator
The Fund for the Republic

James M. Dabbs
President
Southern Regional Council, Inc.

Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame

Russell Kirk
Editor, Modern Age

Ralph McGill
Publisher
Atlanta Constitution

Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University

Harold E. Stassen

O. Meredith Wilson
President
University of Minnesota

•

Chairman
National Advisory Board
CARL M. GRIP, JR.
Dean of Men
Temple University

Chairman
Financial Advisory Board
RUTH HAGY BROD

2029-13th St.
Columbus, Ga.
Jan. 1, 1961

Mr. Paul Killing
Southern Regional Council
Room 201, 5 Forsyth St., N.W.
Atlanta 3, Ga.

Dear Mr. Killing:

Thank you for the materials you have sent, including your letter with suggested questions. Mrs. Masuck, who was at the meeting when you were here, has also shared these because she will help to set up some study.

She has worked with

League of Women Voters' studies — particularly the one on Know Your Town. What we are puzzled about is how to get various agencies to give out information, particularly when they know we would like to print it. The League even had difficulty getting information when this explosive issue was not involved.

Would it be better to concentrate on one area — as employment in federal agencies where we can get beyond the local sources for facts?

We need desperately to do something – but we need to have some degree of success in view, some prospect of getting somewhere to spur the beginning of such a project.

As we read through the studies from your office, we noted the favorable climate in the community for such surveys. We also noted there were cooperating agencies or groups. We are still looking for both – knowing they will come, but as yet the hostile attitude of some has put them in eclipse.

Mrs. Masuck visited Mrs. Walter Paschal during the holidays. They discussed what we'd like to do, but how, even with your thoughtful suggestions, we haven't been able to corral the forces we need to push such a project to completion. Mrs. Paschal suggested that Joan write to Dr. Hocking and ask the Executive Committee of the Ga. Council to discuss our situation and make recommendations at their next meeting.

We're latching on to all possible leads. If we do work on employment, do you have any helps on that in the way of printed materials - or a person who has worked in this area?

Thank you again, Happy New Year! Annie D. Damon

January 19, 1961

Mr. James Wood
Southern Christian Leadership Conference
208 Auburn Avenue, N. E.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear James:

Here are the figures that could be gleaned from our newsclip files. Let us know if we can be of further help.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PMR/sm

NEGRO REGISTRATION IN FULTON COUNTY

1949 - 1960

Year	Negro Population	Registered	Percentage
1949		25,016
1950	99,347	20,257 (apx.)	20%
1951
1952	148,400	19,362	13%
1953		20,000
1954	159,300
1955	169,700
1956		24,441
1957	174,000
1958	176,600	28,414	16%
1959	181,000	31,163	17%
1960		34,642

January 23, 1961

Rabbi Jacob Rothschild
1589 Peachtree Street, N. E.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Rabbi Rothschild:

Following up our phone conversation today, I am enclosing a letter which you may use as is or revised in writing to other board members. I am also enclosing a suggested sample letter of a sort that you or they might wish to send. Mr. Dabbs approves the idea. I am including a list of our board members. The white group is particularly relative in this case. Harold and I thought it might save some trouble to write to a selected group of those who might be particularly helpful or likely to respond. Such a list would include the following:

Mr. Dabbs
Mr. Wright
Mr. Paul Christopher
Mr. Herbert Davidson
Mr. Harry Golden
Mr. Paul Green
Dr. Guy Johnson
Dr. J. M. Richards
Dr. Walter Sharp
Mr. James Stokely
Dr. Bell Wiley
Dr. H. Franklin Williams

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PMR/sm
Enclosures

January 25, 1961

Mrs. J. Watkins Dimon
2039 - 13th Street
Columbus, Georgia

Dear Mrs. Dimon:

Please excuse my delay in answering your letter of January 1. I have been in and out of the office and we have been somewhat preoccupied with developments in Athens and Atlanta as you may imagine.

I am not sure that I have much insight that would help you further with your survey problems in Atlanta. I am glad that Mrs. Masuck was able to discuss the matter with Mrs. Paschall recently. I was unable to attend the recent executive committee meeting of the Georgia Council and hope they were able to make some useful recommendations to you.

You ask how you can get various agencies to give out information which you may need. I have three ideas, none of them particularly helpful. One is that much of the information you may need is a matter of common knowledge and may be ascertained with just a little nosing around. Such things as what facilities are available to whites and Negroes in the area of public recreation, etc. Some information you can get by personal contact and acquaintance with personnel in some agencies and departments. Then, too, sometimes you can get information by promising not to identify the source. For instance, if you are putting out a report indicating how many factories employ how many Negroes in what capacities, you could agree not to name the plants concerned in any public report that you might make. Our Council in Charlottesville, Virginia was able to get quite a bit of information on merit employment in this manner.

You ask would it be better to concentrate on one area of the problem such as employment in federal agencies "where we can get beyond the local sources for facts?" Whether you survey one problem area or the total situation is pretty much a matter of choice or judgment. I think,however, that you would not be able to get the facts on employment in federal agencies by going beyond the local sources. You could, of course, write to Dr. Ross Clinchy, director of the President's Committee on Government Employment Policy, Washington, D. C. and indicate your concern and ask for any information that might be available. I believe you would find, however, that you would still have to go to local sources for the information unless you could persuade the President's Committee itself to survey this problem in Columbus as it has in four Southern communities to date.

I will continue to try to send you material from other communities that might help. Let me know anything else that we can do.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PMR/sm

January 25, 1961

Mr. Lucius Pitts
Georgia Teachers and Education Association
201 Ashby Street, N. W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Lucius:

I have just noted the official announcement of your scheduled departure June 1. You will be a severe loss to the forces for progress in Georgia, but no one can say that your kind of skills are not also needed in the benighted state of Alabama.

Congratulations on your new position. I hope you find the exalted hights of a college presidency somewhat calming and soothing to the nerves. Lest you settle down too much, I will, of course, pass on your dossier to the Alabama Council on Human Relations.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PMR/sm

MINUTES OF THE SOUTHERN PROJECT
ADVISORY COMMITTE MEETING

January 31, 1961

The meeting began at approximately 9:30 a.m. in the lounge of the YWCA Edgewood and Ivy Streets, Atlanta, Georgia. Timothy Jenkins, National Affairs Vice-President of NSA, served as chairman for the meeting.

Attending the meeting were: Reverend Will Campbell, National Council of Churches; Mr. Arthur Levin, Anti-Defamation League; Mr. James McBride Dabbs and Mr. Paul Rilling, Southern Regional Council; Dr. C. H. Parrish, University of Louisville; Reverend Charles Jones, Chapel Hill, N. C.; Miss Martha Morrison; Mr. Richard Ramsay, American Friends Service Committee; Miss Ella Baker, YWCA; Mr. Richard Rettig and Mr. Timothy Jenkins, U.S. National Student Association; Miss Constance Curry and Miss Carol Lukei, Southern Project.

Invited but unable to attend were: Mr. Maxwell Hahn, the Field Foundation; Dr. Rufus Clement, Atlanta University; Dr. Benjamin Mays, Morehouse College; Dr. Warren Ashby, Women's College of UNC; Reverend Thomas Clancy, S.J., Loyola University; Mr. Herluf Jensen, National Student Christian Federation.

DISCUSSION OF DIRECTOR'S REPORT ON THE FIRST YEAR OF THE PROJECT

The Committee discussed the Director's report, copies of which had been sent to them prior to the meeting. It was suggested that more emphasis might be placed on the Director's visits to individual campuses, either by additional paragraphs describing these visits or by the addition of an appendix listing the campuses visited.

Question was also raised about the possible over-emphasis of the sit-in movement in the report. The Committee felt, however, that in light of events last year, the Project had no choice other than to respond to these events. The group stressed the fact that the reporting and communication done by the Project on the student movement had been essential and were certainly as important as formal human relations programming. In discussing the relationship of the Project to the student movement in the coming year, the Committee felt that once again the Director would have to "play it by ear". As long as spontaneity of activity is a vital element in the student movement, it is impossible to spell out the exact role the Project should play. Miss Curry did say, however, that she hoped to spend more time on campus programming, seminars and conferences during the second year.

REPORT ON THE THIRD SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS SEMINAR

The Committee discussed the material they had received on the Third Seminar, and Miss Curry noted that the final report to the Field Foundation would include a section on the reactions of the participants to the Seminar experience. Miss Curry also stated that three fourths of the participants were now actively engaged in human relations work on their campuses and that descriptions of their work would also be included in a final Seminar report.

DISCUSSION OF THE FOURTH SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS SEMINAR

The following ideas and suggestions for the Fourth Seminar were given in the course of discussion:

(1) The Seminar should continue to include students who believe in the ideas and objectives of the Seminar, rather than trying to include students with conservative viewpoints in the hope of converting them.

(2) It would be good to reduce the number of resource persons in order to give the students more time to evaluate and participate themselves. It was suggested that each resource person cover several important topics to insure that all aspects are covered. Also, the program might leave every other day free for the students to discuss among themselves their impressions of the material presented the previous day.

(3) The students should know beforehand that they will have some responsibility to discharge at the Seminar, such as a paper to be written during the course of the three weeks.

(4) The approach of the Seminar should not be entirely scholastic. In many cases an aesthetic presentation of human relations can give a much deeper meaning, and it was suggested that the Seminar emphasize the problem of segregation through art, music, etc.

(5) Since human relations does not mean race relations only, it was suggested that the Seminar have a broader context by trying to include a Jewish student.

(6) An effort should be made to recruit students from campuses which have not sent participants to previous Seminars. The procedure of personal interviews for applicants should be continued.

(7) The Seminar Director and Consultant should meet with Tim Jenkins this spring to review the entire Seminar curriculum and program and discuss new emphases and directions in the Seminar.

(8) In discussing resource persons for the Seminar, the Committee recommended that an honorarium of $50.00 per day should be given to persons who lecture or do this type of work for a living.

SOUTHERN PROJECT BUDGET AND REFINANCING

Miss Curry distributed copies of the financial report of the first year of the Project and explained expenditures that were over or under the allotted budget. She also reported that as of January 1, 1961 the checks from the Field Foundation were being sent directly to the Project account in Atlanta. Under this system, the National Office of NSA will consult with the Southern Project Director on the use of Project funds for Southern programming and travel done by the National office.

The Committee suggested that Dick Rettig check any stipulations for auditing the Project account that were in the agreement with the Field Foundation. The group felt that the account should be audited when the grant terminated.

The question of the Director's salary was then raised. The Committee felt that the Director had proven herself competent in her work, that her salary was generally lower than that of other persons engaged in similar work, and that the experience gained in one year's work had made her even more valuable to the efficient operation of the Project. In light of this, the Committee voted unanimously that the Director's salary be raised by the amount of $1,000 per year.

The Committee then discussed the future of the Project and the possibilities of the continuation of the grant from the Field Foundation. The group felt very strongly that, in consideration of the past work of the Project and the continuing need for this type of work in the South, the Project should be continued after the present grant expires in December, 1961. They voted unanimously to go on record as supporting its continuation and suggested that the Field Foundation be approached on this question sometime this spring after the submission of the annual report on the Project.

NSA AND PROBLEMS OF SOUTHERN MEMBERSHIP

Dick Rettig and Tim Jenkins reported an increasing number of disaffiliations among Southern colleges since the Supreme Court's decision and the sit-in movement, and the subsequent establishment of an organization of Southern white universities, the Southern University Student Government Association (SUSGA). The Committee discussed this problem and offered suggestions as to how these schools could be brought into NSA.

It was felt that if and when these Southern schools decided to affiliate with NSA, their decisions would more than likely be based on the benefits NSA has to offer them. Any overtures that are made should emphasize these benefits gained from affiliation, and the schools should be urged not to stay out of NSA because of the single issue of NSA's stand on Civil Rights. These colleges should also understand that NSA resolutions are not binding on member schools.

One suggestion was that NSA send out a personal communication--not a publication--to member schools and non-member schools, telling them what is available for them through the organization. This communication should not give the impression that Civil Rights is not discussed in NSA, but that it is just one of the many issues confronting students in higher education. Some Committee members suggested that NSA be introduced through groups that are traditionally more liberal than student governments, such as religious organizations. Other members of the Committee felt that NSA might have appeal in the fact that it helps students examine issues for themselves rather than under the control of administrative policies. Dick Rettig brought up the idea of adding a Southern Programming Vice-President to the NSA staff to work and travel in the South and combat this problem of lack of membership. The Committee felt this would be a good idea and suggested that the Taconic Foundation and other foundations interested in the South be approached for the $4000 necessary for this program.

VISIT OF THE RESEARCH INFORMATION COMMITTEE TO THE SOUTH

Dick Rettig and Tim Jenkins reported that a Research Information Committee would be traveling in the South this spring as a result of a result of a resolution passed by the International Student Conference last summer. The resolution provided for a team of students from various countries to visit this country to study the student movement in the South as well as the entire pattern of Southern race relations. They will then prepare a report for the next meeting of the International Student Conference. The Committee agreed that visits to the following cities would help to give a fair picture of the situation in the South: Atlanta, Nashville, Austin, Tuskegee, Montgomery and Little Rock, and possibly Chapel Hill and Louisville. The group suggested, as a general rule, that the team not be shielded from the more discouraging evidences of segregation, but that an effort must be made to show the team that changes are taking place in the South. The Committee said they would be glad to suggest suitable contacts and give help in their own areas when the final itinerary is drawn up.

FUTURE PROGRAMMING IN THE SOUTH

Dick Ramsay reported plans for a human relations seminar for Virginia students to be held in Prince Edward County on February 18th. The purpose of the seminar is to give Virginia students ideas as to the needs of the county and how they can work to fulfill them until public schools are re-opened. The Southern Project will co-sponsor the seminar along with the American Friends Service Committee.

Another potential project may be a workcamp for Mississippi students to be held in Memphis, Tennessee. Some of the Committee members felt that this might be a dangerous undertaking in view of the Mississippi State Sovereignty Commission's investigations and censures. They felt that since these students have probably already had these interracial experiences through their religious groups the risk they would be taking would not be worth it. Others, however, felt that the emphasis of the Project's work should be on the Deep South whenever possible instead of on the border states, and that this idea should not be abandoned. After some discussion it was concluded that this workcamp idea should not be abandoned, but should be explored in the light of cooperation with other agencies and the inclusion of students from other states as well as Mississippi.

The Committee discussed student interest in the situation in Fayette and Haywood Counties in Tennessee and pointed out the difficulties of knowing the kind of aid needed and to whom this aid should be directed. Miss Curry informed the Committee of the proposed idea of having college campuses "adopt" families on a long-range basis, instead of having students try to send van loads to the counties.

Miss Curry also briefly outlined plans for seminars in Texas, Florida, South Carolina and other areas in which the Project will be working during the remainder of the school year.

THE STUDENT MOVEMENT AND THEATER DESEGREGATION

The Committee then discussed the move by many student groups toward a concentration on theater desegregation. It was announced that the move in this new direction would take place on February 1st as a commemoration of the first sit-in demonstration the previous year. Dick Ramsay reported that in some places, such as Texas and North Carolina, demonstrations were already under way.

Tim Jenkins reported that NSA had been doing research to discover which theaters were parts of national chains, so that students outside the South might show their support in the same manner as in lunch counter desegregation efforts.

The question of white student participation in this phase of activity was raised, and the Committee emphasized the importance of having integrated groups carry out theater "stand-ins". It was generally agreed that the amount of white student participation could not be estimated, just as the amount of enthusiasm and response with which this new phase would be met could not yet be foreseen.

DATE OF NEXT COMMITTEE MEETING

The date for the next meeting of the Advisory Committee was set tentatively for the latter part of May or early June, on a Tuesday if possible.

The meeting was adjourned at 5:30 p.m.

* * * * * * * * *

AGENDA

NSA SOUTHERN ADVISORY COMMITTEE MEETING

YWCA, Atlanta, Georgia
January 31, 1961

Chairman: Timothy Jenkins, National Affairs Vice-President, NSA

9:00 a.m. (1) Introductions and announcements: Connie Curry

(2) Discussion of Project Director's Report

(3) Report on Third Southern Student Human Relations Seminar -- Connie Curry, Will Campbell, Paul Rilling, Arthur Levin.

(4) Discussion of Fourth Southern Student Human Relations Seminar

(5) Budget and refinancing of Project

12:30 p.m. Luncheon

(6) NSA and problems of Southern membership

a. Southern University Student Government Association -- Dick Rettig
b. Report of the Fowler Commission and accompanying letter to white Southern schools -- Dick Rettig, Tim Jenkins
c. Addition of a Southern Programming Vice-President and relationship with Project, National Office -- Dick Rettig, Tim Jenkins

(7) Visit of the Research Investigating Committee to the South -- Dick Rettig, Tim Jenkins

(8) Future programming of the Project
a. Prince Edward County Seminar
b. Mississippi work camp in Memphis
c. Fayette and Haywood County, Tennessee
d. Human Relations Seminar, Greensboro, N.C.
e. Texas Human Relations Seminar
f. South Carolina Human Relations meeting

(9) The Move to the Theaters -- Charles Jones, Dick Ramsay
a. White student participation
b. Supporting activities

(10) Other business

(11) Date of next meeting

6:00 p.m. (or thereabouts) Adjournment

Casey
tel manl
N.S. memo
adm memo
NO art
SC speech fac hams - NSA
Field Rept expnsn -
Hoover Rept -

FBC
YW
SVCC
Knoxv
Phil -
Campos
N. exper -
SRC

HELP OUR PUBLIC EDUCATION

HOPE, INC.

50 WHITEHALL ST., S. W., ATLANTA 3, GA. January 30, 1961 JA 5-8460 - 5-8469

Dear Friend:

An effort is currently under way in the General Assembly to repeal the state-wide compulsory school attendance law through H.B. 263. If this bill is passed, thousands of Georgia's children will be deprived of any kind of schooling. Repeal of compulsory attendance strikes at the very heart of public education.

Georgians won a compulsory school attendance law almost a generation ago. In the first year after its passage the number of white students jumped 10%, Negro students 17%. This provides some indication of what might happen if compulsory attendance is repealed. We cannot afford to lose our hard-won educational gains--for during the critical years ahead, Georgia's children need more, not less education.

The Governor's package of school bills already provides for the suspension of compulsory attendance in local communities under certain conditions. Nothing more is needed to provide "maximum freedom of association" -- H.B. 263 goes far beyond protecting our children's freedom of choice. It exposes them to the dangers of ignorance and illiteracy.

You have already shown your concern for public education by participating in Operation Last Chance. We are certain that you will share the distress of Dr. Claude Purcell, State Superintendant of schools and other leading educators at the prospect of repealing the compulsory attendance law.

It is urgent that you get in touch with Speaker of the House, George Smith; House Floor Leader, Frank Twitty, and your own legislators, State Capitol, Atlanta, right away. Tell them that you oppose passage of H.B. 263 or any other proposal to repeal state-wide compulsory attendance.

Warm regards,

Frances R. Breeden

Mrs. Thomas M. Breeden, Chairman
Board of Directors
Legislative Committee

P.S. We have just heard that this bill has been reported out of committee and is rapidly headed for a vote in the House. To be effective, immediate action is necessary.

STATE ADVISORY BOARD • DR. and MRS. E. L. ASKREN, JR.—Atlanta • JAMES BARROW—Athens • W. H. BENSON—Athens
GEORGE H. BOYD—Athens • WILLIS M. BOYD—Adairsville • REV. CHARLES DEMERE—Marietta • DR. and MRS. PAUL L. GARBER—Decatur
REV. HARRY FIFIELD—Atlanta • MOSES D. HAMRICK—Duluth • MISS JOHNNIE HILBURN—Augusta • W. C. HENSON—Cartersville
HENRY T. McINTOSH—Albany • MRS. EDWARD G. MACKAY—Atlanta • DR. and MRS. JOSEPH C. MASSEE—Atlanta • SYLVAN MEYER—Gainesville
DR. McDOWELL RICHARDS—Decatur • RABBI JACOB M. ROTHSCHILD—Atlanta • JAMES O'H. SANDERS—Atlanta
REV. NORMAN O. SHANDS—Atlanta • MRS. M. E. TILLY—Atlanta • JUDSON C. WARD, JR.—Atlanta • EMILY WOODWARD—Vienna

1006 Thurman Street
Montgomery 4, Alabama
January 27, 1961

Mr. Paul Rilling
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
Room 201
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Mr. Rilling:

I write this letter to express deep appreciation to you for the use of the book, Principles of Police Work With Minority Groups, which you loaned me in November 1960. From this document I have excerpted some material which has been of great value to me while serving on a bi-racial police committee here in Montgomery. However, only time will tell whether the delegated authorities will utilize the suggestions which have been made.

This important book is being returned to you together with this letter. Thanks again for your helpfulness and cooperation.

Sincerely yours,

R. D. Crockett

R. D. Crockett

RDC:dad

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA 4, PA. • BAring 2-1106 • CABLE, NATSTUD - PHILADELPHIA, PA.

January 24, 1961

To: Members of the Southern Advisory Committee

From: Constance Curry, Southern Project Director

The meeting of the Southern Advisory Committee will be held on Tuesday, January 31, in Atlanta, Georgia.

Location: YWCA, Corner of Edgewood and Ivy Streets

Time: 9:00 A. M.

Luncheon will be served to us at the YWCA, and we are hoping to have all business completed by 6:00 P. M.

As in the past, I will appreciate your keeping an account of all expenses incurred in attending the meeting so that I may reimburse you.

I have enclosed a copy of the report on the first year of the Project. Several of my advisors have told me not to worry so about getting this report to you before the meeting, because they said, "advisory committees never read those things anyway." Of course I know that this is not true and shall greatly appreciate your suggesting at the meeting any corrections or additions to be made to the report before it is submitted to the Field Foundation. The written report on the Third Southern Student Human Relations Seminar and a complete financial report on the Project will be given to you at the meeting.

Please let me know if you have any questions, and I am looking forward to seeing all of you next week.

ASSOCIATED WITH American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U. S. Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • Young Adult Council • Nat'l Citizens Committe for UN Day • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

OFFICERS

President
RICHARD A. RETTIG
University of Washington

Assistant to the President
M. SUZANNE TUOHY
College of St. Teresa

•

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Vice President
TIMOTHY L. JENKINS
Howard University

Program Vice President
DAN L. JOHNSTON
Westmar College

Program Vice President
DONALD R. SMITH
University of Texas

Administrative Assistant
ROBERT M. WALTERS
Lehigh University

Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

West Coast Office
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

•

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

Vice President
JAMES C. SCOTT
Williams College

Administrative Assistant
RICHARD M. MILLER
University of Minnesota, Duluth

Assistant
MANUEL ARAGON, JR.
San Francisco State College

Campus Administrator
HARVEY K. FLAD
University of Colorado

Director, Foreign Student Leadership Project
DONALD F. CLIFFORD
Catholic University of America

•

Educational Travel, Inc.
20 West 38th Street
New York 18, New York

2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

•

NATIONAL ADVISORS

Ralph J. Bunche
Under-Secretary
United Nations

John Cogley
Staff Administrator
The Fund for the Republic

James M. Dabbs
President
Southern Regional Council, Inc.

Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame

Russell Kirk
Editor, Modern Age

Ralph McGill
Publisher
Atlanta Constitution

Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University

Harold E. Stassen

O. Meredith Wilson
President
University of Oregon

•

Chairman
National Advisory Board
CARL M. GRIP, JR.
Dean of Men
Temple University

Chairman
Financial Advisory Board
RUTH HAGY BROD

FINANCIAL STATEMENT FOR SOUTHERN PROJECT
(December 1, 1959--December 1, 1960)

INCOME (Grant for one year) -- $30,000,00
LESS TOTAL DISBURSEMENTS -- 26,226.62
BALANCE -- $ 3,773.38 (1)

Item	Budget		Expenses
Project Staff and Materials
Project Directors' Salary	$5,000.00		$5,000.00
Travel-Director and NSA Staff	1,500.00		2,134.42 (2)
Campus Program and Resource Materials	1,875.00		283.92 (3)
		$8,375.00		$7,418.34
Third Human Relations Seminar
Salary-Consultant and Asst. Director	750.00		750.00
Travel-Staff and Experts	1,250.00		1,940.72 (4)
Travel-Participants	1,750.00		2,335.44 (5)
Room and Board	4,250.00		3.091.71
Resource Books and Materials	500.00		207.84 (3)
Promotion	250.00		256.52
		8,750.00		8,582.23
Metropolitan, State, Area Conferences
Travel assistance for students	937.50		923.99
Travel--speakers and experts	500.00		369.57
Working papers, materials	1,250.00		62.91 (3)
Local Promotion and Admin.	437.50		210.00
		3,125.00		1,566.47
Project Publications
Workbook	500.00		51.60
Casebook	250.00		-- (7)
Reports	750.00		--
				51.60
Advisory Committee Meetings
Travel-Advisors	800.00		975.30
Travel-Staff	250.00		80,88
Room and Board	200.00	1,250.00	179.71
				1,235.89
Administration and Support	3,500.00		3,500.00
Secretary's Salary	1,000.00		1,598.41 (8)
Office Supplies	1,250.00		189.40
Postage and Shipping	500.00		1,269.18 (9)
Telephone and Telegraph	750.00		815.10
General Administration		7,000.00		7,372.09
TOTALS:	BUDGET	-$30,000.00	EXPENSES	$26,226.62

Numbers in parentheses mean to see note of corresponding number on attached page.

NOTES ON FINANCIAL STATEMENT *

(1) This balance is not an actual figure because of several bills which have not yet been received from the National Office.

(2) Travel expenses for the Director and other NSA staff members are over the budget allotment, because the activities of the student movement this year and the necessity for the Director's attendance at conferences to make initial contacts have called for a great deal of travelling. (The Advisory Committee recommended at the beginning of the Project that the budget allotment for travel be raised.)

(3) All expenses for program and resource materials are less than budget allocations, because in almost all cases it has been possible to obtain these materials free of charge, or at least a discount.

(4) Travel expenses to the Seminar for resource persons are over the budget allotment, because the three-week, instead of two-week, period called for additional resource personnel.

(5) Travel expenses for Seminar participants are over the budget allotment because there were sixteen instead of fifteen participants and because of the great distance to Minneapolis from participants' homes in the South.

(6) Although the two above items are over-expenditures, the total expenses for the Seminar are less than the total budget allotment because room and board expenses at the University were almost $1200 less than the allotment for that item.

(7) The expenses for "Project Publications" are so low because the nature of the Project's work this past year has necessitated no publications other than the "Newsletter" last spring on the sit-in movement.

(8) Expenses for office supplies are greater than the budget allotment because of the necessity of renting and equipping an office, which was not foreseen in the original budget planning.

(9) Expenses for telephone and telegraph are far over the budget allotment because the numerous emergency situations during the sit-ins have necessitated so much immediate communication.

* The Financial Statement and notes concerning it should be read with the understanding that the Project Director was not yet employed when the original budget was drawn up and thus does not know the intent of some budget items nor the figuring on which budget allotments were based.

THE THIRD SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS SEMINAR

August 1-21, 1960

The Third Southern Student Human Relations Seminar was held from August 1-21, 1960, at the University of Minnesota, in conjunction with the 13th National Student Congress, August 22-September 1. The Seminar was a part of the total program of the Southern Student Human Relations Project, which is financed by a grant from the Marshall Field Foundation and administered by the United States National Student Association.

The purpose of the Seminar, as stated in the letter of announcement was to provide for Southern student leaders an intensive study of human relations in the South, for constructive application in their college and community life. The Seminar included sixteen students from white segregated colleges, recently desegregated colleges and predominantly Negro colleges in nine Southern states.

Constance Curry, Director of the Southern Project, was responsible for the direction of the Seminar, with Robert Alexander of Duke University, as Assistant Director, and Reverend Will D. Campbell, Associate Executive Director, Department of Racial and Cultural Relations, National Council of Churches, as Consultant to the Seminar.

PREPARATION FOR THE SEMINAR

Preparation for the Seminar began in March, when letters of announcement, application forms and summaries of the 1959 Seminar program were sent to approximately 200 contacts in the South. Persons receiving this mailing included student government leaders at NSA member colleges in the South, participants at previous Seminars, members of the Southern Advisory Committee, and faculty members and administrators who had been recommended by various human relations agencies.

A total of 37 applications was received, and selections were made by May 20th. Members of the Selection Committee were Reverend Will D. Campbell, Seminar Consultant; Constance Curry, Seminar Director; Leon Marion, World University Service; and Paul Rilling, Southern Regional Council. As suggested by the Southern Advisory Committee, selections were made with attention to leadership potential in the human relations field and with consideration of the following:

(1) Geographical location of college
(2) Balance of men and women participants
(3) Balance of Negro and white participants
(4) Whether or not the college had participated before
(5) Personal interviews (10 of the 16 participants were interviewed or known personally by NSA Staff or Advisory Committee members)

The following students were selected:

Valerie Brown, Texas Christian University, Fort Worth, Tex., Class-'62
William Caldwell, Loyola University, New Orleans, La., Class-'64
Sandra Cason, University of Texas, Austin, Tex., graduate student
Robert Catlett, Virginia Polytechnic Inst., Blacksburg, Va., Class-'63
John Cook, North Carolina State College, Raleigh, N. C., Class-'61
Henrietta Eppse, Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., Class-'63
Maruta Jurbergs, Siena College, Memphis, Tenn., Class-'61
Lois Martin, Hampton Institute, Hampton, Va., Class-'61
Mrs. Clarice Miller, Arkansas A. M. & N., Pine Bluff, Ark., Class-'61
Charles McDew, South Carolina State Coll., Orangeburg, S. C., Class-'62
Ira Robinson, Florida A & M University, Tallahassee, Fla., Class-'61
John Weatherly, Mercer University, Macon, Ga., Class-'62
Robert Williams, Dillard University, New Orleans, La., Class-'61
Jerry Wilson, Wake Forest College, Winston-Salem, N. C., Class-'61
Mrs. Martha Jane Alexander, Duke University, Durham, N. C., Class-'62
Carolee Wood, Greensboro College, Greensboro, N.C., Class-'61

From May through July, a great deal of time was spent in developing the Seminar curriculum and program. (copy attached) At the suggestion of the Southern Advisory Committee, the total Seminar time was lengthened from two weeks to three weeks, with the hope that more time could be spent on techniques of action in campus and community situations. The curriculum was based largely on the 1959 curriculum and planning was done in consultation with Mr. Campbell, Ray Farabee (1958-1959 Seminar Director), and other members of the Advisory Committee. Several new topics for study were included, such as the "sit-in" movement and its meaning for human relations in the South.

During this period, speakers and resource persons were invited to participate in the Seminar, final arrangements were made with the University of Minnesota for room, board and meeting facilities, and resource materials were gathered. Each participant received a selected bibliography and the following materials to be read before coming to the Seminar:

(1) Seeds of Time by Henry Savage
(2) Go South to Sorrow by Carl Rowan
(3) The Strange Career of Jim Crow by C. Vann Woodward
(4) Southern Schools: Progress and Problems (Southern Education Reporting Service)
(5) June issue of Southern School News
(6) "Status of School Segregation-Desegregation in the Southern and Border States" (Year's end summary of the Southern School News.)

The Consultant, Mr. Campbell, also wrote to each participant before the Seminar, giving them names of human relations personnel in their area and suggestions on information they might try to gather from their community.

Much of the material listed above, as well as resource material used during the Seminar, was received without cost or with discounts from the Southern Regional Council, the Anti-Defamation League, the American Friends Service Committee, Group for the Advancement of Psychiatry, the Southern Education Reporting Service, the American Jewish Committee, the Congress on Racial Equality and the NAACP.

THE SEMINAR IN OPERATION

The Seminar began on the afternoon of August 1st, with registration and assignment of rooms. Participants, staff and resource persons were housed in one wing of Centennial Hall and all meetings took place in a lounge in the same wing. Meals were served in the cafeteria of the same dormitory, and the University extended library facilities to participants, as well as the recreational facilities in the Student Union Building.

Seminar participants and personnel were introduced at a banquet on the first evening, and Mr. Carl Rowan of the Minneapolis Tribune addressed the group on "America in the Mid-Twentieth Century."

For the next three weeks the Seminar generally followed the same pattern. The group met at 9:00 A.M. and 1:30 P.M. each weekday, and after a brief presentation from the resource person on a specific topic, there was a question period and discussion by the students. The content of the topical presentations developed from a very general and historical background of race relations in the South, through various factors involved in bringing about changes, such as the church, legal procedures, industry, and labor, to specific methods that students might employ in human relations work on their campus or in their community. The above pattern was supplemented by films, role-playing, panel discussions and assigned reading.

The majority of the resource persons stayed at the Seminar at least one day and night and were able to meet and talk with the students on an informal basis. The following were resource persons or speakers for the Seminar:

Mr. Carl Rown, Reporter, Minneapolis Tribune
Dr. William Van Til, Professor of Education, New York University
Mrs. Wilma D. Stokeley, well-known Southern writer, co-author of Neither Black Nor White
Dr. Herman H. Long, Race Relations Department, American Missionary Association Division, Board of Home Missions, Congregational Christian Churches
Dr. Arnold Rose, Department of Sociology, University of Minnesota
Mr. George Barrett, Attorney, Nashville, Tennessee

Mr. Paul Rilling, Field Director, Southern Regional Council
Mr. Ben Segal, Education Director, International Union of Electrical Workers
Reverend James Lawson, Nashville, Tennessee
Mr. Arthur Levin, Director, Southeastern Office, Anti-Defamation League
Miss Jean Fairfax, National Representative of Southern Programs, American Friends Service Committee
Mr. Marion A. Wright, Vice-President, Southern Regional Council
Mr. Ronnie Dugger, Editor, Texas Observer

A list of assigned reading was given to each participant and the materials were given out each day to be read in preparation for the following day's lecture and discussion. This reading material was supplemented by a library that included books and pamphlets on curriculum topics, materials of various human relations agencies and samples of literature used by White Citizens' Councils and similar groups.

The addition of the third week to the Seminar program made it possible to have free time on weekends and most evenings and gave ample opportunity for participants to be together on a purely social basis. The bridge games, bull sessions, bowling and singing, and some planned activities, such as birthday parties for three of the students, comprised a very meaningful part of the total experience of the Seminar.

PARTICIPATION IN THE 13th NATIONAL STUDENT CONGRESS

Although attendance at the Congress was not obligatory this year, Seminar participants were encouraged to remain, and fourteen of the sixteen students stayed for the Congress from August 21st until September 1st. During these ten days, the students became fully integrated into all Congress activities, as voting delegates, alternates or observers. Participants often acted as resource persons in the workshops on human relations and were most active in the writing and passing of resolutions on school desegregation, voting rights, the sit-in movement and other issues which called for legislation by the Congress. Most of the students were also very active in their regional group activities during the Congress, and two of the participants were elected as chairman of their region for the school year.

SCHEDULE AND CURRICULUM

THIRD SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS SEMINAR

August 1 - August 21, 1960

Centennial Hall, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minnesota

MONDAY, AUGUST 1

Afternoon — Registration and assignment of rooms - Lobby, Centennial Hall

6:30 p.m. — Banquet - Introduction of seminar participants and personnel

Address: "America in the Mid-Twentieth Century"
Mr. Carl T. Rowan, Reporter, Minneapolis Tribune

TUESDAY, AUGUST 2

9:00 a.m.

TOPIC: The National Student Association and the Southern Student Human Relations Seminar

CONSIDERATIONS: The history and purpose of NSA; the purpose of the Seminar and the Southern Project; discussion of what each participant expects from the Seminar

PERSONNEL: Curtis Gans, National Affairs Vice-President, NSA, and Constance Curry, Seminar Director

1:30 p.m.

TOPIC: The Meaning of Human Relations

CONSIDERATIONS: Inter-group relations as a specific aspect of human relations; inter-group relations as a developing vocational field

PERSONNEL: Dr. William Van Til, Professor of Education and Chairman of the Department of Secondary Education, New York University

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 3

9:00 a.m.

TOPIC: The Changing South

CONSIDERATIONS: History and economics of the South; the effects of industrialism; changing patterns of race relations; factors affecting Southern attitudes

(Aug. 3)	PERSONNEL:	Mrs. Wilma D. Stokeley, well-known Southern writer; co-author of Neither Black Nor White
1:30 p.m.	TOPIC:	The Changing South (continued)
	CONSIDERATIONS:	Role of Segregation in the South; patterns in different regions of the South; arguments put forth for and against racial practices in the South
	PERSONNEL:	Mrs. Stokeley

THURSDAY, AUGUST 4

9:00 a.m.	TOPIC:	The Negro in America
	CONSIDERATIONS:	History of the Negro in the U.S.; the Negro community; misconceptions about the Negro; effects of segregation; the NAACP and efforts to secure equal rights; the work of the Urban League
	PERSONNEL:	Dr. Herman H. Long, Director, Race Relations Department, American Missionary Association Division, Board of Home Missions, Congregational Christian Churches
1:30 p.m.	TOPIC:	The Negro Community in the South
	CONSIDERATIONS:	Effects of changes in the South on the Negro community; on attitudes toward Negroes; Negro leadership and new forces that are emerging
	PERSONNEL:	Dr. Long

FRIDAY, AUGUST 5

9:00 a.m.	TOPIC:	Race and Prejudice
	CONSIDERATIONS:	Nature of race; racial prejudice; lociological effects of segregation
	PERSONNEL:	Dr. Arnold Rose, Department of Sociology, University of Minnesota
1:30 p.m.	TOPIC:	Race and Prejudice (continued)
	CONSIDERATIONS:	Psychological aspects of prejudice; discrimination, segregation, effects on individuals
	PERSONNEL:	Dr. Rose

SATURDAY, AUGUST 6

9:00 a.m. Evaluation of first week of Seminar program. (Discussion of evaluations written by each student in answer to the following questions:)

(1) Thus far in the Seminar, what do you feel the Seminar has offerred you educationally, socially, spiritually?

(2) Up to this point, what criticisms would you offer?

(3) What would you like to learn from the Seminar: What areas not on curriculum would you like to see scheduled?

(FREE TIME UNTIL MONDAY MORNING)

MONDAY, AUGUST 8

9:00 a.m. TOPIC: Supreme Court Decisions and Legal Aspects of Desegregation

CONSIDERATIONS: Legal history of segregation; the Constitution and bases for court decisions; implications of decisions; effects and implementation; retaliatory action by Southern State governments

PERSONNEL: Mr. George Barrett, Attorney, Nashville, Tennessee

1:30 p.m. TOPIC: Continuation of morning discussion

PERSONNEL: Mr. Barrett

TUESDAY, AUGUST 9

9:00 a.m. TOPIC: Public School Desegregation

CONSIDERATIONS: Compliance with the Supreme Court Decision in various sections of the South; effects of and problems in desegregation in public schools; study of communities that have desegregated successfully

PERSONNEL: Mr. Paul Rilling, Field Director, Southern Regional Council

1:30 p.m. TOPIC: Desegregation in Higher Education

CONSIDERATIONS: History of college desegregation; reaction of students, faculty administration and community; problem areas and power structure involved, i.e. state legislature, Board of Regents, Board of Trustees

(Aug. 9) PERSONNEL: Mr. Rilling

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 10

9:00 a.m. TOPIC: Southern Politics; Precinct to Party

CONSIDERATIONS: Ward politics - the grass roots; the decision makers; the absence of the two-party system in the South; the role of the South in the national parties

PERSONNEL: Mr. Rilling

(FREE TIME)

THURSDAY, AUGUST 11

9:00 a.m. TOPIC: The Moral and Ethical Aspects of Segregation

PERSONNEL: Reverend Will Campbell

1:30 p.m. TOPIC: Race and the Bible; Race and the Church

PERSONNEL: Reverend Will Campbell

FRIDAY, AUGUST 12

9:00 a.m. TOPIC: Labor and the South

CONSIDERATIONS: Industrialization; relation between labor and the race question

PERSONNEL: Mr. Ben Segal, Education Director, International Union of Electrical Workers

1:30 p.m. TOPIC: Employment Practices in the South

CONSIDERATIONS: Federal employment; employment in industry, professions and public services

PERSONNEL: Mr. Segal

(FREE TIME UNTIL MONDAY MORNING - PICNIC TO NEARBY RIVER ON SATURDAY)

MONDAY, AUGUST 15

9:00 a.m. TOPIC: Techniques of Action

(Aug. 15)	CONSIDERATIONS:	The student sit-in movement - history, interpretation and significance; meaning of non-violence; case studies of different communities; relation to faculty, administration and Negro and white adult community (Role-playing in a lunch-counter sit-in)
	PERSONNEL:	Reverend James Lawson, Nashville, Tenn.
1:30 p.m.	TOPIC:	Techniques of Action (continued)
	CONSIDERATIONS:	Jail vs. bail; boycotts; picketing; voter registration
	PERSONNEL:	Reverend James Lawson
7:00 p.m.	TOPIC:	Techniques of Action (continued)
	CONSIDERATIONS:	Impact of sit-in movement on white campuses; responsibility of Southern white students; future of movement and opportunities for cooperation
	PERSONNEL:	Reverend James Lawson, Constance Curry

TUESDAY, AUGUST 16

9:00 a.m.	TOPIC:	Anti-Semitism in the South
	CONSIDERATIONS:	History of Anti-Semitism; relation between growth of anti-semitism and progress in integration - reasons for this; recent incidents and reactions; role of ADL
	PERSONNEL:	Mr. Arthur Levin, Director, Southeastern Office, Anti-Defamation League
1:30 p.m.	TOPIC:	Continuation of morning discussion
	PERSONNEL:	Mr. Levin

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 17

9:00 a.m.	TOPIC:	Campus Human Relations Programming
	CONSIDERATIONS:	What responsibility does the student have in human relations programming; possibilities at Negro, white and de-segregated colleges; role of student government and other campus organizations

(Aug. 17)

	PERSONNEL:	Bob Alexander, Assistant Seminar Directo and Seminar participants - panel
1:30 p.m.	TOPIC:	Inter-racial Programming
	CONSIDERATIONS:	Inter-racial work camps; metropolitan inter-collegiate groups; state student Christian movements; NSA regional programming
	PERSONNEL:	Seminar participants

THURSDAY, AUGUST 18

9:00 a.m.	TOPIC:	Cooperation with the Community
	CONSIDERATIONS:	Community reactions to campus desegregation and human relations programming; violence and community pressures; working with community leaders and law officers
	PERSONNEL:	Miss Jean Fairfax, National Representative of Southern Programs, American Friends Service Committee
1:30 p.m.	TOPIC:	Cooperation with the Community (cont.)
	CONSIDERATIONS:	Organizations working in human relations in the South; various programs in which students may participate - merit employment, etc.
	PERSONNEL:	Miss Fairfax

FRIDAY, AUGUST 19

9:00 a.m.	TOPIC:	Closing Address: "The Student's New Role"
	PERSONNEL:	Mr. Marion A. Wright, Vice-President, Southern Regional Council

SATURDAY, AUGUST 20

9:00 a.m.	TOPIC:	The Southern Press and Public Opinion
	CONSIDERATIONS:	The role of the Southern press; general attitudes of Southern editors; the influence of their newspapers on public opinion

(Aug. 20)

PERSONNEL: Mr. Ronnie Dugger, Editor, The Texas Observer (Mr. Dugger was in Minneapolis to speak to a group of student editors on this date and was asked to speak to the Seminar, although the closing address had already been given.)

1:30 p.m.

1. Summary of Seminar and Final Evaluation (Discussion of final evaluation papers of participants in which they evaluated all aspects of the Seminar, including application processes, contact before the Seminar, Seminar speakers, reading material and library facilities, and the curriculum and scheduling in general.)

2. Orientation and Preparation for the Thirteenth National Student Congress (Discussion of purposes and program of the Congress. Participants were given a chance to choose the workshops and legistive committees they wished to attend.)

Note: There were also several evening programs scheduled which included the use of audio-visual aids such as the Rumor Clinic, a recording of the story of Cassius Marcellus Clay, and the films, "Face of the South" and "Report from Alabama."

REPORT ON THE SEMINAR

by

Will D. Campbell, Consultant

It was my privilege to serve as consultant to the annual Southern Student Human Relations Seminar held on the campus of the University of Minnesota during the month of August. I now propose to offer some brief and random observations and comments on the Seminar. It is not often that a staff person sees himself become so existentially enmeshed in the group process that he does not trust the validity of his reactions. Thus, I do not vouch for the objectivity of my remarks. I do, however, believe that the personal involvement was fortunate for the life of the Seminar -- indeed, I can see no other justification for the very presence of a consultant, for there was certainly no dearth of leadership on the academic level. I accepted the invitation to serve in the capacity of a consultant only after the careful warning that my bias is that human relations cannot be taught but only caught. Therefore, the combination role of buffoon-father confessor which seemed finally to be imposed upon me as a consultant should not have been surprising.

ADVANCE PLANNING

The thorough and painstaking planning and preparation of Miss Curry and her assistant left little to be desired so far as the mechanics of the Seminar was concerned, for it was careful and exact in every detail. This is a remarkable fete when it is realized that to successfully accomplish this is like setting up a small university in two months, complete with faculty, quarters and administration. Never did I observe the slightest confusion in organization and logistics. Important decisions which had not been made in advance were quickly made on the spot, and only because the machinery ran so smoothly did the students not realize what a monumental task had been accomplished for their sake and convenience.

SELECTION OF PARTICIPANTS

The fact that only sixteen persons can be selected makes it imperative that they be chosen with great care. The files of previous Seminars offered a number of persons on the several campuses whose judgment could be trusted, and in most cases this proved to be a safe trust. It is my belief, however, that all of the students finally selected should be interviewed by someone familiar with the nature and purpose of the seminar. Earlier seminars held the philosophy that to attract students of a conservative persuasion and attempt to develop in them the leadership qualities they brought was desirable. This was not true of the seminar now under discussion; however, contact persons from earlier years had not been apprised of that fact. This was in no case disastrous, but came very close in one case. Therefore, I would hope that all contact persons know exactly the kind of student they are supposed to recruit. This, of course, is assuming that next year's Seminar will have the same philosophy. This will be left to the Director and her committee, but I would warn that the only problem of building the seminar around "leadership trainingW might result in developing some very fine leaders for the white resisters and their movements.

FACULTY PERSONNEL

Most of those invited to serve in this capacity did a fair to excellent job. Some of them obviously had not taken the assignment seriously and appeared unprepared and occasionally with no idea as to what they were expected to do. I think this could be avioded by (1) offering a modest honorarium if this is possible, so that the Director can be more demanding and not feel like a charity case; (2) Having a suggested outline for what the Director hopes to accomplish in that session; (3) cutting the number of resource people.

GENERAL OBSERVATIONS AND SUGGESTIONS

With regard to reducing the number of resource persons as suggested in the last paragraph, I think this is desirable for several reasons. One criticism I had of the Seminar was that the participants did not all take seriously their own responsibility. I do not believe there was a single person in attendance who was not influenced by the deep emotional involvement they all experienced, but emotional involvement must be distinguished from physical exhaustion. One can justify a certain amount of "partying" as being part of the social process and as being necessary to the goals of the seminar. I am not suggesting that any of the participants interpreted the Seminar as being a ball of three weeks' duration. This was far from the truth. I am suggesting that the overall format left them with little to do except react to what the resource people threw at them. I would suggest that each participant be expected to make a major presentation to the entire group on some subject which would be assigned to him well in advance. This would cut down on the need for so many resource people and would give the group considerable sessions when there is no "outsider" present to whom they have not yet adjusted. It would also make it more of a "seminar" and less a series of lectures. I would also suggest that the library be located in a place where all the participants could read at once and at an assigned period. The excellent library which the Director put together and transported from Atlanta to Minnesota was used by most to great advantage. Others got a speaking knowledge of the literature in the field. I believe, however, that it would be more conducive to serious study if the students had one period assigned for this purpose. This might mean cutting down on classroom hours, but I think this too would be helpful, for I got the feeling that we overscheduled somewhat.

I have no further suggestions, but would like to express my appreciation to NSA and staff for the opportunity of working with this project. I know of no more significant contribution to the total work of improving human relations in the South than this gathering of sixteen students for a month and sending them back more than ordinarily prepared for and certainly far more committed to the task of making this region of the country more just and democratic in every area of society. Never before have I had the happy privilege of seeing such mammoth growth in such a short period in the lives of that many people. I have been in touch with most of them, and the reports of their activities are thrilling, exciting and encouraging. I trust that it will be possible for NSA to continue sponsoring these Seminars and commend the Association for the wisdom shown in initiating this project.

* * * * * * * * *

GEORGIA'S LEGISLATIVE FORUM FOR WOMEN NEWSLETTER

Mrs. W. S. Shelver of the PTA presided at the third session of the GLFW Tuesday, January 24. House Floor Leader Frank Twitty, Rep. Quimby Melton, Jr., Senator Erwin Mitchell made up the panel for the day's discussion of the newly introduced laws to keep Georgia schools open. Secretary of State Ben Fortson endorsed this effort before giving a brief explanation of the Office of Secretary of State.

Mrs. Shelfer provided background for the discussion by summarizing the present state public school picture: 159 county systems; 39 independent systems (no new ones allowed under the 1945 constitution); 1,000,759 students; 31200 state paid teachers; $176,000,000. Georgia teachers' salaries begin at $3,100, and the state ranks 43rd in salary scale. Some school districts are dragging their feet in levying school taxes, receiving as high as 95% of their budget from the state, while others only get 27%.

Rep. Twitty outlined the Governor's school legislative program, pointin out that these bills (see summary of bills HR 69-174, HB 174, SB 48 and 49)are the answer to prevent massive integration and at the same time prevent the federal courts from taking over the schools. "I believe fundamentally in segregation", he said, "but I also believe in abiding by the law." He explained that if the voters of a school district vote to suspend school the parents may apply for a grant-in-aid. If a school has been suspended 15% of the qualified voters in the district may petition for a referendum to reopen the school, and a majority vote decide Noting much interest in the suspending of the compulsory school attendance law, he added that this had to be done as you could not require a student to go to school which might not exist.

Sen.Mitchell and Rep. Melton praised the Governor's courage and leadership in this program as well as Mr. Twitty's. Sen. Mitchell said all knew his stand for open schools and that while these bills were not ideal the Governor's plan was "sensible and realistic" under the presentcircumstances. He said that some may be declared unconstitutional, "but when you are faced with an almost insurmountable problem, you do the best you can." Rep. Melton said he could not conceive of any county actually closing its schools, knowing full well that it could not provide adequate education in any but public schools. He urged all groups to accept this "compromise legislation" and to work for the passage of the bills even though they might not be all that is desired - "a half a loaf is better than none."

Considerable concern was expressed over the possible cost of operating both private and public schools and over the effect SB49 might have on the power of the State Board of Education to operate the schools. Still another questioner felt that "even more than 6,380 teachers who left Georgia last year" would continue to leave with "this still unsolved problem." The legislators admittedly did not have all of the answers, but were optimistic over at least being able to continue public education. They felt confident the bills would become law within a week.

BILL ANALYSIS

HR 69-174 - Freedom of Association Amendment - Smith of Emanuel, Twitty of Mitchell, Underwood, Scoggin, Melton, Hall and Fowler.

Summary: Art. Vlll, Sec Xlll, of the Georgia Constitution (which provide grants to citizens in discharge of all obligation for education) is amended by adding: "Freedom of association at all levels of education shall be preserved inviolate, and the General Assembly shall by taxation provide an adequate education for the citizens of Georgia, and the General Assembly will determine what is an adequate education."

Amended and Passed the House.

HB-174 - Local Option and Suspension of Compulsory Attendance: At any time, a local school board of education may call an election on suspension of the public schools in their jurisdiction. An election must be called upon petition of 15% of the registered voters. If a majority of the qualified voters within the system approve suspending operation of the schools, the schools shall be closed but the contracts of principals, teachers and other personnel shall not be affected and they shall continue to receive salaries (unless other employment is found) until the end of the contract term. The same state funds will continue to be paid to the local board of education and superintendent, who will continue to function.

At any time, a local board of education may call for an election on reopening the public schools under its jurisdiction, and it must call such election upon petition by 15% of the qualified registered voters, except that if there has been an election on this question in the same school year, it is not mandatory to hold a second election, and this applies to elections on suspension also.

When schools have been suspended, the compulsory school attendance law becomes inoperative in such system, and "no child in such system shall be entitled as of right to attend a public school, therein or elsewhere"

This bill applies to all local school systems, whether created before or after 1877, and all laws in conflict are hereby repealed.

Passed the House

SB-48 - Tuition Grants and Repeal of Segregation Laws - Sanders of 18th, Knox of 54th and Claxton of 21st.

Summary: Implements Art. Vlll, Sec. Xlll of Georgia Constitution (same as that referred to above) and secure right of children to attend private school. Every child age 6 to 19 who has not finished or graduated from high school is entitled to receive state and local funds to attend a non-sectarian private school. The amount of each grant shall be determined by dividing the total state and local funds for each school year by the number of pupils in the local school system. The local board may set differentials between grants for elementary pupils and high school pupils.Capital outlay funds may be included if not obligated under bonded indebtedness or as rentals to the State School Building Authority The Governor and the State Board of Education may also make additional state funds available to supplement the education grants. These grants shall be paid by check to the parent or legal guardian of the child.

Falsification of applications or use of the grant for any purpose other than for education is a misdemeanor.

Statutes providing tuition grants and transfer by school district authorities to other schools are repealed (COUNT-DOWN FOR SCHOOLS, page 6) and also cutting off funds and forbidding municipal corporations to levy taxes (page 4). Requirement of separate facilities for the races (Code Sec. 32-909) is repealed.

Amended and Passed the Senate

SB-49 - State Board of Education Crippled - Same sponsors.

Summary: This bill has two parts: one, redefining the powers of school boards, both county and state, as school courts, and the other redefining the powers of the State Board of Education generally.

In stating the procedure of appeal from the decision of a local board, independent systems created before 1877 are included. The process is essentially the same, except that a transcript of the testimony is required. This bill repeals Section 32-414, which stated the State Board of Education's "decisions in all such matters shall be final and conclusive" and says the Board shall "provide by regulation for notice to the parties and hearing on the appeal."

The redefinition of the powers of the State Board of Education is accomplished by omission of the power "for the supervision of all public schools of this State".. and "for the operation of the common schools". The powers that remain are to "provide rules and regulations prescribing a course of study... the administration of the common school fund ... the general supervision of the State Department of Education". All laws in conflict are repealed.

In Senate

ADDITIONAL BILLS

HB-22 - Teacher Retirement System: Cox and Matthews of Clarke Summary: Amends present retirement act to allow teachers retiring before age 60 (providing they have completed at least 20 years creditable service prior to Jan. 1, 1954 and have not withdrawn their contribution to participate in retirement benefits upon attainment of age 60 or at option at any date subsequent thereto, not to exceed two years.

HB-85 -To Provide For Increased Teachers Salaries - Barber of Jackson Summary:The minimum Foundation Program is amended to provide for increased teachers salaries through state funds. Local units of administration would lose state funds if they reduced their supplements under the minimum salary schedule.

HB-125 -Payment to Expelled Students: Singer of Stewart, Jones of Worth Rogers of Charlton - Summary: Any student dismissed from any school within the University System for participation in orderly demonstration shall be compensated in an amount equal to the difference in excess tuition he is required to pay at another school. Other funds are authorized for transportation. An investigation board is to be set up of members of the legislature and conflicting laws repealed.

University of Georgia Committee

HB-126 - MPF Funds for Teachers Salaries: Hall of Floyd, Matthews of Clarke, Jernigan of Clinch - Summary: Provide that any increased funds resulting from an increase in the State School Tax Digest, beginning for the year 1961, and annually thereafter, shall be used for teacher salary increases and for no other purposes.

House Education Committee

SR-15 - Three Classes of Schools - Grayson of 1st, Veazey of 19th, Hardin of 27th and others. Summary: Provides for amendment of Article XIII, Sec. 1, Par. 1 of the Georgia Constitution striking the separate school provision and replacing it with a provision to establish three classes of school: White, Negro and integrated schools. In the University System, three separate types of class rooms and dormitories.

SR-24-Freedom of Choice - Conger of 8th - Summary: Provides that no child in this state shall be forced or compelled to attend school with a child of another race and the compulsory school attendance law shall not apply to any such child.

Judiciary Committee

HB-25- Special State Financial Assistance To School Districts: Kidd and Chandler of Baldwin - Summary:Provides State financial assistance for any school district wherein 3% or more of population is employed by the State of Georgia. Funds appropriated would be in addition to any and all other funds or appropriations alloted to school districts for educational purposes. House Education Committee

(NOTE: Many counties could be included. Could this be an effort to make additional funds available to support private schools?)

SB-50 Increase in Teachers Salaries - Dykes of 14th, Hart of 53rd, and others.

Summary: Provides for a $400 increase in teachers' salaries beginning with 1961-62 school year. This increase to be paid from State funds.

In the Senate

SB-23 - To repeal the Age Limit for Entrance to University System - Brown of 52nd.

REGISTRATION BILL

HB-188 - Electors to Declare Party Affiliation - Smith and Boyette of Whitfield

Summary: Persons desiring to register as electors shall declare their political party affiliation or as independents. Those already registered shall declare their party affiliation by November 1, 1961.

REPORT ON THE FIRST YEAR

THE SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS PROJECT

January, 1961

This report is divided into three main sections:

I. A factual report of the activities and operation of the Southern Student Human Relations Project during the first twelve months.

II. Some Conclusions and evaluations concerning students and human relations, based on this first year's work.

III. A Summary

A separate report has been prepared on the Third Southern Student Human Relations Seminar, which comprised a large portion of the work of the Project.

I. The First Year of the Project

A. Establishment of the Project

Before the beginning of the Project in Atlanta in December, 1959, the Director spent a three-week orientation period in the national office of the National Student Association in Philadelphia. During this period the Director became familiar with the work of the first two Southern Student Human Relations Seminars and the Southern Student Conference, and worked on preparations for the Southern Advisory Committee Meeting, which was held in Atlanta, December 12-13, 1959.

The Southern Advisory Committee, which is composed of Southern educators and representatives of several human relations agencies, reviewed the Second Human Relations Seminar and suggested direction and guidance for the first year's work of the Southern Student Human Relations Project. The Committee strongly recommended that the Director not be held to any rigid pattern of human relations programming and stressed the fact that a great deal of time had to be spent exploring possibilities, making contacts and establishing the Project before developing a concrete program.

Because the suggestion of using the office space and facilities of one of the Atlanta human relations agencies was not possible, several weeks in January of 1960 were spent in locating and equipping an office for the Project. By the middle of January the Project was established in a two-room office at 41 Exchange Place, S.E., and Miss Donna McGinty had been employed as Project Secretary. Miss McGinty is a native Georgian and a graduate of Agnes Scott College. (As of November 1, 1960, Miss McGinty was replaced by Miss Carol Lukei, a native of New Orleans, Louisiana, and a recent graduate of Munich American High School, Munich, Germany.)

B. The Project and the Southern Student Movement

Approximately two weeks after the establishment of the Project in Atlanta the first "sit-in" took place in Greensboro, North Carolina, and from that time to the present, the Project has been involved in the movement in various ways.

In the early days of the movement one of the greatest needs was to report what actually happened in communities in which the sit-ins were occurring. This need for reporting became increasingly important when the National Student Association, as a national student organization, announced its strong support of the sit-in movement and also when students outside the South began to show their interest in and concern about many of the injustices that were taking place. The Project Director went to communities in five states where sit-ins were occurring and kept the national office informed daily on the number of arrests, treatment of the students, campus and community reaction, etc. The national office of the NSA, in turn, sometimes through immediate communication and later through information sheets, was able to keep its member schools informed of the events of the movement. In direct response to this communication college students outside the South began sympathy demonstrations, sent letters and wires to Southern officials and students, and began raising funds for bail and scholarships. One example of an immediate response was the hundreds of wires and telegrams that poured into Nashville, Tennessee on the Sunday after seventy-nine students had been jailed for sitting-in on Saturday.

In addition to reporting the facts on the movement for circulation outside the South, the Project found it necessary to report and interpret the movement to college students in the South. Although visits to or attendance at conferences during the spring of 1960 were often concerned with other aspects of human relations, most discussions inevitably turned to the sit-ins. This particularly true among Southern white students who were genuinely interested in this unique action of Negro college students and who began to question their own roles in the student movement. Through knowledge and experience gained in campus and community visits the Director was able to answer some of these questions and to give examples of student action in other parts of the South.

By March, 1960, as the student movement gained momentum, the desire for information increased; practically every human relations agency in the South was flooded daily with requests for material on the sit-ins. To help fulfill this need for information, the Project did some research and put together a seven-page newsletter, giving sources of information and some statistics on the sit-ins to date. The newsletter was sent to approximately one thousand contacts throughout the United States.

The first attempt toward any formal organization of the student movement was initiated by the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and occurred on Easter weekend of 1960. At that time approximately 130 students who had been active in the sit-ins met at Shaw University in Raleigh, North Carolina to discuss non-violence and to exchange ideas and experiences. One of the recommendations passed at the meeting was that the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee be established to help coordinate finances and communications of the student movement. The Committee was to meet regularly and was to be composed of one representative from each Southern state, NSA, and the National Student Christian Federation. The two latter national organizations were included on the Committee so that the Southern students could stay in contact with students in the rest of the country.

The Project Director was present at the Raleigh conference and at the conference in Washington, D.C., sponsored by NSA the following weekend. The Washington conference was designed to bring student leaders from all parts of the country into direct contact with sit-in participants and to inform them of the nature and purposes of the movement.

From May to the present time the Project's main involvement in the student movement has been through the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee. The Director attended Committee meetings each month from May to October and served as a member of the Atlanta Advisory Committee to help open an Atlanta office for the Committee with one full-time staff person. The Committee meetings were concerned with putting out a monthly newsletter, drafting statements to present to the platform committees of the national party conventions, etc., but a great deal of time was spent in making plans for another general conference for leaders of the student movement.

Since a resolution passed by the National Congress of NSA in August urged that the Association "cooperate in every way possible" with the SNCC, and since the task of sponsoring a large conference was almost impossible for the one person then employed by the Committee in Atlanta, the Project staff helped in the work necessary for the general conference, which was held in Atlanta in October, 1960.

Immediately after the Conference the SNCC staff member left, and a temporary administrative secretary was employed. This change in staff, a lack of funds a constantly changing student leadership, and the necessity of keeping this a truly "student movement" have been problems that have caused the Atlanta Advisory Committee to devote a rather large portion of time this fall to the program and projects of the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee.

C. The Project and the Atlanta Student Movement

The work of the Project with the student movement in Atlanta is not included in the preceding section because of the somewhat unique role the Project has played in this one situation. The Project office had had no contact with the Atlanta Committee on the Appeal for Human Rights, the committee representing students from the six Negro colleges in Atlanta, until last spring, several weeks after the first sit-ins had taken place. At that time, the chairman of the Committee called upon the Project to bring into the Committee representatives of the five white colleges in the community. By this time the Project did have enough contacts to carry out this request, and at the following meeting all eleven colleges were represented. Although contact and cooperation among all the colleges has been somewhat sporadic since that time, the Project has made a continuous effort to keep interested white students in touch with the Committee and to help them in their efforts to participate in the movement, whether they be attendance at meetings, picketing, or sitting-in.

In addition to acting as liaison between white and Negro students in Atlanta, the Project has often been able to act as liaison between the students and some of the community organizations and agencies. Because the students consider the Project and NSA a "student" group, they have welcomed the Project staff at their meetings and have been willing to consider suggestions and advice brought by the Project from other concerned sources.

The Atlanta student committee has also asked the Project to help obtain white adults to act as observers at the sit-ins and to contact white adult organizations which might be interested in participating in the boycott of certain shopping areas until lunch counters have been desegregated.

D. Campus Visits

During the first year of the Project the Director has visited campuses in Tennessee, North Carolina, Georgia, Louisiana, Alabama, Mississippi, Texas and Arkansas. The purpose of these visits has varied. In some cases, campus groups have wanted advice and information on human relations programming or on organizing a seminar on human relations. As mentioned above, information on the student movement was gathered by visiting many Negro campuses; subsequently, this information was interpreted and passed on to students at white campuses. In the majority of initial campus visits, however, it seemed wiser to simply feel the pulse of the campus on the whole subject of human relations and to establish contact with the students, faculty, and administration who would be interested in working with the Project on future programming.

E. Conferences

During the past year the Project Director has found it most worthwhile to attend student conferences sponsored by organizations with a concern for improving human relations in the South. One of the most beneficial of these conferences was the Eighteenth Ecumenical Conference of the National Student Christian Federation, held in Athens, Ohio in December, 1959. Race relations was one of the main topics of the conference, and the Director was able to meet college students from every Southern state. In most cases the student denominational groups were accompanied by their campus minister, and the Project has remained in contact with many of these students and ministers throughout the year.

When the student groups from Alabama and Louisiana returned to their campuses after the Athens Conference, they began to make plans to hold a similar conference on a state-wide level. In both cases the conference-planning group decided to make human relations one of the key topics, and the Project Director was asked to meet with the group at each planning session to give advice on speakers, program and materials in the human relations area. Because of the difficulties involved in holding an integrated meeting in these two states and because racial tension was at an even greater height last spring, neither of the conferences was held. An effort will be made, however, to hold these conferences this year.

In addition to helping plan conferences dealing with human relations, the Project Director has attended many conferences as a resource person. At the Southeastern Regional Conference of the YMCA-YWCA held at Blue Ridge, North Carolina, in June, the Director was asked to present a program on the student protest movement. The Director was also a resource person for the South Central Regional NSA Conference this fall in New Orleans, which brought Negro and white students together from four states in the Deep South.

Undoubtedly the best example of the Project's work on conferences was the North Carolina Student Human Relations Seminar, held this December in Chapel Hill.

The Seminar was co-sponsored by the University of North Carolina Student Government and the YMCA-YWCA; the Project worked very closely with these campus groups on the entire planning and financing of the meeting. Two delegates from each college in the state were invited and for two days heard speakers and attended workshops dealing with the Seminar theme of "Problems and Promise in a Changing South." The office has recently received a letter from the University, commenting on the success of the Seminar and asking if the Seminar might become an annual event.

As it has developed this year, the Project has initiated or worked on conferences which have been primarily on a state or regional level; often this was because of an immediate request for assistance from a student group already planning a state or regional conference, and sometimes because this approach drew the mose immediate response and support. However, the organizational experience gained from working on state and regional conferences, and the interim and ever-growing list of reliable contacts in Southern cities will be invaluable to the Director in planning Metropolitan Area Conferences. Greensboro, Atlanta and New Orleans are tentatively scheduled for Metropolitan Conferences in 1961.

F. Requests for Information and Work with Individual Students

As Southern college students have become increasingly aware of the existence of the Project, the office has received more and more requests for information concerning human relations. In addition to the numerous requests for material on the student movement, students have asked for bibliographies on human relations, for speakers and how to obtain them, and sometimes for materials to help them with papers they are writing for courses. Throughout the year the office has made an effort to build up a library, a newspaper clipping file, and a catalogue on materials that will enable the Project to answer these requests and to become in the future a more complete human relations information center for students.

The Project office has also acted as host to many student visitors during the past year. This group has included college students from Northern and Western campuses as well as international students, who were gathering information for course work or who had a personal interest in events in the South. Their visits have entailed giving them access to the Project files and materials and planning a schedule of appointments that would give them the greatest possible understanding of human relations in the South.

G. Cooperation with other Human Relations Agencies

The original Project prospectus states that the Project "would seek broad inter-agency cooperation and support." In the beginning months of the Project the Director spent a great deal of time becoming familiar with the personnel and programs of the various agencies working in human relations in the South. It is a fact that the Project could not have functioned nearly as effectively in the past twelve months without the full support and cooperation of the agencies in Atlanta and other parts of the South.

Attendance at the Southern Inter-Agency Conferences, the annual meeting of the National Association of Intergroup Relations Officials, and the Fisk Institute on Human Relations has given the Director an opportunity to see how the Project can cooperate with or participate in the program of other organizations. The Project office was often called upon as a center of information on the student movement, and, as mentioned earlier, the Director has made an effort to act as a liaison between the students in Atlanta and the agencies which are interested in their actions.

Other examples of cooperation are the Project's work in helping to set up intercollegiate workcamps in Atlanta with the American Friends Service Committee, the student workshop conducted by the Project in conjunction with the Georgia Council on Human Relations, and the various adult conferences to which the Project has brought students as speakers. Also, the Southern Regional Council and the Anti-Defamation League have been particularly helpful in supplying materials for various programs that the Project has sponsored.

H. Southern Advisory Committee Meetings

As suggested in the prospectus, the Southern Advisory Committee has met twice during the past year. The first meeting in December of 1959 was devoted to reviewing the previous Seminar and to helping the new Director see some of the possible roles that the Project might play. The second meeting in May of 1960 reviewed the activities of the Project and discussed plans for the Third Seminar to be held in August. As in the case of the human relations agencies, the members of the Southern Advisory Committee have been of inestimable service to the Project and to NSA. In the actual meetings of the Committee and throughout the year the Director and the national office of NSA have been able to call upon these individuals for advice and many times for their aid in carrying out programs in the South.

II. Some Evaluations and Conclusions

When I came to Atlanta last December to begin the Project, I knew two things -- first, that I had a large grant from the Field Foundation; and secondly, that my work was all nicely outlined in a seven-page prospectus. This prospectus indicated, somewhat to my consternation, that I was a "full-time specialist in student human relations programming" and that the Project's operations would fall into three main categories:

(1) The Third and Fourth Southern Seminars held during the summer.
(2) Metropolitan, state and area conferences to bring students from different campuses together to discuss race relations.
(3) Conferences and programs concerning race relations to be held on individual campuses.

I certainly did not know that the Southern Project and the student sit-in movement would be launched almost simultaneously. There is no doubt that the student movement has, in some ways, changed the direction and work of the Project; and, as shown in the first section of this report, I have certainly spent a great deal of time on the movement. Below are some of the reasons why the Project became involved and why I feel that it must continue to work with the student movement.

In the first place, I believe that the student movement -- including the sit-ins and various other forms of demonstrations in the past year -- is certainly the most significant development in the history of students and human relations in the South. Of course, the most obvious illustration to support the above statement is the actual number of lunch counters and other facilities that have been desegregated since the sit-ins began. A second important aspect of the movement is that it is the first example of large numbers of students in the United States who have gained a real social consciousness which has caused them to act to bring about immediate social change. I feel, however, that the significance of the sit-ins in the South can be seen in several other areas.

Since February 1, 1960, the sit-ins have been a major topic of discussion among students throughout the South. With the sit-ins as the starting point of discussions the entire question of race relations in the South has thus been raised. I base this statement on a fact mentioned earlier -- that I did not attend a single student conference on any subject this year in which discussion, either formally or informally, did not ultimately turn to the sit-ins and race relations. While many students who have talked about the situation are not yet in favor of the sit-ins or integration, they are at least talking and thinking about it to a degree that certainly never existed before.

Many people have suggested that the student movement has caused a break-down of communications among Negroes and whites in the South. While this may hold true for some of the paternalistic relationships that have existed for many years, expecially in the adult community, it is certainly not true in the Southern student community. If anything, the student movement has strengthened previous communications and has opened many new ones. Durham, North Carolina is a good example of this. Before the sit-ins white students at Duke University had practically no contact with Negro college students in the same city. Since the sit-ins, however, student groups from both colleges have met together regularly. This same pattern can be traced in numerous communities throughout the South.

The sit-ins -- by arousing thought and discussion and by causing new contact and communication between Negro and white students -- have led to a third step which is perhaps the most meaningful: the actual participation in the movement by white Southern students. Although the number is not overwhelming, it has been large enough to make an impact; and most important, the number has increased each month since the movement began. In Atlanta on election day, over the strong protest of their administrations, twenty-five college students picketed in the first all-white student demonstration in the Deep South; they were protesting the lack of equal voting rights for Negroes.

White college students in the South are slowly realizing that they too have a stake in the struggle for civil rights and are increasingly willing to do something about it. As a girl from South Carolina who attends a small Southern white college said to me after her college president had told her that her participation in the movement would jeopardize their fund-raising campaign: "I just don't understand. Here for three years I have been taught about democratic principles, about social concern, about Christian love, and now when I try to do something about it, am I to accept the idea that money is more important?"

Thus, while the Negro sit-in students have destroyed the myth that the Southern Negro is happy and contented, the Southern white students are destroying the myth that all Southern whites form a united front to "keep the Negro in his place."

Another valuable by-product of the student movement is the opportunities it is affording Southern Negro students in leadership training. At so many Negro colleges in the South the students are so thoroughly "led" by the faculty and administration that they have little chance to assume responsibility, to make decisions, or to act on the basis of their own thinking. Many of their meetings have illustrated a real lack of knowledge of basic democratic processes and a strong hesitation and sometimes inability to express themselves. During the past twelve months of the movement, which has been so essentially their responsibility, many of us have seen these students make remarkable gains in self-confidence and in maturity of judgment and action.

Although I have felt the great importance of working as much as possible with the student movement, I have also been aware of the continuing need for human relations programming on a much different level. The majority of students in the South, both Negro and white, are not going to be found on a picket line together, and a constant effort must be made to bring this larger group into contact to discuss the problems facing the South. Giving the opportunity for this contact has been the other main concentration during the past year. I do not feel that we can forget at any time the two statements that one hears after every integrated student conference in the South: "I have never until today spoken to an educated Negro;" and, "I didn't know before that I could ever really feel friendly toward a white person."

The need for creating this kind of experience is overwhelming in the Deep South, and this year the Project hopes to give more attention to this area. Some Negro and white students, even in Mississippi, have expressed their deep concern over their complete isolation from each other. We are now making plans for a work camp, probably in a neighboring state, which will give them the opportunity to meet together.

One interesting observation, which has been true in working with the student movement as well as in campus visits or conference work, is that the white student groups who are most concerned about improving race relations are the religious groups. The YWCA's, YMCA's and the denominational groups have generally been the most willing to cooperate in any of the Project's activities; while student government organizations, especially in the Deep South, are usually the least interested or the most hostile. I think the reason for the interest of the religious groups is obvious: these students try to solve the conflict they see between the teachings of their church and the society in which they live each day. The reasons for the lack of interest among student government leaders is more complex. In some cases student governments are still little more than pawns of the administration and thus are prohibited from any type of action in this area. In other cases student leaders feel that they have been elected by their student body and should therefore carry out only the desires of their constituency, regardless of what their personal feelings may be.

I think that the lack of interest in human relations on the part of white Southern student governments is directly related to the small number of their student governments which are affiliated with NSA. These groups have not yet accepted a basic concept of NSA -- that the role of student government is to have a program of "service, education and action by creating an awareness of students' local, national and international responsibilities." This fact points out the continuing need for NSA to establish contact with these groups and to expand their vision and scope through the Association's national and international programs, as well as through the work of the Southern Project.

III. Summary

In trying to generally evaluate the first year's work of the Project, it is difficult to measure its success or contribution in the field of human relations. I remember the comment of one of my advisors at the first Committee meeting: "Don't worry about your program for awhile. It will take you at least a year to discover what you can do, and even then you won't be able to do half of it." This has indeed proved true and is why this report does not include elaborate plans and programs for the second year of the Project. I can only say that I envision the coming year's work as a continuation -- as a process of building on some small foundations laid this year, with perhaps a little more knowledge and experience to guide us.

I do, however, after one year's work in the South, have several firm convictions that relate to the total meaning of the Project in the past and in the future. First of all, I can strongly reaffirm the principle on which the Southern Project was established -- that students in the South do want to learn and that they are willing to change their ideas. They do have dreams that differ from their parents', and, as shown this past year, some are ready to act to make these dreams realities. I fully accept Ralph McGill's comment on the decent actions of the vast majority of University of Georgia students in the recent crisis: "The new generation is closer to the Christian ethic, to compassion and decency than their grown-up elders."

If one accepts the above premise, there is no question as to the continuing necessity of the Southern Student Human Relations Project. In the early planning stages of the Project, members of the Southern Advisory Committee urged its establishment because there was no one agency or organization in the South devoted completely to working with students to improve race relations. Although events of this past year have brought many agencies closer to the students, and although the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee is attempting to coordinate the student movement in the South, the Project still remains the sole agency directed toward a program of human relations education and action for Southern students.

I am also convinced that the South is beginning a period of great transition and that Southern students will be playing a major role in the changes that will occur. In Georgia alone, in the space of ten days, two Negro students entered the University of Georgia and several more obtained entrance forms to three other all-white universities. Southern student leaders also indicated at a recent meeting that the lunch counter sit-ins were only the beginning, and in some states the drive for equality has already moved to the theaters. These rapid changes and the seemingly inevitable conflicts that accompany them will create daily situations that call for the greatest possible number of resources in human relations personnel. I have often wondered what the South would be like if it had as many people working to bring about peaceful changes as it has people working to keep things the way they are.

In conclusion, I would like to quote Reverend Will D. Campbell's answer to the participants of the Third Southern Student Human Relations Seminar, who asked on the closing day, "But what do you do and how do you improve human relations?"

> "There is no formula, no capsule, no equation. But for every mind that hungers after truth; for every hand extended sacrificially, reconciling or attempting to reconcile races and nations of man; for every soul that yearns for a vision of life made new; for every heart that groans with its burden and cries out > that there is a better way than hate and bitterness and lead pipes and empty schoolhouses and closed lunch counters; in our darkest night, there the star of Christmas shines again, for there is Immanuel -- God with us.

>
> No, there is no formula, no equation, save one -- Be Everlastingly At It."

The Southern Student Human Relations Project has tried to follow the advice of that closing phrase.

* * * * * * * *

I hesitated to put my expressions of appreciation and gratitude at the end of my report, since this is often interpreted as a necessary afterthought. This is certainly not the case. I do want to thank the members of my Advisory Committee not only for their constant interest in and help with the Project, but also for their encouragement, kindness and help to me personally. I am deeply grateful to Donna McGinty who came to the Project in the very beginning as my assistant and who was an efficient worker as well as a never-ending source of moral support to me, until she left the Project in September. I am also most appreciative of the continuing response and cooperation of last year's and the current year's national staff of NSA. Finally, I wish to express my sincere thanks to the Field Foundation for giving NSA the financial support for the Project and for giving me the opportunity to work in a field where the demands are so great but where even the smallest results are truly rewarding.

Constance Curry, Director
Southern Student Human Relations Project
January, 1961

208 Auburn Ave., N.E.
Atlanta 3, Ga.
JAckson 5-1763

Southern Christian Leadership Conference

OFFICERS
President
*Martin Luther King, Jr.
Atlanta, Ga.
First Vice-President
*C. K. Steele
Tallahassee, Fla.
Second Vice-President
*J. E. Lowery
Mobile, Ala.
Third Vice-President
*Samuel W. Williams
Atlanta, Ga.
Fourth Vice-President
C. O. Simpkins, D.D.S.
Shreveport, La.
Secretary
*F. L. Shuttlesworth
Birmingham, Ala.
Assistant Secretary
Katie E. Whickam
New Orleans, La.
Financial Secretary-Treasurer
*Ralph D. Abernathy
Montgomery, Ala.
Chaplain
*Kelly M. Smith
Nashville, Tenn.
Historian
L. D. Reddick, Ph.D.
Baltimore, Md.

EXECUTIVE BOARD
(All officers are members of the Executive Board)
I. M. Augustine, Esq.
New Orleans, La.
*Henry C. Bunton
Memphis, Tenn.
*A. L. Davis
New Orleans, La.
*W. A. Dennis Chattanooga, Tenn.
R. L. Drew
Clarksdale, Miss.
*Edward T. Graham
Miami, Fla.
*Walter L. Hamilton
Norfolk, Va.
*W. L. Hall
Waycross, Ga.
*B. L. Hooks, Esq.
Memphis, Tenn.
Dr. Aaron E. Henry
Clarksdale, Miss.
*D. E. King
Louisville, Ky.
*M. L. King, Sr.
Atlanta, Ga.
I. S. Leevy
Columbia, S. C.
*Matthew D. McCollom
Orangeburg, S. C.
*S. S. Seay, Sr.
Montgomery, Ala.
*R. B. Shorts
Atlanta, Ga.
W. E. Shortridge
Birmingham, Ala.
Nelson H. Smith
Birmingham, Ala.
Roland Smith
Little Rock, Ark.
*Melvin C. Swann
Durham, N. C.
*Robert G. Williams
Petersburg, Va.

*Clergyman

Wyatt Tee Walker
Director

James R. Wood
Public Relations

February 7, 1961

Mr. Paul Riling
Southern Regional Council
Room 201, 5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Paul,

Thank you very much for your assistance with the statistical data in regard to Negro population. Marge Manderson of your staff was also helpful with another matter. I sent her a letter of thanks.

Very truly yours,

James R. Wood

JRW:eb

James R. Wood

OUR MISSION . . . "Redeeming the Soul of America" original & copy to Dr. Connell

February 8, 1961

Mr. Michael S. Shor
383 Ardmore Circle, N.W.
Atlanta 9, Georgia

Dear Mr. Shor:

It was good to hear from you and to learn of your interest in the activities of our organization. I am sending you several publications which will indicate something of the scope and nature of our activities. We are not a membership organization and do not sponsor public activities as such. However, the Georgia Council on Human Relations, (63 Auburn Avenue, N.E.) with which we cooperate does carry on a regular program of community activities and interracial communication. I am passing your letter on to them, with the thought that you might be interested in contacting them.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PMR/sm

February 16, 1961

Mr. John Edmunds
4038 Land o' Lakes Drive, N.E.
Atlanta 5, Georgia

Dear John:

I have heard several good reports of the progress that your study group is making at the Oglethorpe Presbyterian Church. I am enclosing a copy of an outline we are using for a seminar which I am coordinating at the Quaker House. As the course develops I will also send you the bibliography we are using in case it might touch on some of the matters you will be considering in your group.

Let me know if we can be of any help.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PMR/sm
Enclosure

SPELMAN COLLEGE
ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA

OFFICE OF THE DEAN OF WOMEN

February 20, 1961

Mr. Paul Rilling
Southern Regional Conference, Inc.
63 Auburn Avenue, N. E.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Mr. Rilling:

Please pardon the lengthy delay in this correspondence. The delay is not to be attributed to negligence or a lack of appreciation, but the resurgence of activities of the Student Movement often causes me to get behind in my office work. Keeping up with them is quite a problem!

You did a most excellent job at our Student Government Planning Conference! Your presentation was timely, to the point, and well presented--you set the tone for months of student activity here at Spelman. Our students continue to make references to many of the points which you discussed. It is significant to have someone outside of the college community give such a relevant presentation of the kind of information that we have been discussing with our students.

The students have requested that you would be invited to speak in one of our Chapel services. Please do not feel that we are imposing on you, but it is not often we are able to secure the services of one who has such a background in student government on the college campus. May we request your services again?

Please accept my personal gratitude for your services.

Sincerely yours,

Mercile L. Johnson

Mercile L. Johnson
Dean of Women

MLJ gs

631 Clifton Road, N.E.
Atlanta, Georgia
Feb. 22, 1961

Mr. Paul Rilling
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsythe Street
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Mr. Rilling:

On behalf of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, I want to thank you for accepting the chairmanship of the Panel on Desegregation of Public Facilities which is to take place on Saturday morning, March 18th, at 10:30 in the Chemistry Building Amphitheatre of Morehouse College.

The complete program of our conference will be mailed to you later and we will be happy to have you attend as many of the meetings as you can.

Cordially yours,

Margaret B. Sewell

(Mrs. Frank A. Sewell)

March 1, 1961

Mr. Art Levin
Anti-Defamation League
41 Exchange Place
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Art:

This will confirm your agreement to speak to our Seminar on School Desegregation March 13 at the Quaker House, 1384 Fairview Road, N.E. from 8:00 - 10:00. I will be on hand to do the chores of introduction, moderating, etc.

I am enclosing an outline of the general pattern of our discussions. We have completed numbers 1-3 and will discuss number 5 on March 6. Numbers 4 and 6 are spoken for. I will be happy to have you fill in most anywhere and whatever topic you prefer will be scheduled for March 13. My own thought, however, is that you would do one of your specialty jobs on resistance forces. The outline was only because I had to get something ready to show people. We talk about what we please.

This is a group of approximately 15 persons, all friends. You know many of them -- Fran Breeden, Betty Harris, Fred and Florence Robbin, William Shields and Mrs. Harry Richardson from ITC, Estelle Wykoff.

Thank you.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PMR/sm
Enc.

March 3, 1961

Miss Connie Curry
Southern Project, NSA
41 Exchange Place
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Connie:

As you requested, I am including an account of my expenses in connection with the Prince Edward Conference.

Round-trip train fare to Richmond	$79.70
Richmond to Farmville auto @ 8¢ per	7.60
Hotel bill	7.25
Airport parking	1.00
Meals	2.00
	$97.55

Please make check payable to SRC.

Sincerely,

PAUL M. RILLING
Director of Field Activities

PMR/sm

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA 4, PA. • BAring 2-1106 • CABLE, NATSTUD - PHILADELPHIA, PA.

March 9, 1961

Mr. Paul Rilling
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Paul:

RHA
3/10/61

Enclosed you will find the check for $97.55 to reimburse you for expenses to the Prince Edward Seminar. I know that you did a good job and on behalf of NSA's sponsorship in the Seminar, I do want to thank you for going.

By the time we get a chance to talk about the Seminar, the schools in the County will probably be open. In any case, I will be back in town next week, and I want to discuss that as well as get some suggestions from you on that International Student Team that is coming to the South this spring.

My stay in Florida improved my health some, but I still feel very much like a limp sock. I have anemia just like Elizabeth Taylor, but I never see anything in the papers about me. I guess it is because I am not the most beautiful woman in the world.

Hope all has been going well with you, and I shall talk to you soon.

Sincerely,

Connie

Constance Curry
Southern Project Director

ASSOCIATED WITH American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U. S. Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • Young Adult Council • Nat'l Citizens Committe for UN Day • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

OFFICERS

President
RICHARD A. RETTIG
University of Washington

Assistant to the President
M. SUZANNE TUOHY
College of St. Teresa

•

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Vice President
TIMOTHY L. JENKINS
Howard University

Program Vice President
DAN L. JOHNSTON
Westmar College

Program Vice President
DONALD R. SMITH
University of Texas

Administrative Assistant
ROBERT M. WALTERS
Lehigh University

Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

West Coast Office
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

•

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

Vice President
JAMES C. SCOTT
Williams College

Administrative Assistant
RICHARD M. MILLER
University of Minnesota, Duluth

Assistant
MANUEL ARAGON, JR.
San Francisco State College

Campus Administrator
HARVEY K. FLAD
University of Colorado

Director, Foreign Student Leadership Project
DONALD F. CLIFFORD
Catholic University of America

•

Educational Travel, Inc.
20 West 38th Street
New York 18, New York

2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

•

NATIONAL ADVISORS

Ralph J. Bunche
Under-Secretary
United Nations

John Cogley
Staff Administrator
The Fund for the Republic

James M. Dabbs
President
Southern Regional Council, Inc.

Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame

Russell Kirk
Editor, Modern Age

Ralph McGill
Publisher
Atlanta Constitution

Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University

Harold E. Stassen

O. Meredith Wilson
President
University of Oregon

•

Chairman
National Advisory Board
CARL M. GRIP, JR.
Dean of Men
Temple University

Chairman
Financial Advisory Board
RUTH HAGY BROD

YWCA

National Student Young Women's Christian Association of the U. S. A.

600 LEXINGTON AVENUE
NEW YORK 22, N. Y.
PLAZA 3-4700
CABLE: EMISSARIUS, N. Y.

March 13, 1961

Southern Region
Suite 301, 41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia
Telephone: Jackson 5-2372

OK ✓

Chairman
CONNIE L. MILLIKEN
Union Theological Seminary

Vice Chairmen
MARGEE GRIMES
Wilson College
JANE MEREDITH
Randolph-Macon Woman's College
BEVERLY SAVAGE
Farmington State Teachers College

Chairman Administrative Committee
MRS. WILLIAM GENNÉ

Executive
MRS. MARGARET EDMUNSON NORTON

Associate in Administration
ODILE SWEENEY

Associates
JEAN M. WHITTET
Program Development
RUTH SHINN
Personnel and Training
ANNIE-KATE GILBERT
National Support

Consultant in Human Relations
CELESTINE L. SMITH, ED. D.

Administrative Assistant
HELEN BAIRD

President, National Board
LILACE REID BARNES

General Secretary
EDITH M. LERRIGO

Mr. Paul Rilling
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Paul:

I should like to invite you to be my guest at an informal reception to be held in the Conference Room of our suite on Wednesday, March twenty-second, from four to five o'clock, to meet my new colleague, Miss Jimmie Woodward.

Jimmie, who has returned recently from two and a half years of work with the Y.W.C.A. of Malaya, now shares with me the co-executive responsibility for the work of the National Student YWCA in the Southern Region.

Please let me know if you can be with us on next Wednesday afternoon.

Cordially yours,

Rosetta

Rosetta E. Gardner
National Student Secretary
Southern Region

YWCA ®

March 20, 1961

Mr. Art Levin
Anti-Defamation League
41 Exchange Place, S.W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Art:

We have been asked by the Virginia Council for a line on a film or film strip entitled, "Communism on the Map." The film is being shown in several places in Virginia to school children with the loud endorsement of T. Coleman Andrews. The film is apparently out of the Searcy, Arkansas college. Know anything?

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PMR/sm

National Council of the Young Men's Christian Associations

OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

OFFICERS
SOUTHERN AREA COUNCIL
DR. HUGH B. WILCOX
PRESIDENT
J. FRAN BABBITT
VICE PRESIDENT
DR. R. T. NELSON
VICE PRESIDENT
EDWARD M. VINSON
VICE PRESIDENT
CHARLES R. YOUNTS
TREASURER
VIRGIL P. STEWART
RECORDING SECRETARY
RALPH BRUNSON
ASST. RECORDING SECRETARY

THE SOUTHERN AREA COUNCIL
(ALABAMA, FLORIDA, GEORGIA, KENTUCKY, LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI, ASHEVILLE, N. C. TENNESSEE AND VIRGINIA)
706 STANDARD BUILDING
ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA
JACKSON 1-0352

OFFICERS
SOUTHERN AREA BOARD
LEONARD F. HURLEY
CHAIRMAN
SHELBY R. ROGERS
VICE CHAIRMAN
CHARLES R. YOUNTS
TREASURER
HUGH G. HURST, SR.
SECRETARY

March 29, 1961

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Paul:

Charile and I are delighted that you can participate in the Southern Area Staff Workshop to be held at Blue Ridge from May 28 to June 3.

I shall be in touch with you shortly concerning details and particularly would like to get your help in formulating the program. I am sure you will make a very important contribution to the thinking of the group.

Yours sincerely,

Thornton

Thornton W. Merriam, Secretary
Leadership Development Project

TWM:sp

Re. Nashville: I join and check will come tomorrow
Dunbar will join too.

March 30, 1961

Miss Constance Curry
Southern Students Project
41 Exchange Place
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Connie:

I am sending on a photostat of a letter from Mrs. Ledeen of the South Carolina Council, concerning a hardship case with STUDENTS. It seems to me that this would be a very legitimate use of all that scholarship money NSA has been salting away to assist students who become involved in sit-in demonstrations. I would trust Mrs. Ledeen's evaluation of the situation.

I would question whether funds should be sought to match the entire amount of their fellowships, but we can investigate further to see how much would actually be needed to meet their needs. We trust you will respect the confidences involved and let me know fairly soon what the possibilities may be.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PMR/sm
Enc.

MEMORANDUM March 30, 1961

To: Grace Hamilton and Clarence Coleman
From: Paul Rilling

Re: William M. Brooks

We have had inquiries concerning possible employment with one of our associated state councils on human relations from Mr. William M. Brooks of Atlanta. Mr. Brooks gave your names as a possible reference. We would appreciate your estimate of his capabilities.

PMR/sm

April 3, 1961

Miss Ella Baker
Regional Student Y.W.C.A.
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Ella;

It will be quite all right to reimburse my expenses after the fact. We try to be genteel about these things over here.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PMR/sm

April 6, 1961

Mr. Don Slaiman
Assistant Director, Dept. of Civil Rights
AFL-CIO
815-16th Street, N.W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Don:

I believe you are aware of the quarterly meetings of the Southern inter-agency group that have been going on for some time. The only labor representation that has been involved is from the Fair Practices and Anti-Discrimination Department of the United Auto Workers. It occurred to me you might like to sit in on one of these meetings or indicate whether you feel that your office should be regularly represented in some way. We would be glad to have you at the May meeting. If you can make it, let me know and I will make reservations for you.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PMR/sm
Enc.

National Council of the Young Men's Christian Associations

OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

OFFICERS
SOUTHERN AREA COUNCIL
DR. HUGH B. WILCOX
PRESIDENT
J. FRAN BABBITT
VICE PRESIDENT
DR. R. T. NELSON
VICE PRESIDENT
EDWARD M. VINSON
VICE PRESIDENT
CHARLES R. YOUNTS
TREASURER
VIRGIL P. STEWART
RECORDING SECRETARY
RALPH BRUNSON
ASST. RECORDING SECRETARY

THE SOUTHERN AREA COUNCIL

(ALABAMA, FLORIDA, GEORGIA, KENTUCKY, LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI, ASHEVILLE, N. C. TENNESSEE AND VIRGINIA)

706 STANDARD BUILDING
ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA
JACKSON 1-0352

OFFICERS
SOUTHERN AREA BOARD
LEONARD F. HURLEY
CHAIRMAN
SHELBY R. ROGERS
VICE CHAIRMAN
CHARLES R. YOUNTS
TREASURER
HUGH G. HURST, SR.
SECRETARY

April 13, 1961

Mr. Paul Rilling
Director of Field Activities
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
Room 201, 5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Paul:

Thank you for your recent letter. I will have some materials which I think you will be interested in reading. I will bring them over in a few days.

Thanks for your reaction on the check list. It contains the kind of thing that could of course be continued indefinitely. In some ways that would be a good thing to do but what I shall be looking for is "critical items" which on the basis of experience may be found to be effective in "separating the sheep from the goats" to use an inappropriate expression.

I assume that we will be able to get copies to the number required of "School Desegregation" and "The Student Protest Movement". I am grateful to you for making these suggestions.

Yours sincerely,

Thornton

Thornton W. Merriam, Secretary
Leadership Development Project

TWM:sp

File

Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee

197½ Auburn Avenue, N.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

MUrray 8-0331

April 13, 1961

Mr. John Constable
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear John:

This is to notify you that our April SNCC meeting will be held on the Johnson C. Smith University campus, Charlotte, N. C., April 21-23. The meeting should begin at approximately 3:00 p. m. on Friday, the 21st. We have arranged for off-campus housing near the University. All meals can be purchased in the dining hall. Upon arrival in Charlotte, please report to the Theological Seminary building. We look forward to your taking part in all of the meeting.

Sincerely yours,

E. B. King, Jr.

Edward B. King, Jr.
Administrative Secretary

EBK

April 19, 1961

Dr. Thornton W. Merriam
Leadership Development Project
YMCA
Standard Building
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Thornton:

I think your check list of assumptions, attitudes, etc. is quite valid and will make a very usable instrument. I have no suggestions to make for change. This does not mean I did not look it over carefully, but rather I feel that it does represent the range of attitudes you encounter within the Y. I think it will prove widely useful.

I would make two suggestions for material in addition to those you already have listed. One is our publication entitled "School Desegregation: the first six years." This is a fairly simple pamphlet which summarizes developments quite well for the layman. The other is our study of the sit-in movement, "The Student Protest Movement." This is already somewhat outdated, but I think it gives a faithful reflection of the movement. I will check further on the prospect of a good film and be in touch with you.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PMR/sm

ARTHUR J. LEVIN
41 Exchange Place, S. E.
Atlanta, Georgia

April 27, 1961

Mr. Richard Rettig, Pres.
USNSA
3457 Chestnut Street
Philadelphia 4, Pa.

Dear Richard:

I have just received the minutes of the January meeting of the Southern Project Advisory Committee. In reading through them, I was reminded that the Committee had voted to raise the salary of Connie Curry by the amount of $1,000 for 1961.

As the maker of the motion, I would like to call this decision to your attention for implementation if it has not already taken effect. As I understand it, the money is available from the Project funds, so that this would not place any additional burden on the National Student Association.

The Advisory Committee took cognizance of the low salary at which Connie started, and the excellent job she has done, and we intended for this $1,000 increment to be retroactive to January 1st.

I know you will give this matter your immediate attention. Kindest regards.

Sincerely yours,

Arthur J. Levin

CC: Rev. Will Campbell
Paul Rilling

April 27, 1961

Miss Ella Baker
National Student YWCA Staff
Suite 301, 41 Exchange Place, S. E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Ella:

My expenses for the Greensboro meeting were as follows:

Air Travel	$52.36
Hotel	7.00
Food	2.50
Limousine	3.50
	$65.36

Please make check payable to SRC.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PMR/sm

YWCA

National Student Young Women's Christian Association of the U. S. A.

600 LEXINGTON AVENUE
NEW YORK 22, N. Y.
PLAZA 3-4700
CABLE: EMISSARIUS, N. Y.

April 24, 1961

Southern Region
Suite 301, 41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia
Telephone: Jackson 5-2372

Chairman
CONNIE L. MILLIKEN
Union Theological Seminary

Vice Chairmen
MARGEE GRIMES
Wilson College
JANE MEREDITH
Randolph-Macon Woman's College
BEVERLY SAVAGE
Farmington State Teachers College

Chairman Administrative Committee
MRS. WILLIAM GENNÉ

Executive
MRS. MARGARET EDMUNSON NORTON

Associate in Administration
ODILE SWEENEY

Associates
JEAN M. WHITTET
Program Development
RUTH SHINN
Personnel and Training
ANNIE-KATE GILBERT
National Support

Consultant in Human Relations
CELESTINE L. SMITH, ED. D.

Administrative Assistant
HELEN BAIRD

President, National Board
LILACE REID BARNES

General Secretary
EDITH M. LERRIGO

Mr. Paul Rilling
Director, Field Services
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street, S. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Paul:

With due appreciation for the delicacy with which your office handles such matters, may I request that you let us have a statement of your expenses in connection with the trip to Greensboro for the April 15 workshop on Responsible Citizenship. I shall be leaving the office on May 2 and will be away for several weeks and would like to clear this matter before departing.

May I also thank you for the splendid job you did in performing the difficult task of presenting statistics on voter registration in the South in an interesting manner. I have not had time to evaluate the workshop and probably will not be able to do so before leaving for our Convention, but my surface reactions, based largely on comments by students attending the workshop, leave me feeling that the effort was worthwhile and I am particularly pleased that plans are under way for follow-up action on at least two campuses next fall. I will tell you more about this as it develops. A similar workshop has been scheduled to be held at Tuskegee Institute on April 29 for campus YWCAs in Alabama and this should help us to gain some additional insights into whether the idea of workshops on Citizenship can be meaningful to college students. Perhaps I may be able to tell you a bit more if I attend the Interagency Meeting in New Orleans.

Sincerely,

Ella

Ella J. Baker
National Student YWCA Staff
Southern Region

EJB:fd

YWCA®

YWCA

National Student Young Women's Christian Association of the U. S. A.

600 LEXINGTON AVENUE
NEW YORK 22, N. Y.
PLAZA 3-4700
CABLE: EMISSARIUS, N. Y.

April 29, 1961

Southern Region
Suite 301, 41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia
Telephone: Jackson 5-2372

Chairman
CONNIE L. MILLIKEN
Union Theological Seminary

Vice Chairmen
MARGEE GRIMES
Wilson College
JANE MEREDITH
Randolph-Macon Woman's College
BEVERLY SAVAGE
Farmington State Teachers College

Chairman Administrative Committee
MRS. WILLIAM GENNÉ

Executive
MRS. MARGARET EDMUNSON NORTON

Associate in Administration
ODILE SWEENEY

Associates
JEAN M. WHITTET
Program Development
RUTH SHINN
Personnel and Training
ANNIE-KATE GILBERT
National Support

Consultant in Human Relations
CELESTINE L. SMITH, ED. D.

Administrative Assistant
HELEN BAIRD

President, National Board
LILACE REID BARNES

General Secretary
EDITH M. LERRIGO

Mr. Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Services
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Paul:

This is to give you a little more information about the workshop on responsible citizenship to be held on Saturday, April 15 at A & T College, Greensboro, N. C. As indicated yesterday, we should like to have you make a half hour presentation on the voter registration picture in the South in general on Saturday morning. Also, if it is at all possible we hope that you can remain through the day and serve as a consultant for the afternoon discussions on what students can do to increase citizenship responsibility. Your main presentation will be followed by a question and discussion period. From the enclosed notice you will get a further idea of the program for the day. We have also asked Attorney McNeill Smith, Chairman, N. C. Advisory Committee of the U. S. Civil Rights Commission, if he could be present for a short talk on what the Civil Rights Committee of North Carolina is doing.

Your expenses will be paid by the human relations project of the YWCA and I would appreciate it if you would let me know whether this can be handled after the trip or whether you prefer a check in advance. Since I do not anticipate having too much to say you will be spared having to listen to me, but I am sure that I can benefit from your presentation (Smile). Please let me hear from you regarding the expenses and if there are any other questions I will be very happy to try to answer them. The workshop will open at 10:00 a.m., Saturday morning and will be held in the Assembly Room of the F. D. Bluford Library of the A & T College.

Thanks for your ready response. I am keeping my fingers crossed in the hope that we will have a good meeting. In any event this, we are confident, will serve to demonstrate what might be done by the YWCAs in this area.

Sincerely,

Ella J. Baker
National Student YWCA Staff
Southern Region

EJB:fd
Enc.

[8-1.50] [train]

YWCA

National Student Young Women's Christian Association of the U.S.A.

600 LEXINGTON AVENUE
NEW YORK 22, N.Y.
PLAZA 3-4700
CABLE: EMISSARIUS, N.Y.

Southern Region
Suite 301, 41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia
Telephone: Jackson 5-2372

Chairman
CONNIE L. MILLIKEN
Union Theological Seminary

Vice Chairmen
MARGEE GRIMES
Wilson College
JANE MEREDITH
Randolph-Macon Woman's College
BEVERLY SAVAGE
Farmington State Teachers College

Chairman Administrative Committee
MRS. WILLIAM GENNÉ

Executive
MRS. MARGARET EDMUNSON NORTON

Associate in Administration
ODILE SWEENEY

Associates
JEAN M. WHITTET
Program Development
RUTH SHINN
Personnel and Training
ANNIE-KATE GILBERT
National Support

Consultant in Human Relations
CELESTINE L. SMITH, ED. D.

Administrative Assistant
HELEN BAIRD

President, National Board
LILACE REID BARNES

General Secretary
EDITH M. LERRIGO

March 28, 1961

WILL YOU BE PRESENT?

APRIL 15, 1961

Dear YWCA Presidents and Advisers:

We know that you may be planning to send representatives to the Citizenship Workshop on April 15 but just have not found the time to let us know it. Because we must be able to advise the host college of how many persons to expect, this is to urge you to fill out the enclosed blank and return it to us at once.

Place and Program

Registration and plenary sessions of the workshop will be held in the Assembly Room of the F. D. Bluford Library, on the A & T College Campus. The program will consist of two major divisions:

I. FACTUAL INFORMATION ON VOTER REGISTRATION

A. In the South as a whole

B. In North Carolina in particular

II. WHAT STUDENTS CAN DO TO INCREASE CITIZENSHIP RESPONSIBILITY

A. On college campuses

B. In their college communities

C. In their home communities

Speakers and Consultants

It will be our good fortune to have as one of our speakers and consultants, Mr. Paul Rilling, Southern Regional Council. He will bring us the southwide picture.

YWCA ®

Mr. John S. Stewart, a Negro member of the City Council of Durham, North Carolina will present both the positive and negative facts about voter registration in North Carolina.

We also expect to have students of Bennett College report on the very successful "Operations Door Knob" which they conducted in the spring of 1960.

Time for questions and discussions will follow each presentation.

We look forward to receiving your registration.

Sincerely,

Ella J. Baker

Ella J. Baker
National Student YWCA Staff
Southern Region

EJB:fd
Encl.

Arrival noon - Monday May 22 depart - Tuesday - 6:00 P.M.

INTERNATIONAL COMMISSION
UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA 4, PA. • BAring 2-5722 • CABLE, NATSTUD - PHILADELPHIA, PA.

May 2, 1961

This is to introduce Mr. S. Paramsothy from Singapore, Mr. Nkape from Uganda, and Mr. Ole Lagesen from Norway. These three students are members of a Research and Information Commission team which is preparing a study on segregation in education for the International Student Conference (ISC). They will be in the United States for approximately three weeks interviewing and collecting research materials for their study.

The International Student Conference, which was founded in 1950, is an international student meeting designed to promote programs of mutual cooperation between representative national student unions from all over the world. National unions which participated in the last ISC came from such diverse countries as Congo, Malaya, Sierra Leone, Nepal, Israel, and Venezuela. With the help of its Coordinating Secretariat located in Leiden, Netherlands, the ISC has constantly provided a non-partisan forum whereby students may take up matters which directly concern and interest them. It is without doubt the largest and most representative international student organization existing today.

The Research and Information Commission (RIC) was established to prepare studies of situations where there is reason to believe that academic freedom or university autonomy has been violated. The reports prepared by this Commission are submitted to the ISC, published and made available to students from all over the world. Reports on university situations in Spain, East Germany, the Union of South Africa, Paraguay, and Hungary are only a few of the valuable and comprehensive studies which have been completed by this Commission. Their conclusions have had widespread impact on student opinion.

The United States National Student Association is pleased to welcome this RIC team and to aid them in any way possible. The significance of their study will be immense. They will want to inverview as many persons as possible in order to better comprehend the educational system in the South and the action that has thus far been taken to end racial segregation.

OFFICERS

President
RICHARD A. RETTIG
University of Washington

Assistant to the President
ELIZABETH R. GARMAN
Skidmore College

•

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

Vice President
JAMES C. SCOTT
Williams College

Administrative Assistant
RICHARD M. MILLER
University of Minnesota, Duluth

Assistant
MANUEL ARAGON, JR.
San Francisco State College

Campus Administrator
HARVEY K. FLAD
University of Colorado

Director, Foreign Student Leadership Project
DONALD F. CLIFFORD
Catholic University of America

•

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Vice President
TIMOTHY L. JENKINS
Howard University

Program Vice President
DAN L. JOHNSTON
Westmar College

Program Vice President
DONALD R. SMITH
University of Texas

Administrative Assistant
ROBERT M. WALTERS
Lehigh University

Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

West Coast Office
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

•

Educational Travel, Inc.
20 West 38th Street
New York 18, New York

2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

•

NATIONAL ADVISORS

Ralph J. Bunche
Under-Secretary
United Nations

John Cogley
Staff Administrator
The Fund for the Republic

James M. Dabbs
President
Southern Regional Council, Inc.

Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame

Russell Kirk
Editor
The University Bookman

Ralph McGill
Publisher
Atlanta Constitution

Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University

Harold E. Stassen

•

Chairman
National Advisory Board
CARL M. GRIP, JR.
Dean of Men
Temple University

Chairman
Financial Advisory Board
RUTH HAGY BROD

ASSOCIATED WITH: American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U. S. Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • Young Adult Council • Nat'l Citizens Committe for UN Day • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

fourteenth NATIONAL STUDENT CONGRESS
UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN • AUGUST 20 TO AUGUST 30, 1961

They will also wish documentation for their final report. As you are certainly aware, the problem of segregation in education in the United States is cause for much concern among students and student organizations in Asia, Africa, and Latin America.

The representatives of 73 national student organizations have asked that this report be prepared and its information and conclusions are anxiously awaited by students in many parts of the world. In order to prepare the most informative and complete report possible, they will need your cooperation. It is for this reason that we are asking you to offer your assistance in making their program a success.

Sincerely yours,

James C. Scott

JAMES C. SCOTT
International Affairs Vice President

JCS:ap

OFFICE MEMORANDUM

southern student human relations project

To : Paul

Date:

From : Connie

Subj :

Heres the stuff on RIC - they will of course be coming to SRC, but will let you know when next week —

Love,
C —

May 2, 1961

Mr. Arthur J. Levin
41 Exchange Place, S. E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Mr. Levin:

Thank you for your note of April 27 regarding the motion of the Southern Project Advisory Committee to raise the salary of Connie Curry by $1,000 for 1961. I am happy to inform you that this action has been taken and that the payments were retroactive to January 1, 1961, as desired in the motion.

I was grateful for the opportunity to meet you at the January meeting of the Advisory Committee and look forward to seeing you again at the Spring meeting.

Sincerely yours,

Richard A. Rettig
President

RAR/ep

cc: Rev. Will Campbell
Mr. Paul Rilling

National Council of the Young Men's Christian Associations

OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

OFFICERS
SOUTHERN AREA COUNCIL
DR. HUGH B. WILCOX
PRESIDENT
J. FRAN BABBITT
VICE PRESIDENT
DR. R. T. NELSON
VICE PRESIDENT
EDWARD M. VINSON
VICE PRESIDENT
CHARLES R. YOUNTS
TREASURER
VIRGIL P. STEWART
RECORDING SECRETARY
RALPH BRUNSON
ASST. RECORDING SECRETARY

THE SOUTHERN AREA COUNCIL
(ALABAMA, FLORIDA, GEORGIA, KENTUCKY, LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI, ASHEVILLE, N. C. TENNESSEE AND VIRGINIA)
706 STANDARD BUILDING
ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA
JACKSON 1-0352

OFFICERS
SOUTHERN AREA BOARD
LEONARD F. HURLEY
CHAIRMAN
SHELBY R. ROGERS
VICE CHAIRMAN
CHARLES R. YOUNTS
TREASURER
HUGH G. HURST, SR.
SECRETARY

May 9, 1961

Mr. Paul Rilling
Southern Regional Council
63 Auburn Avenue, N. E.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Paul:

The recent meeting of the General Agency group at New Orleans was very stimulating and informative. I extend my appreciation to you and others who had a part in making this meeting there possible. As indicated to you in my conversation, my wife is interested in membership in the National Association of Inter-Group Relations Officials. Would you be kind enough to send me the forms and information necessary for her to file for membership?

Sincerely,

Dunbar
m.f.

Dunbar Reed
Associate Secretary

5-11-61

DR:mt

May 22, 1961

Mr. Joseph Haas
1116 First National Bank Building
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Mr. Haas:

Paul Rilling asked that I send the enclosed letter and reprint to you. He would appreciate it verymmuch if you would look over them and give him your opinion on what, if any, action ought to be taken. He will call you about an appointment later.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Timothy Miller
secretary to Paul Rilling

Enclosures

May 26, 1961

Mr. John Yungblut
Friends Center
1384 Fairview Road
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear John:

I did not realize I was supposed to be a leader in the New Orleans affair. I had thought I was attending to sit in and make contacts. I certainly would be glad to be helpful in any way, but would rather not be considered a co-leader.

I am enclosing a copy of the letter I sent to people in Alabama, along with the list. I think it would be a good idea if you would invite Mrs. Betty Wisdom (413 Hillary Street, N.O.). She has been active in SCS and is very concerned; also Henry Cabirac, Director of the new Catholic Council on Human Relations (P.O. Box 4366, N.O. 18).

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PMR/sm
Enclosures

May 26, 1961

Father Albert Foley
Spring Hill College
Mobile, Alabama

Dear Father Foley:

The enclosed meeting is organized primarily for persons in Mississippi and Louisiana who will be considering how they may improve the civil rights situation in their states. In view of recent developments, however, the American Friends Service Committee feels that it would be particularly helpful this year to include a few persons from Alabama in the meeting. We would therefore like to invite you to attand if possible and ask that you return the enclosed card.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PMR/ss
Enclosure

5/26/61

List of Alabama names for John Yungblut's New Orleans, AFSC meeting

The Rev. S. S. Seay
Madison Park
Montgomery, Alabama

The Rev. Ralph Abernathy
347 North Ripley Street
Montgomery 4, Alabama

The Rev. Joseph Lowry
Warren Street Methodist Church
Mobile, Alabama

The Rev. Carl Landes
South Union College
Vadley, Alabama

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Anderson
3239 Gilmer Street
Montgomery, Alabama

Dr. C. G. Gomillion
President
Tuskegee Institute
Tuskegee, Ala.

Mr. David Vann
2100 Comer Building
Birmingham 3, Ala.

The Rev. Welton Gregory
202 Hilltop Terrace
Montgomery, Ala.

The Rev. C. Herbert Oliver
55 18th Avenue South
Birmingham, Ala.

Father Albert Foley
Spring Hill College
Mobile, Alabama

SOUTHEASTERN REGIONAL OFFICE

ANTI-DEFAMATION LEAGUE

Of B'nai B'rith

41 EXCHANGE PLACE, S.E., ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA

REGIONAL BOARD

SIMON S. WEIL, Nashville
Chairman

JAC H. ROTHSCHILD, Columbus
Vice-Chairman

ABE GOLDSTEIN, Atlanta
Honorary Chairman

LEO BEARMAN, Memphis
BEN J. MASSELL, Atlanta
DONALD OBERDORFER, Atlanta
DR. WILLIAM A. WEXLER, Savannah
Honorary Vice-Chairmen

MORRIS B. ABRAM, Atlanta
DAVID BAKER, Columbia
FRANK BERMAN, Savannah
WILLIAM BREMAN, Atlanta
HARRY ELSON, Atlanta
DR. IRVING GOLDSTEIN, Atlanta
DR. DAVID MONSKY, Montgomery
DR. SOL NEIDICH, Beaufort
MAYER U. NEWFIELD, Birmingham
MORRIS L. STRAUCH, Memphis
MRS. HARRY STRAUSS, Knoxville
DR. ALFRED A. WEINSTEIN, Atlanta
MRS. I. WILEN, Atlanta
Executive Committee

ARTHUR J. LEVIN
Director

ABE GOLDSTEIN, Atlanta
MAYER U. NEWFIELD, Birmingham
MORRIS STRAUCH, Memphis
MRS. HARRY STRAUSS, Knoxville
Commissioners, Southeastern Area

NATIONAL COMMISSION

HENRY EDWARD SCHULTZ
Chairman

MEIER STEINBRINK
Honorary Chairman

BARNEY BALABAN
A. G. BALLENGER
PHILIP M. KLUTZNICK
HERBERT H. LEHMAN
LEON LOWENSTEIN
WILLIAM SACHS
BENJAMIN SAMUELS
DORE SCHARY
MELVIN H. SCHLESINGER
JESSE STEINHART
Honorary Vice-Chairmen

ABE GOLDSTEIN
HAROLD LACHMAN
DAVID A. ROSE
Vice-Chairmen

BENJAMIN GREENBERG
Treasurer

HERBERT LEVY
Secretary

BENJAMIN R. EPSTEIN
National Director

PAUL H. SAMPLINER
Chairman, Executive Committee

JOSEPH COHEN
Vice-Chairman, Executive Committee

•

LABEL A. KATZ
President, B'nai B'rith

MAURICE BISGYER
Executive Vice-President, B'nai B'rith

STAFF DIRECTORS

NATHAN C. BELTH
Public Relations

OSCAR COHEN
Program

ALEXANDER F. MILLER
Community Service

J. HAROLD SAKS
Administration

LESTER J. WALDMAN
Organization and Planning

•

ARNOLD FORSTER
General Counsel

May 26, 1961

Dear Friend:

The following telegram went from the National Chairman of the Anti-Defamation League, Henry Edward Schultz, to Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy.

> "We are heartened by the prompt, decisive, and effective steps you are taking to assure the preservation of law in Montgomery and other disturbed areas. In so doing, you are helping to guarantee the security and freedom of all Americans. Your actions have profound meaning to the future of America and to all the people of the world.
>
> "All decent Americans North and South have been saddened and humiliated by the show of savagery on the part of hoodlums and rampant mobs in Alabama. Those who defy the law of the land and seek to deprive others of their most basic rights completely misinterpret the meaning of the United States and its historic role."

We believe that citizen groups who express themselves in accord with the foregoing sentiments will be making a contribution to the Attorney General's forthright efforts to maintain law and order. You may want to ask groups and prominent individuals with whom you work in your local community to similarly express themselves.

Kindest regards.

Cordially,

Art Levin

Arthur J. Levin

ajl/dg

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA 4, PA. • BAring 2-1106 • CABLE, NATSTUD - PHILADELPHIA, PA.

May 27, 1961

TO: Members of the Southern Advisory Committee

FROM: Constance Curry, Director, Southern Project

RE: Meeting of the Southern Advisory Committee

Please forgive the delay in notifying you about the meeting of the Southern Advisory Committee. It has been very difficult finding a date when the majority of the members could be present and a date that would fall before the June 9th deadline for the request for renewal of the grant to the Marshall Field Foundation.

The meeting will be held on Friday, June 2, in the conference room at the Southern Regional Council, 5 Forsyth Street, N. W., Atlanta, Ga. We shall begin at 9:30 A.M. and plan to finish by suppertime. I have talked to most of you about the meeting, but I shall appreciate your returning the enclosed post card to let me know if you are coming to the meeting.

Below are listed some of the agenda items:

(1) Director's report on Project activities
(2) Report on the Fourth Southern Student Human Relations Seminar
(3) Report on the visit of the RIC Team
(4) Discussion of the future of the Project
  (a) Visit to the Field Foundation
  (b) Request for renewal and support of same
  (c) Addition of another staff person
(5) Discussion of other Southern programming
  (a) The Sit-in Seminar
  (b) Southern Programming Vice-President
(6) NSA's cooperation with the Justice Department
(7) Southern University Student Government Association
(8) Rightist Activities in the South

As you can see, there are many important topics to be discussed, and I do hope that most of you will be able to attend the meeting.

PS no postcard, because I know you are out of town -
cwc -

ASSOCIATED WITH American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U. S. Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • Young Adult Council • Nat'l Citizens Committee for UN Day • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

OFFICERS
President
RICHARD A. RETTIG
University of Washington
Assistant to the President
M. SUZANNE TUOHY
College of St. Teresa

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
TIMOTHY L. JENKINS
Howard University
Program Vice President
DAN L. JOHNSTON
Westmar College
Program Vice President
DONALD R. SMITH
University of Texas
Administrative Assistant
ROBERT M. WALTERS
Lehigh University

Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

West Coast Office
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
JAMES C. SCOTT
Williams College
Administrative Assistant
RICHARD M. MILLER
University of Minnesota, Duluth
Assistant
MANUEL ARAGON, JR.
San Francisco State College
Campus Administrator
HARVEY K. FLAD
University of Colorado
Director, Foreign Student Leadership Project
DONALD F. CLIFFORD
Catholic University of America

Educational Travel, Inc.
20 West 38th Street
New York 18, New York
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

NATIONAL ADVISORS
Ralph J. Bunche
Under-Secretary
United Nations
John Cogley
Staff Administrator
The Fund for the Republic
James M. Dabbs
President
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame
Russell Kirk
Editor, Modern Age
Ralph McGill
Publisher
Atlanta Constitution
Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University
Harold E. Stassen
O. Meredith Wilson
President
University of Oregon

Chairman
National Advisory Board
CARL M. GRIP, JR.
Dean of Men
Temple University
Chairman
Financial Advisory Board
RUTH HAGY BROD

REPORT ON 1961 SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS SEMINAR

For Southern Advisory Committee Meeting

June 2, 1961, Atlanta, Ga.

I. Dates and Location -- August 1-19, University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wisconsin

II. Seminar Personnel -- Consultant, Reverend Will Campbell; Director, Constance Curry

III. Seminar Mailing -- Beginning on March 29, letters of announcement, application forms and summaries of last year's program were sent to the following groups:

A. Student Body President and NSA coordinators at all NSA member schools in the Carolinas-Virginia Region, Great Southeast Region, Great Southwest Region and Kentucky-Tennessee Region.
B. All Southern members of the National Executive Committee of NSA.
C. Members of the Southern Advisory Committee.
D. '59 Seminar participants still in college.
E. '60 Seminar participants.
F. Approximately 50 individual student, faculty and organization contacts which had been made by the Director of the Project. (Some applications were also circulated by field personnel of other organizations, thus making the total in circulation about 200.)

IV. Applications -- We received 47 applications from students at 37 colleges in all Southern states except Florida and Arkansas. Of these, 30 were from white students and 17 were from Negro students; 24 were men, 23 were women; 18 were from all-white insitiutions; 13 were from predominantly Negro ones; 16 were from desegregated insitiutions.

V. Selections -- (See below list of selections)
Members of the Selection Committee were Will Campbell, Seminar Consultant; Constance Curry, Seminar Director; Paul Rilling, Southern Regional Council; Leon Marion, World University Service; and Timothy Jenkins, National Affairs Vice President of NSA.
As suggested by the Advisory Committee, selections were made with attention to leadership potential in the human relations field and with consideration of:

A. Geographical location of college.
B. Balance of men and women participants.
C. Whether or not the college had participated before.
D. Personal interviews (27 of the applicants were interviewed or known personally by NSA staff or Advisory Committee members.)

VI. Curriculum and Schedule -- (See attached draft) The Seminar program will again last for three weeks this year. Attendance at the 14th National Student Congress of NSA can be financed and will be encouraged but will not be obligatory.

The preparation of the first draft of the curriculum was done in consultation with Will Campbell and Tim Jenkins and with the suggestions of the Southern Advisory Committee. As advised at the last meeting of the Committee, the number of resource persons has been reduced from 12 to 7. Suggestions and additions to the program will be expected from the Advisory Committee.

LIST OF SEMINAR PARTICIPANTS

Name	School
Dan Bowen	Southwestern Univ., Memphis, Tenn.
Timothy Carr	University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn.
Judy Carter	University of Alabama
Jane Clay	University of Louisville, Ky.
Doris Gibson	Loyola University, New Orleans
Sally Hobbs	Duke University, Durham, N. C.
David Johns	Mississippi State University
Lui Manueco-Jenkins	Austin College, Sherman, Texas
John Mayshaak	Bishop College, Marshall, Texas
Bob Miller	University of Georgia
Jeff Mishoe	Clemson College, Clemson, S. C.
Yoniece Perry	Berry College, Rome, Ga.
Barbara Posey	University of Oklahoma
Irvin Penfield	University of Alabama
Faye Powell	Woman's College of Ga., Milledgeville
Johnnie Price	Spelman College, Atlanta, Ga.
Stuart Strenger	Georgia State College, Atlanta
Walter Williams	Jackson State College, Mississippi
Bob Zellner	(attended Huntingdon College in Alabama, but will be at Scarritt College in Nashville next year)

June 6, 1961

The Rev. Oliver Wendell Holmes
919 West 31st Street
Savannah, Georgia

Dear Mr. Holmes:

Paul Rilling said you were interested in seeing copies of by-laws of local councils on human relations. The enclosed two copies are the only ones we seem to have on file. I trust they will be of help to you.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Timothy Miller
secretary to Paul Rilling

June 7, 1961

Dr. Thornton Merriam
Leadership Development Program
YMCA
Standard Building
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Thornton;

Our expenses in connection with the Blue Ridge meeting are as follows;

Air fare	$64.24	(we actually returned by way of Charlotte)
Airport parking (Atlanta)	7.00
Total	71.24

We enjoyed very much the experience of participating in the meeting and saw more of each other than we have for months. I think it was a noble effort and I will be happy to participate in discussions concerning the extension of this sort of workshop to the local level.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PMR/sm

National Council of the Young Men's Christian Associations

OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

OFFICERS
SOUTHERN AREA COUNCIL
DR. HUGH B. WILCOX
PRESIDENT
J. FRAN BABBITT
VICE PRESIDENT
DR. R. T. NELSON
VICE PRESIDENT
EDWARD M. VINSON
VICE PRESIDENT
CHARLES R. YOUNTS
TREASURER
JAMES C. SHELOR
ASST. TREASURER
RALPH BRUNSON
RECORDING SECRETARY
GEORGE CRESWELL
ASST. RECORDING SECRETARY

THE SOUTHERN AREA COUNCIL
(ALABAMA, FLORIDA, GEORGIA, KENTUCKY, LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI, ASHEVILLE, N. C., TENNESSEE AND VIRGINIA)
706 STANDARD BUILDING
ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA
JACKSON 1-0352

OFFICERS
SOUTHERN AREA BOARD
LEONARD F. HURLEY
CHAIRMAN
SHELBY R. ROGERS
VICE CHAIRMAN
CHARLES R. YOUNTS
TREASURER
JAMES C. SHELOR
ASST. TREASURER
HUGH G. HURST, SR.
SECRETARY

June 7, 1961

Mr. Paul Rilling
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Paul:

By every test and confession which I was able to extract from our group at Blue Ridge, you were rated "tops" by all. You did a magnificent job for us and I want to thank you.

In one of our efforts at evaluation, I asked the men to indicate "high points" in the Workshop. We divided into three groups for this purpose. You and your presentations were placed among the "high points" by everyone.

In fact in the sobering reflective process following the event, your contribution was one of the very few things that we did which received practically universal approval.

Charlie is sending you a more tangible token of our gratitude, meanwhile, thank you again. I shall hope to see you soon and after I have worked out the statistics of the Check List, I will tell you more specifically what seems to have happened.

Yours sincerely,

Thornton W. Merriam
sp

Thornton W. Merriam, Secretary
Leadership Development Project

TWM:sp

June 9, 1961

Mr. Joseph Haas
Attorney
First National Bank Building
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Mr. Haas:

I have heard from Bob Hughes concerning the letter which was photostated in the Jeffersonian. Bob indicates that he does remember receiving the letter and that it is at least a possibility that the letter was then thrown away as not being essential to preserve. The letter is not now in the files.

Do you think that any follow-up action is advisable? Should we at least discuss the matter informally with the postal inspectors in Alabama or not?

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PMR/sm

HAAS, HOLLAND & ZINKOW

HERBERT J. HAAS (1905-1953)

JOSEPH F. HAAS
J. KURT HOLLAND
JACK H. ZINKOW
RICHARD C. FREEMAN
S. JARVIN LEVISON

ROSE M. SCHREIBER
WILLIAM M. SINRICH

LAW OFFICES
FIRST NATIONAL BANK BUILDING
ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA

June 13, 1961

Mr. Paul M. Rilling, Director of Field Activities
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Paul:

Thanks for yours of June the 9th bringing me up to date on the Jeffersonian matter.

While I don't think that there has been any violation of the Postal Regulations, I am far from an authority on this subject, and I can see no harm in your pursuing the matter further, although, considering the present climate in Alabama, I question whether or not there is a great deal of wisdom in raising this issue at the present time.

With best wishes, I am

Cordially yours,

Joe

JFH:RS

For Haas, Holland and Zinkow

June 23, 1961

Mr. Maxwell Hahn
Executive Vice President
The Field Foundation, Inc.
250 Park Avenue
New York 17, New York

Dear Mr. Hahn:

I am writing in support of the National Student Association's application for an extension of the Southern Students Human Relations Project. We have been in close touch here with Miss Connie Curry, the director of the project, and have had good opportunity to observe the activities of the project.

In my opinion, Miss Curry's efforts have been of significant value in the South. She has been able to provide channels between white and Negro students in a number of areas and has also been effective in interpreting the ferment of the student movement to liberal and moderate whites, and for that matter, to intergroup officials in the South. I consider that Miss Curry's work has been practical, realistic, responsible and helpful.

I have been in attendance for several days at each of the annual Student Seminars. Although these touch only a small group of students, they have, I believe, been useful in giving at least some leaders the depth and background too often lacking.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PMR/sm

file under Commission
Project in General

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA 4, PA. • BAring 2-1106 • CABLE, NATSTUD - PHILADELPHIA, PA.

June 9, 1961

Mr. Paul Rilling
Southern Regional Council
63 Auburn Street
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Mr. Rilling:

Enclosed with this letter is the final draft of the proposal recently submitted to the Field Foundation to extend the life and work of our Southern Student Human Relations Project for two additional years. You might remember that our original request for the Project some two years ago had the expressed endorsement by each member of the Advisory Board before it was favorably considered by Field. Accordingly, if we were concerned to have you support the idea of the Project before hand, we are all the more anxious to have your evaluations now that you have seen some eighteen months of our efforts.

Ipse dixit has always been a very weak form of persuasion, therefore we must depend on your statements to corroborate the need and effectiveness of the Project's work. In a real sense, your eyes are those through which the work of the Project can best be viewed, and your candid appraisal will be greatly appreciated, I am sure, by both the Field Foundation and us.

I feel confident in my ability to thank you in advance for your taking time to promptly comply with this request.

Sincerely,

Timothy Jenkins

Timothy L. Jenkins
National Affairs Vice President

Mr. Maxwell Hahn
Executive Vice President
The Field Foundation, Inc.
250 Park Avenue
New York 17, New York

OFFICERS
President
RICHARD A. RETTIG
University of Washington
Assistant to the President
M. SUZANNE TUOHY
College of St. Teresa

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
TIMOTHY L. JENKINS
Howard University
Program Vice President
DAN L. JOHNSTON
Westmar College
Program Vice President
DONALD R. SMITH
University of Texas
Administrative Assistant
ROBERT M. WALTERS
Lehigh University
Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia
West Coast Office
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
JAMES C. SCOTT
Williams College
Administrative Assistant
RICHARD M. MILLER
University of Minnesota, Duluth
Assistant
MANUEL ARAGON, JR.
San Francisco State College
Campus Administrator
HARVEY K. FLAD
University of Colorado
Director, Foreign Student Leadership Project
DONALD F. CLIFFORD
Catholic University of America

Educational Travel, Inc.
20 West 38th Street
New York 18, New York
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

NATIONAL ADVISORS
Ralph J. Bunche
Under-Secretary
United Nations
John Cogley
Staff Administrator
The Fund for the Republic
James M. Dabbs
President
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame
Russell Kirk
Editor, Modern Age
Ralph McGill
Publisher
Atlanta Constitution
Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University
Harold E. Stassen
O. Meredith Wilson
President
University of Oregon

Chairman
National Advisory Board
CARL M. GRIP, JR.
Dean of Men
Temple University
Chairman
Financial Advisory Board
RUTH HAGY BROD

ASSOCIATED WITH American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U. S. Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • Young Adult Council • Nat'l Citizens Committe for UN Day • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

Institutional Distribution of Applicants for the 1961

Southern Student Human Relations Seminar

Alabama
Huntington College	Montgomery	1
Spring Hill College	Mobile	1
Talladaga College	Talladaga	1
University of Alabama	Tuscaloosa	4
Georgia
Berry College	Mt. Berry	2
Georgia State College	Atlanta	2
Spelman College	Atlanta	1
University of Georgia	Athens	2
Woman's College of Georgia	Milledgeville	1
Kentucky
Nazareth College	Louisville	1
University of Louisville	Louisville	1
Louisiana
Dominican College	New Orleans	1
Loyola University	New Orleans	1
Southern University	Baton Rouge	1
Maryland
State Teachers College	Towson	1
Mississippi
Jackson State College	Jackson	1
Mississippi State University	State College	1
North Carolina
Duke University	Durham	3
Wake Forest College	Winston-Salem	1
Woman's College, University of North Carolina	Greensboro	1

Oklahoma
University of Oklahoma	Norman	1
South Carolina
South Carolina State College	Orangeburg	1
Wofford College	Spartanburg	1
Texas
Austin College	Sherman	2
Bishop College	Marshall	1
Jones College, Rice University	Houston	1
Texas Southern University	Houston	1
University of Texas	Austin	1
Tennessee
American Baptist Theological Seminary	Nashville	1
Knoxville College	Knoxville	1
Southwestern at Memphis	Memphis	1
Tennessee A & I State University	Nashville	2
University of the South	Sewanee	1

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

PROPOSAL FOR THE RENEWAL

OF THE

SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS PROJECT

Introduction

The United States National Student Association requests a grant of $67,780 to extend the operation of the Southern Student Human Relations Project for a two year period. The Project will continue to involve extensive campus contact, metropolitan, state and area conferences, and will sponsor the fifth and sixth annual Southern Student Human Relations Seminar. It will continue to make use of broad interorganizational cooperation and support with the assistance of its Advisory Board of Southern educators, civic leaders, and human relations specialists.

The various modifications of this proposal from that previously submitted are the result of the considerations of the Advisory Board, the experiences of administrative difficulties, the interim developments in Southern race relations and lastly some eighteen additional months during which to better identify the problems and potentials in campus human relations.

Background

Some projects are born with great possibilities; some projects achieve great possibilities; and some projects have great possibilities thrust upon them. In some sense, the Southern Sudent Human Relations Project combines each of these sources of endowment.

During the past year and a half a more than slight body of evidence has been amassed to support the Project's original thesis that a human relations effort among students would be a singularly fertile area of endeavor. College campuses receptive to the Project's message in some eight Southern States were visited. The assistance of the Project was sought numerously by organizations operating on the student level. The Project has additionally co-sponsored or made plans to sponsor special human relations conferences in North Carolina, South Carolina, and Texas. In trying to assay the success of these endeavors it is instructive to note that overtures have already been made to the Project, 1) to make the Seminar held at the University of North Carolina an annual affair, 2) to help Mr. Marion Wright set up a similar conference in South Carolina in order to facilitate that State's peaceful desegregation at the college level.

In follow up studies of the participants in the Third Southern Student Human Relations Seminar conducted last summer, some twelve out of fifteen were shown to have actively engaged in some phase of human relations promotion on their campus. More than half of this number have also come to play major roles in the national and regional and even international program of the United States National Student Association. Please note the accompanying section of the Director's report giving the comments and actions of Seminar participants entitled "The Meaning of the Seminar."

This year we received forty-seven applications from students at thirty-seven colleges in all Southern states except Florida and Arkansas. Of these, thirty were from white students and seventeen were from Negro students; twenty-four were men; twenty-three were women; eighteen were from all white institutions; thirteen were from predominantly Negro colleges; sixteen were from desegregated institutions. This broadening base of interest and awareness in the Project points to the personal contacts the Project has come to make while rendering service to individuals in the form of speakers lists, program guides, and bibliographies, etc., on various human relations themes.

Represented in that number are recent and probable sites of desegregation contest (University of Georgia, Clemson, University of Alabama, and even Mississippi State) far beyond the United States National Student Association membership.

Then without arrogating a causal relationship, the past year of the Project's work must also be viewed in the context of last year's explosion of interest of southern students in race relations.

When sit-ins erupted shortly after the Project was set up, they put the Project in an uniquely strategic position for the entire U.S. student community. The immediate demands arising in the wake of sit-ins were those of reporting the progress of the student movement. This had to be done for northern and southern students alike, since press coverage seldom indulged it more than passing attention. This need was reinforced by the fact that attendance at almost any conference on human relations inevitably involved the discussion of sit-ins. Then when NSA became a supporter of sit-in activity, an additional tax was levied on the time of the Southern Student Human Relations Project staff to mediate between the movement and this new national student interest. With the establishment of the southwide Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee as the representative body of the movement, the Project staff was drawn into helping them open their offices in Atlanta and cooperating with their program. Given that SNCC represented the only student effort to coordinate the movement, a substantial time has been devoted to it ever since, in addition to cooperation with the local Atlanta committee of students.

Thus many factors have played a part in making the Project a success: its original design; the resourcefulness of its staff; and even a boon from the unexpected.

Need

In spite of last year's burgeoning student activity in race relations, in spite of the dramatically demonstrated need for student human relations on the newly desegregated campus, and in spite of the larger fact that the courts have seen fit to start driving the wedge toward an open society in the South, first through the closed doors of segregated education - it remains ironically true that the Project is the only agency in the South devoted completely to working with white and Negro students in the field of human relations.

Now that cooperative contacts have been effectively established with virtually every human relations agency in the South, now that desegregation in higher education is at an all time high, and now that the new phenomenon of student direct action has been born in race relations - a new set of demands are being made on the Project far beyond the capacity of a single director and secretary.

Proposal

The Project staff will consist of a Director and an Assistant Director and a Secretary working as Project employees of USNSA with the continued advice of an interorganizational Advisory Board. The general operation of the Project would be carried on from Atlanta with permanent files being kept at the USNSA offices.

The innovation of an Assistant Director is principally aimed at allowing broader field programming with the goals of the Project themselves being but slightly modified:

1. To establish contact with and among southern students of good will, thereby helping to promote a concern for human relations within the "all-important" college peer group.

2. To provide an interpretative background for students both interested and disinterested in the current trends of the southern desegregation movement legally, educationally, economically, and politically.

3. To offer the current activist impulse among southern students constructive alternatives in action in human relations.

4. To allow an interracial, interpersonal experience totally different from previous contacts for most of those participating to reinforce the more formal content of the program.

5. To serve as an avenue whereby southern students can come to view themselves more in their roles as citizens of the nation and the world and less as citizens of the region.

6. To develop new practical applications and leadership for good campus and community human relations.

BUDGET

Project Staff and Materials
Director's Salary	$12,000
Assistant Director's Salary	8,400
Travel for Project and NSA Staff	7,000
Campus Program and Resource Material	1,000
		$28,400
Fifth and Sixth Human Relations Seminar
Salary for Consultant	6,600
Travel--Staff and Experts	2,500
Travel--Participants	4,800
Room and Board	6,400
Resource Books and Materials	500
Promotion	500
		15,300
City, State, and Area Conference
Travel Assistance for Students	1,880
Travel for Speakers and Experts	1,000
Working Papers and Materials	400
Local Promotion	400
		3,680
Project Publications
Workbook	300
Reports	400
		700
Advisory Committee Meetings
Travel for Advisors	2,000
Travel for Staff	500
Room and Board	400
		2,900
Administration
Secretary's Salary	7,000
Office Supplies	3,000
Postage and Shipping	800
Telephone and Telegraph	2,000
General Administration	2,000
		14,800
Contingency Fund		2,000
Total Grant Requested		$67,780

THE MEANING OF THE SEMINAR

The true meaning of the Third Southern Student Human Relations Seminar did not lie in the resource persons and their presentations, or in the great amount of assigned reading, or even in the fact that the Negro and white students were together--many for the first time. All of these were certainly factors in the success of the Seminar, but the true meaning lies in what actually happened to those sixteen students during the four-week period and what has been happening to them since then.

An idea of some of the reactions to the Seminar experience can best be given by quoting from some of the evaluations made by the students themselves.

"The Seminar has given me a new faith that there are people of our generation in our own area who want to solve this problem. I have engendered a sympathy for many of the white people in the South who are not free to accept the Negro as an equal because of social, economic and political pressures. And even more important for me, the Seminar has affirmed that the struggle in which we find ourselves--the one for equality of man and for human dignity--is indeed a just one."

"The Seminar has been meaningful to me mainly because it has put me in contact with people who care. This has come primarily from the Negroes rather than the whites, but contact with whites who are perhaps less liberal than I, has caused me to draw upon inner resources in realizing the necessity of being patient without being dishonest."

"The daily contact of the Seminar has provided an opportunity for exchange of ideas and the dispelling of many doubts that I have had about white persons. At the same time, I have found myself in the situation of being in daily contact with a white person who does not really accept me, but of having to struggle to understand him and to harbor no resentment against him."

"Upon coming to this Seminar, I considered myself quite a liberal on the race question. However, the presentations here have summoned up buried prejudices that I have harbored and not even been aware of. I have realized that living in the South among white Southerners who preach myths about the Negro has made it impossible for me to discern fact from myth in every instance, and this realization will be of great help to me in future discussions with segregationists. Moreover, no matter how liberal my ideas might have been, until the Seminar and the chance to mix socially with Negroes, I had never felt the emotional experience that such close association can bring."

"Until the Seminar, it had never occurred to me that Negroes might be prejudiced. As a leader of the sit-in movement, I had pretty much decided that the struggle in the South was that of the Negro on the side of good against the petty white bigots on the side of evil. Here at the Seminar, I have suddenly realized that I am as prejudiced about some things and as quick to stereotype as the worst white segregationist. I am having to re-orient my entire feelings about the struggle in which I am engaged."

One of the Seminar participants wrote the following in a report that she made when she returned to her campus:

"Certainly the high peak of realization for me at the Seminar was the day when the group did role-playing in a sit-in situation. We all volunteered for parts, and I took the part of a Negro sit-inner. I sat down at the counter and asked for a cup of coffee--then fury broke loose. All of a sudden I was a 'dirty nigger,' being shoved off the stool, and someone was running her hand through my hair, saying 'aw, isn't that lovely?' And the girl who did this to me was a Negro--she had to go through this day after day simply because the world saw her only as a black blob. I was horrified at the realization of what it means to be denied the right to be a person..."

"The Seminar also taught me that one doesn't learn a great deal about human relations through study. One learns about human relations through relating himself to other humans. When I think of some of the people at the Seminar that I came to know and love, I realize that for the first time in my life I was associated with a group of people who loved and accepted me for what I was. I had to wear no mask. In fact, in such a situation, we were all forced to rip off our masks -- sooner or later."

Although, as Director of the Seminar, I often found myself enmeshed in mechanics and organizational details, I was still able to see a phenomenal growth and development in practically every student. This does not mean that by the end of the Seminar the white students loved all Negroes, or vice-versa, but instead, the students loved or hated each other purely on the basis of what they were as human beings. This, of course became possible only after each student had shed any forced pretenses of liberalism or sophistication on the racial question and after everyone had stopped being "nice to each other." Although the participants generally acknowledge the harmfulness or racial segregation, it was the common sharing of joy and anger and tears that brought true acknowledgement of each other as human beings and the commitment to somehow make this kind of sharing possible in the South.

The second measure of the meaning of the Seminar is the manner in which the Seminar experience has carried over into the lives of the participants. The Seminar Consultant and I agreed that the students should not feel that their experience had equipped them with all the tools to go back and "reform the South," and we emphasized this fact throughout the Seminar. Although the group continually asked, "but what can we do and how do we do it," the students came generally to the understanding that the improvement of human relations is not always a question of "doing", but actually of "being". Moreover, this kind of understanding has indeed proved fruitful, since it is safe to say that practically every participant has continued his interest in human relations, and at least twelve of them have made specific contributions in human relations work on their campuses or in their communities.

I have been in contact with the students in the months since September and have described below some of the various activities in which they have been engaged.

Some of the participants have become very much involved in the direct action of the Southern Student Movement. The student at South Carolina State College is the leader of the movement in that state and was jailed for sitting-in last fall. He wrote a letter from the jail to the Seminar participant at Texas Christian University, and that student had the letter put in the campus newspaper. This, of course, aroused a great deal of discussion on that campus, which is white and segregated.

At the University of Texas the Seminar participant was instrumental in the formation of a student action group that has been concentrating on theater desegregation in Austin. The actions of this group have caused nation-wide interest in this aspect of desegregation, and many other areas have followed its example. This same student has also visited Fayette and Haywood Counties in Tennessee and has been working to arouse student interest in helping these counties. The participant from Hampton Institute has been taking an active part in the Virginia Student Movement and in theater desegregation efforts in Hampton.

Many of the other students have been actively engaged in human relations education. The participant from Loyola University has been serving as NSA Chairman of four Southern states, and he sponsored last fall in New Orleans, the first NSA conference to bring together students from these states. Human relations was one of the main topics of discussion in the conference program. Likewise, the participant from Florida A&M is NSA Chairman for Florida and Georgia and is holding a conference this spring, which includes a human relations workshop.

At Greensboro College, the participant has helped to start a campus Human Relations Seminar, which meets weekly for lectures and discussion on various aspects of human relations. In Memphis the participant from Siena College has directed her efforts toward the formation of a student inter-racial group that will meet on a regular basis. In Texas and North Carolina Seminar participants have helped to organize and have attended statewide human relations conferences, and two of the white students, from Mercer University and Virginia Polytechnic Institute, have invited one of the Negro participants to speak on their campuses. Finally, many of the students have written and are continuning to write articles on human relations for campus publications.

This is not an exhaustive list, but it will give some idea of the different kinds of outlets that the students have found. Generally speaking, as Director of the Southern Student Human Relations Project, I could not be more pleased with the relationship and carry-over from the Seminar to the work of the Project. In the past months this relationship has meant that I have solid contacts in nine Southern states--contacts who are willing to cooperate with the Project and on whose work the Project has been able to build. --Constance Curry

NSA
SSP

THE FIELD FOUNDATION, INC.
250 PARK AVENUE
NEW YORK 17

June 26, 1961

Mr. Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Mr. Rilling:

Thank you for your letter of June 23rd in support of the National Student Association's application for extension of the Southern Students Human Relations Project. We appreciate your writing us, and shall consider your endorsement when reviewing the application.

Sincerely,

Maxwell Hahn

Maxwell Hahn
Executive Vice President

QUAKER HOUSE
1384 Fairview Rd., NE
Atlanta 6, Ga.

July 6, 1961

Dear Friends:

How often since our two days together at Dillard on June 9 and 10 I have reflected with pleasure on the value of that conference. Sam Gandy and others at Dillard made us feel so much at home and looked after our needs with such care and faithfulness. I am sure you would have approved my sending a word of appreciation to our hosts.

You will recollect that at the conference we decided to send to those attending the names and addresses of all present and also a copy of the poems which were quoted during our time of meditation and in the addresses by Allan Chalmers. We felt these would bear more sustained reflection and be of greater value than any resolutions or set of "findings" which might be drawn up. I am happy, therefore, to send you the enclosures.

President Dent of Dillard has invited us to make use of the very gracious facilities there for other conferences in the future. Meantime, I trust we will want to keep in touch with one another so that bonds of fellowship can be maintained.

I wish to thank you again for the fine contribution which your presence made at the conference.

Faithfully yours,

John Yungblut

John Yungblut
Director

Encls.

PR

COUNCIL FOR COOPERATIVE ACTION AND MEMBER ORGANIZATIONS PRESENTS A CONVOCATION

ON EQUAL JOB OPPORTUNITIES

Wednesday and Thursday - June 28, 29, 1961

****

Wednesday June 28, 1961
6:30 - 8:00 p.m.

Orientation Period - Dr. Leslie Dunbar and the six Commissions - Henry Branch "Y"

8:00 p.m.

P R O G R A M

President Horace Jerome Traylor, presiding

Opening Remarks - President Traylor

Opening Prayer -

A Statement of The Ocassion - - - - - - - - - - - - - - Dr. Luke Jackson

Greetings from The Community Relations Conference -

Introduction of the Speaker - - - - - - - - - - - - - - Dr. Major J. Jones

Keynote Speaker - Dr. Leslie Dunbar Executive Director of the Southern Regional Council

Discussion Period -

Thursday, June 29, 1961
ZION COLLEGE

12:30 - 2:00

Luncheon Session - Workshop
Directed by
Mr. Clearance Coleman, Field Consultant for National Urban League

7:30 - 9:00

Evening Workshop - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - Henry Branch Y.M.C.A.

34 W. 51st St

JOB OPPORTUNITIES CAMPAIGN ORGANIZATIONAL STRUCTURE

I — Business

Luke Jackson
C.C. Bond
Grover C. Davis

- Banks
- Department Stores
- Furniture Stores
- Automobile Businesses
- Office Supply House
- Dime Stores
- Distributive Enterprises
- Grocery Stores

II — Public Utilities

C.B. Robinson

- Gas
- Light
- Telephone
- Water
- Telegraph
- Bus

III — Industrial Firms

Roy C. Noel
George Walker

- Firms with Government Contracts

IV — Education

Robert B. Hunter
Robert B. Hunter
Lonnie R. Boaz

- Higher Education
- School Official
- Guidance Personnel
- Confer with Students
- Vocational Training

V — Civil Employment

Grady Harris

- Federal
  - T.V.A.
  - Post Office
  - Volunteer Ordinance Works
  - Social Security
- State
  - State Employment Office
  - Drivers License
- County
  - Court House Employment
- City
  - Police
  - Fire
  - City Hall

Employment Data

File of Applicants

Quaker House

THE HOLLOW MEN

by

T. S. Eliot

I

We are the hollow men
We are the stuffed men
Leaning together
Headpiece filled with straw. Alas!
Our dried voices, when
We whisper together
Are quiet and meaningless
As wind in dry grass
Or rats' feet over broken glass
In our dry cellar

Shape without form, shade without color,
Paralyzed force, gesture without motion;

Those who have crossed
With direct eyes, to death's other Kingdom
Remember us--if at all--not as lost
Violent souls, but only
As the hollow men
The stuffed men.

II

Eyes I dare not meet in dreams
In death's dream kingdom
These do not appear:
There, the eyes are
Sunlight on a broken column
There, is a tree swinging
And voices are
In the wind's singing
More distant and more solemn
Than a fading star.

Let me be no nearer
In death's dream kingdom
Let me also wear
Such deliberate disguises
Rat's coat, crowskin, crossed staves
In a field
Behaving as the wind behaves
No nearer--

Not that final meeting
In the twilight kingdom

III

This is the dead land
This is cactus land
Here the stony images
Are raised, here they receive
The supplication of a dead man's hand
Under the twinkle of a fading star.

Is it like this
In death's other kingdom
Waking alone
At the hour when we are Trembling with tenderness
Lips that would kiss
From prayers to broken stone.

IV

The eyes are not here
There are no eyes here
In this valley of dying stars
In this hollow valley
This broken jaw of our lost kingdoms

In this last of meeting places
We grope together
And avoid speech
Gathered on this beach of the tumid river
Sightless, unless
The eyes reappear
As the perpetual star
Multifoliate rose
Of death's twilight kingdom
The hope only
Of empty men.

V

Here we go round the prickly pear
Prickly pear prickly pear
Here we go round the prickly pear
At five o'clock in the morning.

Between the idea
And the reality
Between the motion
And the act
Falls the Shadow
For Thine is the Kingdom

Between the conception
And the creation
Between the emotion
And the response
Falls the Shadow
Life is very long

Between the desire
And the spasm
Between the potency
And the existence
Between the essence
And the descent

Falls the Shadow
For Thine is the Kingdom

For Thine is Life is
For Thine is the

This is the way the world ends
This is the way the world ends
This is the way the world ends
Not with a bang but a whimper.

You will remember that Allan Chalmers quoted from memory excerpts from a poem by Arthur Ficke and one, unpublished, by Edna St. Vincent Millay. As he spoke them, they are:

by Arthur Ficke

I pray you, in this hour's confusion, go
Not back again into the old belief
That all man's life is brutish, harsh and brief,
And that what has been always will be so.
Earth has seen many a great hope's overthrow
And many a noble dream go down in grief;
Yet still persists the miracle of the leaf
That spring unfolds above the ending snow.
Be not too sure that evil in this hour
Has strength to make as nothing all our gain
And leave us naked to the whirlwind's wrath,
Through earlier, darker days than these, some power
Of God made man endure his night of pain
Then stride one footstep higher up the path again.

A NOT IMPOSSIBLE IF
by
Edna St. Vincent Millay

This should be simple if our power were great
But we have no trend, our power is stubborn
But in this--it is inert
It wills not to do injustice
Nor would it do men hurt
And in strong hands is easy to bend. . . .
Evil is conservative, established, disciplined
Adroit, severe, efficient
They know--for they have learned by heart
From a most meticulous chart
Just how to go. They know and can
In darkness as well as day
Go their direct, discreet, expedient way
Know just how to muster power and where to hide
And move among us in the night. . . .

Why cannot we as well as they Scout, reconnoiter, photograph, survey
Make maps and study them and learn our way
Or must we lie and sleep
Because we say--"Tis night."
If this be true then it is true
That in this world today Lucifer alone
Has power to bring men light.
But--from so much energy so little a hope
So vast a consolation in the end
We could erect a thing of poise and scope
That future generations might defend
And put to their own use.

We the living, we the still alive
Might yet in our own ways contrive
To build our world.
What a triumph--what a task is this
But how to go about it? How contrive to defeat
Evil in this our proper sphere and element. . . .
If we had sense, authority and time
And need not quibble, shift, cajole or be subdued.

Ga

DAILY-EVENING
SUNDAY-MORNING

E. B. BRASWELL
EDITOR AND PUBLISHER

THE BANNER-HERALD

PUBLISHED BY THE ATHENS PUBLISHING CO.
ATHENS, GEORGIA

FOREIGN ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE
WARD-GRIFFITH CO., INC.
NEW YORK--247 PARK AVENUE
CHICAGO--674 WRIGLEY BUILDING
ATLANTA--VOLUNTEER BUILDING

ESTABLISHED 1808

A. B. C. PAPER
ASSOCIATED PRESS
N. E. A. SERVICE

Miss Marge Manderson
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

July 9, 1961

Dear Miss Manderson:

In reply to your letter of July 3, 1961, I find that with summer vacations and reserved military leaves the staff here in the Banner-Herald newsroom has been somewhat depleated temporarily; therefore, an answer to your inquiry has been delayed.

I have just checked our files for the first of the year, and fail to find a special ordinance as you wrote about in your letter. Too, I do not recall a special Council action. As far as I can recall, University students complyed with a curfew for a while; and I might note too that most persons stayed at home during the brief crisis.

We did print Governor Vandiver's statement concerning the powers of the State Patrol; and in an earlier edition we carried Mayor Ralph M. Snow's statement about what he understood about the Patrol. This might be the thing you are writing about.

As far as I know, who polices the University campus is still a question that has not been specifically answered by the Georgia Legislators. In layman's language the University is state property, the City of Athens jurisdiction in that area therefore is questionable.

If this answers your question good, if not, let me know and with time permitting I'll do a bit of research. As stated above, we are quite understaffed at present.

Thank you for your invitation to visit your office. Indeed, I remember you, especially when the Drama Department submits its quarterly publicity on the local productions.

If I can be of any help further, let me know.

Sincerely,

W. E. Asher

W. E. Asher
City Editor

WEA/sc

NSA Sou - Proj

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA 4, PA. • BAring 2-1106 • CABLE, NATSTUD - PHILADELPHIA, PA.

July 25, 1961

TO: MEMBERS OF THE SOUTHERN ADVISORY COMMITTEE, NSA

FROM: CONSTANCE CURRY, SOUTHERN PROJECT DIRECTOR

Enclosed you will find a copy of the minutes of the June meeting of the Southern Advisory Committee. I am sorry that you have not received them before this, but I wanted to wait until I could include the final information on the Fourth Southern Student Human Relations Seminar.

The following material on the Seminar in enclosed:

(1) A list of student participants
(2) The curriculum
(3) A general information sheet for those of you who were not present at the meeting.

I also have available, a selected Bibliography and the assigned reading list that will be used at the Seminar, if any of you would like to have copies.

I shall be leaving for Wisconsin in a few days and am really looking forward to the Seminar. I shall be in touch with you this fall and shall be letting you about the continuation of the Project after we hear from the Field Foundation.

I hope that you are having a good summer and thank you, as always, for your continuing interest and help.

ASSOCIATED WITH American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U. S. Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • Young Adult Council • Nat'l Citizens Committe for UN Day • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

OFFICERS
President
RICHARD A. RETTIG
University of Washington
Assistant to the President
M. SUZANNE TUOHY
College of St. Teresa

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
TIMOTHY L. JENKINS
Howard University
Program Vice President
DAN L. JOHNSTON
Westmar College
Program Vice President
DONALD R. SMITH
University of Texas
Administrative Assistant
ROBERT M. WALTERS
Lehigh University

Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

West Coast Office
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
JAMES C. SCOTT
Williams College
Administrative Assistant
RICHARD M. MILLER
University of Minnesota, Duluth
Assistant
MANUEL ARAGON, JR.
San Francisco State College
Campus Administrator
HARVEY K. FLAD
University of Colorado
Director, Foreign Student Leadership Project
DONALD F. CLIFFORD
Catholic University of America

Educational Travel, Inc.
20 West 38th Street
New York 18, New York
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

NATIONAL ADVISORS
Ralph J. Bunche
Under-Secretary
United Nations
John Cogley
Staff Administrator
The Fund for the Republic
James M. Dabbs
President
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame
Russell Kirk
Editor, Modern Age
Ralph McGill
Publisher
Atlanta Constitution
Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University
Harold E. Stassen
O. Meredith Wilson
President
University of Oregon

Chairman
National Advisory Board
CARL M. GRIP, JR.
Dean of Men
Temple University
Chairman
Financial Advisory Board
RUTH HAGY BROD

MINUTES OF THE SOUTHERN PROJECT
ADVISORY COMMITTEE MEETING

June 2, 1961

The meeting of the Southern Project Advisory Committee was begun at 10:00 A.M., June 2, 1961, in the conference room of the Southern Regional Council, 5 Forsyth Street, Atlanta, Georgia. Mr. Timothy Jenkins, National Affairs Vice-President of NSA, served as chairman for the meeting.

Attending the meeting were: Mr. Arthur Levin and Mr. Dick Shapiro, Anti-Defamation League; Mr. Richard Ramsay, American Friends Service Committee; Mr. James McBride Dabbs, Southern Regional Council; Reverend Thomas Clancy, Loyola University; Professor C. H. Parrish, University of Louisville; Miss Ella Baker, YWCA; Mr. Timothy Jenkins, USNSA; Misses Constance Curry and Carol Lukei, Southern Project.

Invited but unable to attend were: Dr. Warren Ashby, Woman's College, UNC; Reverend Will Campbell, National Council of Churches; Mr. Paul Rilling, Southern Regional Council; Richard Rettig, NSA; and Reverend Charles Jones, Chapel Hill, N. C.

REPORT ON PROJECT ACTIVITIES SINCE JANUARY

Dick Ramsay presented a report on the Seminar for Virginia students that was held in February in Prince Edward County. The one-day Seminar was co-sponsored by the Southern Project and the American Friends Service Committee. Groups of students had interviewed various citizens in the county about the school situation and then had discussed ways in which they could contribute most effectively to the solution of the problem. Since the seminar, students and faculty at Hampden-Sydney College in Prince Edward County have become interested in the situation, Randolph Macon students have made several visits to the county educational centers, and students from Hollins College and Virginia State have helped on various projects. Dick stated that interested organizations and individuals could send school materials for the Negro students to Mrs. Helen Baker with the AFSC or to the PEC Christian Association. He also mentioned that there is a possibility of schools being opened there for Negroes only, while white students will continue to attend the private schools now in operation.

In early April, the Director attended the spring conference of the Carolinas-Virginia Region of NSA at Duke University, where she helped lead a workshop on human relations. She reported that the meeting was well-attended and that one of the high points of the conference was the showing of the film "Operation Abolition," and the presentation by Fulton Lewis, III. She stated that many of the students present seemed convinced that the demonstrations in San Francisco were Communist-inspired and directed and that all students participating in this kind of demonstration were either Communists or Communist dupes. She expressed her concern over the fact that Mr. Lewis was planning a widespread tour of the South to show the film and that, in most cases, there would be no opportunity to have the other side of the story presented. It was suggested that an effort be made to send NSA's material and information from other agencies on the film and on the House UnAmerican Activities Committee to contacts on Southern campuses.

The Director reported on the spring meeting of the Great Southeast Region of NSA. The meeting was held in Tallahassee in April at the Canterbury House at Florida A & M University. She explained the difficulties involved in the holding of the meeting, since the Administration at Florida A & M had first given permission for the group to meet on campus, but had then refused to take the responsibility for holding an integrated meeting on campus. Thus the meeting had to be postponed and new arrangements made for accommodations. Although there were only eight or ten students from five schools in the entire region, and there were no white schools represented, the program was an excellent leadership training session, and Miss Curry commended Mr. Ira Robinson, the Chairman of the region, for his good planning and determination to hold a regional meeting.

During her trip to New Orleans for the Spring Southern Inter-Agency Conference, the Director was able to make several new contacts at LSUNO and to attend several planning meetings for the spring NSA Conference of the South-Central Region. This conference was held the second weekend in May, and Father Clancy, of Loyola University, reported that the meeting was well-attended and that the program was good. He also mentioned that NSA was relatively secure in member colleges in the New Orleans area and that the students involved did not seem to be afraid to discuss race relations. He added that there had been some controversy, however, because of the stand that many people involved in NSA have taken against films such as "Operation Abolition" and "Communism on the Map", which have had widespread showings in New Orleans recently.

The Director then reported on a meeting of South Carolina students held in Frogmore, South Carolina, in May. The South Carolina Council on Human Relations has been working since fall to encourage the formation of a state student group, and this meeting brought together some fifty students from twelve colleges to discuss this. The program was geared toward discovering the responsibility of students in bringing about changes in race relations in the state, and on the closing day the group elected officers, agreed on specific programs of action, and made arrangements for the continuation of their group. Miss Curry indicated that she had attended this meeting, in part to discuss with interested parties in South Carolina, the possibilities of holding a conference for college student leaders on preparing a college or university for desegregation. Since the state schools in South Carolina will undoubtedly be facing this situation very soon, all parties agreed such a conference would be helpful. Plans are now under way to hold the conference in the fall under the sponsorship of the South Carolina Council on Human Relations. The Southern Project would cooperate with the Council in helping with materials, speakers, and finances.

The Director explained the purposes of the Student Inter-racial Ministry, which is attempting to place white ministerial students in Southern Negro churches and Negro students in white churches for summer work. The program began at Union Seminary in New York last summer when four students came to work in the South. It has now expanded to include several seminaries and a much broader geographical area, and the Project has tried to help the program in making contacts with students and ministers in the South. The Director also reported that a great deal of time was spent during the spring on preparation for the Fourth SSHRS and on interviewing candidates for Seminar participation.

Tim Jenkins told the Committee about the grant that NSA had received for the publication of the Civil Rights Newsletter. News is obtained by staying in contact with various protest areas in the South and by information received from the Negro press and from the Southern Project Office. The Newsletter covers news related only to desegregation and civil rights, is published in Philadelphia weekly and mailed to all NSA member schools and to people and organizations on a special mailing list.

REPORT ON THE VISIT OF THE RESEARCH INFORMATION COMMISSION TEAM

Tim Jenkins reported that the Team had just left to return home after spending a month in the United States travelling and doing research on segregation in the South. The team, which included one student from Malaya, one from Norway, and one from Uganda, was sent here to carry out a resolution passed at the last meeting of the International Student Conference. Before coming to this country, they read background material on the South, and their itinerary included visits to New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Austin, Texas, New Orleans, Little Rock, Montgomery, Tuskegee, Nashville, Atlanta, and Chapel Hill. The Team was in Montgomery the day before the first Freedom Riders arrived and, in fact, were arrested there themselves and questioned for two hours after police had seen their integrated group in a car. Tim Jenkins and Miss Curry, who had helped the International Commission of NSA arrange their schedule, agreed that the Team had gotten a very broad picture of the South and that they had seemed to understand the many levels of feeling and the varying factors which influence Southern attitudes. In January the Team will be submitting a report on their visit and, if possible, the report will be sent to the Advisory Committee.

THE SOUTHERN UNIVERSITY STUDENT GOVERNMENT ASSOCIATION

Attempts had been made earlier to have NSA represented at the SUSGA Conference, but SUSGA had refused to have an NSA observer present. The Director did go to Florida State University, however, and speak with one of the deans who had attended the meeting. Miss Curry expressed her concern over the fact that the SUSGA Conference program did not include discussion of any of the more serious problems now facing students in the United States, but dealt instead with topics such as "The Role of Student Government in Promoting Sportsmanlike Conduct". The program also showed that most of the conference was under the direction of deans and administrative officials rather than students. She also emphasized that there were around 300 students at this "all-white" conference and that membership in SUSGA had grown from seven in 1955 to 57 as of this year. It was pointed out that although SUSGA conferences are, in fact, "all-white", several of the member colleges actually have desegregated student bodies. Also, one Negro college had inquired into the procedure for joining SUSGA and had found that the procedure is so complicated--requiring approval of all member colleges in the state, etc.--so as to make membership practically impossible. The Advisory Committee discussed these observations and suggested that NSA again attempt to contact schools in SUSGA to point out the inconsistencies in the SUSGA membership policy and to give them a better understanding of NSA's policies and programs. The new President of SUSGA has been invited to attend the Fourteenth National Student Congress of NSA.

DISCUSSION OF THE FREEDOM RIDES

The Director reported that a "Freedom Ride Coordinating Committee" had been set up and that NSA, at the request of the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee, has sent out letters to its member schools urging them to support the Freedom Riders during the summer. The group then held a general, open discussion of the meaning and purposes of the Freedom Rides.

NSA'S COOPERATION WITH THE JUSTICE DEPARTMENT

Tim Jenkins discussed the need for a meeting between Justice Department officials and Southern students and reported that NSA had been in contact with the Department about this possibility. He explained that the Department would like to talk with students involved in the student movement about: (1) voting rights in the South; (2) interstate travel; (3) what type of federal intervention could be expected when local police do not provide adequate protection; (4) other areas in which students might be working during the coming year. Mr. Jenkins stated that he hoped such a meeting could be held within the next month and that the Justice Department seemed ready to cooperate immediately.

FUTURE OF THE PROJECT

Tim Jenkins reported that Dick Rettig, President of NSA, the Project Director, and he had gone to New York in May to talk with Mr. Maxwell Hahn of the Field Foundation on the program of the Project and on the possibility of renewing the Project grant, which expires December 1st of this year. Mr. Hahn had requested that a written request for renewal of the grant be submitted by the second week of June. The Committee was then given a copy of a proposed prospectus on renewal which had been drawn up by Mr. Jenkins, and they were asked for comments and suggestions.

Discussion centered around the special points to be emphasized in the grant renewal application and on any changes that should be made in the context of the original Project prospectus. It was felt that two special developments since the Project's establishment should be noted: (1) The sit-in movement and subsequent action had substantially increased the work of the Project. (2) Students are now becoming interested and involved in human relations in colleges in the Deep South. The Director noted that these two facts, plus the continuing interest in programming in border states, raised the question of an additional staff person for the Project. She felt that an assistant director would help alleviate the burden of one person's having to travel and coordinate programming in thirteen Southern states during a period of great activity in the student world. The Committee discussed this and recommended that funds for an assistant director be requested in the proposal to the Field Foundation. In the general discussion on the reasons for the renewal of the grant, the following points were brought out:

(1) The Project is one of the few ways in which students themselves are being reached on Southern campuses. Other organizations do not have the same "peer" relationship with students that the Project has.

(2) With the rise and probable continuation of student activity, it becomes even more important to continue the Project.

(3) With the inevitable increase of college desegregation in the future, there will be an increasing need for the Project to work with these colleges in preparing their campus for peaceful desegregation.

(4) In the absence of the Project the "field" would be left to the influence of the opposition (Southern conservatism), particularly in the light of increasing SUSGA membership. Many Southern students actually want to become involved in the mainstream of American life, whether they consciously realize it or not. Some are now beginning to realize this, and the programs of the Project offer one of the few outlets for their involvement.

(5) Other organizations are not attempting anything like the holding of the Southern Student Human Relations Seminars, and the Committee felt that the accomplishments of the Seminar participants should be included in the renewal request.

The Committee then discussed in detail the possible addition of an Assistant Director to the Project staff. They discussed whether a Negro or a white person, a man or a woman, could best fit into the work of the Project, but decided that specific requirements should not be set up on these bases. The group suggested that $4200 per year would be a suitable beginning salary for this position and that money for his travel expenses also be requested. In discussing the duties of such a person, the Committee felt that the title of Assistant Director was self-explanatory to a great extent and that there should be a sharing of responsibilities and of travel obligations. One person suggested that the Director continue to make initial contacts and that the assistant work on follow-ups and continued contact. The Committee warned that the addition of a staff person should not cut down on the amount of field work or travel done by the Director, since the most important function of the Project is to make personal contacts through campus visits, conferences, etc., with only a minimum amount of time devoted to writing materials, reports and doing work in the office. The Director pointed out that another person would also necessitate additional office space and supplies.

The Committee asked that a copy of the final request for renewal to the Field Foundation be sent to them and agreed to send letters to Field in support of the request. One of the advisors mentioned that if Field felt it could not renew the grant at this time, perhaps other foundations might be contacted.

DISCUSSION OF OTHER SOUTHERN PROGRAMMING

Tim Jenkins reported that foundations had been contacted about the possibility of obtaining a grant to hold a seminar for Southern student leaders who had been involved in the sit-in movement. The Seminar would be sponsored by NSA and held in August, probably at Fisk University in Nashville. There would be approximately fifteen students attending the seminar, and it would be patterned to some degree on the Southern Student Human Relations Seminar. The main purpose of such a Seminar would be to give these students a better understanding of the legal, political, sociological, economic, etc. factors involved in race relations in the South so that they would be better equipped for leadership on their campuses and in their communities. Mr. Jenkins also pointed out that NSA is still investigating the possibilities of obtaining money to add a Southern Programming Vice-President to the NSA staff. This person would spend the major part of his year's work travelling in the South and introducing NSA to Southern students.

FOURTH SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS SEMINAR

The Committee members received a written report from the Director giving information on the progress of the Seminar to that point. The Director commented on the increased number of applicants and colleges this year and pointed out the number of applicants from segregated white colleges in the Deep South which have had no contact with the Seminar or NSA in the past. She also noted that, contrary to the pattern of Seminar applications in past years, this year there were many more white than Negro applicants. In the final selection of nineteen students, which included eleven men and eight women, an effort was made to select colleges that had not participated in the past and some colleges that would be facing desegregation in the future.

The Director also presented the proposed curriculum and pointed out that, as the Committee had advised in January, the number of resource people had been cut down and that an assigned reading period would be part of the formal schedule. The Committee suggested that the program should definitely include a discussion of the relationship of the struggle in Africa to the civil rights struggle in the United States, and they suggested various resource persons. The Committee also discussed books and materials and made recommendations for assigned reading at the Seminar.

FUTURE ACTIVITIES OF THE PROJECT AND FALL PROGRAMMING

The Director mentioned that she planned to attend part of the two-week human relations institute at Fisk University in mid-June. The Director and Tim Jenkins were also planning to attend the June meeting of the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee in Louisville. In discussing fall programming, Miss Curry announced that the Project would again co-sponsor the North Carolina Human Relations Seminar, to take place in October at Chepel Hill and that she would be working on the South Carolina conference on desegregation described earlier. The Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee will again be holding its fall conference, and the Project will be cooperating in the work on this conference.

Miss Curry and Mr. Jenkins thanked the Committee for their continuing interest and cooperation with NSA and the Project and stated that any future meeting of the Committee would be contingent upon the renewal of the Project grant.

The meeting was adjourned at 5:00 p.m.

* * * * *

Ga
Gen

TRUST COMPANY OF GEORGIA

MEMBER FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM

ATLANTA 2, GA.

JOSEPH K. HEYMAN
SENIOR VICE PRESIDENT

August 4, 1961

Mr. Paul Rilling
Southern Regional Council
Second Floor, 5 Forsyth St., N.W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Mr. Rilling:

I certainly appreciate the fine cooperation received from you and your office in connection with my recent inquiry. You were most helpful, and the material assembled will apparently be useful.

Sincerely yours,

Joe Heyman

JKH/lab

Ga
Gen

August 7, 1961

Mr. John Yungblut
Friends Center
1384 Fairview Road
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear John:

I am holding the date of August 13 open for another student meeting at Quaker House. Be sure and let me know by Thursday whether or not the meeting will take place and your thoughts for agenda.

Where do we stand on our Mississippi conference for this fall?

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PR:mm

August 18, 1961

Mr. John Youngblut
Quaker House
1384 Fairview Road, N.E.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear John:

We have had some soul searching here on the Mississippi situation and have come up with the following decisions, which are subject to further discussion as you may wish.

(1) We have definitely decided to seek funds for the employment of a Southwestern field representative, who would be based, probably, in Louisiana and who would be responsible for implementing our program concerns in Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas. This individual would travel widely through this three state area, would attempt to assist or organize local interracial groups, and when and if it becomes feasible, work toward the establishment of independent state councils in these states one day. Of course, this plan would take some time to implement, if we are able to secure the funds.

(2) In the meantime we will continue to cooperate with you in any way we can, and this specifically includes some funds to assist with our projected state meeting in Mississippi this fall, or other similar meetings that may take place.

Let me know if we need to talk further about these matters.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PR:mm

SOUTHEASTERN REGIONAL OFFICE

ANTI-DEFAMATION LEAGUE

Of B'nai B'rith

41 EXCHANGE PLACE, S.E., ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA

REGIONAL BOARD

SIMON S. WEIL, Nashville
Chairman
JAC H. ROTHSCHILD, Columbus
Vice-Chairman
ABE GOLDSTEIN, Atlanta
Honorary Chairman
LEO BEARMAN, Memphis
BEN J. MASSELL, Atlanta
DONALD OBERDORFER, Atlanta
DR. WILLIAM A. WEXLER, Savannah
Honorary Vice-Chairmen
MORRIS B. ABRAM, Atlanta
DAVID BAKER, Columbia
FRANK BERMAN, Savannah
WILLIAM BREMAN, Atlanta
HARRY ELSON, Atlanta
DR. IRVING GOLDSTEIN, Atlanta
DR. DAVID MONSKY, Montgomery
DR. SOL NEIDICH, Beaufort
MAYER U. NEWFIELD, Birmingham
MORRIS L. STRAUCH, Memphis
MRS. HARRY STRAUSS, Knoxville
DR. ALFRED A. WEINSTEIN, Atlanta
MRS. I. WILEN, Atlanta
Executive Committee

ARTHUR J. LEVIN
Director

ABE GOLDSTEIN, Atlanta
MAYER U. NEWFIELD, Birmingham
MORRIS STRAUCH, Memphis
MRS. HARRY STRAUSS, Knoxville
Commissioners, Southeastern Area

NATIONAL COMMISSION

HENRY EDWARD SCHULTZ
Chairman
MEIER STEINBRINK
Honorary Chairman
BARNEY BALABAN
A. G. BALLENGER
PHILIP M. KLUTZNICK
HERBERT H. LEHMAN
LEON LOWENSTEIN
WILLIAM SACHS
BENJAMIN SAMUELS
DORE SCHARY
MELVIN H. SCHLESINGER
JESSE STEINHART
Honorary Vice-Chairmen
ABE GOLDSTEIN
HAROLD LACHMAN
DAVID A. ROSE
Vice-Chairmen
BENJAMIN GREENBERG
Treasurer
HERBERT LEVY
Secretary
BENJAMIN R. EPSTEIN
National Director
PAUL H. SAMPLINER
Chairman, Executive Committee
JOSEPH COHEN
Vice-Chairman, Executive Committee

LABEL A. KATZ
President, B'nai B'rith
MAURICE BISGYER
Executive Vice-President, B'nai B'rith

STAFF DIRECTORS

NATHAN C. BELTH
Public Relations
OSCAR COHEN
Program
ALEXANDER F. MILLER
Community Service
J. HAROLD SAKS
Administration
LESTER J. WALDMAN
Organization and Planning

ARNOLD FORSTER
General Counsel

August 18, 1961

Mr. Paul Rilling
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Paul:

As per your request the following is from my report of Leander Perez's participation at the Guts meeting.

"We note the Atlanta Journal story indicates that "there were several cries of "Jew" from the audience as Mr. Perez cited by name several NAACP and communist party leaders allegedly in on the conspiracy". I did not hear those things perhaps because I was sitting in the mezzanine and they probably originated in the orchestra. However, Leander Perez, who was the featured speaker, did make the following anti-semitic statements: he said the Moscow-trained Walter Reuther gave a check for $75,000 to Arthur Spingarn, "Zionist President of the NAACP". Perez also refers to Channing Tobias as the "Zionist Treasurer" of the NAACP.

Perez' talk was based on the theme of what was really behind the desegregation efforts-a communist conspiracy, and in that vein, described New York State, New York City and California as the centers of communism. He then went on to attack former Senator Lehman, Senator Javits and Congressman Celler, as the leaders in the efforts to destroy the southern way of life. He was quite obvious in his association of Celler with Brooklyn and the other men with New York and their relationship to these "communist centers".

The crowd was generally enthusiastic and as I indicated, responsive. However, they seemed to be most responsive when the above statements were made.

Two other statements made by Perez were, we must liquidate the members of Congress who are selling us out, and national government is the enemy of our people. I believe these are exact quotes, but I am not absolutely sure".

I hope this is of assistance to you.

Cordially yours,

Dick

Richard M. Shapiro

LWD ✓
PR

Quaker House 1384 FAIRVIEW ROAD, N.E., ATLANTA 6, GEORGIA, DRAKE 3-7986
ATLANTA MEETING OF THE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS

August 22, 1961

Dear Paul:

Thank you for your two communications of August 18.

It was a real encouragement to me to have your support in the point I made at the last meeting of OASIS. I shall try to frame some statement which might be acceptable to some of the leaders among the clergy.

With regard to the note on plans for Mississippi, I am glad that you are taking the optimistic and forward-looking step of seeking funds for a full time field representative for Louisiana, Mississippi, and East Texas. Meantime, it is encouraging to know that you are still inclined to cooperate with more immediate plans for a meeting in Mississippi this fall. You will be interested to know that Murray Cox has just written me again, recommending that we have such a meeting at a camp belonging to the Central Jurisdictional Conference of the Methodist Church at Waveland, Mississippi. I am not just sure where this is, but he feels that it would be a better place than the Mennonite center in Gulfport. Please save on your calendar Oct 27 and 28 which we can have there. Its on the Coast, near Bay St. Louis.

Allan Chalmers' plans cannot become definite until he has a Board Meeting in September. Meantime, I have written him the questions you and Leslie raised at our last meeting.

I do feel that I can do something this fall toward holding the individual contacts together in Mississippi looking toward the time when you can place a full time person in that general south central area.

I do want to take this occasion to put in writing what I have expressed directly to you before, namely my very deep appreciation for your help throughout the summer program. I think the two meetings with the young people were very worthwhile, from all I have been able to learn. In one sense, a good follow-through to your efforts will be carried on by Dr. Coles as he begins his project of the psychiatric study of the transfer students and also of some of the white students involved. I have offered him the use of Quaker House for the interviews, and I believe he will also want to bring the transfer students together as a group from time to time. We intend also to have another parent meeting after the schools open if this seems wise, and continued "electives" in the arts this fall for the wider group of young people in segregated schools.

You have probably learned from others how well the parents meeting went, with all four principals coming, and Dr. Stephens. Dr. Benjamin Mays also did an excellent job Sunday.

Faithfully yours,

John

JRY/mr

APPLICATION FORM

Fourth Southern Student Human Relations Seminar
August 1 - 30, 1961
University of Wisconsin

GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS:

A. Please fill in this form as completely as possible. It will be used as a basis for selection of participants in the Southern Student Human Relations Seminar.

B. When space for detailed answers is insufficient, continue your answers on the reverse side of the page. (Number continued answers to match correct question.)

C. All applications and supporting materials must be received by May 1, 1961. Notice of final selections will be sent by June 1.

D. Please print or type.

1. NAME Mr. / Mrs. / Miss _____
(LAST) (FIRST) (MIDDLE)

2. SCHOOL _____

3. CLASS & EXPECTED DATE OF GRADUATION _____

4. CURRENT SCHOOL ADDRESS _____
(complete mailing address)

5. PERMANENT HOME ADDRESS _____

6. SUMMER ADDRESS _____
(if different from no. 5)

7. WHAT IS YOUR FIELD OF ACADEMIC CONCENTRATION? _____

8. LIST IMPORTANT EXTRA-CURRICULAR ACTIVITIES AND OFFICES (on campus and in community).

9. WHAT POSITIONS OR RESPONSIBILITIES WILL YOU HAVE ON CAMPUS DURING THE SCHOOL YEAR 1961-62?

10. HAVE YOU HAD ANY CAMPUS, COMMUNITY, OR ORGANIZATIONAL EXPERIENCE IN HUMAN RELATIONS OR INTERRACIAL PROGRAMS OR FORMAL DISCUSSIONS? IF SO, DESCRIBE.

11. HAVE YOU EVER ATTENDED A USNSA NATIONAL OR REGIONAL CONGRESS OR CONFERENCE? IF SO, PLEASE STATE WHEN AND WHERE. _____

_____

12. PLEASE ATTACH A STATEMENT IN 500 WORDS OR LESS INDICATING YOUR REASONS FOR BEING INTERESTED IN THIS SEMINAR.

13. PLEASE HAVE A TRANSCRIPT OF YOUR COLLEGE GRADES SENT TO THE ADDRESS GIVEN IN NUMBER 15 BELOW.

14. AN EFFORT WILL BE MADE TO HAVE EACH APPLICANT PERSONALLY INTERVIEWED BY NSA STAFF PERSONNEL OR BY SOUTHERN ADVISORY COMMITTEE MEMBERS.

15. WHEN YOU HAVE COMPLETED THIS FORM, PLEASE RETURN IT IMMEDIATELY TO:

Southern Office, USNSA
41 Exchange Place, S.E., Room 701
Atlanta 3, Georgia

16. (SEE BELOW)

Signature _____

Date of Birth _____

Place of Birth _____

DEADLINE FOR APPLICATIONS: May 1, 1961

SELECTION DATE: by June 1, 1961

---

16. PLEASE LIST THE NAME, ADDRESS AND POSITION OF ONE FACULTY MEMBER AND ONE STUDENT LEADER WHO ARE IN A POSITION TO EVALUATE YOUR PERSONAL AND ACADEMIC QUALIFICATIONS. NOTE: RECOMMENDATION FORMS WILL BE SENT DIRECTLY TO THEM. (IF YOU ARE UNABLE TO RETURN THIS ENTIRE APPLICATION IMMEDIATELY, PLEASE DETACH THIS SECTION AND SEND IT TO US NOW.)

A. name _____ position _____

address _____

B. name _____ position _____

address _____

your name _____

college _____

address _____

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA 4, PA. • BAring 2-1106 • CABLE, NATSTUD - PHILADELPHIA, PA.

March 29, 1961

Mr. Paul Rilling
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth St. NW
Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Mr. Rilling:

We are happy to announce the Fourth Southern Student Human Relations Seminar, to be held August 1-20, 1961, on the campus of the University of Wisconsin.

The Seminar was instituted in 1958 at the suggestion of Southern student leaders at the 8th, 9th and 10th National Student Congresses. The purpose of the Seminar is to provide for Southern student leaders an intensive study of human relations in the South for constructive application in their college or university and community life. It is open to all student government, student religious group, publications, social group, honorary and student human relations leaders on Southern campuses, whether members of USNSA or not.

The Seminar is part of the Association's over-all National Human Relations Program, including regional conferences and National Congress workshops on race, intergroup and interpersonal relations as they affect students on campus and in their communities. It is specifically under the auspices of the Southern Student Human Relations Project of USNSA, which was established in Atlanta, Georgia, in December, 1959. Both the Project and the Seminar are financed by a grant from the Marshall Field Foundation.

Fifteen participants will be selected for the Seminar from segregated white, desegregated, and predominantly Negro campuses. Travel, room and board will be covered for each delegate from the grant. Funds will also be available for participants who wish to remain from August 20th through August 30th to attend the Fourteenth National Student Congress.

The enclosed summary lists last year's Seminar participants and advisors and gives a brief review of the program. (For fuller reports on the past three Seminars write USNSA.) The 1961 Seminar staff includes:

ASSOCIATED WITH: American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U. S. Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • Young Adult Council • Nat'l Citizens Committe for UN Day • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

OFFICERS

President
RICHARD A. RETTIG
University of Washington

Assistant to the President
ELIZABETH R. GARMAN
Skidmore College

•

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

Vice President
JAMES C. SCOTT
Williams College

Administrative Assistant
RICHARD M. MILLER
University of Minnesota, Duluth

Assistant
MANUEL ARAGON, JR.
San Francisco State College

Campus Administrator
HARVEY K. FLAD
University of Colorado

Director, Foreign Student Leadership Project
DONALD F. CLIFFORD
Catholic University of America

•

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Vice President
TIMOTHY L. JENKINS
Howard University

Program Vice President
DAN L. JOHNSTON
Westmar College

Program Vice President
DONALD R. SMITH
University of Texas

Administrative Assistant
ROBERT M. WALTERS
Lehigh University

Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

West Coast Office
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

•

Educational Travel, Inc.
20 West 38th Street
New York 18, New York

2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

•

NATIONAL ADVISORS

Ralph J. Bunche
Under-Secretary
United Nations

John Cogley
Staff Administrator
The Fund for the Republic

James M. Dabbs
President
Southern Regional Council, Inc.

Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame

Russell Kirk
Editor
The University Bookman

Ralph McGill
Publisher
Atlanta Constitution

Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University

Harold E. Stassen

•

Chairman
National Advisory Board
CARL M. GRIP, JR.
Dean of Men
Temple University

Chairman
Financial Advisory Board
RUTH HAGY BROD

Director: Constance Curry, present Director of the Southern Student Human Relations Project, graduate of Agnes Scott College, Field Representative for the Collegiate Council for the United Nations, 1957-1959.

Consultant: Will D. Campbell, Associate Executive Director, Department of Racial and Cultural Relations, National Council of Churches; formerly Director of Religious Life, University of Mississippi.

Please see that the enclosed application reaches an interested student on your campus, in your organization, or in your area. Sophomores and juniors with demonstrated leadership potential in the field of human relations will receive the most favorable attention from the Selection Committee, which will include the Seminar staff, the NSA National Affairs Vice-President, and several members of the Southern Advisory Committee.

Applications must be received at the Southern Project Office by May 1st in order to be considered by the Committee. Announcements of final selections will reach all applicants by June 1st. If you know of additional potential participants on your campus, do not hesitate to write to the Southern Project Office for more application forms.

We shall look forward to hearing from you, your campus, or your organization.

Sincerely,

Timothy Jenkins

Timothy Jenkins
National Affairs Vice-President, USNSA

Constance Curry

Constance Curry
Southern Project Director

Southern Office, USNSA
41 Exchange Place, S.E., Room 701
Atlanta 3, Georgia

CC:cl

Enclosures

A Summary of the
THIRD SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS SEMINAR
August 1 - Sept. 1, 1960
University of Minnesota

STAFF

Constance Curry, Director, Southern Student Human Relations Project

Robert Alexander, Duke University

Reverend Will D. Campbell, Associate Executive Director, Department of Racial and Cultural Relations, National Council of Churches

ADVISORY COMMITTEE

Arthur Levin	Anti-Defamation League
Reverend Will Campbell	National Council of Churches
Dr. Warren Ashby	Professor of Ethics, W.C., UNC
James McBride Dabbs	Southern Regional Council
Max Heirich	American Friends Service Committee
Murray Shapiro	Anti-Defamation League
Dr. Benjamin Mays	President, Morehouse College
Reverend Charles Jones	Community Church, Chapel Hill, N. C.
Dr. C. H. Parrish	Professor of Sociology, Univ. of Louisville
Raymond Farabee	Director of First and Second Seminars
Martha Morrison	Assistant Director of Second Seminar
Curtis Gans	U.S. National Student Association
Ruth Hughes	National Student YWCA

PARTICIPANTS

Valerie Brown	Texas Christian University, Fort Worth, Texas
William Caldwell	Loyola University, New Orleans, La.
Sandra Cason	University of Texas, Austin, Texas
Robert Catlett	Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg, Va
John Cook	North Carolina State College, Raleigh, N. C.
Henrietta Eppse	Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn.
Maruta Jurbergs	Siena College, Memphis, Tenn.
Lois Martin	Hampton Institute, Hampton, Va.
Mrs. Clarice Miller	Arkansas A. M. & N., Pine Bluff, Ark.
Charles McDew	South Carolina State, Orangeburg, S. C.
Ira Robinson	Florida A. & M., Tallahassee, Fla.
John Weatherly	Mercer University, Macon, Ga.
Robert Williams	Dillard University, New Orleans, La.
Jerry Wilson	Wake Forest College, Winston-Salem, N. C.
Carolee Wood	Greensboro College, Greensboro, N. C.
Mrs. Martha Alexander	Duke University, Durham, N. C.

PROGRAM TOPICS AND RESOURCE PERSONNEL

The Meaning of Human Relations ..... Dr. William Van Til, Professor of Education & Chairman of the Dept. of Secondary Education, New York University

The Changing South	Mrs. Wilma D. Stokeley, co-author of Neither Black Nor White
The Negro in America	Dr. Herman H. Long, Director, Race Relations Dept., American Missionary Assoc. Division, Board of Home Missions, Congregational Christian Churches
Race and Prejudice	Dr. Arnold Rose, Dept. of Sociology, Univ. of Minn.
Supreme Court Decisions and Legal Aspects of Desegregation	Mr. George Barrett, Attorney, Nashville, Tenn.
Public School Desegregation; Desegregation in Higher Education; Southern Politics	Mr. Paul Rilling, Field Director, Southern Regional Council
The Moral and Ethical Aspects of Desegregation	Reverend Will Campbell
Labor and Employment in the South	Mr. Ben Segal, Internationa Union of Electrical Workers
The Sit-in Movement and Its Meaning in the South	Reverend James Lawson, Nashville, Tenn.
Anti-Semitism in the South	Mr. Arthur Levin
Cooperation with the Community	Miss Jean Fairfax, American Friends Service Committee
"The Student's New Role" (closing address)	Mr. Marion Wright, Vice-President, Southern Regional Council
The Southern Press and Public Opinion	Mr. Ronnie Dugger, Editor, The Texas Observer

October 17, 1961

Mr. John Youngblut
Quaker House
1384 Fairview Road, N.E.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear John;

We can talk about this on the way to Mississippi but I wanted you to see the enclosed letter. You mentioned recently that you thought the human relations council should be formed in New Orleans fairly soon. Some time ago I sent out this letter to the persons indicated as a first step in this direction and I hope to further explore the possibilities Monday and Tuesday, October 23 and 24, while I am in New Orleans. I am sorry that I failed to check this with you at the time, and would appreciate any ideas you have as to how to move. The responses to this letter were mildly encouraging but not enthusiastic.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PR:mm
Enc. (letter to N.O. people re intrcl council)

Published Weekly By The First Baptist Church Gen

Vol. 6 Oak Ridge, Tennessee, Nov. 2, 1961 No. 43

SILENCE HERE . . .

Silenced in Gatlinburg, 1959 Convention. Motion tabled "that the official hospitals nor deprive anyone of its medical services or facilities because of color, race, creed or condition."

Silenced in Nashville, 1960 Convention, by a substitute motion to appeal first to the trustees of Tennessee Baptist Schools and Hospitals before bringing a motion to the Convention.

Trustees Silent in 1961 - No response has come from any of 175 trustees of three hospitals, three colleges and one academy to letters asking them to take some action toward removing the color bar in Tennessee Baptist Hospitals and Schools.

Memphis, 1961 - Silent????

Christian Conscience of Messengers Silent????

VOICES THERE . . .

Our silence can be deafening - even in far away places. Mrs. W. S. Rule, Jr., convinced that the lack of action by Tennessee Baptists and other state conventions was hurting our foreign mission program, organized volunteers among our W.M.S. and they have written every foreign missionary of the Southern Baptist Convention. In these letters the missionaries were asked whether the race situation at home was affecting their witness and also whether they thought that definite action by churches and conventions would be helpful in their work. We have printed here as many excerpts as space permitted. These are typical of the many replies we received. With the exception of two or three letters in which missionaries seemed reluctant to speak out without the expressed approval of the Foreign Mission Board, all of the more than 140 replies received were similar to the following. May the conscience of each of us be deeply troubled by the words of these whom we are sending to spread His love throughout the world . . .

LATIN AMERICA

DONALD R. SMITH—VENEZUELA

It is exceedingly hard to convince one who simply must look at publicity that a world wide that Christianity is not blessed. If it is not possible in the scope of Christian living to find fellowship with fellow believers, regardless of color, then they doubt that Christianity has a contribution for the world in which they are living. Words have yet to persuade these. I firmly believe action will do so convincingly.

A part of the Communist drive is based on absolute racial equality, which they see contrasted in the USA to the opposite extreme. If Communism can take the real basic principle of Christianity, i.e., that all men are of one blood and one creation, and make it appear as a communistic truth while Christians fail to live it as truth in fact, then they have made their point . . . either we solve our problems in the home field on a sincere basis of Christian love and appreciation, or we can go down as the propagators of the greatest anti-Christ religious force in history. Time is against us, either we move now . . . with all we had.

CHARLES W. SHIRLEY—ARGENTINA

Because these people see no color line, it is hard for them to realize why we in the States hold so rigidly to the practice of segregation. It creates hostile feelings toward the Missionary and the message that his claims is for men of all races and colors . . . Try as he may, the missionary cannot escape the results of the attitudes and actions of his country and the group that sends him out.

DONALD E. McDOWELL—PARAGUAY

If Southern Baptists, who hold the Bible to be their sole rule of faith and practice, do not take the leadership in making friendliness, brotherhood, and Christian love the way of life in our communities, who will? . . . Every battle won to help our Negro brethren in the U.S. is a battle won also for the advance of Christian missions around the world. "What we are speaks so loudly that the people of every land cannot hear what we say."

JAMES E. MUSGRAVE, JR.—BRAZIL

I would hope that we could cite cases of voluntary integration on the part of Baptists as proof of the fact that Christ does make the difference.

J. DANIEL McMURRAY—URUGUAY

It would mean a lot if it were well known that our churches do not practice discrimination and that they are working actively to eliminate the problem.

WILLIAM W. AND CRIS GRAVES —ARGENTINA

How would you have answered the question recently asked us by a student in our Baptist Seminary here, "How is it that you Southern Baptists can send missionaries all over the world to work with every color and race of people but you cannot get along with the Negro in your own homeland?" We are still trying to think of how to answer her.

LOREN C. TURNAGE—COLUMBIA

The question is raised . . . "why does racial discrimination exist in the south, where Baptists and other evangelicals are the strongest?"

We are happy to hear of any Baptist effort in the home field to help restore dignity and equality to all men regardless of the color of his skin.

EDITH A. ALLEN—RIO de JANEIRO, BRAZIL

If our people in the South would be honest with themselves and the Negro race and be willing to recognize the law and obey it, it would raise our prestige enormously in other lands . . . And time is running out.

EDGAR F. HALLOCK—RIO de JANEIRO, BRAZIL

In our churches and institutions there is no distinction of colors, just one Christian family, united in Christ.

FRANCES BUMPUS—BRAZIL

Anything you can do to help improve the situation at home will also help to advance God's Kingdom here and on our other mission fields.

BOB E. ADAMS—CHILE

The sad thing is there is no reply that I can give them, as long as no one seems to be able to have the courage to actually DO something in the right direction. I am thankful that I can quote your letter to them, to show that Christians in the churches are concerned about the situation and want to see the Christlike thing done.

J. WILSON ROSS—LATIN AMERICA

. . . that racial disturbances here in the States is one of two significant hindrances to the work that our Foreign Mission Board is trying to do. One of the weapons used by Communist leaders in sighting cases against the United States has been the treatment of racial groups.

MARTHA HARISTON—BRAZIL

Today's world has shaken off the isolation of distance. If President Kennedy bumps his head while picking up a toy for Caroline, the nation knows about it by nightfall; and if Uncle Sam bumps his head while trying to solve his society's problems the wounds are magnified across the front pages of the next day's world press. And the Communists have seen to it that the world's press does not have a protective attitude toward Uncle Sam.

GEORGE H. KOLLMAR—COLOMBIA

Racial desegregation is a certainty in the U. S. and it will be terrible if it is by the influence of the ungodly, and not by the effort of Christian men and women, that it is brought about.

EUROPE . . .

WILLIAM P. CLEMMONS—ITALY

Every American is associated with the Negro question, and is automatically assumed as being one who dislikes Negroes; this is bad enough. But, it is worse when one's religious affiliation is also associated . . . with such a view . . . We try to defend the Baptists of our homeland, finding it strangely hard to cite examples where Baptists of the South have done much to better the relations between black and white . . . where . . . Christians have failed, Negroes have reported as the only other just method left to them, and that was a legal one, standing as a mark of shame to the Christians of America.

W. DEWEY MOORE—ITALY

It seems a poor commentary on our churches if they cannot follow the Christian way even when the American Government is seeking to follow the purely American and democratic way.

JOHN DAVID HUGHEY—SWITZERLAND

It is encouraging that careful consideration is being given to the opening of Baptist hospitals and schools in Tennessee to people of all races and creeds. We always have trouble in this part of the world explaining racial segregation in democratic America and more especially among Christian people. May God bless the efforts made in your church and The Tennessee Baptist Convention to remove racial barriers in Baptist institutions.

MRS. CHARLES WHITTEN—SPAIN

. . . ashamed to reply to some . . . questions . . . one came from non-Christian, . . . "You say that the Gospel has the power to change lives and that your message emphasizes faith first and later good works come as a result. Why is there such a racial problem in the United States and we scarcely have that problem here in Spain?"

NEAR EAST . . .

DWIGHT L. BAKER—ISRAEL

I have sat with communists . . . here in Nazareth and listened to them hurl accounts of social discrimination at us as an example of American Democracy and our Christianity. Shortly after the Little Rock tragedy I was attacked physically in front of the Baptist School as a representative of the American imperialists.

FRANCES CRAWFORD—GAZA

. . . missionary is asked, "Why do you work and preach among us when in your own country we would not be allowed in your churches, hospitals and schools?" If Southern Baptists do not practice what they teach and preach they cannot hope to convince the world of their sincerity and their complete devotion to Christ . . . I'm glad integration is spreading, with the help of government, but I'm ashamed that Southern Baptists have to be forced by government to do what Christ commanded —over 2000 years ago.

DAVID AND MAXINE KING —LEBANON

. . . Southern Baptists will surely have to give an account to God . . . if they fail to give leadership to this cause which is not only best for America and for Americans, but also the best way to prove Christian ideals . . . We sincerely hope that the Baptists of Tennessee will lead the Baptists of other states to do what is only fair, just, reasonable, right and best, and open their hospitals and schools and other institutions to all . . . on the basis of need, or character, or ability.

MARGARET LINDEE—ISRAEL

There is no doubt whatever that when our Baptist brethren in the United States fail to open Baptist Schools to members of all races we are affected in Israel. We do deeply . . . echo the call to prayer . . . that fellow Baptists in the United States have risen to the challenge of being fully Christian in their love for all men . . . Surely this would be but to do our part in answering the prayer on our lips so constantly: "Thy Kingdom come on earth as it is in Heaven."

CENTRAL AMERICA . . .

W. H. GRAY, JR.—COSTA RICA

For the most . . . It is extremely difficult to proclaim a gospel of love and the value of the individual in the face of acts of hatred perpetrated in what is supposed to be to the free world the prime example of a democratic freedom-loving Christian nation. The truth cannot be disguised or buttered over. To a people who must vigilantly maintain their faith against the bitter persecution of such a totalitarian force as the Roman Catholic Church, every personal freedom and human right becomes sacred and is to be defended as such.

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES A. ALLEN, JR.—GUATEMALA

I am very much in accord with taking a definite stand on the racial issue that faces all of us . . . I feel that we are suffering the results of not doing something about this matter before now.

JAMES O. TEEL, JR.—SAN JUAN

The smallest racial battle in the States makes the front page in Latin American papers. It is difficult to explain . . . that our Baptist people . . . love them when they know that people of some other race are not welcome in some of the Baptist churches and schools.

JAMES D. CRANE—MEXICO

I join you in the prayer that our denomination may genuinely lead out in applying Christ's principles of social action and thereby give evidence of the vitality of our faith in a day when many are beginning to wonder how much it really means to be a Christian.

ORIENT . . .

ANCIL B. SCULL—INDONESIA

We Southern Baptist missionaries often face the question: How can these things be in Christian circles, in Christian America? . . . We wish you every blessing of God as you continue your efforts with wisdom and discretion, but with every perseverance, to demonstrate to the world that American Christianity means brotherhood and equal rights for all people, regardless of their race or creed.

DAN R. COBB—THAILAND

We have been concerned . . . to correct racial inequities, but did not know how . . . all of the missionaries feel the same . . . we will be praying that the Lord will lead the Convention to take proper action this year.

LUCY E. SMITH—JAPAN

Ever since I have been on the Mission field and even before, I have been aware of the fact that many times people in America by their action and their words, contradict what the missionaries try to teach and what the nationals of other countries find in the Bible. It is not to be questioned but what this has had its effect on the work and many people have failed to accept the message and salvation offered because of this.

M. J. WRIGHT—JAPAN

I much appreciate the action of the Ladies of the First Baptist Church to introduce a motion to open the hospitals to peoples of all races. We are often asked why in "Christian" America we have race hatred while in Buddhist Japan all races are accepted.

CHARLES WIGGS—JAPAN

Missionaries would like for our churches to lead out in this matter and take a definite stand for equal rights of all men regardless of color. . . . I feel positive action by our churches would help in the U.S.A. and around the world.

MARTHA HAGOOD, M.D.—JAPAN

A young Japanese doctor recently returned from one of our Baptist hospitals to be associated with us here in Japan. It was with astonishment that the Japanese doctors on our staff, all of whom are Christians, learned that our Baptist hospitals for the most part have either no facilities for Negroes or only limited facilities . . . greatest handicap to the Christian message overseas is the lack of effective application of the Christian gospel in our churches and community life at home.

PETE GILLESPIE—JAPAN

The newspapers always make front-page headlines of any American racial flare-up, and the readers' columns have an abundant amount of personal opinions about America's right to be called a great democracy. As a native Tennessean, I would rejoice to see our State take the lead in being thoroughly Christian in every area.

TUCKER CALLAWAY—JAPAN

Japanese are of the opinion that American Christians must try to practice what they preach before they set out to win the world. They judge Christians by Christian standards.

DEWEY MERCER—JAPAN

We truly pray that Tennessee Baptists will open their eyes to their own surroundings as well as they have opened them to the fields of the world. . . . that you will open your schools and hospitals to all those who need your high ideals.

C. F. CLARK, M.D.—JAPAN

The Japanese population is the best education in the world, and every racial incident is published in large Japanese newspapers . . . The effect of this kind of witness sometimes makes us want to cry, give up, and go home. Certainly it is one of the greatest assets to international communism today.

MRS. JAMES FOSTER—PHILIPPINES

Everything America does concerning the race problem is front-page news in all of the newspapers here in the Philippines . . . Buddhism and Mohammedanism will say to those whom they are trying to win, "If you will accept our faith, we will look upon you as a brother."

MRS. G. [illegible] DUNN COBB—THAILAND

Only a week or so ago the local press gave much attention to the Baptist Hospital in Atlanta turning away a Negro baby in an emergency. The nationals here are much interested in this, and it hurts our work . . . . I am confident that the Thailand missionaries from Tennessee will consider it a special encouragement to have the state Convention take action opening our institutions to people of all races. How can we do otherwise?

JEAN AMIS BOUGH—PAKISTAN

As dearly as I love our South and our wonderful Christians, who support us, we are being hurt beyond measure in our mission efforts by their actions - or inactions! Please don't send us and then tie our hands. Please be absolutely honest when you pray, "Lord, what would you have me to do?"

MRS. HAROLD T. CUMMINS —PAKISTAN

To us who live out on the borderlines of international conflict where giant populations are seeking just to live (exist), it seems utterly impossible that our beloved, educated America is still struggling with a problem that should have been solved years ago.

BENTON WILLIAMS FAMILY —THAILAND

One of the hardest questions we have on the mission field is; if our folks provide seventeen million dollars per year for foreign missions; and this really provides for all races and creeds of people to hear the Gospel - why segregation? . . . . it makes our work harder.

E. J. THARPE—HONG KONG

Your letter of September 24, 1961, regarding the action, or need of action, to open the hospitals and schools in Tennessee is one that I could fully agree with . . . One thing is sure, the Communists certainly take these incidents and use them for their own advantage.

GREENE W. STROTHER—THAILAND

I have failed to speak to one of our missionaries who does not deplore our Southern attitude.

AFRICA . . .

HAZEL MOON—GHANA

If only our Christians in America knew how much these things are doing to destroy the faith Nigerian people have in Christian America! It is hard to describe the changed attitude of our people—some of the sweetest, kindest people in the world are the people with whom I have worked now for over fourteen years and yet they have begun to seriously doubt the genuine love we have for them.

DR. [illegible] J. [illegible] NIGERIA

We believe in the experience of Dr. and Mrs. Dahunsi, our young friends who were with us in Seminary in Louisville. She needed an operation but was refused admission by the Baptist Hospital there and finally the operation was done by her doctor in the Catholic Hospital in Louisville. Dr. Dahunsi is now professor of New Testament and an important leader of the Nigerian Baptist Convention - but how can this memory ever be completely erased from their minds?

GEORGE FAILE—GHANA

We will indeed be praying for you and others who so correctly see that it is un-Christian to be segregated in churches, hospitals and schools . . . I'm sure that Christian churches must exercise leadership in these areas of life if these churches are to continue as vital witnesses of the Gospel.

CLYDE DOTSON—SOUTHERN RHODESIA

The strong feeling in Africa today is that Christianity is the religion of the white man, and that the Moslem faith is for the African . . . Our hearts are made heavy by the attitude our own South is showing toward their race problem there.

PHYLLIS AND ERIC CLARK—KENYA

How then can racial war with all of its bitterness and continuing consequences be averted, when, the one group which God has called to be the salt of the earth, and to prevent these things, has lost its savour? We claim to be a redeemed community but in actual practice we are still chained hand and foot to our racial and national groups along with all of their prejudices.

MRS. MARVIN GARRETT—SOUTHERN RHODESIA

. . . one front page article stating that Negroes were prohibited from entering a Baptist church in America destroys all that we try to do in one brief moment. The church should lead out in abolishing discrimination but I fear that it will be the last stronghold of segregation . . . You cannot act one way in America and not affect us here in Africa.

FRANCES GREENWAY—SOUTHERN RHODESIA

I'm in full agreement that the opening of our Baptist hospitals to those of all races and creeds would be a step in the right direction. Surely it would be pleasing in God's sight and helpful in our being useful instruments of His throughout the world.

DA SINGLETON—SOUTHERN RHODESIA

I can think of nothing which could make me more justly proud to claim my position as a Southern Baptist (as well as a Tennessee Baptist) than to see Baptists of Tennessee open its doors of all nationalities without any regard to race or color.

MAUD CHEYNE—SOUTHERN RHODESIA

Unless the churches are able to convince the minds of African population that the message of love is something more than a tool or technique to tranquilize their minds against the oppressiveness which they endure, we as missionaries may well be forced to leave and the work into which lives have been spent and tears have been poured, may well be a lasting memorial to the failure of the church.

[illegible] MACMILLAN—KENYA

What happens in America in race problems certainly does reach us here. It definitely affects our attempts to win our African Brothers. Certainly positive action by churches at home would be a step forward for the cause of Christ here.

MARGIS MOBLEY—GHANA

The President of the Nigerian Baptist Convention has a son in medical school in upstate New York. (state school) He wanted to put him in Wake Forest, even my friends there tried, but he was not white, so he was refused.

Yet we talk of "mission advance" in Nigeria - so much bunk! So much sounding brass!

MARY E. FREDENBURG—NIGERIA

In many places the message of Christ from Americans has already ceased to have meaning and I fear with the news of race riots claiming the headlines our ways of effectiveness here are nearly over.

Convention Action Committee

Mrs. W. S. Rule, Jr.
Mrs. Thurman C. Whitson
Mr. G. B. Seaborn
Mr. R. C. Kinnamon
Dr. G. C. Kyker, Chairman

J. S. McGEE—NIGERIA

We have reached a stage in history where no person is satisfied with a second-hand citizenship. America preaches one thing but lives another. Spiritual decadence is a worse threat to America than war . . . The rest of the world cannot trust America . . . I trust you can do something to better race relations in the U.S.A. and do it quickly.

THOMAS O. HIGH—NIGERIA

I "salute" you for this work which you are doing. We are praying that the Southern Baptist churches will lead out in desegregation in the churches themselves . . . Any racial disturbance in the United States is played up in the headlines. Also any act on the part of the President of the US to help the Negroes is equally played up. We are . . . held . . . responsible . . . for what happens in US Baptist churches.

R. F. GOLDIE—GHANA

We support your efforts 100% in regard to the opening of our hospitals to those of all races. We further support the effort to open our denominational schools to those of all races, on all levels . . . How, then, can Southern Baptists expect to preach and practice the Gospel of Christ to men of all races, when we are not practicing this in our home churches?

MARY LEIGH LEGG—NIGERIA

We are indeed grateful to find that action of so definite and positive a nature is being undertaken by your W.M.U. . . . One of the Nigerian Baptists who has been to school in the U.S. was denied entrance to one of our Baptist hospitals . . . when a student wishes to go to the U.S. to study we cannot recommend our own Baptist University.

A. CANZONERI—NIGERIA

This segregation business has hit us in an unexpected way. A number of the leaders in our Convention got some of their education in the States. Most of them have never talked about what segregation there did to them, but occasionally we get one to really express himself to us. It is heartbreaking.

Published weekly by the First Baptist Church, Oak Ridge, Tennessee. Subscription price - 50 cents per year. Second class postage paid at the Post Office at Oak Ridge, Tennessee.

CHURCH STAFF

Coward D. Galloway, D. D. . . . Minister
Harold T. Prichard . . . Minister of Music
Mrs. W. E. Stockburger— Church Secretary
Mrs. T. C. Whitson . . Pastor's Secretary

Ga Gen

November 13, 1961

RHA PR

Reimbursement to John Youngblut

Please issue a check in the amount of $20.00 to John Youngblut, for my share in travel expenses to Jackson, MississippiOctober 20.

Thanks.

Ga Gen

November 13, 1961
(Dictated November 9)

Mr. John Youngblut
Quaker House
1384 Fairview Road, N.E.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear John:

I am sending on a contribution toward the travel cost of our last trip to Jackson. This seems to us only fair, since we would otherwise have had to pay my air travel to Jackson.

I enjoyed talking with Rabbi Mantinband during our annual meeting this week. He told me he planned to see you. If he was successful in extracting the list of those who participated in the Waveland meeting, I hope you will make a copy available to us also. I sent some materials concerning activities of interracial groups on to Power Hearn, although only this week. I am planning to make the trip to Jackson November 20. I still think it would be best if you would also go. I believe that SRC could pick up your tab on this occasion.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PR:mm

Alan Chalmers

SP
NSA

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA 4, PA. • BAring 2-1106 • CABLE, NATSTUD - PHILADELPHIA, PA.

November 15, 1961

To: Members of the Southern Advisory Committee

From: Constance Curry, Director, Southern Project, NSA

I have been meaning to contact all of you before this, but since the Seminar and a vacation in September, I have been busy constantly. The main thing that I wanted to let you know is that we have heard from the Field Foundation and that the grant has been renewed for two more years. The amount of $60,000 was given again, but Field did not feel that they could give, at this time, the extra $7,000 to employ an assistant. In any case, I am obviously thrilled-- I am not at all sure what we have been doing for the past two years, but the renewal means that someone thinks it has been worthwhile and wants us to do it for two more years. Seriously, I know that your continuing help and support of the Project and your letters to the Field Foundation were largely responsible for the continuation of the grant, and I am deeply grateful to you.

I have enclosed a report on McComb, Mississippi, which I thought would be of interest to you. It was prepared for the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee by Tom Hayden, and has some information on the changes that have taken place in the SNCC. I have been working with SNCC, as in the past and am hoping they will soon be able to work back to a grass roots movement.

The Project is also helping to sponsor human relations seminars in Texas, North Carolina and South Carolina this fall, and we are in the process of setting up a Human Relations Council for students here in Atlanta.

I hope that all of you are well, and I shall be in touch with you again soon as to the time for the next Advisory Committee Meeting.

you know all of this - so just for your files -
CWC

President
EDWARD R. GARVEY
University of Wisconsin
Assistant to the President
ROBERT P. ROBINSON
University of Illinois

•

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
PAUL POTTER
Oberlin College
Program Vice President
MICHAEL A. NEFF
University of Illinois
Program Vice President
EUGENE H. ZAGAT
Harvard College
Administrative Assistant
ROGER M. LEED
Harvard College
Student Government Information Service Director
SHEILA McCANN
Emmanuel College
Public Relations Director
J. SCOTT KEECH
Academic Freedom Project Director
NEAL W. JOHNSTON

Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

West Coast Office
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

•

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
DONALD K. EMMERSON
Princeton University
Administrative Assistant
HENRY J. BOITEL
Saint John's University
Assistant
JOSEPH LOVE
Stanford University
Campus Administrator
MARY BETH SCHAUB
Bryn Mawr College
Director, Foreign Student Leadership Project
GEORGE HAZELRIGG
University of Oklahoma
Director of Special Exchanges
FRANK CRUMP
Columbia University

•

Educational Travel, Inc.
20 West 38th Street
New York 18, New York
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

•

NATIONAL ADVISORS

John Cogley
Staff Administrator
The Fund for the Republic
Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame
Russell Kirk
Editor
The University Bookman
Ralph McGill
Publisher
Atlanta Constitution
Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University
Milton Shapp
President
Jerrold Electronics

•

Chairman
National Advisory Board
DR. EUGENE FONTINELL
Professor
Queens College
Chairman
Financial Advisory Board
RUTH HAGY BROD

ASSOCIATED WITH: American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U. S. Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • Young Adult Council • Nat'l Citizens Committee for UN Day • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

Ga - Gen

National Council of the Young Men's Christian Associations

OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

OFFICERS
SOUTHERN AREA COUNCIL
DR. HUGH B. WILCOX
PRESIDENT
J. FRAN BABBITT
VICE PRESIDENT
DR. R. T. NELSON
VICE PRESIDENT
EDWARD M. VINSON
VICE PRESIDENT
CHARLES R. YOUNTS
TREASURER
JAMES C. SHELOR
ASST. TREASURER
RALPH BRUNSON
RECORDING SECRETARY
GEORGE CRESWELL
ASST. RECORDING SECRETARY

THE SOUTHERN AREA COUNCIL
(ALABAMA, FLORIDA, GEORGIA, KENTUCKY, LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI, ASHEVILLE, N. C., TENNESSEE AND VIRGINIA)
706 STANDARD BUILDING
ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA
JACKSON 1-0352

OFFICERS
SOUTHERN AREA BOARD
LEONARD F. HURLEY
CHAIRMAN
SHELBY R. ROGERS
VICE CHAIRMAN
CHARLES R. YOUNTS
TREASURER
JAMES C. SHELOR
ASST. TREASURER
HUGH G. HURST, SR.
SECRETARY

November 16, 1961

Mr. Paul Rilling
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Paul:

I am glad to send you two bits of material which may interest you. One is the report on my first year of activity; the other is entitled, "The Changing Racial Climate."

Research

Yours sincerely,

Thornton

Thornton W. Merriam, Secretary
Leadership Development Project

TWM:sp

Enclosures

Ga - Gen

November 30, 1961

Dr. Thornton W. Merriam, Secretary
Leadership Development Project
YMCA
706 Standard Building
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Thornton:

Thank you for sending on your first year report and observations on the changing racial climate. I thought them interesting and penetrating. I feel, by the way, that all of the suggestions in your document numbered 6 through 9 should by all means be implemented.

I had a good talk with Hans Spiegel during the recent NAIRO meeting. I was most interested in his plan for a special training project.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PR:mm

Ga - General

December 1, 1961

Mr. Frank Spencer
228 Bay Street
Savannah, Georgia

Dear Mr. Spencer:

Mrs. Frances Pauley has asked us to forward you information on how communities have prepared themselves for desegregation without court order in recent months. A few tid-bits are enclosed. The Report No. L-12 is quite old; we will attempt to update the information contained therein and forward it to you early next week. A few references to the Florida "surprise" desegregation in several communities this fall are also enclosed. Again, we will be able to forward you some further information on those communities next week.

The best of luck to you in your efforts in Savannah.

Sincerely,

Marge Manderson
Administrative Secretary
Field Services

Enclosures

More clips + Action Patterns sent 12/8/61

L-12
+
Exerpts from FCHR Quarterly Report

Ga -
Gen

December 21, 1961

Mr. Charles Wittenstein
American Jewish Committee
41 Exchange Place, S. E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Charles;

You should know that some effort is underway toward the organization of an interracial, interfaith group in New Orleans. Mrs. Cahn is involved, as is Dr. Dent of Dillard, Harvey Kerns of the Urban League, and others. This is still in the early stages, but I thought that you should be kept informed as it progresses.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PR:mm

Ga -
Gen

January 19, 1962

Mr. Sylvan Meyer
Gainesville Daily Times
Gainesville, Georgia

Dear Sylvan;

Fact sheets on Chattanooga, New Orleans are enclosed.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

GA Gen

January 26, 1962

Mrs. Fran Breeden
4490 Powers Ferry Rd., N.W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Fran:

Congratulations on your well deserved honor. Drudgery and traumatic struggle are sometimes noted.

I am particularly sorry that commitments in Florida prevented my being present January 23.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PR:mm

Ga
Gen

MINUTES
OF
MERIT EMPLOYMENT COORDINATING COMMITTEE

ATLANTA URBAN LEAGUE OFFICE
SUITE 400, 239 AUBURN AVENUE, N. E.
ATLANTA 3, GOERGIA

FEBRUARY 12, 1962

Dr. Gerald Reed and Mr. J. R. Henderson, Co-Chairmen, presiding.

Persons present: The Atlanta Urban League, Harold N. Arnold and Robert A. Thompson; Southeastern Office, The Anti-Defamation League of B'Nai Brith, Art Levin and Richard Shapiro; The Atlanta Council On Human Relations, None; The Atlanta Voters League, John Calhoun; The American Friends Service Committee, Noyes Collinson and Mrs. Noyes Collinson; The General Citizens Committee On Employment and Economic Opportunity, None; The Georgia Council On Human Relations, Mrs. Frances Pauley, Rev. Oliver Holmes, and William Shields; The Southern Regional Council, None: The Atlanta NAACP, Mrs. Mary Parker; The Southeastern Regional Office, NAACP, None; The Southern Christian Leadership Conference, Mrs. Edwena Smith.

Action

1. Mr. Art Levin discussed in detail some of the rules and regulations governing the President's Committee On Equal Employment Opportunity. He particularly stressed the following:

   a. Every agency working with compliance to action by this committee established by Executive Order 10925 should have the following documents available to them:

      1. Government Contract Employment Rules and Regulations of the President's Committee On Equal Employment Opportunity, effective July 22, 1961.

      2. Federal Government Employment Rules and Regulations of the President's Committee On Equal Employment Opportunity, effective July 22, 1962.

      3. Equal Employment Opportunity In Federal Government Contracts, Executive Order 10925, establishing the President's Committee On Equal Employment Opportunity.

      4. Suggested questions to ask of Government Contractors.

   b. This is the first Executive Order concerning employment that calls for affirmative action by the government and persons with aggregate government contracts of 50 persons or $50,000 or more. The first reports required of government contractors should be made on March 31, 1962. Mr. Levin emphasized that even with affirmative action required by the Government and Government Contractors, affirmative results can be enlarged by pressure from our communities.

c. The committee program, as outlined by Executive Order 10925, is designed for assuring that all persons employed and seeking employment will be accorded equal treatment regardless of race, creed, color or national origin in all aspects of employment including: Employment Recruitment or Recruitment Advertising. Use of plant facilities. Upgrading. Lay off or termination. Rates of pay or other forms of compensation. Demotion or transfer. Selection for training including apprenticeship.

d. Community social and civic groups should monitor companies with Government contracts to determine if they are living up to their contract agreement. Minority group students should be encouraged to apply for training and employment in these expanding areas.

2. Dr. Gerald Reed agreed to acquire information concerning tests being given to persons applying for positions with Southern Bell Telephone Company. Minority group personnel should be encourage to prepare for and apply for these positions.

3. The public should be informed of firms in this area with government contracts through ads in mass media and through school counselors.

4. The responsibility for contacting the many Federal Contractors should be divided by having each agency member of the Merit Employment Coordinating Committee select 2 or 3 employers for contact, persuation, and negotiation. All action with the companies should be properly documented. The top 50 companies should be covered. The Urban League and Friends should pull out ones they are working with. The others should be distributed to other agencies. There should be a letter requesting an appointment, a phone call to follow-up the letter, an interview, then other negotiations. . . all documented.

5. Mrs. Pauley invited all to attend the Macon Employment Conference on March 2nd and 3rd.

6. The Georgia Council On Human Relations will assist Mr. Jesse O. Thomas in looking into the Georgia State Employment Service practices.

7. The next meeting will be at the office of the Southern Christian Leader-Ship Conference, 41 Exchange Place, at 12:15 P.M. on March 13, 1962.

NSA
Sou Rep

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA 4, PA. • BAring 2-1106 • CABLE, NATSTUD - PHILADELPHIA, PA.

February 14, 1962

The South Central Region of the United States National Student Association is happy to announce a Human Relations Seminar for students from Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Arkansas. The theme of the Seminar will be "The South of the Future" and will be held April 19-21 on the campus of Xavier University in New Orleans.

As one considers the developments that have occurred in the area of human relations in the South, especially during the past few years, it becomes evident that the South of today is facing a period of great change. In adjusting to these changes and in helping to solve the problems that will come with this adjustment, college students in the South must be leaders. However, before concerned students can assume leadership roles, there is a great need to study and discuss together the complexities and problems that the South now faces and will continue to face in the coming years. We are hoping that this New Orleans seminar will provide an opportunity for study and discussion of human relations as it pertains to "The South of the Future".

We are planning to have several outstanding speakers and resource persons assist in our discussion of specific problem areas facing the South. There will be several general sessions and smaller workshops that are listed on the enclosed registration blanks. Total costs for the Seminar, including room and board, will be $7.00 per delegate, which will help to defray Seminar expenses. The remainder of the expenses will be covered by the Southern Student Human Relations Project of the National student Association.

We would like to ask your help in locating two students from your campus who will be able to attend the Seminar. Students that you contact should have demonstrated some leadership and concern in the area of human relations. Please encourage the two students to return the enclosed registration forms by March 5th to:

Mr. Dennis Yeager
Apt. 10, 7530 St. Charles Avenue
New Orleans, Louisiana

(MORE)

President
EDWARD R. GARVEY
University of Wisconsin
Assistant to the President
ROBERT P. ROBINSON
University of Illinois

•

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
PAUL POTTER
Oberlin College
Program Vice President
MICHAEL A. NEFF
University of Illinois
Program Vice President
EUGENE H. ZAGAT
Harvard College
Administrative Assistant
ROGER M. LEED
Harvard College
Student Government Information Service Director
SHEILA McCANN
Emmanuel College
Public Relations Director
J. SCOTT KEECH
Academic Freedom Project Director
NEAL W. JOHNSTON

Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

West Coast Office
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

•

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
DONALD K. EMMERSON
Princeton University
Administrative Assistant
HENRY J. BOITEL
Saint John's University
Assistant
JOSEPH LOVE
Stanford University
Campus Administrator
MARY BETH SCHAUB
Bryn Mawr College
Director, Foreign Student Leadership Project
GEORGE HAZELRIGG
University of Oklahoma
Director of Special Exchanges
FRANK CRUMP
Columbia University

•

Educational Travel, Inc.
20 West 38th Street
New York 18, New York
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

•

NATIONAL ADVISORS

John Cogley
Staff Administrator
The Fund for the Republic

Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame

Russell Kirk
Editor
The University Bookman

Ralph McGill
Publisher
Atlanta Constitution

Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University

Milton Shapp
President
Jerrold Electronics

•

Chairman
National Advisory Board
DR. EUGENE FONTINELL
Professor
Queens College
Chairman
Financial Advisory Board
RUTH HAGY BROD

ASSOCIATED WITH: American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U. S. Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • Young Adult Council • Nat'l Citizens Committee for UN Day • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

Upon receipt of the registrations we will send further details and the final Seminar program, as well as study materials for the workshops that have been selected. We are most anxious to have students from every campus in the Region and hope that you will remind interested students that the Seminar will fall during Easter vacation, when academic responsibilities are not so pressing.

Thank you for your help and cooperation. We are looking forward to hearing from your campus soon.

Sincerely,

Dennis Yeager

Dennis Yeager, Chairman
South Central Region, NSA
Loyola University
New Orleans, Louisiana

Constance Curry

Constance Curry, Director
Southern Student Human Relations Project, NSA
41 Exchange Place S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

P. S. A certain amount of funds for travel assistance to the Seminar is available. Students who will need such assistance should indicate this on the reverse side of the registration form.

REGISTRATION

SOUTH CENTRAL HUMAN RELATIONS SEMINAR
"The South of the Future"

Name _____ Class _____

College address _____

Home address _____

Please number the topics below (1), (2), (3) and (4) to indicate your preferred choices for the workshops listed.

The Church and the Conscience of the New South
Political Responsibility in a Changing South
The Future of Education in the South
The Southern Response to an Economy in Transition

A certain amount of funds for travel assistance to the Seminar is available. Please signify on the reverse side if you will need such assistance.

Please return by March 5th to: Mr. Dennis Yeager
Apt. 10, 7530 St. Charles Avenue
New Orleans, Louisiana

REGISTRATION

SOUTH CENTRAL HUMAN RELATIONS SEMINAR
"The South of the Future"

Name _____ Class _____

College address _____

Home address _____

Please number the topics below (1), (2), (3) and (4) to indicate your preferred choices for the workshops listed.

The Church and the Conscience of the New South
Political Responsibility in a Changing South
The Future of Education in the South
The Southern Response to an Economy in Transition

A certain amount of funds for travel assistance to the Seminar is available. Please signify on the reverse side if you will need such assistance.

Please return by March 5th to: Mr. Dennis Yeager
Apt. 10, 7530 St. Charles Avenue
New Orleans, Louisiana

Ga

February 22, 1962

Mrs. Frances Pauley
Executive Director
Georgia Council on Human Relations
41 Exchange Place, S. E., Room 309
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Frances:

Mr. J. J. Brewbaker, our Public School Consultant, indicates that he will be visiting school superintendents in several southern cities in April, including Savannah. We would appreciate it if you could send me any background information relating to the school situation in Savannah which would help Brewbaker in his conference.

Thanks.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PR:mm

$80.00 honorarium, @ $40.00 per day for two days
85.18 expenses, as itemized on attached letter
TOTAL: $165.18

Dr. Vivian W. Henderson

Fisk University

Nashville, Tennessee

Consultative services to Georgia Council on Human Relations Workshop, March 2-3,

Macon, Georgia.

Consultative services

3/16/62 62

Paul Rilling

Ga Dept

Charities Are Given Deadline for Filing

3/23/62

Atlanta Constitution

Charitable organizations which raise funds in Georgia have until March 31 to register with the state, Secretary of State Ben W. Fortson said Thursday.

Application forms will be available at his office Monday.

Georgia's General Assembly passed a law this year requiring such registration.

Anyone acting as a professional fund raiser must register and pay an annual fee of $50 and put up a $5,000 bond. A $10 fee is required for each professional solicitor and $5 for charitable organizations.

The registrations expire on Aug. 31 of each year and may be renewed for additional one-year periods upon payment of the fee.

The following information will be required:

1. The name under which the charitable organization intends to solicit contributions.

2. The names and addresses of officers, directors, trustees, and executive personnel.

NAMES, ADDRESSES

3. The names and addresses of any professional fund raiser and professional solicitors who act or will act on behalf of the organization, and a statement setting forth the terms of the arrangements for salaries, bonuses, commissions or other remuneration to be paid.

4. The purposes for which the charitable organization is organized.

5. The purposes for which contributions will be used.

6. The period of time solicitations will be made and the method of solicitation.

7. Other information necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of contributors.

Fortson pointed out that the registration forms are similar to those used by New York and that the program is designed to better inform the public concerning funds raised for charitable purposes.

EXEMPTED

The Georgia law exempts the following from registration:

1. Religious agencies and organizations, and charities, agencies and organizations operated, supervised or controlled by or in connection with a religious organization.

2. Educational institutions when solicitation of contributions is confined to its student body and their families, alumni, faculty and trustees.

3. Fraternal, civic, benevolent, patriotic and social organizations when solicitation of contributions is confined to its membership or within the county in which the organization is located.

4. Persons requiring any contributions for the relief of any individual, specified by name at the time of the solicitation, if all of the contributions collected, without any deductions whatsoever, are turned over to the named beneficiary.

Ga - Gen

April 5, 1962

To: The Executive Comm., Georgia Council on Human Relations
The Board of Directors, Greater Atlanta Council on Human Relations

Recommendation from Negotiating group, consisting of Charles Demere, John Glustrom, Mrs. Kay Hoffman, Lionel Newsome, Paul Rilling, Mrs. Florence Robin, Bill Shields, Mrs. Fern Stanley, Sam Williams, and John Youngblut.

Proposal:

A. That an autonomous, joint, fund-raising committee be set up at once. The committee shall consist of six persons: three persons (not to include executive directors) nominated by the respective chairmen and approved by the respective boards. The committee shall select its own chairman.

B. All funds thus raised shall be deposited in a new account , known as The Georgia-Atlanta Council on Human Relations Fund.

C. That authority to determine the division of the funds raised in the greater Atlanta area be placed in the hands of a committee consisting of the respective chairmen and treasurers of the two councils and the field director of the Southern Regional Council.

D. That this aggeement be binding on all contributions (above dues) received from the greater Atlanta area between April 1 and July 1. This does not include contributions from state and regional organizations.

E. That if this plan is not ratified by both boards by April 30th, each is free to pursue its own fund raising efforts.

Paul -

Here's hoping this will work. If you have any further suggestions, please let me know. Hope we can meet Thursday at 11:30 to get all this behind us. Thanks for all your help. I'll be out of town until Wed about 5:00 pm.

Charles.

our ~~bloc~~ comm meets Thurs. at 12:30 - if you would like to join us, please do.

GA - Gen

April 10, 1962

Mr. Harold Arnold
Atlanta Urban League
239 Auburn Avenue, N.E.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Harold:

SRC has not been represented recently at the meetings of the Merit Employment Coordinating Committee because of our traditional practice of channeling Atlanta area program concerns through the Atlanta and Georgia Councils on Human Relations. We remain, of course, keenly interested in the work of the Committee and anxious to cooperate in any way possible. We feel that our concern can be effectively represented through the involvement of the local Council.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PR:mm

cc: Mrs. Eliza Paschall
Mrs. Frances Pauley

GA—Gen

April 11, 1962

Mr. Harry W. Rohrer
1927 North Decatur Road, N.E.
Atlanta 7, Georgia

Dear Harry:

Thank you for your recent information on the Oak Ridge project. I am returning your letters as you requested.

My own inclination would be to move fairly modestly, say with printing of 25,000 at the $412.00 rate. 25,000 is a lot of brochures and we could cover a lot of ground with them. An alternative possibility would be to try to arrange the mailing to all Baptist ministers in the Southern Convention, which Foy Valentine estimates would cost $2,500.00. It is not clear to me whether this includes the cost of the materials themselves.

I think we should go ahead with some fund raising. On this your thinking is probably better than mine. We would probably be willing to make a modest contribution toward this effort.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PR:mm
Enclosures

Gu ber

1927 N. Decatur Road N.E.
Atlanta, 7, Georgia
April 3, 1962

Mr. Paul Rilling
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth St. NW
Atlanta, 3, Georgia

Dear Paul:

Herewith is copy of letter I received yesterday from Dr. Galloway of First Baptist Church, Oak Ridge, Tennessee. I enclose also copy of letter their Convention Action Committee sent to missionaries and the mimeographed Report Form. These are the only ones I have and I am asking that you kindly return them to me after you have read them or made copies, if you feel you need such.

What do you propose as our next step?

Sincerely yours,

Harry

H.W. Rohrer

HWR-r

Dear Paul:

Herewith are copies of recnt communications between Dr. Valentine and me; also copy of my letter of today to Dr. Galloway of Oak Ridge, and a copy of Oak Ridge Church's special bulletin bearing missionaries' testimonies as to the effect of our degregation pratices upon their work.

I hope we can keep matters moving forward for better race relations.

Sincerely yours,

Harry

H.W. Rohrer

1927 N. Decatur Road N.E.
Atlahta, 7, Georgia
March 23, 1962

P.S.: A copy of each of the other 12 publications referred to in my letter to Dr. Valentine, under separate cover. -

H.W.R.

6a
6em

February 27, 1962

Mr. Harry W. Rohrer
1927 N. Decatur Road, N.E.
Atlanta 7, Georgia

Dear Harry:

We have heard through Will Campbell that the Christian Life Commission of the Southern Baptist Convention is not interested in publishing the material contained in the Oak Ridge brochure. He reports that they have been working on another publication in the same direction. This may well explain the notice Mrs. Rohrer saw in the Christian Index. Will indicated that his information came from Mr. Valentine.

We are now exploring other channels for utilizing the Oak Ridge material.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PR:mm

6a
Ger

1927 N. Decatur Road N.E.
Atlanta, 7, Georgia
February 23, 1962

Mr. Paul Rilling
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street
Atlanta, 3, Georgia

Dear Paul:

Thursday evening Mrs. Rohrer called my attention to some paragraphs in the current issue of Christian Index, Feb. 22, under the heading of Southern Baptist Agency items, this particular one being the Christian Life Commission.

I quote:"A foreign missionary urged upon the commission to use every means to inform Southern Baptists how race prejudice in the homeland compromises their witness to other races.

Out of this request was developed a pamphlet entitled, "Race Relations a Factor in World Missions". Over 80,000 have been distributed."

Might this be a loose report on the material you are working with Will Campbell on? I would hardly think enough progress had been made to have it already published.

I called Dr. John Hurt. He is not familiar with the details of the material referred to in Christian Index. I am writing Mr. Jay Valentine with the Southern Baptist Christian Life Commission, for information, and possibly a sample of the pamphlet referred to. I will let you know of any response I get.

Sincerely yours,

Harry.
H.W. Rohrer

HWR-r

Ga Gen

1927 N. Decatur Road N.E.
Atlanta, 7, Georgia
February 6, 1962

Mr. Paul Rilling
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street N.W.
Atlanta, 3, Georgia

Dear Paul:

This is with further reference to testimonies of Missionaries regarding our segregation practices.

Some Southern Baptist women are having a missionary program on Race and Missions, - and in addition to the Oak Ridge Bulletin, I am sending them the enclosed. It occurs to me this will at least be interesting to you. Maybe you can make use of it. You will note it is addressed "To Whom It May Concern".

This is a statement by Dr. Callaway, who is briefly quoted on the Oak Ridge Bulletin, which he made at my request in August. He was a member of Second-Ponce de Leon Baptist Church. His father is still a member there. It is my understanding that part of his duty in Japan is teaching in one of their universities.

Sincerely yours,

Harry

H.W. Rohrer

HWR-r

GA. GEN.

January 25, 1962

Mr. Harry Rohrer
1927 N. Decatur Road, N.E.
Atlanta 7, Georgia

Dear Harry:

It was good to hear from you. Our idea was to have a Southern Baptist Convention commission publish the material. We and others could then order copies from them and help with distribution, but the material would bear the imprint. We'll keep in touch on this.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PR:mm

GA - GEN

1927 N. Decatur Rd N.E.
Atlanta, 7, Georgia
January 22, 1962

Mr. Paul M. Rilling
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth St. N.W.
Atlanta, 3, Georgia

Dear Paul:

I have your letter of January 18th, and am delighted to know from this and our telephone conversation, that you good people are running down possibilities for securing wide distribution of the testimonies of American missionaries concerning our segregation practices.

The three points in the conclusion in the opinion expressed by you and your associates, appear to me to be well founded, and I earnestly trust and pray that with Mr. Campbell's help, the widest possible circulation of this or a similar brochure can be effected.

Personally I am a bit apprehensive of the Southern Baptist's willingness to assume responsibility for any distribution such as we are thinking of, just as I have been unable to find pastors of Baptist churches saying anything about it forfear it would react unfavorably to appeals for funds for foreign missions.

It does seem to me that some way must be found to get this situation before the people of our nation who are supporting foreign mission work, with the hope that they will certainly not decrease their interest in missions, but will rectify this at home and thus remove the very severe and embarassing handicap we are imposing upon our representatives.

Please go ahead with anything you and your associates feel you can do, and if I can help in any way at any time, don't hesitate to call upon me.

Sincerely yours,

Harry.
H.W. Rohrer

HWR-r

6a-
6e-

January 18, 1962

Mr. Harry Rohrer
1927 North Decatur Road, N.E.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Harry:

I've tried to get you by phone several times without success. After carefully going over your Oak Ridge missionary brochure, those of us here are of the following opinion:

1. This is very useful information which should be given widespread circulation.

2. We do not feel that it would be worth the time and trouble to get similar testimony from various denominations. This stuff is strong as it stands and would become repetitious if we tried to add other testimony. It would not be worth the time it would take. We believe that this Baptist testimony would have impact of persons of all faiths.

3. We believe the most effective distribution would be through a brochure bearing the Southern Baptist imprint. We have, therefore, sent a photostat of the brochure to Mr. Will Campbell, of the National Council of Churches' Nashville office, who has indicated that he will take it with the Christian Life Commission of the Southern Bapt Convention, centered in Nashville. Mr. Campbell is him a Baptist minister.

If you disagree with these conclusions or think w act otherwise, let me know.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Ac

PR:mm
Enc.

MUTILATED PAGE (s)

Published Weekly By The First Baptist Church

Vol. 8 Oak Ridge, Tennessee, Nov. 2, 1961 No. 43

16

SILENCE HERE . . .

Silenced in Gatlinburg, 1959 Convention. Motion tabled "that the official hospitals not deprive anyone of its medical services or facilities because of color, race, creed or condition."

Silenced in Nashville, 1960 Convention, by a substitute motion to appeal first to the trustees of Tennessee Baptist Schools and Hospitals before bringing a motion to the Convention.

Trustees Silent in 1961 - No response has come from any of 175 trustees of three hospitals, three colleges and one academy to letters asking them to take some action toward removing the color bar in Tennessee Baptist Hospitals and Schools.

Memphis, 1961 - Silent????

Christian Conscience of Messengers Silent????

VOICES HERE . . .

Our silence can be deafening even in far away places. Mrs. W. S. Rule, Jr., convinced that the lack of action by Tennessee Baptists and other state conventions was hurting our foreign mission program, organized volunteers among our W.M.S. and they have written every foreign missionary of the Southern Baptist Convention. In these letters the missionaries were asked whether the race situation at home was affecting their witness and also whether they thought that definite action by churches and conventions would be helpful in their work. We have printed here as many excerpts as space permitted. These are typical of the many replies we received. With the exception of two or three letters in which missionaries seemed reluctant to speak out without the expressed approval of the Foreign Mission Board, all of the more than 140 replies received were similar to the following. May the conscience of each of us be deeply troubled by the words of these whom we are sending to spread His love throughout the world . . .

LATIN AMERICA

DONALD R. SMITH—VENEZUELA

It is exceedingly hard to convince one who simply must look at publicity that is world wide that Christianity is not biased. If it is not possible in the scope of Christian living to find fellowship with fellow believers, regardless of color, then they doubt that Christianity has a contribution for the world in which they go hungry. Words have yet to persuade them. I firmly believe action will do so eloquently!

A part of the Communist drive is based on absolute racial equality, which they see contrasted in the USA to the opposite extreme. If Communism can take the real basic principle of Christianity, i.e., that all men are of one blood and one creation, and make it appear as a communistic truth while Christians fail to live it as truth in fact, then they have made their point . . . Either we solve our problems in the racial field on a sincere basis of Christian love and appreciation, or we can go down as the propagators of the greatest hypocritical religious farce in history. Time is against us, either we move now or wish we had.

CHARLES W. SHIRLEY—ARGENTINA

Because these people see no color line, it is hard for them to realize why we in the States hold so rigidly to the practice of segregation. It creates hostile feelings toward the missionary and the message that he claims is for men of all races and colors . . . Try as he may, the missionary cannot escape the results of the attitudes and actions of his country and the group that sends him out.

DONALD E. McDOWELL—PARAGUAY

If Southern Baptists, who hold the Bible to be their sole rule of faith and practice, do not take the leadership in making friendliness, brotherhood, and Christian love the way of life in our communities, who will? . . . Every battle won to help our Negro brethren in the U.S. is a battle won also for the advance of Christian missions around the world. "What we are speaks so loudly that the people of every land cannot hear what we say."

JAMES E. MUSGRAVE, JR.—BRAZIL

I would hope that we could cite cases of voluntary integration on the part of Baptists as proof of the fact that Christ does make the difference.

J. DANIEL McMURRAY—URUGUAY

It would mean a lot if it were well known that our churches do not practice discrimination and that they are working actively to eliminate the problem.

WILLIAM [illegible] W. AND CRIS GRAVES —ARGENTINA

How would you have answered the question recently asked us by a student in our Baptist Seminary here, "How is it that you Southern Baptists can send missionaries all over the world to work with every color and race of people but you cannot get along with the Negro in your own homeland?" We are still trying to think of how to answer her.

LOREN C. TURNAGE—COLUMBIA

The question is raised . . . "why does racial discrimination exist in the south, where Baptists and other evangelicals are the strongest?"

We are happy to hear of any Baptist effort in the home field to help restore dignity and equality to all men regardless of the color of his skin.

EDITH A. ALLEN—RIO de JANEIRO, BRAZIL

If our people in the South would be honest with themselves and the Negro race and be willing to recognize the law and obey it, it would raise our prestige enormously in other lands . . . And time is running out.

EDGAR F. HALLOCK—RIO de JANEIRO, BRAZIL

In our churches and institutions there is no distinction of colors, just one Christian family united in Christ.

FRANCES BUMPUS—BRAZIL

Anything you can do to help improve the situation at home will also help to advance God's Kingdom here and on our other mission fields.

BOB E. ADAMS—CHILE

The sad thing is there is no reply that I can give them, as long as no one seems to be able to have the courage to actually DO something in the right direction. I am thankful that I can quote your letter to them, to show that Christians in the churches are concerned about the situation and want to see the Christlike thing done.

J. WILSON ROSS—LATIN AMERICA

. . . that racial disturbances here in the States is one of two significant hindrances to the work that our Foreign Mission Board is trying to do. One of the weapons used by Communist leaders in sighting cases against the United States has been the treatment of racial groups.

MARTHA HARISTON—BRAZIL

Today's world has shaken off the isolation of distance. If President Kennedy bumps his head while picking up a toy for Caroline, the nation knows about it by nightfall; and if Uncle Sam bumps his head while trying to solve his society's problems the wounds are magnified across the front pages of the next day's world press. And the Communists have seen to it that the world's press does not have a protective attitude toward Uncle Sam.

GEORGE H. KOLLMAR—COLOMBIA

Racial desegregation is a certainty in the U. S. and it will be terrible if it is by the influence of the ungodly, and not by the effort of Christian men and women, that it is brought about.

EUROPE . . .

WILLIAM P. CLEMMONS—ITALY

Every American is associated with the Negro question, and is automatically assumed as being one who dislikes Negroes; this is bad enough. But, it is worse when one's religious affiliation is also associated . . . with such a view . . . We try to defend the Baptists of our homeland, finding it strangely hard to cite examples where Baptists of the South have done much to better the relations between black and white . . . where . . . Christians have failed, Negroes have resorted to the only other just method left to them, and that was a legal one, standing as a mark of shame to the Christians of America.

W. DEWEY MOORE—ITALY

It seems a poor commentary on our churches if they cannot follow the Christian way even when the American Government is seeking to follow the purely American and democratic way.

JOHN DAVID HUGHEY—SWITZERLAND

It is encouraging that careful consideration is being given to the opening of Baptist hospitals and schools in Tennessee to people of all races and creeds. We always have trouble in this part of the world explaining racial segregation in democratic America and more especially among Christian people. May God bless the efforts made in your church and The Tennessee Baptist Convention to remove racial barriers in Baptist institutions.

MRS. CHARLES WHITTEN—SPAIN

. . . ashamed to reply to some . . . questions . . . one came from non-Christian, . . . "You say that the Gospel has the power to change lives and that your message emphasizes faith first and later good works come as a result. Why is there such a racial problem in the United States and we scarcely have that problem here in Spain?"

NEAR EAST . . .

DWIGHT L. BAKER—ISRAEL

I have sat with communists . . . here in Nazareth and listened to them hurl accounts of social discrimination at us as an example of American Democracy and our Christianity. Shortly after the Little Rock tragedy I was attacked physically in front of the Baptist School as a representative of the American imperialists.

FRANCES CRAWFORD—GAZA

. . . missionary is asked, "Why do you work and preach among us when in your own country we would not be allowed in your churches, hospitals and schools?" If Southern Baptists do not practice what they teach and preach they cannot hope ta convince the world of their sincerity and their complete devotion to Christ . . . I'm glad integration is spreading, with the help of government, but I'm ashamed that Southern Baptists have to be forced by government to do what Christ commanded —over 2000 years ago.

DAVID AND MAXINE KING —LEBANON

. . . Southern Baptists will surely have to give an account to God . . . if they fail to give leadership to this cause which is not only best for America and for Americans, but also the best way to prove Christian ideals . . . We sincerely hope that the Baptists of Tennessee will lead the Baptists of other states to do what is only fair, just, reasonable, right and best, and open their hospitals and schools and other institutions to all . . . on the basis of need, or character, or ability.

MARGARET LINDSEY—ISRAEL

There is no doubt whatever that when our Baptist brethren in the United States fail to open Baptist Schools to members of all races we are affected in Israel. We do deeply . . . echo the call to prayer . . . that fellow Baptists in the United States have risen to the challenge of being fully Christian in their love for all men . . . Surely this would be but to do our part in answering the prayer on our lips so constantly: "Thy Kingdom come on earth as it is in Heaven."

CENTRAL AMERICA . . .

W. H. GRAY, JR.—COSTA RICA

For the most . . . It is extremely difficult to proclaim a gospel of love and the value of the individual in the face of acts of hatred perpetrated in what is supposed to be to the free world the prime example of a democratic freedom-loving Christian nation. The truth cannot be disguised or buttered over. To a people who must vigilantly maintain their faith against the bitter persecution of such a totalitarian force as the Roman Catholic Church, every personal freedom and human right becomes sacred and is to be defended as such.

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES A. ALLEN, JR.—GUATEMALA

I am very much in accord with taking a definite stand on the racial issue that faces all of us . . . I feel that we are suffering the results of not doing something about this matter before now.

JAMES O. TEEL, JR.—SAN JUAN

The smallest racial battle in the States makes the front page in Latin American papers. It is difficult to explain . . . that our Baptist people . . . love them when they know that people of some other race are not welcome in some of the Baptist churches and schools.

JAMES D. CRANE—MEXICO

I join you in the prayer that our denomination may genuinely lead out in applying Christ's principles of social action and thereby give evidence of the vitality of our faith in a day when many are beginning to wonder how much it really means to be a Christian.

ORIENT . . .

ANCIL B. SCULL—INDONESIA

We Southern Baptist missionaries often face the question: How can these things be in Christian circles, in Christian America? . . . We wish you every blessing of God as you continue your efforts with wisdom and discretion, but with every perseverance, to demonstrate to the world that American Christianity means brotherhood and equal rights for all people, regardless of their race or creed.

DAN R. COBB—THAILAND

We have been concerned . . . to correct racial inequities, but did not know how . . . all of the missionaries feel the same . . . we will be praying that the Lord will lead the Convention to take proper action this year.

LUCY E. SMITH—JAPAN

Ever since I have been on the Mission Field and even before, I have been aware of the fact that many times people in America by their action and their words, contradict what the missionaries try to teach and what the nationals of other countries find in the Bible. It is not to be questioned but what this has had its effect on the work and many people have failed to accept the message and salvation offered because of this.

M. J. WRIGHT—JAPAN

I much appreciate the action of the Ladies of the First Baptist Church to introduce a motion to open the hospitals to peoples of all races. We are often asked why in "Christian" America we have race hatred while in Buddhist Japan all races are accepted.

CHARLES WIGGS—JAPAN

Missionaries would like for our churches to lead out in this matter and take a definite stand for equal rights of all men regardless of color. . . . I feel positive action by our churches would help in the U.S.A. and around the world.

MARTHA HAGOOD, M.D.—JAPAN

A young Japanese doctor recently returned from one of our Baptist hospitals to be associated with us here in Japan. It was with astonishment that the Japanese doctors on our staff, all of whom are Christians, learned that our Baptist hospitals for the most part have either no facilities for Negroes or only limited facilities . . . greatest handicap to the Christian message overseas is the lack of effective application of the Christian gospel in our churches and community life at home.

PETE GILLESPIE—JAPAN

The newspapers always make front-page headlines of any American racial flare-up, and the readers' columns have an abundant amount of personal opinions about America's right to be called a great democracy. As a native Tennessean, I would rejoice to see our State take the lead in being thoroughly Christian in every area.

TUCKER CALLAWAY—JAPAN

Japanese are of the opinion that American Christians must try to practice what they preach before they set out to win the world. They judge Christians by Christian standards.

DEWEY MERCER—JAPAN

We truly pray that Tennessee Baptists will open their eyes to their own surroundings as well as they have opened them to the fields of the world. . . . that you will open your schools and hospitals to all those who need your high ideals.

C. F. CLARK, M.D.—JAPAN

The Japanese population is the best education in the world, and every racial incident is published in large Japanese newspapers . . . The effect of this kind of witness sometimes makes us want to cry, give up, and go home. Certainly it is one of the greatest assets to international communism today.

MRS. JAMES FOSTER—PHILIPPINES

Everything America does concerning the race problem is front-page news in all of the newspapers here in the Philipines . . . Buddhism and Mohammedanism will say to those whom they are trying to win, "If you will accept our faith, we will look upon you as a brother."

MR. & MRS DAN COBB—THAILAND

Only a week or so ago the local press gave much attention to the Baptist Hospital in Atlanta turning away a Negro baby in an emergency. The nationals here are much interested in this, and it hurts our work . . . I am confident that the Thailand missionaries from Tennessee will consider it a special encouragement to have the state Convention take action opening our institutions to people of all races. How can we do otherwise?

JEAN AMIS BOUGH—PAKISTAN

As dearly as I love our South and our wonderful Christians who support us, we are being hurt beyond measure in our mission efforts by their actions - or inactions! Please don't send us and then tie our hands. Please be absolutely honest when you pray, "Lord, what would you have me to do?"

MRS. HAROLD T. CUMMINS —PAKISTAN

To us who live out on the borderlines of international conflict where giant populations are seeking just to live (exist), it seems utterly impossible that our beloved, educated America is still struggling with a problem that should have been solved years ago.

BENTON WILLIAMS FAMILY —THAILAND

One of the hardest questions we have on the mission field is; if our folks provide seventeen million dollars per year for foreign missions; and this really provides for all races and creeds of people to hear the Gospel - why segregation? . . . it makes our work harder.

E. J. THARPE—HONG KONG

Your letter of September 24, 1961, regarding the action, or need of action, to open the hospitals and schools in Tennessee is one that I could fully agree with . . . One thing is sure, the Communists certainly take these incidents and use them for their own advantage.

GREENE W. STROTHER—THAILAND

I have failed to speak to one of our missionaries who does not deplore our Southern attitude.

AFRICA . . .

HAZEL MOON—GHANA

If only our Christians in America knew how much these things are doing to destroy the faith Nigerian people have in Christian America! It is hard to describe the changed attitude of our people—some of the sweetest, kindest people in the world are the people with whom I have worked now for over fourteen years and yet they have begun to seriously doubt the genuine love we have for them.

DR. KARL J. MYERS—NIGERIA

An example is the experience of Dr. and Mrs. Dahunsi, our good friends who were with us in Seminary in Louisville. She needed an operation but was refused admission by the Baptist Hospital there and finally the operation was done by her doctor in the Catholic Hospital in Louisville. Dr. Dahunsi is now professor of New Testament and an important leader of the Nigerian Baptist Convention - but how can this memory ever be completely erased from their minds?

GEORGE FAILE—GHANA

We will indeed be praying for you and others who so correctly see that it is un-Christian to be segregated in churches, hospitals and schools . . . I'm sure that Christian churches must exercise leadership in these areas of life if these churches are to continue as vital witnesses of the Gospel.

CLYDE DOTSON—SOUTHERN RHODESIA

The strong feeling in Africa today is that Christianity is the religion of the white man, and that the Moslem faith is for the African . . . Our hearts are made heavy by the attitude our own South is showing toward their race problem there.

PHYLLIS AND ERIC CLARK—KENYA

How then can racial war with all of its bitterness and continuing consequences be averted, when, the one group which God has called to be the salt of the earth, and to prevent these things, has lost its savour? We claim to be a redeemed community but in actual practice we are still chained hand and foot to our racial and national groups along with all of their prejudices.

MRS. MARVIN GARRETT—SOUTHERN RHODESIA

. . . one front page article stating that Negroes were prohibited from entering a Baptist church in America destroys all that we try to do in one brief moment. The church should lead out in abolishing discrimination but I fear that it will be the last stronghold of segregation . . . You cannot act one way in America and not affect us here in Africa.

FRANCES GREENWAY—SOUTHERN RHODESIA

I'm in full agreement that the opening of our Baptist hospitals to those of all races and creeds would be a step in the right direction. Surely it would be pleasing in God's sight and helpful in our being useful instruments of His throughout the world.

IRA SINGLETON—SOUTHERN RHODESIA

I can think of nothing which could make me more justly proud to claim my position as a Southern Baptist (as well as a Tennessee Baptist) than to see Baptists of Tennessee open its doors of all institutions without any regard to race or color.

MARIE CHEYNE—SOUTHERN RHODESIA

Unless the churches are able to convince the mass of African population that her message of love is something more than a tool or technique to tranquilize their minds against the oppressiveness which they endure, we as missionaries may well be forced to leave and the work into which lives have been spent and dollars have been poured, may well become a lasting memorial to the failure of the church.

TOM McMILLAN—KENYA

What happens in America in race problems certainly does reach us here. It definitely affects our attempts to win our African brothers. Certainly positive action by churches at home would be a step forward for the cause of Christ here.

HARRIS MOBLEY—GHANA

The President of the Nigerian Baptist Convention has a son in medical school in upstate New York. (state school) He wanted to put him in Wake Forest, even my friends there tried, but he was not white, so he was refused . . . Yet we talk of "mission advance" in Nigeria - so much bunk! So much "sounding brass" . . .

MARY E. FREDENBURG—NIGERIA

In many places the message of Christ from Americans has already ceased to have meaning and I fear with the news of race riots claiming the headlines our days of effectiveness here are nearly over.

Convention Action Committee

Mrs. W. S. Rule, Jr.
Mrs. Thurman C. Whitson
Mr. G. B. Seaborn
Mr. R. C. Kinnamon
Dr. G. C. Kyker, Chairman

J. S. McGEE—NIGERIA

We have reached a stage in history where no person is satisfied with a second-hand citizenship. America preaches one thing but lives another. Spiritual decadence is a worse threat to America than war . . . The rest of the world cannot trust America . . . I trust you can do something to better race relations in the U.S.A. and do it quickly.

THOMAS O. HIGH—NIGERIA

I "salute" you for this work which you are doing. We are praying that the Southern Baptist churches will lead out in desegregation in the churches themselves . . . Any racial disturbance in the United States is played up in the headlines. Also any act on the part of the President of the US to help the Negroes is equally played up. We are . . . held . . . responsible . . . for what happens in US Baptist churches.

R. F. GOLDIE—GHANA

We support your efforts 100% in regard to the opening of our hospitals to those of all races. We further support the effort to open our denominational schools to those of all races, on all levels . . . How, then, can Southern Baptists expect to preach and practice the Gospel of Christ to men of all races, when we are not practicing this in our home churches?

MARY LEIGH LEGG—NIGERIA

We are indeed grateful to find that action of so definite and positive a nature is being undertaken by your W.M.U. . . . One of the Nigerian Baptists who has been to school in the U.S. was denied entrance to one of our Baptist hospitals . . . when a student wishes to go to the U.S. to study we cannot recommend our own Baptist University.

A. CANZONERI—NIGERIA

This segregation business has hit us in an unexpected way. A number of the leaders in our Convention got some of their education in the States. Most of them have never talked about what segregation there did to them, but occasionally we get one to really express himself to us. It is heartbreaking.

Published weekly by the First Baptist Church, Oak Ridge, Tennessee. Subscription price - 50 cents per year. Second class postage paid at the Post Office at Oak Ridge, Tennessee.

CHURCH STAFF

Edward D. Galloway, D. D. ..... Minister
Harold T. Prichard .... Minister of Music
Mrs. W. E. Stockburger— Church Secretary
Mrs. T. C. Whitson .. Pastor's Secretary

A CHALLENGING MESSAGE TO CHRISTIANS IN THE U. S. A.

FROM THE VIEWPOINT OF THE FOREIGN MISSION FIELD

A frank, realistic look at our profession and our practices.

SERMON: "KING OF KINGS"

by

Dr. Tucker N. Callaway.
Pastor of East Fukuoka Baptist Church, Japan and Professor in Seinan University of Fukuoka.

At Morning Worship Service at Second-Ponce de Leon Baptist Church, Atlanta Georgia, May 13, 1962.

Dr. Callaway was born and reared in Atlanta, Georgia. He received his A.B. Degree from Mercer University, and earned his Th M and Th D from Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Kentucky.

In 1945 Dr. Callaway was sent by the Baptist Foreign Mission Board to Hawaii for two years. From there he went to language school in Tokyo for two years. Since then he has been teaching in the Seinan University of Fulucka, Japan. He is Pastor of the East Fukuoka Baptist Church.

File - Mr. Robinson nat'l.

KING OF KINGS
Tucker N. Callaway

Patriotism, like love of family, is a natural loyalty which is pleasing in the Lord's sight, but pleasing only as long as it is subordinated to his will. Christ said, "Whoever loves father or mother more than me, is not worthy of me." He might have added, "Whoever loves Fatherland more than me is not worthy of me."

One of the primary perversions of all totalitarian forms of government is their pretension to absolute authority over their citizens. Whether it be Caesar's Empire, Hitler's Germany, or Khrushchev's Russia, the New Testament principle, "We must obey God rather than man," is anathema.

When the Christian is confronted by the necessity to choose between Christ and Caesar, he follows Christ to prison, to the jaws of the emperor's lions, to the cross. For the Christian there is only one absolute authority; not the state, but God in Christ.

Those who say, "My country, right or wrong," do not know the Lordship of Christ. The Christian's proper attitude toward his beloved native land is, "This nation, under God." No matter how much he loves his geographical and political homeland, his ultimate citizenship is in the Kingdom of God. Jesus loved Palestine, but when accused by Pilot of nationalistic ambitions, he answered clearly, "My kingdom is not of this world." The kingdom of Christ is in the heart of any man who acknowledges Christ to be his King. Christians are first and above all citizens of this Kingdom. They regularly pray, "Thy Kingdom come on earth;" their lives are consecrated to its spread. By accident of birth, a Christian will be legally and emotially attached to this nation or that; by deliberate choice of faith, he becomes a member of the world-wide community of the faithful. The disciples of Christ seek "first" the Kingdom of God.

The prophet, Jeremiah, had the thankless task of informing the Jews of the impending fall of their nation. They thought themselves to be God's chosen people; their country to be inviolable. Believing God depended upon Israel for the fulfillment of his purposes, they were smugly complacent in the assurance that no heathen adversary could overcome them. Jeremiah was sent to disturb that complacency. Speaking through him, the Lord declared:

> I will give all Judah into the hand of the King of Babylon; he shall carry them captive to Babylon, and shall slay them with the sword. Moreover, I will give all the wealth of the city..... and all the treasures of the kings of Judah into the hand of their enemies, who shall plunder them, and sieze them and carry them to Babylon. (Jeremiah 20: 4f)

The Jews could not believe it. They were convinced that Judah and its wealth were indispensable to God. They could not believe God would let Judal fall to the pagans of Babylon.

But Judah did fall. The way of the potter with the unyielding clay was fulfilled:

> I went down to the potter's house (said Jeremiah) and there he was working at his wheel. And the vessel he was making of clay was spoiled in the potter's hand, and he reworked it into another vessel, as it seemed good to ter to do. (Jeremiah 18:3f)

No nation is indispensable to God. The history of mankind is largely that of the fall of nations which resisted the wise purpose of the potter's shaping hands. He scraps them, and starts again.

I am no Jeremiah. I have not been commissioned with a message of certain doom for the " land of the free and the home of the brave."

Yet, I believe the Lord has laid it upon by heart to stir, if only just a little, the placid waters of complacency. I believe he has put upon me the responsibility of questioning the sacrosanct assumption that so-called "Christian" America is inevitably exempt from desecration by pagan powers.

The poet, Robert Burns, rightly extolled the capacity to "see ourselves as others see us." The experience of living many years in a foreign land apparently gives one a fresh perspective, a degree of objectivity, which may aid in the matter of seeing America as others see her.

At the time of our last furlough, only five years ago, the United States was considered by the world to be the unchallenged leader in scientific achievement. At that time, Russian claims of technological advance were met with cries of derision. Then came Sputnik I, tons of steel tossed easily into orbit around the earth. Not long after we heard the titters of a Japanese movie audience as the news-reel showed America's first space rocket stagger for a few feet into the air and explode.

All around the world, hasty revaluations were made. America had claimed that Russian communism deadened initiative, was inherently unproductive. Russia photographed the other side of the moon; sent her space men around and around the earth. Allies, enemies, and the non committed nations alike began to see the U.S. as having fallen into sedond place in the realm of science.

In the sphere of morality, America had disdainfully carped at Communist lies and boasted of her own unfailing integrity. Then she told the world her U-2 Spy Plane shot down over Russian territory was merely for weather reconnaissance, that it had accidently strayed from its intended course. Powers talked, and America's deception was laid bare.

America affirmed devotion to the principle that international disputes could be settled without recourse to arms; yet when she herself was intimately involved, as in the case of Castro's Cuba, she sanctioned military invasion of her neighbor to the South. Believing in Kennedy's sincerity, many Japanese at first refused to think he had been a party to this action. They were deeply disappointed when his involvement was made evident.

Khrushchev makes an ultimatum involving West Berlin; the world teeters on the brink of atomic war. There is talk of negotiating the non-negotiable. The possibility of German reunification is written off as unrealistic. The land is scarred by an ugly wall of concrete and barbed wire. Suppose Khrushchev throws down the gauntlet in Germany or the Congo, or in some yet unforeseen trouble spot. Do we know the West may be forced to back down, to compromise; or, if we hold fast to the extent of military action, do we realize there is no certainty of victory?

There are a multitude of people in the world who had rather be Red than dead. They feel in the light of their pinched economic circumstances, they cannot indulge in the American luxury of individual freedom. For them mere survival has first priority. If a showdown comes, it is by no means sure that the world will rally to America's side to guard her from anihilation. It appars, in fact, that America's very right to continued existence may be challenged in our generation.

In the face of such a challenge, what is America's strength?

(1) From the perspective of a foreign country one gets the impression that America's chief boast before the world is her "high standard of living." If one ask what is meant by "high", Americans begin to point to their two-car garages, automatic washers, power lawn mowers, home air-conditioners, and such things. Again and again in Japan, I have read articles prepared in the United States intending to indicate to foreigners the superiority of the American way. These articles dwell on the unattractive window displays in Russian shope, the absence of neon lights, the simple food, the plain clothing, the smaller living quarters, the absence of private automobiles; all of this in contrast with the abundance of such things in the U.S.A. One gets the impression that the chief concern of many Americans is that they are "smoking more now and enjoying it less."

Does our "high standard of living" give us strength at home?

Some would say it has made us soft and comfort loving; has caused us to put ease before consecration to ideals. Some would say our wide highways and sleek cars, our broad green lawns and our T.V screens have so insulated us from reality, that it has becmme impossible for us to comprehend the desperate needs elsewhere in the world.

Does our "high standard of living" give us strength abroad?

Among many people of the world we are about as popular as the fat little rich boy who comes down from the mansion on the hill to show off his new bicycle to the fellows of the streets. It is a bit hard for those without food enough for themselves and their children not to resent those who must resort to Metrecal to avoid overweight.

Americans wonder why Foreign Aid does not pay off in more friends for our country. Yet we should know that we cannot buy friendship. That American aid is often activated by "enlightened self interest" seems clear to receiving countries. "Americans help, to be helped," they say.

Why the apparently anti-American demonstrations in Japan, the country we have helped so much? I stood in the streets of the great city of Osaka and watched thousands march by chanting. "Ampo! Hantai! Ampo. Hantai." Ampo is the Security Treaty which allows American military bases in Japan. Hantai means, "I am against it."

I heard the discussion of the Christian students of our Baptist Seminary in Japan as they determined to take part in such a demonstration.

"America has been good to us and we are grateful, but it is not right that Japan be used as America's first line of defense. If war comes, Russia's first bombs will fall on our country because of American bases here. Why should Japanese die to preserve the American way of life for Americans?"

The Japanese are afraid of our military aid. They prefer neutrality in international affairs.

No. We cannot buy friendship through such means.

After all, is our "high standard of living" truly our strength either at home or abroad?

(2) Secondly, as America faces the challenge to its existence, it claims its strength is in its practice of personal liberty. But newspapers abroad carry pictures of white mothers, faces distorted with fury, spitting upon neatly dressed Negro children walking quietly to school.

One of our neighbors in Japan, is Mrs. Ono, daughter of a University Professor, wife of a successful business executive. She has been attending Christian meetings in our home and has indicated serious interest in the New Testament teachings. One day she showed me one of these pictures and asked; "How can this be in Christian America?" In reply, I sought to indicate that a large number of Americans are not Christians and that Christ is not to be judged by what unbelievers do. Her face brightened. "Now, I understand. This problem is found outside the church. Within, people of all races can pray and work together as a true family." Homesty required that I deny this idealistic conception.

Orientals believe in family solidarity. They are attracted to Christianity by its doctrine of the brotherhood man based on the fatherhood of God. They cannot understand a "family" whose members cannot freely eat together and pray together. The Japanese sympathy is with the Negro because they identify themselves with the colored races. They cannot understand how the expression "lover of Negroes" can be used as a reproach among those who claim Christ as Lord.

How strong is our belief in personal liberty as defined by social practices in the United States?

(3) Again, some say America's strength lies in her religious faith. Emprinted on our coins; "In God We Trust;" we pledge allegience to "this nation under God." Where have Americans actually placed their trust? True, we have many large churches, but also we have a large divorce rate, a high percentage of juvenile delinquency, alcoholism, price fixing among executives of our most respected businesses.

Where has America placed her faith? To many foreigners it appears that Americans crouch shivering behind a rampart of rockets, bombs, and fall-out shelters. Hear the words of Isaiah:

> Woe to those who go down in Egypt for help and rely on horses, who trust in chariots because they are many and in horsemen because they are strong, but do not look to the Holy One of Israel, or consult the Lord. (Isaiah 31:1)

As Americans confront a world of chaos, where is their trust? In hydrogen bombs, automic powered submarines, in inter-continental ballistic missles? To some it would appear so.

I have heard Christian teachers say, "God would not allow America to be overthrown, because in spite of her heathenism; there is a strong minority of faithful Christians here, the "remnent." Praise be to God, this minority exists. You who are gemuinely devoted to the Master are a part of this minority. Yet, was there no Christian minority in Poland, in Hungary, in Russia, in China? There is no assurance that God is bound to preserve the U.S.A. if she has become decadent. What do we pray for after all: "Lord, protect the status quo. God bless America, land that I love. Preserve our way of life, O Lord, and take not our comforts from us?" Is this the essential spirit of much of our praying?

The Jews, God's chosen people, were defeated by Babylon and carried away into captivity, not because God is weak, but because God will not be mocked.

If atheistic communists outlive us in simplicity of habit, consecration to their cause, willingness to labor for the welfare of the community rather than to compete for private profit; if atheistic communists outlive us, I say, God may use them as a scourge upon the nations where his name is known but his ways denied.

In spite of what has been said, the burden of this message is intended to be that of unquenchable hope. What is the Christian's hope? We know that God's victory is not conditional upon the preservation of any particular nation, political unit, or economic system. Communism may engulf the world for a season, but we know that even this would be used by the Lord of Heaven and Earth to fulfill his purposes. He has used pagan conquerors before; he may use them again. But he abideth Lord of all! His Kingdom will come. His church will prevail. The issue is not in doubt.

For this land that we love, we pray that she may be preserved to the Glory of God:

America, awake, repent, repent;

Repent and turn to God

His purpose abideth sure,

His will shall be done on earth as it is in heaven.

O, beloved Country, trust in him and live.

Deny him, and ye die.

The choice is as plain as that.

Not in wealth, or high standards of life,

Not in armed might, or solutions of violence,

But in the living God, O Amrica, shouldst thou trust.

After all has been said, however, despite our concern for this land we love, we are not first of all Americans. We dwell in a city "whose builder and maker is God." We are citizens of the eternal Kingdom of God. We are members o f the Church of Christ against which even "the gates of hell" shall not prevail.

Crowns and thrones may perish
Kingdoms riseand wane
But the Church of Jesus
Constant will remain.

If our ultimate hope is in the Kingdom of God, the Church Universal, then our most ardent labors should be to build this Kingdom, to establish this Church. More than in any other endeavor, we Christians experience directly the reality of participation in the Church Universal when we engage in foreign missions. As we bear the saving gospel of Christ across geographical, political, cultural boundaries, we experience most drastically the reality of Christ's splendid declaration, "In this world ye have tribulation, but be of good cheer, I have overcome the world."

Come war or peace, come national destruction or preservation, come death or life- - we will proclaim the eternal Kingdom, the Church Universal. In the name of Christ the King, unto the ends of the earth. He is

King of Kings and Lord of Lords,
He shall reign for ever and ever.
Hallelujah! Hallelujah!

GA - Gen

(from H. Rohrer)

COPY -

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

I am grateful for this opportunity to say a word about the effect of racial integration in the United States upon the cause of foreign missions. During my fourteen years as a missionary in Japan, this problem has arisen again and again. It is aggravated in that land both ~~many~~ because Japanese think America is Christian and because they identify themselves with the colored peoples of the world.

Not a few Japanese Christians were first attracted to the chuch upon hearing its doctrine that there is "one God and Father of us all."(Ephesians 4:6) The biblical teaching of the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man is most impressive to the Japanese. They are responsive to John's admonition that Christians "love one another, for love is of God, and he who loves is born of God." (1 John 4:7)

They are correspondingly shocked when their newspapers show such photographs as that of white American mothers, faces distorted with contempt, reviling and spitting upon a neatly dressed little negro girl quietly on her way to school. "How can suchthings be in a Christian country?" "Christian brotherhood and Christian love must be nothing but empty words. Why should we want such a religion in Japan?" Time and time again, earnest, high minded Japanese have come to me with such comments.

My reply on such occasions is that unfortunately many people in America are not Christian and that we must not judge the way of Christ by the conduct of unbelievers.

Regretably, however, another aspect of the matter cannot be so easily brushed aside. About two months ago in the living room of our home in Japan, a group of our neighbors had gathered to discuss the Christian faith. Mrs. Ono, a woman about fifty years of age, wife of a business executive, daughter of a university professor, one deeply interested in Christianity, had been speaking of America's racial problems of which she had been reading in the news. Hearing my reply as given above, suddenly her face brightened and she said, "Now I understand. The division between the races in the United States is only between those outside the church. Within the church fellowship, negroes and whites can pray and work side by side. What a wonderful demonstration of the difference Christ makes in the lives of those who trust in him! "

How I wished I could have told her it was true. When in honesty I was forced to confess that because of certain social traditions negroes and whites had separate churches, that negroes would not be welcomed as members or even as visitors in most of the churches which had sent us to Japan, Mrs. Ono was dismayed.

People of Japan feel keenly that brothers should live together on the level of deepest intimacy, sharing the same rice and the same roof. When they learn that the family of Christian believers is segregated, that its members cannot even sit at ease together in the House of God, many of them react with a sense of disdain and disgust for the talk of Christian brotherhood.

It is no good to point out that there is racial prejudice among the Japanese themselves. They judge Christians by Christian standards. Japanese are of the opinion that American Christians must try to practice what they preach before they set out to win the world.

Tucker N. Callaway
August 10, 1962

NOTE: The above statement was made by Dr. Callaway in response to my request that he might care to indicate the effect of our U.S. race relations practices upon our world wide Christian witness as seen by one of our foreign missionaries - HWR

Rohrer

Ga -
Gen

April 16, 1962

The Rev. William A. Jordan
First Presbyterian Church
13th Avenue at Fifth Street
Cordele, Georgia

Dear Mr. Jordan;

I have turned over your name as one of those we would consider qualified to the personnel committee of the Florida Council on Human Relations. I will be in touch with them and at some future date we will arrange an interview. In the meantime, if you happen to be passing through Atlanta for other reasons, drop in and see us.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PR:mm

Ga
Ger

MACON COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

391 MONROE STREET MACON, GEORGIA

April 19, 1962

Mr. Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Mr. Rilling:

Thank you for your letter of April 16. I do have a great interest in the work of the Georgia Council on Human Relations and have considered, at times, the possibility of entering this kind of work professionally. However, at the moment my plans include another year or so at Mercer in my present position as Dean of Men and following that, perhaps graduate school again. Unless there is a radical change in my plans, I would not be interested in being considered for the position which you mention.

Please give my warmest regards to Will Campbell when you see him. He has many friends at Mercer, and we look forward to his occasional, usually unexpected, visits. He also delivered an excellent address at the annual banquet of the Macon Council.

Again, my many thanks.

Cordially,

Joseph M. Hendricks

Joseph M. Hendricks
Co-Chairman

JMH/js

NSA

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA 4, PA. • BAring 2-1106 • CABLE, NATSTUD - PHILADELPHIA, PA.

April 19, 1962

Dear Mr. Rilling:

The National Student Association Southern Human Relations Project is happy to announce that it will sponsor a pilot project in voter registration in Raleigh, North Carolina, from June 15 to August 12.

The purpose of this project is two-fold: to help register local Negro citizens, approximately 18% of whom are now registered, and to provide an educational experience for college students. The fifteen students, an interracial and coeducational group, will work with the Raleigh Citizens Association. They will make a survey of registered and unregistered voters, encouraging citizens to register through a door-to-door campaign and through block and precinct meetings; carry on a citizenship education program about issues, candidates, and political structures; facilitate transportation to the registrars' offices; and keep records on the campaign. There will also be seminars, speakers, and forms for the orientation and education of the participants.

The project will be under the leadership of Dorothy Dawson and a married couple. The students will live together with the leaders in a house, doing their own cooking. All room and board will be paid by NSA, in addition to which each student will receive $50.00 during the eight weeks for personal expenses. Some funds are available to pay travel expenses to and from Raleigh.

The Voter Registration Project is part of the Association's over-all human relations program, which includes regional and national conferences on intergroup relations. As part of the Southern Project, it is financed by a grant from the Marshall Field Foundation.

fifteenth NATIONAL STUDENT CONGRESS
OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY • AUGUST 19 TO AUGUST 30, 1962

ASSOCIATED WITH: American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U. S. Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • Young Adult Council • Nat'l Citizens Committee for UN Day • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

President
EDWARD R. GARVEY
University of Wisconsin
Assistant to the President
SHEILA C. McCANN
Emmanuel College

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
PAUL POTTER
Oberlin College
Program Vice President
MICHAEL A. NEFF
University of Illinois
Program Vice President
EUGENE H. ZAGAT
Harvard College
Administrative Assistant
ROGER M. LEED
Harvard College
Student Government Information Service Director
ROBERT P. ROBINSON
University of Illinois
Public Relations Director
SCOTT KEECH
University of California
Academic Freedom Project Director
NEAL W. JOHNSTON
University of Chicago

Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

West Coast Office
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
DONALD K. EMMERSON
Princeton University
Administrative Assistant
HENRY J. BOITEL
Saint John's University
Assistant
ROBERT J. ARAGON
Univ. of Calif. at L. A.
Assistant
JOSEPH LOVE
Stanford University
Campus Administrator
MARY BETH SCHAUB
Bryn Mawr College
Director, Foreign Student Leadership Project
GEORGE HAZELRIGG
University of Oklahoma
Director of Special Exchanges
FRANK CRUMP
Columbia University

Educational Travel, Inc.
20 West 38th Street
New York 18, New York
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

NATIONAL ADVISORS
John Cogley
Staff Administrator
The Fund for the Republic
Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame
Russell Kirk
Editor
The University Bookman
Ralph McGill
Publisher
Atlanta Constitution
Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University
Milton Shapp
President
Jerrold Electronics

Chairman
National Advisory Board
DR. EUGENE FONTINELL
Professor
Queens College
Chairman
Financial Advisory Board
RUTH HAGY BROD

NSA is cooperating in this effort with the American Friends Service Committee and the Southern Regional YWCA. The AFSC will hold a similar project for fifteen college students in Jackson, Tennessee. Inquiries about it may be made to Mr. Dick Ramsay, 1818 South Main Street, High Point, North Carolina.

This letter is being sent to you with an application form for your use, or in hopes that you will see that students on your campus, in your organization, or in your area receive this information. Applications must be received at the NSA Southern Project Office by May 12. Announcements of final selections will reach all applicants by May 25. If you know of additional potential participants, do not hesitate to write for more application forms.

We shall look forward to hearing from you or students whom you have contacted.

Sincerely,

Dorothy Dawson

Dorothy Dawson, Assistant Director
Southern Project, NSA

Paul Potter

Paul Potter
National Affairs Vice President, NSA

/cl

Enclosure

Southern Project, NSA

APPLICATION
for
Voter Registration Project

General Instructions:

A. Please fill in this form as completely as possible. It will be used as a basis for selection of participants in the Voter Registration Project sponsored by the National Student Association Southern Project.

B. When space is insufficient, continue answers on the reverse side of the page, numbering them to match questions.

C. Please print clearly or type.

D. All applications must be received by May 1~~,~~ 2 1962. Notice of final selections will be mailed by May ~~30~~. 25

1. name Mr. / Mrs. / Miss _____ (last) _____ (first) _____ (middle)

2. current address _____

   current phone number _____

   dates you can be reached here _____

3. permanent home address _____

   home phone number _____

   dates you can be reached here _____

4. summer address _____

   phone number _____

   dates you can be reached here _____

5. parent or guardian _____

   address _____

   phone number _____

6. school _____

7. If in graduate school, give field of study, school and date of graduation

8. What is your present field of academic concentration? _____

9. Since we want to select an interracial group for the project, please give your ethnic origin.

10. List whatever experience you have had in the South -- living, traveling, visiting, or knowledge of the South gained through reading and study.

11. Have you had any campus, community, or organizational experience in human relations or interracial programs?

12. Have you had any campus, community, or organizational experience dealing with general social, political, or economic issues? (This would include volunteer work in a political party, work with a social service organization, etc.)

13. What conferences, projects, work camps, or seminars have you attended which would provide background experience for the Voter Registration Project?

14. Do you have any physical handicaps which might limit your participation in the Project?

15. What travel experience have you had either in the United States or in other countries?

16. Do you have any experience in teaching? In particular, are you qualified to teach reading and writing?

17. What positions or responsibilities will you have on campus or in your community during the nest year?

18. If you are to graduate, what are your vocational plans, and what responsibilities will you have in the community?

19. Please attach a statement in 500 words or less indicating your reasons for being interested in this project. Include in your discussion answers to the following questions:

    a) What do you think could be achieved by an increased number of registered Negro voters in the South?

    b) What problems do you expect to encounter personally by participating in the Project?

    c) What personal benefits do you expect from the Project?

20. Please have a transcript of your college grades sent to the address given below by May 1st.

21. A limited amount of money is available to help pay transportation costs to and from the Project. If you are in need of financial aid, indicate here:

22. When you have completed this form, please return it immediately to:

Voter Registration Project
Southern Office, NSA
41 Exchange Place S.E., Room 701
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Signature _____

Date of birth _____

Place of birth _____

Deadline for application: May 1, 1962

Selection date: by June 1, 1962

Please list the name, address and position of two adults who are in a position to evaluate your personal qualifications. If possible, list one faculty member and one community leader whose vocation or avocation is relevant to the nature of the project. Note: Recommendation forms will be sent directly to them.

(If you are unable to return this entire application immediately, please detach this section and send it to us now.)

A. Name _____

Position _____

Address _____

B. Name _____

Position _____

Address _____

your name _____

college _____

address _____

Gu - Gu

Quaker House 1384 FAIRVIEW ROAD, N.E., ATLANTA 6, GEORGIA, DRAKE 3-7986
ATLANTA MEETING OF THE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS

April 26, 1962

Dear Paul,

Thank you so much for sending me a copy of your letter to Dr. Beittel. I certainly am with you in all that you say there. In addition, I do hope that if they ask you to stay over on the 3rd you will do so and I trust you've forgiven me for any undue pressure I may have exerted in the other direction.

I sent a copy of my report and the statement to Rabbi Mantinband because I thought it would help to bring him up to date so that he might be "in the know" and therefore more helpful to the group regarding decisions.

Enclosed is a simple statement of my expenses. I really mean it when I said I would be happy to stand the $7.28 on my own so that you need not send any additional sum to me. I think you'll agree that for a five day expense account I managed to keep it very low in the total sum. If I haven't drawn it up in the right way just let me know. I'm not familiar with your customs there along this line.

I didn't get to ask you the other day the outcome of your trip to Philadelphia. I hope that at your convenience you will let me know. Meantime, all best wishes to you in your New Orleans mission and also at Millsaps. That seems to me like a real opening.

My greetings to Meggie.

Faithfully,

John

Encl.

CONTEXT OF RECRUITMENT
A background paper for discussion
at
Summer School Clinics for Secretaries of Missionary Personnel

We Cannot Recruit in a Vacuum

Some years ago a consultation on the philosophy of enlistment for missionary service was held at Buck Hill Falls, Pennsylvania. A number of us involved in cultivation and recruitment participated in this consultation. Many of the ideas discussed there and the conclusions reached are being used as the basis of this paper.

We are not only members of the Church but members of the world. We belong to the life of the world, of society, of culture. We are accustomed to speak of the role of the church in the world, but the world is in the church as well as the church in the world. Therefore, we must know ourselves--our society and the role it plays in molding our churches, and the problems this raises for our conceptions of missions and the missionary. We must face the implications of the fact that we live in an industrialized, urbanized, affluent society, that ours is a business as well as a mass culture, and that our American thinking tends to be shaped by environmentalism and isolationism. Other factors should be mentioned including racism in American life, our concepts of education, and the changing role of family and marriage. But these are enough to show that we cannot recruit for missionaries in a vacuum, because the life of our churches is not lived in a vacuum. The world is in the church, as well as the church being in the world.

Among the large number of students who attend church, are active in our student Christian movements, and have some vague ideas of the Church's mission, we see a great reservoir of potential missionaries. But this body of students is completely unprepared to go out as missionaries because the mission of the Church is far removed from their lives and is not a part of their religion. Consequently, we are engaged in an evangelistic task among the very people we wish to recruit. It is right that we should recruit among the people we are trying to evangelize for these are inseparable aspects of Christian witness. It is from an awareness of the mission of the church that one is led to seek his particular role in that mission.

Children of the "New America"

In an article appearing in "Christianity and Crisis," March 7, 1960, entitled "American Culture and Campus Culture," William Kirkland had the following to say about our American culture:

"Today's college students are children of the 'New America' in a sense in which none of us in the older generation is. They have lived practically all their lives not only with the fall-out of radiation and strontium in the physical environment, but also in a social atmosphere filled with the "fall-out" of fear--fear of massive violence and human extinction. No other generation in history has had to coexist with the threat of chaos on such a massive scale. They have known only the America of the post-World War II era, the America that has for the first time in her history become deeply involved (almost against her will) in the power conflicts of the world.

"Yet the students of today are also the children of the 'New America' in a quite contrasting sense. Ironically, this is the first generation to grow up in the midst of opulence and affluence, a society characterized by unprecedented abundance and leisure; they do not remember the Depression. In terms of money, conveniences, comforts and luxuries, no other generation ever 'had it so good.' Within their own lifespan (to expand slightly on Riesman's characterization), the psychology and ethic of the bank account and the cash payment have been countered if not surpassed by the psychology and ethic of the expense account and the credit card.

"These ironic facets of the 'New America' have been vividly portrayed in Reinhold Niebuhr's oft quoted statement that our land is now a 'gadgetfilled paradise suspended in a hell of international insecurity.' The effects of this irony of the 'New America' are undoubtedly 'writ large' in the hearts and minds of the current collegians.

"The implications are clear, then, for those concerned with making an authentic Christian witness to the college students of today. e need to use all the imagination at our disposal to alert them to the tidal forces beating in upon us all, to the new directions in which our culture seems to be moving, to the subtlety and hiddenness of many of the new personality-shaping powers at work."

College Students and the Church Today

Many articles and books have been written on today's college student. This generation has been described as the un-committed, the silent, without a cause, apathetic, rebellious, against and superstitious of institutionalism, quick to discern the phony, searching for meaning, aware of the need for community yet fearful of involvement, etc. Generalization here is as dangerous as any generalization for in the student ranks will be found the committed, the few willing to act with courage on their conviction whatever the risk, the politically astute, those aware of and concerned with the world situation, and those willing to accept the cost of discipleship.

What is the students' attitude toward the church and how does this help us understand more clearly the context in which we recruit and the church's responsibility to students. Some excerpts from Hugh W. Thompson's article on "College Students and the Church" appearing in the "Christian Century," March 27, 1961, may be of help here.

"Views of college students on the church and the Christian religion reflect not only formal religious education programs but also, and more, the impact of actual life contacts in the church. These are the same contacts as those of the non-student population. But students are more analytical and articulate. This article is an impressionistic collation of recent studies, observations, and consultations concerning student religious attitudes. It seeks neither to defend nor to criticize these attitudes but simply to describe them.

Assumptions, Viewpoints, Definitions

"To his understanding of the church and its message the young person today brings the assumptions of our society as screened through views of his family and his peers, his own concerns, viewpoints, prejudices, and his own vocabulary and definitions.

"Prominent among students' social assumptions are an uncritical nationalism and a moral relativism. Freshmen cannot conceive of a serious conflict between Americanism and Christianity; if they are forced to face a specific issue and make a choice, Americanism is the more obviously valid in their eyes. It is extremely difficult for students to accept the notion of moral universals. They are vividly aware of cultural differences and rarely see morality in any terms other than personal or social approval. What is right is a matter of 'honesty,' which means following one's own feelings and consciously making adjustments to social pressures. But no one, they say, has the right to tell anyone else that his moral judgement is wrong. Furthermore, they don't want anyone to tell them what they must do -- and that goes double for churches. . . .

"Among student 'prejudices' one might mention favorable sterotypes such as America, freedom, free enterprise, the Republican party, Christianity, anticipation of a salary of $10,000 within the first ten years beyond college. Unfavorable sterotypes include communism, socialism, radical reformers, older generation, church and preachers. Students do not necessarily dislike all preachers; they often are personally fond of their own. But preachers belong to the parental generation; their defense of religion and the church is obviously professional (like a lawyer and client) rather than a matter of conviction, or it would show more in their lives.

Rebels Without a Cause

"When we look more closely at student attitudes and views on the church, we find that present-day students are more like those of the early 1920's than those of the early 1950's. The 'beatnik' rejection of social patterns and institutions, while odd and extreme in some aspects, is an accurate symbol of the present mood and has much in common with the rebellion of the 1920's. There are significant contrasts, of course. Beatniks represent ostentatious withdrawal; students of the '20s were aggressively rebellious. Today's young people are disillusioned about progress, and no visible substitute exists for the institutions and patterns against which they rebel. In the '20s, students thought it possible to change institutions or substitute better social patterns for worse, and joined causes. Today the 'cause' people are ridiculed; students are apathetic about all causes and institutions. Reform seems fruitless to them. Yet there is vocal rebellion and social criticism within their ranks.

"The search for security has not disappeared among students, but it is not at the forefront as in 1950. The search is now for meaning. Let me quote sentences from an unusually articulate student paper:

> Today our knowledge has replaced all that was once mystical and awesome. With the shedding of these beliefs, myth and ritual also lose meaning. There remains no great mystery to man except himself--and he is left to face himself without guides or symbols. . . .He asks how to fulfill himself in an age of emphasis on uniformity and hero worship of the machine.
>
> In this process religion is becoming a means rather than an end. . . . We have big machine education. . . .Both home and school make the false assumption that the other is presenting standards of conduct and values.
>
> Whether man will be free or controlled depends on one condition. He must find and know himself, become aware of what he is, and take responsibility for himself.

The Conventionally Religious

"A large majority of students (perhaps 60 or 80 per cent) are conventionally religious. They have an affirmative attitude toward the church; nonetheless, their real concerns are decidedly 'worldly.' They tend to resent a Christian critque of the American socio-economic system, but they resent even more any effort to label them 'unchristian.' They wish to be members of the institutional churches as are their parents--though less conforming members. . . .

"To analyze this majority group more specifically: In the first place, they accept the church as they do other social institutions such as political parties, labor unions, colleges. They assume that the normal concern of the church is for its own preservation and success as a social institution. They see a great contrast between the concerns of the church and 'Christian concerns.' Second, if or when they think of their own lives in terms of service to mankind, they are more apt to think of this service as being outside the church than inside it. Not one in ten knows anything about what the churches are doing through Church World Service or missions. . . .they see Christianity as one among many religions, all valid. They are more bothered in conscience over 'Christian exclusiveness' than over denominational divisions--or over the unevangelized. . .

"A very small minority of students (possibly 5 to 15 per cent) reject all religion. They may study and talk about Zen, but more for purposes of irritation than edification. To use their own lingo, they 'couldn't care less.'

"A larger minority (perhaps 15 to 30 per cent) have a strong sense of religious concern, and their attitudes range from strongly defensive of the church to poignantly critical. Sensitively concerned about the problems of the world and convinced that solutions must in some sense be spiritual, they seek God with a great though sometimes undefined yearning. Many of these are skeptical about churches and cynical about the sincerity of professed Christians. But they wish to learn of Christ. They also wish to know about other great religious leaders and movements. The most popular course in a religion department tends to be the one in world religions. Students with this minority wish to dedicate their lives to service, to peace, to justice, and sometimes will use the term 'Kingdom of God' to describe this ideal. Some of them plan to enter the ministry or to prepare for lay leadership, some affirm the religious quest but prefer to remain uncommitted to the church as it is now structured, some are deeply torn and puzzled.

A Forum for the Uncommitted

"A widespread and spontaneous student-led development within recent years has been the religious forum conducted outside the structure of traditional religious organizations. The clear purpose of the forum is to develop and express the views of those who are sincerely concerned but do not wish to be numbered among the committed. . . .Here is a girl who speaks for hundreds:

> I don't understand why I am writing to you except I need someone to talk to who will be able to advise me objectively. . .

I am in the middle of a very heated situation -- trying to help alleviate the economic squeeze in segregation situations, trying to raise money for college students arrested for sit-in demonstration participation, trying to arouse interest in a few citizens to form a committee to work for integration, support boycotts and sit-ins in our town, and in the meantime keep this as quiet as possible so as not to get my college in trouble. However, sooner or later, I realize I will be held responsible for my actions. . .

Somewhere in the midst of all of this, I am losing the faith I once had in my fellow man as more and more I uncover his cruel ways. The strange thing about it (and again it isn't so strange) is the church and its so-called Christians. . . .I find it very difficult to go to church while all around me people listen attentively to the sermon, sing songs of praise and bow their heads in prayer, only to leave the worship service never intending to make Christianity relevant to present-day situations. Nationwide, north and south, I see the women's circles, youth meetings, the men's discussion groups, but what do they ever accomplish? The church should be a church of action--to me it is dead, or behaves as if it were.

Because this is the way I view the church, more and more I find I am becoming 'only' a social reformer, pulling myself away from the church because I cannot honestly believe that this church that I see is the body of Christ. I realize that to be a social reformer (or to try to be) is not enough--though I still have faith in God. It is lonesome not being able to find fellowship in the church. Maybe I am just a critical college student who is ready to throw in the towel and place the blame on the church because I have encountered a few rough situations. I honestly hope not. Maybe I am an innocent little girl shocked by the big cruel world. . . .

I don't know what kind of answer I am looking for, nor what I expect you to do with this letter. Just put it away and let it be buried with the past. As the fires of my youth level out maybe I will learn to accept things as they are--why not, it seems to be the Christian thing to do.

"To summarize: What students seek is meaning in life. They see social change as too rapid for adjustment of present social processes and expecially institutions. They are aware of the overhanging cloud of a nuclear cataclysm. They are wistful, eager, naive, insistent. They are attracted to genuine religious insights from whatever direction--Zen, Buber, Robert McAfee Brown, Dietrich Bonhoeffer, the existentialists. Above all else they respect honesty and integrity, and despise its lack.

"What students find in the church is both insight and disillusionment. They are skeptical of the relevance of the Bible to actual problems of human life in modern society. The biblical world seems so far away that they cannot hear the biblical Word. But when they dig deeply here, they are thrilled. Bible study is the most exciting part of student conferences--but back home it takes too much work. They are skeptical of all institutions, and most especially of the church because institutionalism is so peculiarly inappropriate to the Christian spirit. To their mind, the church is simply a tool of conventionalism in society. They are indifferent to denominations and rebellious over Christian exclusiveness. They rather like ministers personally but do not understand or respect most sermons, and they discount what ministers have to say because they do not see enough evidence of consistent sincerity in their lives.

"The student response is to accept the church and work for it as a community club of nice people and not to expect too much from it. Sometimes, they say, one may find answers to real questions here, but one shouldn't count on it."

Following are some excerpts from letters received in the Office of Missionary Personnel from students in the process of application for missionary service which reflect many of the same disillusionments, doubts, and honest searching.

* * *

> I am doubtful about The Methodist Church. I have spent the few moments I have had free during the past few months thinking about my purpose here on this miserable planet, and now I don't like to think about it anymore. I feel more like an accident than anything else. As you can imagine, it's not a good feeling. I have found that a good day of work in the laboratory will make me feel much better than going to church does, or did. I just don't like to go to church anymore. I don't know why. It just seems "nothing."
>
> I guess it sounds quite ridiculous, but I feel a greater compassion for my fellow man than I did before. I feel a great urge to help rid the world of its abundant supply of misery. I'm doing my best which isn't much. I just wonder if God is doing his best, which should be a whole lot, but isn't.
>
> I would like very much to do missionary work anywhere in the world, but I don't think The Methodist Church would want me. I think that goodness is a product of man and that it is man's, not God's, responsibility to spread it.
>
> I do not mean to sound offensive, or even cynical. I feel no resentment for the church. The church is good. I only wish it were real.

* * *

> There are so many things I want to do with my life that I'm afraid I change my mind often. Yet missionary service always lingers in the back of my mind. . . .I want to teach awhile but the Peace Corps is also very attractive to me. I can't help but feel that I could be a more sincere servant for the government than the church. You see I feel sure that I could do more good for the world if I could convince the deprived peoples of the world that democracy is better than communism than that Christianity is better than Hinduism. I'm certain of the former, not so certain of the latter. Surely the God they worship is the same as mine.
>
> So all in all, I don't believe I am ready for missionary service.

* * *

I have not yet returned my application. This is not due to a lack of interest in Africa or the world, nor is it due to incompetentness. True that I have procrastinated but I have failed to be prompt because I have lost interest in the Church. . . .

I yet have a burning desire to travel, to live and work with persons from a foreign country. But, I cannot honestly do this through the church as I feel that I can be of greater assistance to man away from the church. Perhaps I am rationalizing to make things easier for myself and my friends, but I now feel that I, and others, would be better off to forget their concern with God and religion, for the most part, intangibles, and to emphasize the here and now of the only thing that man is ever sure of: that of feelings and thoughts, stemming from contact between self and others. By this I do not say that religion is false and fake but that it must wait. My work in psychology and specifically in group dynamics and therapy I think have played a real part in this decision.

* * *

Questions raised by these letters are questions we who would "recruit" must deal with honestly and with understanding. What is God doing in the world? What of the Church? How does it become real and vital in the lives of persons?

What about the Young Adult?

We have spent a good deal of time on the college student, though certainly have not given an exhaustive analysis. Let us look for a moment now at the young adult in our society today. With the increased emphasis on the need for the professionally qualified person in missions, our consideration of the young adult is particularly relevant.

A study was made recently by a staff team from the Board of Education which brought to light the following statistics and insights concerning older youth and young adults which I believe say a great deal to us who would "recruit" from this age group.

About 50% of the young adults in The Methodist Church finish college.

In five annual conferences that were studied, churches with less than 250 members had less than three people in this age group--that is, less than 1% of the total membership. Two out of three young adults are in the city.

This age group will increase 65% in the next decade. Seven states, on the west coast, will have a 100% increase.

The young adult years are a very crucial time. This period seems to represent in an exaggerated and concentrated way the whole predicament of man:

(1) The identity crisis -- to come into young manhood or womanhood and not know who one is, to not find meaningful work, to struggle with questions -- "Who am I?" "What is my role?" -- is the predicament of many. Only 15% complete college. How do those who do not finish college find meaningful expression?

(2) The problems of intimacy -- sexual, marital, psychological. This is a time of life when persons must build and maintain meaningful relationships if they are to move ahead with purpose and to full maturity. This is a particular problem for the single person.

(3) Ideology -- this is the time when people work out and establish their philosophy of life.

(4) A time of generativity -- a word used here to mean generate. There is a strong need and urge in this period to be able to produce, to create something worthwhile.

(5) These are decision making years -- there are many with unmet decisions. It is like being on a clover leaf and not knowing where the deadend is. Not all decisions are made during the college years. Many make decisions after college. Many change jobs later on.

(6) These are the transitional years -- from youth to adult maturity. There are more in mental hospitals, more illegitimate births, sex problems increase, and the bulk of divorces come during these years.

(7) A time of mobility -- in the 18-30 year age group, 40% move once a year.

The chief concerns of this age group are sex, love and marriage. The church has built a "halo" around marriage and family life, and the single young adult feels he is a failure.

The first five years of marriage are the crisis years. One in four girls are married at 18; 20 is the average age for girls to marry, 22 for men. The majority of first births come from women at age 21. The average woman completes her family at 26 with 2½ children (this is soon going to be 3). The non-working mother may be a minority soon. There are 40 million working mothers now.

During these years there is the struggle for self identity. The person is usually out from under the influence of his parents and is freer to make decisions. He finds he is not only away from home but away from old morals. A "false sense of freedom" leads him into immorality.

The church has a growing edge here to help these young adults to realize their ministry as laymen and to help them find their vocation and how it can be expressed in life. They need help in finding an authentic existence.

The Enlistment of Women for Missionary Service[1]

The enlistment of women for missionary service presents a special problem. Our culture stresses marriage as the only avenue to a secure and fulfilled life for a woman, and through this stress woman's anxiety to be married is heightened sharply. By and large, therefore, girls plan tentatively on some line of work; it is something they are interested in doing -- until they marry, or in case they don't marry. Because they are so anxious, they are not easily open to the challenge of a commitment more fundamental than marriage, nor are they able to respond to this challenge with freedom until they have worked through the problems which create this anxiety. It is a Christian conviction that God is not limited by whether persons are married or not and that He addresses Himself both to men and women calling them to service in His redemptive purpose.

Since in our culture for women students the question of marriage is so primary and so absorbing and is added to other pressures exerted upon students generally, it will be important in seeking to enlist women for missionary service to give them some special help. They need to be helped to face and deal with their anxieties in these areas rather than submerging them -- for instance, they need to face frankly the implications, if they go abroad, of placing themselves largely outside the "marriage market." They need help in answering the question, "Who am I?" both as Christians and as women. They need help in understanding the meaning of the Church's mission in the world and their place in it.

Continuing Need for Single Women Missionaries

There are a number of reasons why single women missionaries are especially needed now and will continue to be needed in the years ahead. In many of the countries of the younger churches where the breakdown of the old forms of social organization is occurring, not only is the status and role of women changing radically, but also for the first time there are single women in these societies and their numbers are growing. Only a single woman can help them in many of the issues they have to face.

In the lands of the younger churches where nationalism and suspicion of the West are strong, single women may become more acceptable than men, for they tend to be considered less politically involved than men, not so much as agents of the West as the men. It is also the feeling of many of the national leaders in these countries that it is more possible for single women missionaries to work under indigenous leadership then for men missionaries.

On the other hand, many mission boards tend to think of the single woman missionary as a greater risk than other missionaries. They tend to think of her as a "dead loss" if she marries and to think that she is not likely to remain in missionary work as long as other missionaries. These are both fallacies. The single woman who marries and leaves missionary work can and usually does give valuable help in missionary education and recruitment. If she marries and remains on the field, she carries on with her missionary work in other capacities. Furthermore, it has been found that many women missionaries may stay with the work for thirty years, while men with families often stay only from 10-12 years.

The real question we have to ask is this: Does the Church in the West have a Christian message to bring to the younger churches regarding attitudes toward the single woman? Does our sending of single women mean something?--not just for the woman herself, but does it have meaning, a message for the whole Church? The answer is yes.

We have to go back to thinking theologically about what is the end or purpose of life, about what are the things that make for real living, about the relationship between men and women, about what makes for happiness and fulfilled personhood. God has given us our whole persons to make use of for Him. How crippled we are if we develop only half the qualities given us. Our sexual relations are only part of the whole. There is the use of leisure, the development of the mind, of aesthetic qualities, the qualities required by our work. The parable of the talent is relevant here. So is training. People need to meet happy, fulfilled, unfrustrated, satisfying lives, whether single or married, and such lives will continue to be a primary witness or means of communication for the Christian faith.

Our Job of Enlistment and Preparation[2]

We can never limit our task to the filling of openings. We must constantly be putting our enlistment into the context and under the criticism of the total mission. In the local church we have the task of helping it to participate in the world mission, to be better informed and more realistic. We need a concept of recruitment that calls a young person not so much to a "decision for missions," as to a process of seeking to discover his place in the total life of the Church as a witnessing community.

Among students we have (1) a theological task: we have to present the fullness of the Gospel in a compelling way. This includes honesty about God's judgement and also the affirmation of the freedom in Christ that works both in society and in the individual; (2) we must bring students into an authentic experience of the church as it is of tremendous vital force, of the ecumenical church (that easy word and difficult reality), of the church as it penetrates every aspect of the life of the world, of the church as it provides authentic islands of renewal; (3) we have a descriptive task; students today seek the authentic and recognize a phony. We must show them the greatness and misery of the missionary movement, what are the real problems, the real impact and significance of what is being done.

Practical steps for the enlistment of students, given their religious and social situation today, should include (1) a solid study program, both Biblical and regarding present-day social and political problems; (2) they should be helped to make a witness now, where they are; we have been superficial and unimaginative all too often here; (3) the breakdown of the spoken and written word means that we must place students where they become directly involved in the life of the church, directly on the frontiers in all sorts of imaginative ways, such as summer projects, work camps, short term service, bringing overseas persons to the campus etc.; (4) preparation and recruitment must be continuously related. This means a heightened and on-going concern for real nurture. A process of continuing preparation should be started with the very first contact.

Significant kinds of preparation are being tried, in line with the whole discussion above of the nature of the mission, the cultural context of our American churches, and of the resulting special needs. A longer and more specialized period of training is being developed for missionary candidates in an ecumenical missionary orientation program. The Commission on World Mission of the National Student Christian Federation, our own Offices of Student Work of the Board of Missions, and the Office of Missionary Personnel are seeking both to educate Christian students at large regarding the intrinsic missionary character of the church, and to provide a real program of preparation and nurture during their college years for those students who are expecting to go into missionary service.

Basis of Appeal and Approaches in Enlistment[2]

The basis of our appeal to people to go into missionary service is, of course, God's purpose for all mankind made known in Jesus Christ and the need of the world. We call people to obedient witness to God's act of redemption in Christ at some spot selected because of need and strategy--some frontier. Although the missionary work of the church is entering a new phase (the "interchurch" phase), the mission of the church is far from being accomplished and missionaries are urgently needed today. Missionary service, furthermore, brings many professions into the direct service of Christ, deals with genuine human need, provides a chance for a person to participate as an instrument of reconciliation working within the growing fellowship of the church. The appeal cannot be based upon the success pattern, nor upon romantic, heroic interpretations.

As we seek to enlist for missionary service, there are certain approaches that need to be strengthened. The theological basis of our understanding of the church needs to be deepened. We need to educate regarding the missionary work that is acutally being done today. We need to picture specific vocational opportunities with realism. As far as possible we need to bring persons into actual missionary situations. We need to place the responsibility for personal involvement squarely upon the potential candidate. He himself must face the situation, enter into it in thought and imagination, learn all he can about it, be willing to be led, make it a focus for prayer. Only then can one expect some inner witness of the Spirit.

We would reaffirm that we believe God is the recruiter but he has given to us the responsibility of interpretation, nurture, and witness in our own lives to the reality of his presense and action in the world.

Conclusion

Here we have only begun to scratch the surface of the context of recruitment, but perhaps it will stimulate us to be more aware of the framework and situation in which our work of enlistment must be done today and discern more fully the urgency of the task given to us, that increased numbers of qualified persons offer and prepare themselves to be sent by the churches to the frontiers of our day that what God has done in Christ might be known to all men.

---

[1] Summary report from Consultation on the Single Woman Missionary with Miss Margaret Potts, head of St. Julian's Community, Sussex, England. The report was compiled by Hyla Stuntz Converse.

[2] Summary report of a Consultation on Enlistment sponsored by the Student Volunteer Movement, now known as the Commission on World Mission of the National Student Christian Federation. This report was compiled in large part by Newton Thurber.

Prepared by Jane C. Stentz, Office of Missionary Personnel, Methodist Board of Missions.

April, 1962

NSA - South. Proj.

REPORT ON FIFTH SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS SEMINAR

for Southern Advisory Committee Meeting

May 31, 1962, Atlanta, Ga.

I. Dates and Location -- July 30 - August 19, 1962
Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio

II. Seminar Personnel -- Consultant, Reverend Will Campbell
Director, Constance Curry

III. Seminar Mailing -- Beginning on March 1st, letters of announcement, application forms and summaries of last year's program were sent to:

A. Student body presidents and NSA coordinators at all NSA member schools in the Carolinas-Virginia Region, Great Southeast Region, Great Southwest Region, Kentucky-Tennessee Region, and South Central Region.
B. All Southern members of the National Executive Committee of NSA.
C. Members of the Southern Advisory Committee.
D. 1961 Seminar participants.
E. Approximately fifty individual student, faculty and organization contacts which had been made by the Project Director.
F. Advisors to Newman Clubs in Southern Colleges--approximately fifty.
G. Directors of Wesley Foundations in Southern Colleges--approximately 300.

(Total in circulation: approximately 500.)

IV. Applications --

A. Total received -- 50

B. Number of colleges represented -- 36 (Of these, 21 have never had students apply before.)

C. Numbers from different states --

Alabama	- 6	Louisiana	- 8	South Carolina	- 3
Mississippi	- 3	Texas	- 4	North Carolina	- 9
Georgia	- 8	Oklahoma	- 3	Tennessee	- 3
				Virginia	- 3

D. Number of men - 25; women - 25.

E. Number of Negro students - 21; white - 29.

F. Numbers from: segregated white institutions - 24 predominantly Negro - 18 desegregated - 8

V. Selections -- (See list.)

Members of the Selection Committee were Will Campbell, Seminar Consultant; Constance Curry, Seminar Director; Paul Rilling, Southern Regional Council; Leon Marion, World University Service; and Paul Potter, National Affairs Vice President of NSA. As suggested by the Advisory Committee, selections were made with attention to leadership potential in the human relations field and with consideration of:

A. Geographical location of college;
B. Balance of men and women participants;
C. Whether or not the college had participated before;
D. Personal interviews (26 of the applicants were interviewed or known personally by NSA staff or Advisory Committee members.)

VI. Curriculum and Schedule --

The Seminar program will again last for three weeks this year. Attendance at the 15th National Student Congress of NSA can be financed and will be encouraged but will not be obligatory.

The curriculum will follow the same general outline as in past Seminars. We also plan, as last year, to have only six or eight resource people who will remain for a longer period and cover more topics.

As part of the preparation for the Seminar this year, we are sending each participant a detailed guide for doing a survey of his community -- population, power structure, organizations working in human relations, number of voters, attitudes and actions of police force, courts, etc. During the early days of the Seminar each student will be asked to report his findings, thus giving the group some idea of the similarities and differences existing in twenty Southern communities, from Virginia to Texas.

LIST OF PARTICIPANTS AND STAFF
FIFTH SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS SEMINAR

1. OKLAHOMA CITY UNIVERSITY
John Arradondo
1909 N. W. 24th
Oklahoma City 6, Okla.

2. GEORGIA STATE COLLEGE
Joan Browning
240 Ponce de Leon Ave. NE
Atlanta 8, Ga.

3. XAVIER UNIVERSITY OF LOUISIANA
Sondra Sue Cloth
413 North Galvez St.
New Orleans, La.

4. ATLANTIC CHRISTIAN COLLEGE (N. C.)
Sandra Freedman
1122 West Nash St.
Wilson, North Carolina

5. LOYOLA UNIVERSITY OF THE SOUTH
Anthony Gagliano
1715 N. Claiborne Ave.
New Orleans 16, La.

6. UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA
Wesley Harris
2716 "N" Street
Richmond 23, Va.

7. BERRY COLLEGE (Ga.)
Clifford Hewitt
Box 11
Jennings, Florida

8. ST. ANDREW'S PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE (N,C.)
Faye Hooks
923 McKimmon Road
Fayetteville, N. C.

9. TALLADEGA COLLEGE (ALA.)
Sherman James
1510 Jasper Ave.
Hartsville, S. C.

10. CLEMSON COLLEGE (S. C.)
Hal Littleton
Barefoot Street
Hartsville, S. C.

11. UNIVERSITY OF MISSISSIPPI
Miles Lovelace
990 Marble Street
Memphis, Tennessee

12. BENEDICT COLLEGE (S. C.)
Delano Messer
1943 W. 12th Street
Jacksonville, Fla.

13. BIRMINGHAM SOUTHERN COLLEGE
Peggy Patterson
319 Baublits Drive
Warrington, Florida

14. UNIVERSITY OF OKLAHOMA
Barbara Ann Posey
2029 North East 14th
Oklahoma City, Okla.

15. SOUTHWESTERN AT MEMPHIS
Stephen Richardson
5915 Dillingham
Shreveport, La.

16. UNIVERSITY OF ALABAMA
Robert Roberts
1807 20th Avenue, E.
Tuscaloosa, Ala.

17. UNIVERSITY OF TEXAS
Ellen Shockley
The Stanley Hotel
Estes Park, Colorado

18. SOUTHERN UNIVERSITY (La.)
= Joe Louis Smith
1301 Gibbs Street
Mansfield, Louisiana

19. FLORENCE STATE COLLEGE (Ala.)
Barbara Sublett
Route 1, Box 242
Huntsville, Ala.

20. APPALACHIAN STATE TEACHERS COLLEGE (N. C.)
Charles Trueworthy
4608 Second Road North
Arlington 3, Virginia

Staff

Seminar Director
Constance Curry
Room 701, 41 Exchange Place SE
Atlanta 3, Georgia (JA 3-8322)

Seminar Consultant
Reverend Will Campbell
Box 1083
Nashville, Tennessee (CY 1-7850)

(The above addresses are correct for the summer.)

Ga. Gen.

National Council of the Young Men's Christian Associations

OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

OFFICERS
SOUTHERN AREA COUNCIL
DR. HUGH B. WILCOX
PRESIDENT
J. FRAN BABBITT
VICE-PRESIDENT
DR. R. T. NELSON
VICE-PRESIDENT
EDWARD M. VINSON
VICE-PRESIDENT
CHARLES R. YOUNTS
TREASURER
GEORGE J. CRESWELL, JR.
RECORDING SECRETARY
FRED W. LIESMANN
ASST. RECORDING SECRETARY

THE SOUTHERN AREA COUNCIL
(ALABAMA, FLORIDA, GEORGIA, KENTUCKY, LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI, ASHEVILLE, N. C., TENNESSEE AND VIRGINIA)
706 STANDARD BUILDING
ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA
JACKSON 1-0352

OFFICERS
SOUTHERN AREA BOARD
LEONARD F. HURLEY
CHAIRMAN
SHELBY R. ROGERS
VICE CHAIRMAN
CHARLES R. YOUNTS
TREASURER
HUGH G. HURST, SR.
SECRETARY

June 11, 1962

Mr. Paul Rilling
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street N. W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Paul:

I have been asked by the officers and members of the Area-Wide Young Adult Meeting, held in Atlanta on June 1-2, to express their appreciation to you for your significant contribution to the meeting. Your genuine and alert leadership in the matters of current and urgent concern was exceptional and they are anxious to have you know of their appreciation for it.

Personally, I am grateful to you for this service and I regret very much that my daughter's graduation from college in Chicago necessitated my leaving town early in the morning of June 2nd. I hope I will have the opportunity of talking about your experience with these young people at some time in the near future.

Sincerely,

Dunbar

Dunbar Reed
Associate Secretary

DR:mt

Ga Gen

W. L. CALLOWAY, PRESIDENT G. L. CHANDLER, SECRETARY A. T. WALDEN, TREASURER WARREN R. COCHRANE, EXECUTIVE SECRETARY

BUTLER STREET YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

22 BUTLER STREET, NORTHEAST TELEPHONE JACKSON 4-0246

ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA

July 10, 1962

Mr. Paul Riley
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta, Georgia

My dear Mr. Riley:

For sixteen years, the Butler Street YMCA has operated what is considered to be one of the most successful Forums in the South, commonly known as the Hungry Club. We are now in the midst of preparing our schedule for the 1962-63 Series. A group of distinguished people, who act as an Executive Committee for the Forum, has asked that you be the speaker for one session in the Series and I am now writing you, well in advance, to see whether you would be available at a date to be selected by you, with the understanding that if we run into a conflict, we will notify you immediately.

It is important, as you can well understand, to set the speakers up for this Forum in advance and it is for that reason, we are writing you now to see if you will be available and can participate.

The Forum meets each Wednesday beginning with the last Wednesday in September, which in '62, will be September 26th. It closes on Wednesday, May 22, 1963. On a separate sheet, I am enclosing the open dates for 1962-63 and if you can and would be willing to render this service, we would appreciate your checking your first, second and third choice of dates and returning it to us promptly.

The Theme for this year's Series is: "The Role of the South in the Achievement of a Democratic Society." The Forum, which is widely recognized throughout this area, assembles each Wednesday at 12:15 p.m. with the speaker beginning his discourse at 12:45 p.m., after lunch has been served. The speaker has approximately thirty minutes, leaving the last fifteen minutes for questions by the assembled audience. The Forum is broadcast over Radio Station W.E.R.D.

While we like a speaker to consider the general theme, nevertheless, a speaker is free to select any topic that he desires. We request only that two weeks prior to the date in which the speaker is to appear, that he would submit the topic and, in addition, biographical material to help us publicize that particular Forum.

Mr. Paul Riley

We sincerely hope that you will be available and that you will take the few minutes necessary to mark the enclosed sheet. We further request that you return it to us at your earliest convenience, no later than August 1st, as we then will make up a printed brochure covering the 1962-63 Series. May I, in advance, thank you and may I also express the hope that you will be available for at least one of the Sessions.

Sincerely yours,

Warren R. Cochrane

Warren R. Cochrane
General Secretary

WRC/mic

Enclosure

1962-63 HUNGRY CLUB DATES OPEN

_____Wednesday, October 3, 1962

_____Wednesday, October 10, 1962

_____Wednesday, October 17, 1962

_____Wednesday, October 24, 1962

_____Wednesday, October 31, 1962

_____Wednesday, November 7, 1962

_____Wednesday, November 14, 1962

_____Wednesday, November 21, 1962

_____Wednesday, November 28, 1962

_____Wednesday, December 5, 1962

_____Wednesday, December 19, 1962

_____Wednesday, January 9, 1963

_____Wednesday, January 16, 1963

_____Wednesday, January 23, 1963

_____Wednesday, January 30, 1963

_____Wednesday, February 6, 1963

_____Wednesday, February 13, 1963

_____Wednesday, February 20, 1963

_____Wednesday, February 27, 1963

_____Wednesday, March 6, 1963

_____Wednesday, March 13, 1962

_____Wednesday, March 20, 1963

_____Wednesday, March 27, 1963

_____Wednesday, April 10, 1963

_____Wednesday, April 17, 1963

_____Wednesday, May 8, 1963

_____Wednesday, May 22, 1963

Signed_____

_____

USNSA

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA 4, PA. • AREA CODE 215 • BAring 2-1106 • CABLE, NATSTUD

July 27, 1962

TO: Members of the Southern Advisory Committee

FROM: Constance Curry, Southern Project Director

I shall be leaving for Ohio today, and the Fifth Southern Student Human Relations Seminar will begin on Monday, July 30th. I have enclosed a list of the participants and hope that you can plan to be in touch with any of them that are in your area next year.

I have also enclosed a copy of the curriculum and the bibliography that we shall be using this year. I am very pleased with the program and hope that we will have a good Seminar.

I have visited Raleigh several times this summer, and our Voter Registration Project has been quite successful, especially since we got started so very late. In the first four weeks of the Project the students have registered over 1200 people.

I hope that all of you are having a good summer, and I shall be in touch with you next fall.

fifteenth NATIONAL STUDENT CONGRESS
OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY • AUGUST 19 TO AUGUST 30, 1962

ASSOCIATED WITH: American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U. S. Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • Young Adult Council • Nat'l Citizens Committee for UN Day • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

President
EDWARD R. GARVEY
University of Wisconsin
Assistant to the President
SHEILA C. McCANN
Emmanuel College

•

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
PAUL POTTER
Oberlin College
Program Vice President
MICHAEL A. NEFF
University of Illinois
Program Vice President
EUGENE H. ZAGAT
Harvard College
Administrative Assistant
ROGER M. LEED
Harvard College
Student Government Information Service Director
ROBERT P. ROBINSON
University of Illinois
Public Relations Director
SCOTT KEECH
University of California
Academic Freedom Project Director
NEAL W. JOHNSTON
University of Chicago

•

Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia
West Coast Office
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

•

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
DONALD K. EMMERSON
Princeton University
Administrative Assistant
HENRY J. BOITEL
Saint John's University
Assistant
ROBERT J. ARAGON
Univ. of Calif. at L. A.
Assistant
JOSEPH LOVE
Stanford University
Campus Administrator
MARY BETH SCHAUB
Bryn Mawr College
Director, Foreign Student Leadership Project
GEORGE HAZELRIGG
University of Oklahoma
Director of Special Exchanges
FRANK CRUMP
Columbia University

•

Educational Travel, Inc.
20 West 38th Street
New York 18, New York
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

•

NATIONAL ADVISORS
John Cogley
Staff Administrator
The Fund for the Republic
Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame
Russell Kirk
Editor
The University Bookman
Ralph McGill
Publisher
Atlanta Constitution
Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University
Milton Shapp
Chairman of the Board
Jerrold Electronics

•

Chairman
National Advisory Board
DR. EUGENE FONTINELL
Professor
Queens College
Chairman
Financial Advisory Board
RUTH HAGY BROD

CURRICULUM

FIFTH SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS SEMINAR

July 30 - August 19, 1962

Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio

MONDAY, JULY 30

Afternoon: Registration and assignment of rooms.

Supper and informal evening session for introduction of Seminar participants and personnel.

TUESDAY, JULY 31

9:30 a.m. (All morning sessions will begin at 9:30.)
Discussion of the Fifth Seminar--its purposes and what each participant expects; background of the Southern Project and previous Seminars.

1:30 p.m. (All afternoon sessions will begin at 1:30.)
Community Survey Reports--Participants will give reports on their communities, based on survey guide received earlier in the summer.

3:30 p.m. Reading Period (Each afternoon from 3:30 until supper, participants will be required to spend time reading assigned materials or a book which each will choose to read during the Seminar. At the beginning of each morning session, students will be called on to give brief reports or to discuss the assigned reading materials that they have read in preparation for the day's topic.)

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 1

Morning: TOPIC: "The Meaning of Human Relations"

CONSIDERATIONS: Intergroup relations as a specific aspect of human relations; the difference between race relations and human relations; intergroup relations as a science and a developing vocational field.

PERSONNEL: Dr. Morton J. Sobel, Director, National Department of Colleges and Universities, Anti-Defamation League

Afternoon: TOPIC: "Thrusts Toward Equality"

CONSIDERATIONS: Comments on various approaches toward improving intergroup relations, such as education, legislation, etc.

PERSONNEL: Dr. Sobel

THURSDAY, AUGUST 2

Morning: TOPIC: "The Changing South"

CONSIDERATIONS: The history of the South and various interpretations--changing patterns in race relations and patterns in different regions of the South.

PERSONNEL: Dr. Dewey Grantham, Department of History, Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tennessee.

Afternoon: Continuation of discussion with Dr. Grantham--Southern political history.

Evening: FILM: "Face of the South"

FRIDAY, AUGUST 3

Morning: Continuation of discussion with Dr. Grantham--economic developments and problems in Southern history.

Afternoon: TOPIC: "The Negro in America"

CONSIDERATIONS: History of the Negro in the U. S.; migrations to the North; the Negro community; the "Black Bourgeoisie"; misconceptions about the Negro; effects of segregation on the Negro community and life; the NAACP and the struggle for equal rights.

PERSONNEL: Miss Ella J. Baker, Special Human Relations Project, National Student YWCA.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 4

Morning: TOPIC: "The Negro Community in the South"

CONSIDERATIONS: Effects of changes in the South on the Negro community; Negro leadership and new forces that have emerged; the impact of the sit-in movement and related efforts in the South.

PERSONNEL: Miss Baker.

FREE TIME UNTIL MONDAY MORNING

MONDAY, AUGUST 6

Morning: TOPIC: "Race and Prejudice"

CONSIDERATIONS: The nature of race and racial prejudice; sociological effects of segregation.

PERSONNEL: Dr. George E. Simpson, Chairman, Department of Sociology and Anthropology, Oberlin College, Ohio

Afternoon: TOPIC: "Race and Prejudice"

CONSIDERATIONS: Psychological aspects of prejudice and discrimination; effects on individuals.

PERSONNEL: Dr. Simpson.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 7

Open sessions -- evaluation of Seminar thus far, continuation of community surveys, personal conferences, book reports.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 8

Morning: TOPIC: "The Federal Government and Civil Rights"

CONSIDERATIONS: The role of the executive, judicial and legislative branches in the civil rights area; the federal government and states' rights; the involvement of the present administration through the Committee on Equal Employment and the Civil Rights Commission; the lobbyists and pressure groups who attempt to form policies of the federal government.

PERSONNEL: Mr. John Feild, Executive Director, the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity, Washington, D. C.

Afternoon: Continuation of discussion with Mr. Feild.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 9

Morning: Open session

Afternoon: TOPIC: "The Bible and Race"

PERSONNEL: Dr. Everett Tilson, Methodist Theological School, Delaware, Ohio.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 10

Morning: TOPIC: "The Church and Race"

PERSONNEL: Dr. Tilson

Afternoon: Open session

FREE TIME UNTIL MONDAY MORNING

MONDAY, AUGUST 13

Morning and afternoon: Open sessions

Evening: FILM STRIP: "Rumor Clinic"

TUESDAY, AUGUST 14

Morning: TOPIC: "The Economy of the South"

CONSIDERATIONS: The rural economy of the South; differences in income and standard of living between South and rest of nation; between whites and Negroes; industrialization and urbanization and current changes in economy.

PERSONNEL: Dr. Vivian Henderson, Professor of Economics, Fisk University.

Afternoon: TOPIC: "Economics--Labor and the South"

CONSIDERATIONS: The history of the labor movement in the South; relation between labor and the civil rights movement; the current status of unions and Southern attitudes toward them.

PERSONNEL: Dr. Henderson

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 15

Morning: TOPIC: "Economics--Employment Practices in the South"

CONSIDERATIONS: Federal employment; employment in industry; professions and public services.

PERSONNEL: Dr. Henderson

Afternoon: FILM: "Burden of Truth"

THURSDAY, AUGUST 16

Morning: TOPIC: "Supreme Court Decisions and Legal Aspects of Desegregation"

CONSIDERATIONS: Legal history of segregation; the Constitution and bases for court decision of 1954; effects and implementation; retaliatory action by Southern state governments.

PERSONNEL: Mr. Arthur Levin, Staff Director, Potomac Institute, Washington, D. C.

Afternoon: TOPIC: "Public School Desegregation and Desegregation in Higher Education"

CONSIDERATIONS: Compliance with the Supreme Court decision in various sections of the South; study of some communities that have desegregated--Little Rock, New Orleans, Nashville, Atlanta, Dallas, etc. History of college desegregation--state institutions and private institutions; problem areas and power structures involved, i.e., state legislatures, boards of regents, etc.

PERSONNEL: Mr. Levin

FRIDAY, AUGUST 17

Morning: TOPIC: "Anti-Semitism in the South"

CONSIDERATIONS: History of anti-Semitism; relation between growth of anti-Semitism and progress in integration; recent incidents; role of Anti-Defamation League and other agencies.

PERSONNEL: Mr. Levin

Afternoon: TOPIC: "The White Resistance and Hate Groups"

CONSIDERATIONS: The John Birch Society; the Citizens' Councils and the Klan; the Black Muslims; the threat from the left and tactics of different groups. Also, description of some agencies working in human relations.

PERSONNEL: Mr. Levin

SATURDAY, AUGUST 18

Morning: Summary of Seminar and final evaluation; discussion of final evaluation papers of participants. (Also, book reports due on this date.)

SATURDAY AFTERNOON OR SUNDAY

Session with national officers of NSA for history and purposes of the Association. Also, a session for Congress orientation and choices of workshops and legislative committees for the Congress.

* * * *

ADDITIONAL NOTES ON SEMINAR CURRICULUM

1. This is a tentative program and subject to some changes. Parts of the curriculum may be refashioned to cover subjects suggested by the participants, and the program will be supplemented by films and other audio-visual aids.

2. The Seminar group will also meet with students in the NSA Foreign Student Leadership Project to discuss the international implications of race relations in the South.

3. Reading assignments will be made each day to provide background for the following day's discussion. (Each student will receive a packet of assigned reading materials.)

4. A library with as much resource material as possible will be available for the participants, and students will have access to University library facilities.

5. At the beginning of the Seminar each participant will be asked to choose a book from the bibliography prepared for the Seminar to be read during the Seminar. A written report on this book will be handed in on the closing day.

6. The Seminar will officially be over on August 19, but the majority of the participants will remain to attend the 15th National Student Congress, through August 30. During the Seminar, participants will choose the workshops and legislative committees that they will attend during the Congress, and plans will be made so that Seminar participants will go to the different NSA regional meetings to explain the purposes and program of the Human Relations Seminar.

* * *

LIST OF PARTICIPANTS AND STAFF
FIFTH SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS SEMINAR

1. OKLAHOMA CITY UNIVERSITY
John Arradondo
1909 N. W. 24th
Oklahoma City 6, Okla.

2. GEORGIA STATE COLLEGE
Joan Browning
240 Ponce de Leon Ave. NE
Atlanta 8, Ga.

3. XAVIER UNIVERSITY OF LOUISIANA
Sondra Sue Cloth
413 North Galvez St.
New Orleans, La.

4. ATLANTIC CHRISTIAN COLLEGE (N. C.)
Sandra Freedman
1122 West Nash St.
Wilson, North Carolina

5. LOYOLA UNIVERSITY OF THE SOUTH
Anthony Gagliano
1715 N. Claiborne Ave.
New Orleans 16, La.

6. UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA
Wesley Harris
2716 "N" Street
Richmond 23, Va.

7. BERRY COLLEGE (Ga.)
Clifford Hewitt
Box 11
Jennings, Florida

8. ST. ANDREW'S PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE (N,C.)
Faye Hooks
923 McKimmon Road
Fayetteville, N. C.

9. TALLADEGA COLLEGE (ALA.)
Sherman James
1510 Jasper Ave.
Hartsville, S. C.

10. CLEMSON COLLEGE (S. C.)
Hal Littleton
Barefoot Street
Hartsville, S. C.

11. UNIVERSITY OF MISSISSIPPI
Miles Lovelace
990 Marble Street
Memphis, Tennessee

12. BENEDICT COLLEGE (S. C.)
Delano Messer
1943 W. 12th Street
Jacksonville, Fla.

13. BIRMINGHAM SOUTHERN COLLEGE
Peggy Patterson
319 Baublits Drive
Warrington, Florida

14. UNIVERSITY OF OKLAHOMA
Barbara Ann Posey
2029 North East 14th
Oklahoma City, Okla.

15. SOUTHWESTERN AT MEMPHIS
Stephen Richardson
5915 Dillingham
Shreveport, La.

16. UNIVERSITY OF ALABAMA
Robert Roberts
1807 20th Avenue, E.
Tuscaloosa, Ala.

17. UNIVERSITY OF TEXAS
Ellen Shockley
The Stanley Hotel
Estes Park, Colorado

18. SOUTHERN UNIVERSITY (La.)
= Joe Louis Smith
1301 Gibbs Street
Mansfield, Louisiana

19. FLORENCE STATE COLLEGE (Ala.)
Barbara Sublett
Route 1, Box 242
Huntsville, Ala.

20. APPALACHIAN STATE TEACHERS COLLEGE (N. C.)
Charles Trueworthy
4608 Second Road North
Arlington 3, Virginia

Staff

Seminar Director
Constance Curry
Room 701, 41 Exchange Place SE
Atlanta 3, Georgia (JA 3-8322)

Seminar Consultant
Reverend Will Campbell
Box 1083
Nashville, Tennessee (CY 1-7850)

(The above addresses are correct for the summer.)

SELECTED BIBLIOGRAPHY

SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS SEMINAR

The following books are arranged under the major topics listed on the curriculum for the Southern Student Human Relations Seminar. Be sure to see the pages at the end of the bibliography for books that have been added during the past year.

I. THE CHANGING SOUTH

A. The Mind of the South. W. J. Cash. New York: Knopf, 1941. Over the years this book has been considered the most perceptive presentation of the development of the Southern mind and attitudes. (Available in paper back.)

B. The Southern Temper. William Peters. Garden City, N. Y.: Doubleday & Co., 1959. A report on the progress of desegregation in the Deep South, revealing that in spite of explosive setbacks, bombings and killings, there are churchwomen, businessmen, labor leaders and responsible politicians (the "silent South") working to bring about a harmonious end to segregation. Views of segregationists are also stated, and they too show that there is the conviction that they cannot win ultimately.

C. An Epitaph for Dixie. Harry S. Ashmore. New York: W. W. Norton & Co. "...tells the story of the white man's losing battle against civil rights and other 20th century phenomena."

D. The Southern Heritage. James McBride Dabbs. New York: Knopf, 1958. "...a discursive but richly anecdotal volume written as a commentary on a single subject--segregation."

E. Segregation, the Inner Conflict in the South. Robert Penn Warren. New York: Random House, 195 pages.

F. Neither Black Nor White. Wilma Dykeman and James Stokeley. New York: Rinehart & Co., 1957. "Two veteran writers, both native Southerners, measure the pulse of thirteen states below the Mason-Dixon line. Seen in its larger aspects, the challenge of this book is not from any single region, but for the nation as a whole.

G. Killers of the Dream. Lillian Smith. New York: W. W. Norton & Co., 1949. The South's tragic loss of creative social values killed by the schizophrenic etiquette of white supremacy, seen in the lives and through the eyes of the white population and particularly its women.

H. The Case for the South. W. D. Workman, Jr. New York: Devin-Adair, 1969. A justification for the segregationist's position, written by a Southern journalist who, in addition to his own local paper in South Carolina, also reports for the Southern School News.

I. The Tragic Era, Claude G. Bowers. Cambridge, Houghton Miflin Co., 1957. A vivid account of the South under carpet bag rule and of life in Washington during the dark era of intrigue and corruption that stretched from Lincoln's assassination to the close of the Grant administration.

J. The Seeds of Time, Henry Savage, Jr. New York, Henry Holt & Co., 1959. This inquiry was made with the hope of its playing a part in helping the South solve its problems by picturing "a more rational picture of the South and its peculiarities and the historical bases of those peculiarities.

K. The Southerner as American, Charles Grier Sellers (ed.), Chapel Hill, University of North Carolina Press, 1961. Nine Southerners contribute in an attempt to show some of the misinterpretations of Southern history and of differences between the South and the rest of the nation.

L. Revolt in the South, Dan Wakefield. Evergreen Books, New York: Grove Press, Inc., 1960. A report of the struggle shaking the foundations of the Old South--from the Supreme Court decision of 1954 to the sit-ins of 1960.

M. This is the South, Robert W. Howard (ed.) Chicago, Rand McNally & Co., 1959. A portrait in depth by thirty-one distinguished authors. It takes no sides, argues no issues--it is concerned with the whole South, the land and the people who form the background behind all the events, crises and misconceptions of the past 200 years.

N. The Burden of Southern History, C. Vann Woodward. Baton Rouge, Louisiana, Louisiana State University Press, 1960. $3.50. The author destroys some of the myths, traumatic inaccuracies, and romantic legends upon which have been based the portrayals of an earlier school of historians.

O. Go South to Sorrow, Carl T. Rowan. New York: Random House, 1957. Relates current factual incidents in America's bitter and passionate struggle in the "ageless task of bolstering man's claim to liberty, dignity and the good life."

P. The South Strikes Back, Hodding Carter, III. Garden City, New York: Doubleday & Co., 1959. Reveals the beginning of the Citizens' Councils, their increasing power in keeping alive the specter of miscengenation and through economic boycotts.

Q. The Strange Career of Jim Crow, C. Vann Woodward. New York: Oxford University Press, 1957.

II. THE NEGRO IN AMERICA -- THE NEGRO COMMUNITY IN THE SOUTH

A. Stride Toward Freedom, Martin Luther King, Jr. New York: Harper & Bros. This book while biographical also tells of the victory of passive resistance in the Montgomery bus boycott and is an excellent documentary and an important book on the current situation in the South.

B. The NAACP, Warren St. James. Exposition Press, 1958. A full history of the NAACP from its organization in 1909 to the present time. Describes the growth of the organization, its achievements and its plans for the future.

C. The Lonesome Road, Saunders Redding. New York: Doubleday, 1958. "A fascinating story of the Negro's part in the development of America. Covers the contributions of distinguished Negroes such as Frederick Douglass, Walter White and Joe Louis in a three-dimensional way,"

D. The Negro Potential, Eli Ginzberg. Columbia University Press. Traces the economic gains made by Negroes between 1940 and 1956 and the challenges yet to be faced before the country can fully utilize the latent potential of the Negro race. An analysis of the utilization of the Negro in the Armed Services serves as an example. The study further considers the deficiencies of the present Negro educational system.

E. Black Bourgeoisie, E. Franklin Frazier. Glencoe, Illinois, The Free Press, 1957. "The black bourgeoisie suffers (says Dr. Frazier) from 'nothingness' because when Negroes attain middle-class status, their lives generally lose both content and significance."

F. The Negro in America, Arnold Rose. An excellent condensation of An American Dilemma by Gunner Myrdal. (See III, B.)

G. The Black Muslims in America, Eric C. Lincoln, with Forward by Gordon W. Allport. Boston: Beacon Press, 1961. A study of the Black Muslims--reportedly more than 100,000 strong--who preach black autonomy, black supremacy, black union against the white world. To the author this is a gauge of racial tension in the United States today--a new form of nationalism, reflecting the American Negro's discontent with things as they are and a determination to change them.

H. The Negro Vanguard, Richard Bardolph. New York: Rinehart, 1959. A record of achievement of outstanding Negroes from 1770 to the present.

I. From Slavery to Freedom, John Hope Franklin. New York: Alfred Knopf, 1947. A dramatic history of the Negro from his medieval kingdoms in Africa to his life today in the West Indies, Latin America, Canada, and the United States. This is an attempt not only to write a history of the American Negro but to show his relation to the emergence of American civilization.

J. The Story of the Negro Retold, Carter G. Woodson and Charles H. Wesley. Washington, D. C.: Associated Publishers, 1538 Ninth St. NW. An enlarged and revised edition of the volume originally published in 1935 by Carter G. Woodson. Dr. Wesley has updated the materials to include colored people in the 2nd World War and the Korean conflict as well as the growth of anti-colonialism and nationism in Africa.

K. American Negroes' Dilemma, R. E. David, New York, Philosophy Library, 1954. To help foster better relations within the framework of the Negro group and to increase harmony in the area of white-Negro relations, the author has endeavored in seven brief chapters to mirror an objective picture of the Negro as he fits into the political, social, economic, fraternal and religious American society.

L. The Story of the American Negro, Ina Corrine Brown. New York: Friendship Press, 1950, rev. edition. This edition is designed to present the highlights, rather than the details of the Negro's life in the United States.

III. RACE AND PREJUDICE

A. The Nature of Prejudice, Gordon W. Allport. Cambridge: Addison-Wesley Press, 1954. A dynamic, constructive study of America's dilemma--the gap between her people's daily practices and their professed beliefs.

B. An American Dilemma: The Negro Problem and Modern Democracy, Gunner Myrdal. New York: Harper & Bros., 1944. A comprehensive study of the Negro question in America. Analyzes anthropological, cultural, social, economic, legal, political, educational and spiritual aspects of the Negro minority, set against the background of the "American Creed." The dilemma between American ideals and social concepts and the actual behavior of whites toward Negro and Negro toward white represent a "moral lag in the development of the nation."

C. Man's Most Dangerous Myth: The Fallacy of Race, Ashley Montagu. New York: Columbia University Press, 1944. An expose of the false ideas of race being propagated in the modern world, presenting the biological, psychological and cultural aspects of the race question.

D. The Fears Men Live By, Selma Hirsh. New York: Harper & Bros., 1955. "...valuable educational tool in exposing the origins of prejudice and outlining the opportunities for remedy."

E. The Negro Personality, Berram P. Karon. New York: Stringer Publishing Co., 44 E. 23rd Street. The study poses the question: What is it like in terms of mind and emotion to live as a member of a deprived racial group in an otherwise democratic society? The sanctions and functions of the American caste system and how they are imposed and made to work are examined.

F. Children of Bondage, Allison Davis and John Dollard. Washington, American Council on Education, 1940. A study of the personality development of Negro youth in the urban South.

IV. THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AND CIVIL RIGHTS

A. Federal Protection of Civil Rights: Quest for a Sword, Ithaca, New York: Cornell University Press, 1947. A survey of the past and present legislation on Civil Rights with a review of outstanding cases, concluding that better protection for the citizens is needed and that federal agencies require broader responsibilities for more effective action.

B. American Rights: The Constitution in Action, Walter Gelhorn. New York, Macmillan, 1960. Among the more involved civil liberties problems facing the United States explained in this volume in desegregating the schools.

C. The Quest for Equality, Robert Harris. New Orleans, Louisiana State University Press, 1960. The first complete synthesis of American political theory, constitutional history and constitutional law, with regard to equal protection. It presents in highly readable form the stormy, eventful, sometimes ludicrous history of the struggle for equality in this country.

V. SUPREME COURT DECISIONS AND LEGAL ASPECTS OF DESEGREGATION

A. Race Relations and American Law, Jack Greenberg. New York: Columbia University Press, 1959. Since the institution of the law is the only social force invested with the power to act, socially conscious individuals must know what the law is.

B. Desegregation and the Supreme Court, Benjamin Munn Ziegler. Boston: D. C. Heath & Co., 1958. Legal readings on desegregation.

C. Desegregation and the Law: The Meaning and Effect of the School Segregation Cases, Albert P. Blaustein and C. C. Ferguson, Jr. New Brunswick, N. J.: Rutgers University Press, 1957. "...of exceptional value to persons not familiar with law, nor clear as to the meaning and significance of the desegregation controversy."

D. Civil Rights and States Rights, June Purcell Guild. Richmond, Virginia: Virginia State Conference, NAACP, 404½ N. Second Street, 1960. A book on civil rights law written for the layman by an expert on constitutional law.

E. States Rights Vs. the Supreme Court, Thomas Wilcox. Forum Publishing Co., 1960. The author feels that the states are replublican and so discusses from that viewpoint the constitutional limitations on federal power.

VI. PUBLIC SCHOOL DESEGREGATION

A. The Negro and the Schools, Harry Ashmore. Chapel Hill: The University of North Carolina Press, 1954. This clear and authoritative text sets forth the history of educational segregation, the course of recent litigation in this area; the efforts of the South to equalize educational facilities and recent instances of desegregation both in universities of the South and in systems in other sections of the country.

B. Citizens Guide to Desegregation, Jack Greesberg and Hubert Hill. Boston: Beacon Press, 1955. An up-to-date manual pertaining to happenings resulting from recent court decisions and other matters of import in desegregation.

C. With All Deliberate Speed, Don Shoemarker. New York: Harper & Bros. The Southern Education Reporting Service summary of the first three years' developments following the 1954 Supreme Court decision.

D. Southern Schools: Progress and Problems. Southern Education Reporting Service. Distributed by the Tennessee Book Co.

E. Desegregation: Resistance and Readiness, Melvin M. Tumin. Princeton, N. J.: Princeton University Press, 1958. A study which purposed to show with evidence what attitudes toward desegregation exist and what other factors bear upon these attitudes and in what ways. This book should be one of the more valuable publications of recent years in the field of intergroup relations in the South.

F. Now is the Time, Lillian Smith. New York: The Viking Press, 1955. A book of meaningful and clear perspective, giving direction and understanding to current developments relating to the school desegregation decision. It is a challenge to American courage and vision.

G. Virginia's Massive Resistance, Benjamin Muse. Bloomington, Indiana: Indiana Univ. Press, 1961. The author discusses the role played by "the Byrd Machine"--by Governors Stanley and Almond and by leading private and business interests in the state's attempts to side-step Supreme Court rulings on school desegregation.

H. When a City Closes Its Schools, Ernest Q. Campbell. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina, Institute for Research in Social Science, 1960. A survey of the far-reaching effects of the September 1958 closing of the Norfolk, Virginia, public schools. $1.00

I. Little Rock, U.S.A., Wilson and Jane Cassels. Chandler Publishing Co., 1960. Readings arranged in two sections: (1) Newspaper accounts, court records and other documents on Little Rock desegregation; (2) Interpretative material, critical comment and opinion.

VII. DESEGREGATION IN HIGHER EDUCATION

A. Approaching Equality of Opportunity in Higher Education, Francis J. Brown. Washington: The American Council on Education, 1955. Volume 19 of Series I of the American Council on Education Studies. This is a report of a conference on outstanding educators under the sponsorship of the Committee on Equality of Opportunity in Higher Education, held November 15-16, 1954, in St. Louis, Mo.

B. Equal Protection of the Laws in Public Higher Education, 1960. U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D.C. Reports the inequalities of segregated education and discriminatory practices in schools receiving federal aid.

VIII. SOUTHERN POLITICS

A. Southern Politics, V. O. Key, Jr. New York: Knopf, 1949. Out of the South's race problem there has developed a political system which is a deadly serious business. This book, thoroughly documented, bases its observations on illuminating local details which give a comprehensive picture of the political South.

B. It Has Happened Here, Virgil T. Blossom. New York: Harper & Bros., 1959. The author cites as basic factors behind what happened in Little Rock: 1) Political ambitions of Governor Faubus, 2) the lack of constructive action by the Department of Justice, and 3) a few opportunists interested in increasing their powers.

C. Balance of Power: the Negro Vote, Henry Lee Moon. New York: Doubleday & Co., 1949. An analysis of the strategic distribution of the Negro vote--how the Negro population's use and non-use of the ballot has affected the country--and the many factors working for its control.

(see also IV.--C. and V.--E.)

IX. THE ECONOMICS OF SEGREGATION--INDUSTRIALIZATION, EMPLOYMENT AND LABOR

A. Last Man In: Racial Access to Union Power. Glencoe, Ill.: The Free Press, 1959. A study of the power structure of unions which seeks to explain race relations within labor unions through an analysis of the functional necessities of the union as an organization and the derived demands made upon the union leaders. ...a book about men acting often for ideals but in an environment of severely limited freedom.

B. National Planning Association. Selected Studies of Negro Employment in the South. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1955. Among the studies included here are "Selected Studies of Negro Employment in Three Southern Plants of International Harvester Company" by John Hope II, Fisk University; "Four Studies of Negro Employment in the Upper South" by Donal Dewy of Duke University; "Negro Employment in the Birmingham Metropolitan Area" by Langston T. Hawley of the University of Alabama; "Two Plants--Little Rock" by E. W. Eckard of the University of Arkansas; "Three Companies--New Orleans Area" by Howard Wesson, Jr. of the University of Chattanooga.

C. Negro Labor: A National Problem, Robert C. Weaver. New York; Harcourt, Brace & Co., 1946. A consideration of the Negro during reconversion with an appraisal of his change of status during the war.

D. Equality of Opportunity, John Hope, II. Washington: Public Affairs Press, 1956. A union approach of fair employment.

E. "The Problem of Unemployment as It Relates to Negroes", John Hope, II. Section 8 (pp. 173-225) in Studies in Unemployment, prepared for the Special Committee on Unemployment Problems, United States Senate, pursuant to S. Res. 196. 86th Congress, 1960. Washington, D. C.; U. S. Government Printing Office. $1.50.

F. Southern Tradition and Regional Progress, William H. Nicholls. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1960. $5. The author goads the South toward the better life as an integral part of the nation, seeing the problems of race and agrarian life as the core of the region's problem. "...the Southern economy is basically in good health, but it has certain gangrenous appendages which must be amputated if the central body is to thrive and prosper."

(see also II.--D.)

X. THE MORAL AND ETHICAL ASPECTS OF RACE RELATIONS

A. Catholic Organizations Promoting Negro-White Relations in the United States, Thomas Hart. Washington: Catholic Univ. of America Press, 1947. Five types of race relations agencies are related to five classes of Catholics: middle-class Negroes and whites, a "spiritual elite", young clerics and educated Southerners. Each class is analyzed as to ideology, structure, problems and techniques.

B. The Racial Problem in Christian Perspective, Kyle Haselden. New York: Harper & Bros., 1959. An answer to three questions: What has the American Church done about the racial problem? What is the Christian understanding of racial prejudice? What is the religious basis for creative action in today's racial crisis?

C. Christians in the Racial Crisis, Thomas F. Pettigrew and Ernest Q. Campbell. Washington, D. C.: Public Affairs Press, 1959. This study of the Little Rock ministry is a scientific analysis of factors bearing on the role of ministers and churches in questions of segregation, desegregation and integration.

D. Segregation and the Bible, Everett Tilson. Nashville: Abbington Press, 1958. A searching analysis of the scriptural evidence.

E. The Kingdom Beyond Caste, Liston Pope. New York: Friendship Press, 1957. Dr. Pope sets the problem of race relations in the United States in perspective, examines the causes of racial stress and looks at the scientific facts about racist superstitions. He is concerned particularly with the involvement of the church, being a Christian writer who sees the problem within the framework of his faith.

F. Segregation and Desegregation: A Christian Approach, T. B. Matson. New York: Friendship Press. Discussion of basic teachings of Christianity with implications for good will and friendship across racial lines.

G. Methodism's Challenge in Race Relations: A Study of Strata. Washington, D. C.: Public Affairs Press, 1960. Paper $2. An investigation of one of the Church's most critical problems in the light of the insights of the social sciences and the norms of Christian social ethics.

H. Dark Glory, Harry V. Richardson. New York: Friendship Press, 1947. A study dealing with the history and setting of the Negro church in the South.

XI. ANTI-SEMITISM IN THE SOUTH

A. Barriers: Patterns of Discrimination Against Jews, N. E. Belth (ed.) in association with Harold Braverman and Morton Pruner. New York: Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith. A survey of five major areas of discrimination against Jews, through selected articles first prepared and written by Anti-Defamation League members. There is an analysis of "Why People Scapegoat," by Gordon Allport.

B. A Measure of Freedom, Arnold Forster. New York: Doubleday & Co., 1950. A report by the Anti-Defamation League on several areas of anti-semitism and its patrons.

XII. HUMAN RELATIONS ON CAMPUS

A. College Programs in Intergroup Relations, Lloyd A. Cook. Washington: American Council on Education, 1950. The first of two volumes reporting on a cooperative project conducted by twenty-four colleges in training teachers in the techniques for improving intergroup relations amont their pupils. Each college committee gives an account of its actual studies, programs and activities during the four-year project.

B. Fraternities without Brotherhood, Alfred McClung. Boston: The Beacon Press, 1955. "This is a report to college students, parents and educators concerning the chief defect in a cherished campus institution, the social fraternity..."

C, The College Student and the Changing South, Reginald H. Green. A consideration of the problems of race relations confronting the Southern campus and its student body.--Report of the Southwide Student Human Relations Conference of November, 1958. (Available through, USNSA, 3457 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia 4, Pa.

D. Roads to Agreement, Stuart Chase. Successful Methods in the Science of Human Relations. New York: Harper & Bros., 1951. Instance of effective efforts to achieve satisfactory human relations in a wide variety of fields are given, with many simple and clear generalizations deduced from them.

XIII. HUMAN RELATIONS IN THE COMMUNITY

A. Community Organization: Action and Inaction, Floyd Hunter, Ruth Connor Schaffer and Cecil G. Sheps. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press. A significant and important contribution to the study of community organization and action.

B. Blackways of Kent, Hylan Lewis. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press. "One of the important source books from the perspective of race relations, since it tells so well the substance and meaning of a subculture in a Southern town." --American Sociological Review.

C. An American City in Transition, Herman H. Long, John Hope, II and Galen R. Weaver. Baltimore Commission on Human Relations, 1955. Baltimore Community Self-survey of Intergroup Relations. Maryland Commission of Interracial Problems and Relations.

D. Toward Better Race Relations, Dorothy Sabiston and Margaret Hiller. New York: Woman's Press, 1948. The story of 17 local YWCA's in their community effort to improve race relations.

E. Neighbors in Action, Rachel Davis DuBois. New York: Harper & Bros., 1950. A manual for school and community leaders to develop projects for "cultivating an understanding and appreciation among people of varying cultural backgrounds."

XIV. BOOKS ON AFRICA

A. "Africa Seen by American Negroes," a special issue of Presence Africaine, containing articles by leading American Negro scholars representing all points of view.

B. Cry The Beloved Country, Alan Paton. New York: Scribner's 1951. A novel of life in South Africa depicting the tragic plight of black-skinned people in a white man's world.

C. Tales from a Troubled Land, Alan Paton, New York: Scribner's, 1961. Ten stories which provide glimpses into the dark world of South Afirca.

D. Black Power, Richard Wright. New York: Harper & Bros., 1954. A first-hand report--vivid, brutal and frank, but written with a lively humor and understanding--of revolution that is shaking Africa, specifically in the Gold Coast area.

E. Africa, Continent of the Future, George E. Haynes. New York: Associated Press, 1951. An up-to-date guide to economic, political, cultural, educational, social and religious conditions throughout Negro Africa.

F. The Color Curtain, A report of the Bandung Conference, Richard Wright. Cleveland: World Publishing Company.

G. The Reluctant African, Louis Lomax. New York: Harpers, 1960.

XV. MISCELLANEOUS

A. The Magnolia Jungle, P. D. East. New York: Simon & Schuster, 1960. The author is the famous editor, publisher, and owner of the Petal Paper, a tiny weekly newspaper, printed in Pascagoula, Miss. On one level this is the story of the Petal Paper, its inevitable transition from an editorial policy of "love mother and hate sin," to a liberal voice for "equality under the law for all men". The transition was inevitable because of the Supreme Court decision of 1954 and the author's lifelong search for truth and meaning in life. While there is much external action, the deeper battle is going on within the author. It is the terror and beauty of this inner battle that gives the book a truly universal appeal. The writing is easy to read and abounds with Mr. East's own brand of satire and gentle humor.

B. Breakthrough on the Color Front, Lee Nichols. New York: Random House, 1954. The complete behind-the-scenes story of the integration of the Negro into the Armed Forces. This account reveals the impact of such a program upon military efficiency, foreign relations and social change at home.

C. The Wall Between, Ann Braden. New York: Monthly Review Press, 1958. An insightful personal account of racial housing conflict and victimization in a Louisville white suburb, occasioned by the moving of a Negro family, with thoughtful observation on Southern race relations in general.

D. State Laws on Race and Color, Pauli Murray. Cincinnati: Woman's Division of Christian Service, Methodist Church, 1951. A detailed summary of all laws by states, affecting minorities, including aliens.

E. The American Mind, Henry Steele Commager. New Haven: Yale University Press, 1950. This is a new major work by the noted historian, and may be described as in interpretation of American thought and character since the 1880's.

F. The Other Side of Jordan, Harry S. Ashmore. New York: Norton, 1960. $3.50. Looks at the situation of Negroes who have settled in urban areas outside the South and the problems they face in housing, employment, and the extra-legal practices which maintain segregation.

G. Race and Reason: A Yankee View, Carl Putnam. Washington, D. C., Public Affairs Press, 1961. A defense of segregation; it has been said that this book may well become the "bible of the segregationists".

* * * * * * * *

ADDITIONS TO BIBLIOGRAPHY - 1961-62

I. THE CHANGING SOUTH

Seeds of Southern Change -- The Life of Will Alexander. Wilma Dykeman and James Stokely. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1962. A biography of the "greatest white champion of the Negro cause in the South from 1915 to 1954". It is the story of one man's talent for human relations, and it exposes in an intimate and personal way the qualities of an important social architect of our time.

A History of South Carolina. Ernest McPherson Lander, Jr. Chapel Hill: The University of North Carolina Press. The manifold developments in South Carolina during the past hundred years are gathered into specific problem areas such as education and race relations.

The Emerging South. Thomas D. Clark. Oxford University Press, 1961. This book examines the South in its great moment of change--in every area of economic and social life.

II. THE NEGRO IN AMERICA -- THE NEGRO COMMUNITY IN THE SOUTH

Freedom Road. Howard Fast. Second paperback reprint, New York: Pocket Books, Inc., 1962. A novel about the Reconstruction period that followed the Civil War and about the attempts to build a new community of brotherhood.

Nobody Knows My Name. James Baldwin. New York: Dial Press, 1962. "The question of color" appears frequently in this collection of essays and profiles written over the last six years. The writer records his return from self-exile in Europe and his first trip South where he observed the problems of school desegregation.

The Negro Revolt. Louis Lomax. New York: Harper & Bros., 1962. A report by a Negro on his people's mood of militancy and a searching examination of the reasons for it. In showing that it is a revolt against both the white world and against entrenched leadership of the old-guard Negro organizations, he uses facts, personalities and personal experience to examine Negro leadership in organizations.

Negro Leadership in a Southern City. M. Elaine Burgess. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1962. Through personal interviews, the author establishes the premise that despite a united front, the Negro community is not a homogenous unit. Like its white counterpart it has built-in differences based on religious preferences, length of residence, ideological convictions, racial militancy and many others. Much of the book concerns itself with desegregation and asserts that the Negro leaders are determined by their attitudes and actions on the race issue.

100 Years of Negro Freedom. Arna Bontemps. New York: Dodd Mead & Co., 1961. A perceptive history of the struggle of the Negro through the first 100 years to realize the promise of the Emancipation Proclamation, in terms of the men who led their cause; educators, editors, scientists, politicians, and artists alike.

Black Like Me. John Howard Griffin. Riverside Press, Cambridge, 1961. John Howard Griffin undertook in the fall of 1959 a personal assignment to find out the hard way, possibly the only way a white man can, what it is like to be a Negro in the South. He decided to darken his skin and travel through several Southern states. This book is the record, offered in all its crudity and rawness, of this dangerous and often terrifying mission.

Behind the Ebony Mask. Geraldine Moore. Southern University Press, 1961. A detailed discussion of Negro attitudes about all aspects of life in Birmingham, Alabama.

The Angry Black South. Glenford E. Mitchell and William H. Peace, III. New York: Corinth Books, 1962. A collection of essays by six Negro writers who attempt to explain the new mood and tactics of Southern Negroes.

The New Negro. Edited by Matthew H. Ahmann. Notre Dame, Indiana: Fides Publishers. Three major papers presented at the 1961 National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice by Dr. Stephen J. Wright, Professor Kenneth C. Clark and Miss Diane Nash are included along with two additional papers by Dr. Thomas P. Melady and William J. Kenealy, S.J.

Negro Education in America. Edited by Clift, Anderson, Hullfish. 1962. Fourteen Negro and white educators analyze the significance of the kind of education the Negro is receiving and what the outlook seems to be for the future.

IV. THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AND CIVIL RIGHTS

Congress and the Court. Walter F. Murphy. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1962. A first-rate assessment of the delicate balance of power between Congress and the Supreme Court as it affects the American political process.

A Century of Civil Rights. Milton R. Konvitz. New York: Columbia University Press, 1961. This book presents a historical and philosophical analysis of civil rights developments during the past century. It details federal and state legislative action to insure equality of treatment in public accommodations, employment, education and housing.

V. SUPREME COURT DECISIONS AND LEGAL ASPECTS OF DESEGREGATION

Where the States Stand on Civil Rights. Richard Barnett and Joseph Garai. New York: Bold Face Books. The civil rights picture on voting, education, employment, housing, public accommodations and interracial marriage is present compactly for each of the fifty states and the District of Columbia.

VI. PUBLIC SCHOOL DESEGREGATION

Fifty-eight Lonely Men. J. W. Peltason. New York: Harcourt, Brace & World, Inc. This account of the public school segregation - desegregation story studies the role of the federal judges in the circuit and district courts of the South.

VII. DESEGREGATION IN HIGHER EDUCATION

The Story of Spelman College. United Negro College Fund, 22 East 54th Street, New York, New York, 1961. The history of the first college for Negro women. Many of the factors described are typical of all private colleges for Negroes, and the author has provided the reader with a broad outline of the progress of Negro education in the United States.

X. THE MORAL AND ETHICAL ASPECTS OF RACE RELATIONS

A Catholic Case Against Segregation. Edited by Joseph E. O'Neill, S. J. New York: The Macmillan Co. Original essays by Catholic writers cover various aspects of the segregation issue.

Christian Ethics and the Sit-in. Paul Ramsey. New York: Association Press. The Author explains his understanding of Christian social ethics as they apply to sit-ins and related issues.

XI. ANTI-SEMITISM IN THE SOUTH

Some of my Best Friends... Benjamin R. Epstein and Arnold Forster. New York: Farrar, Straus, Cudahy, 1962. A detailed study of discrimination against Jews in the United States. A variety of fascinating case studies are set against a broad sociological context explaining the roots of discrimination -- "prejudice in action" -- in this country and offering insights on how it might be excised from the American scene.

XV. MISCELLANANEOUS

The Ku Klux Klan in American Politics. Arnold S. Rice. Washington, D. C.: Public Affairs Press, 1962. A detailed history of the Ku Klux Klan in the United States.

XVI. DIRECT ACTION MOVEMENTS

Freedom Ride. James Peck. New York: Simon & Schuster, 1962. This story tells for the first time in book form, of the non-violent action to end segregation that is penetrating the South today. Before its on-the-scene report of the 1961 Freedom Rides, it tells of the author's experience with Jim Crow Bibles used in Southern courts, of segregated benches, shoe-shine stands, buses, churches, prisons, restaurants, rest rooms and waiting rooms.

Diary of a Sit-in. Merrill Proudfoot. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1962. As a white faculty member at Knoxville (Tenn.) College, Dr. Proudfoot participated with the Negro students demonstrating to obtain equal service in downtown stores in 1960. His journal records the events that resulted in desegregation of the lunch counters.

Race and Social Revolution. Byram Campbell. New York: The Truth Seeker Company, 1958. A lively though profound study of the biological, sociological and moral issues of the most controversial issue of our age.

* * *

Ga Gen

AMERICAN TEAMWORK WORKS

National Urban League, Inc.

14 EAST FORTY-EIGHTH STREET, NEW YORK 17, N. Y. • PLAZA 1-0300

Send Reply To:
Southern Regional Office
250 Auburn Ave., N.E., Room 511
Atlanta 3, Georgia

President
HENRY STEEGER

Senior Vice-President
MALCOLM ANDRESEN

Vice-Presidents
JOHN H. JOHNSON
THOMAS G. YOUNG

Secretary
MOLLIE MOON

Treasurer
BURNS W. ROPER

Executive Director
WHITNEY M. YOUNG, JR.

Board of Trustees
Malcolm Andresen
Regina M. Andrews
Joseph M. Baird
William H. Baldwin
George O. Butler
N. O. Calloway
Lisle C. Carter, Jr.
Mrs. Harold B. Case
Ray E. Clark
Robert W. Dowling
Sylvan Gotshal
Dorothy Hirshon
Jerome H. Holland
Sophia Y. Jacobs
John H. Johnson
R. Frank Jones
Mrs. Charles Keller, Jr.
Theodore W. Kheel
Lindsley F. Kimball
Lawrence W. Lowman
Brian G. Manion
Louis E. Martin
Ivan C. McLeod
Mollie Moon
Cecil E. Newman
Hilyard R. Robinson
Winthrop Rockefeller
John A. Roosevelt
Burns W. Roper
Ramon S. Scruggs
Martin E. Segal
Asa T. Spaulding
Maida Springer
Edward Stanley
Henry Steeger
Vernon B. Stouffer
Harry Van Arsdale, Jr.
William O. Walker
J. Waties Waring
Boyd L. Wilson
Frank H. Wyman
Thomas G. Young
Charles S. Zimmerman

August
Twenty-Fourth
1962

Mr. Paul Rilling
Director of Field Activities
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Paul:

Regarding your memorandum requesting information for a person to work for the Community Services Foundation in Largo, Florida, I would to make the following suggestion:

Rev. Charles Anderson Davis
Box 1420
Bluefield, West Virginia

If you care to write him, you might suggest that I referred you to him. I will write him if you think it is more desirable.

Cordially,

Clarence

Clarence D. Coleman, Director
Southern Regional Office

CDC/as

APPLICATION FORM

Fifth Southern Student Human Relations Seminar
July 30 - August 30, 1962
Ohio State University

General Instructions

A. Please fill in this form as completely as possible. It will be used as a basis for selection of participants in the Fifth Southern Student Human Relations Seminar.

B. When space is insufficient, continue answers on the reverse side of the page, numbering them to match correct questions.

C. Please print clearly or type.

D. All applications and supporting materials must be received by April 1, 1962. Notice of final selections will be mailed by May 1.

1. name Mr. / Mrs. / Miss _____ (last) _____ (first) _____ (middle)

2. school _____

3. class & expected date of graduation _____

4. current school address _____

school phone number _____

dates you can be reached here _____

5. permanent home address _____

home phone number _____

dates you can be reached here _____

6. summer address _____

phone number _____

dates you can be reached here _____

7. parent or guardian _____

address _____

phone number _____

8. your field of academic concentration _____

9. List important extra-curricular activities and offices (on campus and in community).

10. List positions or responsibilities you will have on campus during the school year 1962-63.

11. Describe any campus, community, or organizational experience in human relations, interracial programs, or formal discussions.

12. State whether you have ever attended a USNSA national or regional congress or conference. Give the location and date.

13. Please attach a statement in 500 words or less indicating your reasons for being interested in this Seminar.

14. Please have a transcript of your college grades sent to the address given in number 16.

15. An effort will be made to have each applicant personally interviewed by NSA staff personnel or by Southern Advisory Committee members.

16. When you have completed this form, please return it immediately to:

Southern Office, USNSA
41 Exchange Place S.E., Room 701
Atlanta 3, Georgia

17. (See attached page.)

Signature _____

Date of birth _____

Place of birth _____

DEADLINE FOR APPLICATIONS: April 1, 1962

SELECTION DATE: by May 1, 1962

17. Please list the name, address and position of one faculty member and one student leader who are in a position to evaluate your personal and academic qualifications. Note: Recommendation forms will be sent directly to them.

(If you are unable to return this entire application immediately, please send this section to us now.)

A. name _____

position _____

address _____

B. name _____

position _____

address _____

your name _____

college _____

address _____

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA 4, PA. • BAring 2-1106 • CABLE, NATSTUD - PHILADELPHIA, PA.

February 26, 1962

Mr. Paul Rilling
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street
Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Paul:

We are happy to announce the Fifth Southern Student Human Relations Seminar, to be held July 30 - August 19, 1962, on the campus of Ohio State University.

The Seminar was instituted in 1958 at the suggestion of Southern student leaders at the 8th, 9th and 10th National Student Congresses. The purpose of the Seminar is to provide for Southern student leaders an intensive study of human relations in the South for constructive application to their college or university and community lives. It is open to all students on Southern campuses, whether their schools are members of USNSA or not.

The Seminar is part of the Association's over-all national human relations program, which includes regional conferences and National Congress workshops on intergroup and interpersonal relations as they affect students on campus and in their communities. It is specifically under the auspices of the Southern Student Human Relations Project of USNSA, which was established in Atlanta, Georgia, in December, 1959. Both the Project and the Seminar are financed by a grant from the Marshall Field Foundation.

Twenty participants will be selected for the Seminar from segregated white, desegregated, and predominantly Negro campuses. Travel, room and board will be covered for each participant from the grant. Funds will also be available for participants who wish to remain from August 19th through August 30th to attend the Fifteenth National Student Congress of NSA.

The enclosed summary lists last year's Seminar participants and advisors and gives a brief review of the program. (For fuller reports on the past four Seminars write USNSA.)

ASSOCIATED WITH: American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U. S. Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • Young Adult Council • Nat'l Citizens Committee for UN Day • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

President
EDWARD R. GARVEY
University of Wisconsin
Assistant to the President
ROBERT P. ROBINSON
University of Illinois

•

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
PAUL POTTER
Oberlin College
Program Vice President
MICHAEL A. NEFF
University of Illinois
Program Vice President
EUGENE H. ZAGAT
Harvard College
Administrative Assistant
ROGER M. LEED
Harvard College
Student Government Information Service Director
SHEILA McCANN
Emmanuel College
Public Relations Director
J. SCOTT KEECH
Academic Freedom Project Director
NEAL W. JOHNSTON

Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

West Coast Office
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

•

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
DONALD K. EMMERSON
Princeton University
Administrative Assistant
HENRY J. BOITEL
Saint John's University
Assistant
JOSEPH LOVE
Stanford University
Campus Administrator
MARY BETH SCHAUB
Bryn Mawr College
Director, Foreign Student Leadership Project
GEORGE HAZELRIGG
University of Oklahoma
Director of Special Exchanges
FRANK CRUMP
Columbia University

•

Educational Travel, Inc.
20 West 38th Street
New York 18, New York
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

•

NATIONAL ADVISORS

John Cogley
Staff Administrator
The Fund for the Republic

Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame

Russell Kirk
Editor
The University Bookman

Ralph McGill
Publisher
Atlanta Constitution

Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University

Milton Shapp
President
Jerrold Electronics

•

Chairman
National Advisory Board
DR. EUGENE FONTINELL
Professor
Queens College
Chairman
Financial Advisory Board
RUTH HAGY BROD

The 1962 Seminar staff includes:

Director: Constance Curry, present Director of the Southern Student Human Relations Project; graduate of Agnes Scott College; Field Representative for the Collegiate Council for the United Nations, 1957-1959.

Consultant: Will D. Campbell, Associate Executive Director, Department of Racial and Cultural Relations, National Council of Churches; formerly Director of Religious Life, University of Mississippi.

Please see that the enclosed application reaches an interested student on your campus, in your organization, or in your area. Sophomores and juniors with demonstrated leadership potential in the field of human relations will receive the most favorable attention from the Selection Committee, which will include the Seminar staff, the NSA National Affairs Vice-President, and several members of the Southern Advisory Committee.

Applications must be received at the Southern Project Office by April 1st in order to be considered by the Committee. Announcements of final selections will reach all applicants by May 1st. If you know of additional potential participants on your campus, do not hesitate to write to the Southern Project Office for more application forms.

We shall look forward to hearing from you, your campus, or your organization.

Sincerely,

Paul Potter

Paul Potter
National Affairs Vice-President, USNSA

Constance Curry

Constance Curry
Southern Project Director

Southern Office, USNSA
41 Exchange Place S.E., Room 701
Atlanta 3, Georgia

/cl

Enclosures

Summary
of the
FOURTH SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS SEMINAR
August 1 - August 30, 1961
University of Wisconsin

Staff

Director - Constance Curry, Southern Student Human Relations Project

Consultant - Reverend Will D. Campbell, Associate Executive Director, Department of Racial and Cultural Relations, National Council of Churches

Advisory Committee

Dr. Warren Ashby	Professor of Ethics, W.C.U.N.C.
Miss Ella Baker	National Student YWCA
Rev. Will Campbell	National Council of Churches
Rev. Thomas Clancy, S.J.	Political Science Department, Loyola Univ.
James McBride Dabbs	Southern Regional Council
Timothy Jenkins	U. S. National Student Association
Rev. Charles Jones	Community Church, Chapel Hill, N. C.
Arthur Levin	Anti-Defamation League
Dr. Benjamin Mays	President, Morehouse College
Dr. C. H. Parrish	Professor of Sociology, Univ. of Louisville
Dick Ramsay	American Friends Service Committee
Paul Rilling	Southern Regional Council
Dick Shapiro	Anti-Defamation League

Participants

D'Army Bailey	Southern University, Baton Rouge, La.
Dan Bowen	Southwestern University, Memphis, Tenn.
Timothy Carr	University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn.
Judy Carter	University of Alabama, University, Ala.
Jane Clay	University of Louisville, Louisville, Ky.
Doris Gibson	Loyola University, New Orleans, La.
Sally Hobbs	Duke University, Durham, N. C.
Luis Manueco-Jenkins	Austin College, Sherman, Texas
John Mayshack	Bishop College, Dallas, Texas
Bob Miller	University of Georgia, Athens, Ga.
Randy Mishoe	Clemson College, Clemson, S. C.
Irvin Penfield	University of Alabama, University, Ala.
Yoniece Perry	Berry College, Mt. Berry, Ga.
Faye Powell	Mercer University, Macon, Ga.
Johnnie Price	Spelman College, Atlanta, Ga.
Stuart Strenger	Georgia State College, Atlanta, Ga.
Walter Williams	Jackson State College, Jackson, Miss.
Bob Zellner	Huntingdon College, Montgomery, Ala.

Program Topics and Resource Personnel

"The Meaning of Human Relations".....Dr. Hans Spiegel, Director, Community Tensions Center, Springfield College

"The Changing South".....Dr. James Silver, Department of History, University of Mississippi

"The Negro in America"
"The Negro Community in the South"
"Race and Prejudice".....Dr. Reba Mosby, Department of Education, St. Louis Univ.

"The Federal Government and Civil Rights"
"The Southern Press and Public Opinion"..Mr. Harold Fleming, Director, Potomac Institute, Wash.,D.C.

"Supreme Court Decisions and Legal Aspects of Desegregation"
"Public School Desegregation"
"Desegregation in Higher Education".....Mr. Paul Rilling, Field Director, Southern Regional Council

"Southern Politics"
"Industrialization and Labor"
"Employment Practices".....Dr. Vivian Henderson, Professor of Economics, Fisk University

"The Moral and Ethical Aspects of Race Relations".....Rev. Will Campbell, National Council of Churches, Nashville, Tenn.

"Anti-Semitism in the South"
"White Resistance Groups and Threats from Left and Right Groups".....Mr. Arthur Levin, Director, Southeastern Office, Anti-Defamation League

The above discussions were supplemented by films, book reports, assigned reading materials, and meetings with foreign student leaders.

Ga Gen

National Council of the Young Men's Christian Associations

OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

OFFICERS
SOUTHERN AREA COUNCIL
DR. HUGH B. WILCOX
PRESIDENT
J. FRAN BABBITT
VICE-PRESIDENT
DR. R. T. NELSON
VICE-PRESIDENT
EDWARD M. VINSON
VICE-PRESIDENT
CHARLES R. YOUNTS
TREASURER
GEORGE J. CRESWELL, JR.
RECORDING SECRETARY
FRED W. LIESMANN
ASST. RECORDING SECRETARY

THE SOUTHERN AREA COUNCIL
(ALABAMA, FLORIDA, GEORGIA, KENTUCKY, LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI, ASHEVILLE, N. C., TENNESSEE AND VIRGINIA)
706 STANDARD BUILDING
ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA
JACKSON 1-0352

OFFICERS
SOUTHERN AREA BOARD
LEONARD F. HURLEY
CHAIRMAN
SHELBY R. ROGERS
VICE CHAIRMAN
CHARLES R. YOUNTS
TREASURER
HUGH G. HURST, SR.
SECRETARY

September 19, 1962

Mr. Paul Rilling
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Paul:

Thank you for the valuable information which you gave me at our luncheon today (Wednesday).

I enclose a copy of the Proposal which we are discussing with certain Foundations. I should be glad to have your reactions and, in general, would like you and Mr. Dunbar to know about it.

I made note of your suggestions concerning New World, Field, and Taconic Foundations which might be interested, and which in any case, should be at least cognizant of our activity in this Area.

I also made note of the Norman Fund and the Stern Foundation.

I am enclosing a list of the cities which I had in mind in asking whether information concerning recent developments in desegregation and race relations might be available from the Southern Regional Council files. I am sending you the list with thanks for your expression of interest and your feeling that important data can be secured from the records which you have in the Council office.

The purpose which I have in mind is to prepare a document on each of these cities, which Mr. Wharton and I can use later on in February in connection with meetings we are planning with groups of general secretaries. Ordinarily, the information possessed by these people is likely to be somewhat limited and I am sure our consultations with them would be more valuable if we can get data from your office.

I hope you will let me know if we can do any of the clerical work involved, in order to save your staff as much time and effort as possible.

Yours sincerely,

Thornton

Thornton W. Merriam, Secretary
Leadership Development Project

TWM:ij
Enclosures 2

9/25 Maxwell Hahn sends you his greetings. I had a talk with him yesterday.
T

9/25/02

P. S. Paul

The Rockefeller Foundation not too favorable. Reluctant to give to what they call "operations"; more interested in research - courteous reception at which Foundation executives have highly developed skills.

I have impression that Y.M.C.A. is not accepted in the role of a changer in the field of race relations. Thus, backing financially would seemingly have to come from a depth of interest in the "Y" as such, plus a concern for righting present wrongs with the sincerity of the urge - something to be proved.

Devinney, of the Rockefeller Foundation, was inclined to regard our concern and the whole problem as a job of internal housecleaning for which the National "Y" is responsible. I still have another angle to pursue with him.

Another enclosure may interest you. It is entitled "Responsibility of the National Council". I presented it at the meeting of the National Inter-racial Commission last Friday in New York. Members of the Commission seemed to be quite aroused by it, and voted to send it on for an answer to the National Board. We shall see with what results.

T. W. M.

P. Riley

RESPONSIBILITY OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL WITH RESPECT TO LOCAL Y.M.C.A.'s PRACTICING SEGREGATION

The Constitution of the National Council sets up seven standards which must be met by a local Y.M.C.A. if it is to be a member of the National Council and is to be eligible for listing in the official roster.

Paragraph 4 (Article I; Section 1) specifies that a local Y.M.C.A. be required to certify that its voting members and its boards of control are in accord with the purposes, ideals, and spirit of the Y.M.C.A. as stated in the Constitution of the National Council.

This Purpose (conformity to which is thus required,) is stated (Article I; Section 1; Paragraph 3) in well-known words:

> "The Young Men's Christian Association we regard as being in its essential genius a world-wide fellowship of men and boys, united by a common loyalty to Jesus Christ, for the purpose of developing Christian personality and building a Christian society."

From time to time, the National Council has sought to clarify the meaning of its statement of Purpose through Resolutions. While shedding light on successive Council's views as to what the Purpose means, these Resolutions have not apparently resulted in amendments to, or changes in, the Constitution.

Thus the status of such Resolutions is not clear.

Do actions and resolutions about Y.M.C.A. purpose which are passed by the Council become part of what a local Y.M.C.A. subscribes to when it certifies that its voting members and boards of control are in accord with Council purposes?

For example, in 1954 the National Council approved the following resolution with regard to segregation:

> "Whereas, the basic purpose of the Y.M.C.A. emphasizes a fellowship of persons united in a common loyalty to Jesus Christ - - -
>
> "Therefore, be it resolved - - - that the National Council - - - earnestly work towards the elimination of segregation and other forms of racial discrimination."

What is the standing of a resolution of this kind? Is it to be taken as a definitive interpretation of Council Purpose which officers of the Council are expected to bear in mind in administering its membership requirements?

The Constitution gives the Council powers to enact legislation which may be considered necessary to fulfill its functions and to carry out the powers granted to it by the Constitution. Do resolutions of the kind cited have the status of legislation of this kind?

Another kind of question may be raised, aside from such legal or technical issues. In administering the affairs of the National Council, are officers obligated in any way to call to the attention of local Y.M.C.A.'s the interpretations which the Council makes from time to time of the meaning of its purpose? For example, when annually certifying to their acceptance of the Council's purpose, should the local Y.M.C.A.'s also be asked whether in "spirit and practice they conform" (to use the terminology of the Constitution) to the purpose as interpreted by successive Council resolutions regarding segregation?

If resolutions passed by the Council lack force or "bite" of this kind, what is their actual significance? Why has the Council thus far been content to leave the critical issue of segregationist practices in the ill-defined area of a resolution?

The situation needs clarification. Unless resolved, it confirms an impression which some people have concerning the Y.M.C.A.'s position on matters of race. This is its ambivalence. On the one hand there is evidence of a sensitive conscience, expressed in many resolutions, but the Council has not been willing to put "teeth" into its resolutions by incorporating them in some way in its basic document. Strategical considerations may be involved. There is, obviously, a desire to hold in the Movement, groups whose practices obviously and flagrantly violate official Council positions and generally held convictions, such as that expressed in the 1961 Y.M.C.A. Yearbook:

> "Practices of racial discrimination and segregation have been recognized by Y.M.C.A. leaders as inconsistent with the Association's Christian heritage." (Page 83)

Another issue suggests that the role and status of the Commission on Inter-racial Policies and Program may need to be re-examined.

The kind of constitutional issue to which I have called attention (above) is not properly classified as "program". But the Commission is considered an arm or phase of the National Council's program department. Does this "location" in Council organization impose limitations or restrict the Commission in its efforts to deal with what may now be the most critical issue of race relations in the Y.M.C.A.?

It may well be that, as of the immediate present, the Y.M.C.A. has gone about as far as it can in promoting and enriching programs for better racial understanding and that little more can be accomplished until attention is given to major structural or semi-legal matters. With such matters the Inter-racial Commission may not be in the most effective organizational position to deal.

If resolutions could save the day, the day would long since have been saved. Y.M.C.A. bodies have passed many resolutions. Perhaps the gap between resolutions and constitutional provisions needs to be closed. This could be done by an amendment stating that the Christian purpose of the Y.M.C.A. means the equality of men before God and the elimination of segregation.

July, 1962 Thornton W. Merriam

Ga - gen

Quaker House 1384 FAIRVIEW ROAD, N.E., ATLANTA 6, GEORGIA, DRAKE 3-7986
ATLANTA MEETING OF THE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS

Sept 26, '62

Dear Paul:

Enclosed is a brief report on the Mississippi trip. I felt very much encouraged on the whole at the spirit of the group. There was a disposition to stand firm and as you will see a public reaffirmation of the earlier position (copy enclosed) was authorized. Rabbi Mantinband at least sent his wife to represent him and Father Hunter drove all the way up from Bay St Louis, St Augustine's Seminary to represent the hierarchy. I'd like ~~soon~~ to talk with you and Les in more detail about all this.

To reimburse my currently very meagre bank account I hasten to send this accounting. Mississippi Trip, Sept 24

Round Trip Plane	63.91
To + from Air-port	2.50
Total	$ 66.41

copy given to RHA 9/28

I hope your trip to Birmingham has been interesting and worth-while.

Faithfully,

John.

QUAKER MISSION TO MISSISSIPPI
(October 3-5, 1962)

Initiation of Idea

Will Campbell of the National Council of Churches' Office on Race Relations in Nashville, Tennessee, inquired of me in a telephone conversation dealing with another matter what my own reaction would be to the possibility of a mission on the part of Friends to individuals in positions of responsibility in Mississippi, to speak to the immediate crisis there. From the perspective of the work I had undertaken for the AFSC there three years ago and the follow-through which I have been able to continue with the support of Allan Chalmers and the Southern Regional Council, it seemed to me that such a mission could serve a real purpose. I encouraged him to telephone Barbara Moffett and others in the Philadelphia Office. Apparently, simultaneously, from other individuals there had been expressed to the Philadelphia Office a concern with a comparable objective. With the authority this spontaneous importunity from several sources seemed to provide, I gather Barbara Moffett set things in motion with members of her own Committee and the Board of Trustees of the Service Committee. A number of consultations were held and the request came that a carefully chosen group might meet at Quaker House in Atlanta for a day's consultation with staff members of various agencies and considered seeking on their own part for guidance, looking toward the realization of such a mission.

Preparation at Atlanta, October 3rd

On Wednesday, October 3rd, there gathered at Quaker House under the very sensitive but firm leadership of Charles Darlington the chosen team consisting of Burns Chalmers, Lewis Hoskins, Frank Loescher, Clarence Yarrow, Tartt Bell, and Polly Cuthbertson, as well as Barbara Moffett, Dick Bennett, Garnet Guild and Noyes Collinson, all of whom are related either as staff persons or advisors to the Service Committee. In addition there had been assembled for the benefit of the counsel they might be able to offer the following persons: Mrs. Dorothy Cotton and the Reverend Andrew Young of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, Paul Rilling of the Southern Regional Council, Jackie Wilkes of the YWCA, B. Botnick of the Anti-Defamation League, Rosemarie and Vincent Harding of the Mennonite House, George Hendricks of Georgia Tech and the Atlanta Meeting, Dr. Dan Beittel of Tougaloo Southern Christian College, and the Reverend Will Campbell.

Will Campbell, born and raised in Mississippi and one time Chaplain at the University of Mississippi, was able to give insights issuing from a close association with many of the important factors involved. B. Botnick had been raised in Hattiesburg and could provide observations growing out of very intimate and sustained contact with elements in the picture of peculiar relevance. Andrew Young and Dorothy Cotton had been involved in voter registration work in Mississippi. Paul Rilling had accompanied me on a number of trips to Mississippi and had shared in the interracial conference that I was able to gather as a prelude to the formation of the present Mississippi Council on Human Relations at Waveland, Mississippi, last fall. Later in the day James Foreman of the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee, probably the most active voter registration group in Mississippi at the present time, was able to tell us something of their work and of their current representative in Mississippi, Robert Moses. Dr. Beittel could bring to those who were present, before his necessary departure following lunch, a picture of the kind of harassment that he and others have undergone at Tougaloo Christian College and the strategy on the part of the Citizens Council to make apparent identification between concern for desegregation and Communist intrigue. Vincent Harding brought reflections upon his involvement in the Albany Movement, as a minister of reconciliation, to bear upon our search. Jackie Wilkes spoke of the restrictions upon her own movements in the discharge of her duties on the campus of the University of Mississippi in the spring and of her feeling that a forthcoming visit there on her own part would be still more circumscribed with restraints of various kinds.

When the testimony and contributions of these various agency people had been heard and some dialogue with them on certain points patiently engaged for a season, Charles Darlington called the Service Committee representatives and a few specially invited friends together for an Executive session of review, searching, waiting for leadings and guidance. Will Campbell as one of the initiators of the idea and one who through the years has been most deeply involved personally, was invited to remain with the planning group.

Before the conclusion of the day, it became clear to the assembled group that the proposed mission should be undertaken, that it should be in the nature of a quiet and deliberate "speaking truth to power" in its contacts with political and business leaders, but also assume the role of a ministry of reconciliation as between the State and the Nation, between concerned Mississippi churchmen and churchmen of the same family beyond the State, and that those sent should be mindful of such indications of "follow-through" as might emerge in the prosecution of the mission.

The mission was to be divided into two groups. Polly Cuthbertson, Clarence Yarrow, and Lewis Hoskins were to go to Oxford to see the Chancellor of the University, such other professors and student workers as might be contacted, student leaders and James Meredith. The other contingent consisting of Frank Loescher, Tartt Bell, and Burns Chalmers were to go to Jackson to make contact with the Governor, leading businessmen, and people in positions of major responsibility in the church. I was to accompany this latter group and facilitate some of the contacts.

Report from Jackson

Governor Barnett. Rooms for those sent to Jackson were secured at a downtown hotel. On arrival at the airport Frank Loescher made contact by telephone with Hodding Carter, Jr., who is in residence at Tulane and completing a new book. Carter suggested contact with Tom Minor, TIMES-PICAYUNE'S representative in Jackson. In turn Minor called to say that he had spoken to the Governor's Secretary and that if the delegation should present itself at 2:00 at the Governor's Office and wait its opportunity to see him there would be reasonable chance of making the contact. This approach proved successful and Burns Chalmers, Frank Loescher, and Tartt Bell were able to see Ross Barnett for some twenty-five minutes on Thursday afternoon. Their reports will carry a first-hand account of impressions in that interview. I shall say here only that I gathered from them the Governor was courteous, did not apparently resent their coming, listened to what they had to say, and delivered himself of a pseudo-historical analysis of why deterioration had always been the end result of a mingling of the races from the time of the early Egyptian experience until the present. He indicated, moreover, that he felt the Nation was behind him as indicated by the 1600 telegrams commending him, which he received daily. Burns Chalmers spoke the final word, which the others felt had a disarming affect and may have penetrated to some degree.

Representative of the Sovereignty Commission. This same segment of the team made contact with Earl Johnston of the Sovereignty Commission. Last summer this man had come out in the open with some rather sharp criticism of certain of the tactics of the Citizens Council, aimed clearly at William Simmons and other leaders in that group. It will be remembered that the Citizens Council is actually employed by the Sovereignty Commission to do a good deal of its inquisitorial work. Johnston indicated that this conflict between himself and Simmons was still there. He said he was not at liberty to indicate who had reversed the Governor's decision regarding the use of the State Troopers to preserve the peace on the Sunday afternoon during which the riot took place. The implications seemed to gather that perhaps the Citizens Council had been responsible for this. Apparently the Governor had changed his mind between the time of his first conversation with President Kennedy in the morning and the later one in the afternoon, the "bad faith" to which Robert Kennedy referred in his Monday evening address to the Nation. Asked whom the Governor listened to for the most part, Johnston replied that sometimes he listened to him (Johnston) and sometimes to Simmons. In either case, the representatives of the Committee waiting upon Mr. Johnston concluded that the Governor was in fact a captive of the Citizens Council.

Roy Clark. Some of my earlier reports have had reference to Roy Clark, the pastor of one of the two largest Methodist Churches in the city. Yale trained, Clark has very strong convictions with which his people are familiar. He has managed to remain pastor of this church by reason of his ability and effectiveness in the parish itself. That he is Mississippi born and bred inclines the congregation to tolerate him. It was he who a few months ago told me that the area of his maneuverability had considerably diminished since our conversation of three years ago. There now had sprung up a monitoring committee of his own members who reported to the Citizens Council of his activities and knew his calendar as well as he knew it himself. We went to see this man, all four of us. One of his important observations was that the new crisis in Mississippi had, on the positive side, meant a break in the conspiracy of silence. For the first time, he was able "to talk turkey" to some of his laymen at least on the issues involved because there was now an incident which required communication. When we asked him about the possibility of some ecumenical statement on the part of the clergy of Jackson, comparable to the kind of thing that has taken place in other cities confronted by crisis of this kind, he said that only the Episcopalians and the Methodists were really concerned and only these in minority numbers. There was not a single Baptist minister to his knowledge in the community who would say anything publicly on the question, even if he had private convictions. Roy Clark felt that the stand by the 130 businessmen had been of real value. It was this action on their part which had opened up the opportunity to communicate with some of his leading laymen who had until now adroitly avoided all conversation in the sensitive area.

Bishop Brunini. It will be remembered that Bishop Brunini has worked with us all along toward the reestablishment of the Mississippi Council on Human Relations. He is also a Board Member of the Southern Regional Council. Recently he had declined to have his name appear on the Executive Committee of the Mississippi Council because of pressures brought on him from his superior, Bishop Geraud, and some of his laymen. But he has let us know in one way or another that he stands with those who are part of the Council.

All four of us waited upon the Bishop. He was generous to give us the time because he was about to leave for the Ecumenical Council in Rome. Alert and direct as ever, he made some observations worth recording. His appraisal has sometimes seemed very shrewd and penetrating to me in the past. Not less so in the present. He pointed out that the rioting in Oxford was not really in the nature of a race riot. Indeed, a Negro woman went unnoticed through some of the rioters on the streets of Oxford. Rather it was an open conflict between two sets of whites who had different attitudes about what was taking place. Had this tension broken out in Jackson itself, there might have been a genuine race riot. The Negroes might have become involved. Had any Negroes been injured, others of that group which is not persuaded of the importance of non-violence might have become involved. At the time when Citizens Council members surrounded the Governor's Mansion on the eventful Sunday, had a set of marshalls appeared to arrest the Governor and any Negroes been present as observers, there could have been considerably more violence.

It was the Bishop's opinion that since the tension is at its peak in Jackson as a rule, effective follow-through work on the part of the Service Committee might best take the shape of quiet effort in the small villages in other parts of the State.

Two Episcopal Bishops. Frank Loescher and I visited Bishop Duncan Gray and Bishop John Allin of the Episcopal Diocese of Mississippi. They had been good enough to reserve time together for us. This was a very revealing conference in a number of ways. The elder Bishop deferred to his younger brother and said very little apart from receiving us quite graciously and indicating that he felt the Diocese had done all it could in commending through its Executive Committee of Laymen and Clergy the action of the businessmen in criticizing by indirection the handling of the Oxford incident, and in calling for prayer services of penitence throughout the Diocese. Bishop Gray said that public pronouncements were not effective in this matter and that it was important to keep the family together in a pastoral way.

Bishop Allin, a man probably in his early forties, was Rector of the Episcopal Junior College at Vicksburg when the Episcopal Prayer Pilgrimage (Freedom Ride of Episcopal Priests from New Orleans to Detroit last year this time) took place. He indicated that while he approved of what these Priests were standing for in the Church and was with them in spirit, he thought their strategy was very poor. He further said that it was the Negroes in that pilgrimage rather than the white Priests who seemed most understanding and appreciative of his position. It was clear that he still harbored some resentment in relation to their visit at his school because he had begged them in advance not to come.

Bishop Allin, in my judgment, gave himself away in one or two things which he said, despite his obvious attempt to guard himself and to appear to have done all he could. He pointed up the fact that as a young Bishop he was subject to peculiar temptations toward recognition and that he might have received some national publicity had he chosen to make a public statement. He said he had resisted this in favor of performing more faithfully his pastoral duties. I could not resist pointing out in a very quiet way that, had he chosen to call a number of pastors on an ecumenical basis together from all over the state, a joint statement might have arisen from such a meeting comparable to the businessman's stand which he praised particularly because so many took part in it. In this case, it would not have been necessary to feature any one individual's name. I had in mind, of course, the reluctance on the part of the Episcopal Church to participate in ecumenical endeavors on the lower levels. I asked him about the possibility of a meeting of the denominational leaders in Jackson and he said that there had not been any real chance of meeting of minds on any of the major issues because the other denominations had interests which were peculiar to themselves. I had the temerity to point out also that it seemed to me there was an inevitable tension between the prophetic and the pastoral responsibilities of a man in his position. He indicated in reply that the pastoral must always take precedence. My own feeling is that due to reluctance to engage in ecumenical activity within the State from unrecognized feelings of superiority and aloofness and this additional reluctance to rock the boat within the denominational family itself will keep these two Bishops from any daring utterance.

On the other hand, it was noteworthy that their Executive Committee did come out with the statement honoring the businessmen; although, had they taken the initiative and the businessmen commended them, I should have been a little more proud of the Church. It is also on the positive side that they called for a Day of Penitence throughout the Diocese and themselves conducted the Litany and Penitential Office on the Friday that we were there in the downtown Church and invited to it all Christians in the community. I attended the service and the Church was well filled. No statement was made; there was simply the Prayer Book Service.

It will be remembered that Ed Harrison, who had been Rector of St.Andrews Church, was very active during my earlier work in Mississippi, allowing interracial meetings in the Parish House, and later participating in the founding of the Mississippi Council on Human Relations. Ed Harrison stood up to all the pressure under which he labored, including a petition of some 200 of his people to the Bishop to remove him from his office. His wife, however, found the strain very severe indeed, and, due largely to her unhappiness, he accepted a call to Texas during the course of the summer. It was a real victory for the Citizens Council.

Frank Loescher will submit his own report on this interview. I had the impression that his views were a little more on the positive side as to their reactions than were mine. I certainly would agree with him that it was an important call to make and I feel we drew some valuable tension upon the consciences of the Bishops. I will not attempt to record Frank's participation because he will remember better what he said himself.

William Mounger. Burns Chalmers and I had the opportunity of seeing William Mounger whom the others had missed because of the pressure of engagements that followed upon Mr. Mounger's courageous public utterance with the support of 133 businessmen all over the State. Mr. Mounger is President of the Lamar Life Insurance Company, an indigenous firm. He had taken the initiative of calling this large group of businessmen to Jackson following the Oxford crisis in its initial stage. Many of these men were themselves members of the Citizens Council. They did together issue the statement which appears attached, by indirection registering criticism of the Governor's handling of the situation and also of the Citizens Council, which everyone knew lay behind the Governor's dereliction in affording proper protection.

Mr. Mounger told us that instead of the reported 60 per cent of reaction in favor of his stand it had been closer to 90 per cent. This had given him a great deal of courage and confidence. There is no question but that he must be under some pressure from both political figures and the Citizens Council for his bold action. It had been the first kind of public rebuff the Council and the Governor had received, moderate as it was.

Both Burns and I were very favorably impressed by this man's general personality and integrity. We felt that he could be depended upon to take the kind of position that Boyd Campbell might have taken, were he not at the present very sick in the hospital. He seemed a natural leader and to have qualities of fearlessness and self confidence while he had also a basic humility.

Leading Baptist Pastor. It was a personal concern of Tartt Bell's that we should wait upon the pastor of the Governor, Douglas Hudgins. Tartt himself had to leave early, as did Frank Loescher. Burns Chalmers and I went to the mammoth structure which is the home of the First Baptist Congregation, opposite the State House in Jackson. We did not have an appointment but waited our chance to see Dr. Hudgins. He received us in a bouncy, jocular mood and invited us into his study. One could see at once the lines of tension in his face and an almost hollow quality in the outward joviality and courtesy with which he made his initial overtures of friendliness. It was a difficult transition for Burns Chalmers to make. He had scarcely launched into his interpretation of our mission when Dr. Hudgins interrupted. "Where are you from?" he demanded, his whole countenance changing. We told him and he then demanded to know why we had come. When Burns Chalmers patiently and with his characteristic capacity to absorb punishment without inflicting it renewed his interpretation of the nature of the visit, Dr. Hudgins reminded us that we could not possibly understand the complexity of the problem in Mississippi and they would be so grateful if we would let them alone. At this point Burns passed the ball to me. I indicated that we belonged with him, Dr. Hudgins, to a family in Christ which transcended the dichotomy between State and Nation of which he was so emphatically aware. We also represented a concern that existed in the minds and spirits of many people outside the State which was not to be identified with the presence of Federal Troops at that moment at Oxford. These two considerations gave us, we hoped, some license to share our concern with him as we would hope that he would tell us of his own convictions relating to it. I said further that we understood very well how he might resent our coming to confer with him at this critical moment and that we appreciated the kind of agony which as a Christian minister he must experience under existing circumstances. His blood pressure began to decrease and sensing that we both could recognize the kind of context in which he had to operate he began to listen and to speak more quietly.

He told us that in his judgment there was only one issue involved and this was the matter of States Rights as opposed to the right of the Nation to intervene in an educational matter of this kind. We had to tell him that we felt the racial question involved was at least as important and that from our perspective seemed infinitely more so. We tried to elicit some statement of his own views on this matter. He adroitly avoided any coming to grips with this question. It was as if he could not bring himself to defend his position theologically in the presence of concerned fellow Christians who represented the position of Friends on this question. By his silence in the pulpit he apparently can give consent to what the Governor and others are doing in the name of the Christian position, supported by the Bible. But he could not actively defend this position with us. He did say that a pastor cannot afford to get too far ahead of his people, by which he seemed to imply that he was ahead of them, but could not bring himself to make this clear lest he forfeit his opportunity to lead them as a pastor at all.

Moreover, he said that he had gone to wait upon the Governor on the Sunday morning before and had told him that as his pastor he wanted him to know that he was concerned for him in the midst of the pressures which were being exerted upon him. He said the Governor was grateful for this but had never asked his counsel. Dr. Hudgins' view of this was that this was indication of the Governor's generous desire to refrain from involving his pastor in so delicate and difficult a matter.

I could not myself refrain from unwelcome images of Elmer Gantry, which kept intruding upon my mind's eye during the conversation. Apparently this man was actually contriving to maintain an institutional church, preach Sunday by Sunday to large congregations, raise sufficient funds to support an enormous plant and a large staff, maintain wide civic contacts including leaders in the Citizens Council as well as the political sphere, and at the same time keep sufficient peace with his conscience to tacitly condone in the name of Christ what was going on. There was no question but that his extreme tension, reflected both in his manner and in his countenance, was the price of this precarious peace. We had been told that any pastor who ministered in that church would have to be acceptable to the Hederman Family, its chief contributor, who was also the owner and publisher of the two daily papers in Jackson, distinguished for their distortion of the news and their advocacy of the Citizens Council line.

It was an extremely exacting interview and we came away exhausted. It was in some ways the most difficult of those in which I had shared. Burns, I think, felt much the same way. But at the same time we felt that some real contact on a deeper level had taken place, despite our failure to communicate on the central issue. Hudgins implored our prayers as we left in such a way that there was certainly some measure of sincerity in the request. How to reach these pastors ought to be one continuing concern of the Service Committee as it considers follow-through.

Small Businessmen. A Mr. Ezell with whom we have been in touch in the past in relation to the Council on Human Relations met with our group at luncheon. He has inherited his father's mattress business and is in touch with the various civic groups, though not a man of any considerable wealth. He told us of the great difficulty of communicating with other businessmen concerning the central issues and he reaffirmed the point that Roy Clark had made to us: that there now was a new opportunity for conversations, between businessmen, that had some substance.

A more significant interview was shared by Burns and me with Power Hearn, for supper. The others had already left Jackson. Power had assumed responsibility for the Council on Human Relations following the Waveland Conference, which I called last October. He carried it through the nine person Continuation Committee which met until the organizational meeting held at Tougaloo in May. He chaired that meeting, in which the decision was made to reestablish the Council. Since then the harassment of the Citizens Council on him through his son has been so severe that he has had to remove his name from the Executive Committee, though in many small ways he has constantly reminded us of his continuing support and concern.

I noticed in him a perceptible change since last we were together. Not that his convictions have wavered in the least; they seemed rather to be strengthened. He has, however, become more anxious. He said that the pressure of phone calls in the night with the accustomed profanity and obscenity had been renewed and intensified. Cars parked out in front of his little automatic laundry business had their license plates recorded and their owners received threatening calls from the Citizens Council. As a result of threats to his son, the son's wife had become almost hysterical and the son's concern over his business was a daily burden to him.

Power Hearn showed me a little card which someone that very morning had left with his son for his son's signature. The card read "I hereby authorize my bank_____to honor any check drawn to my account by the Citizens Council of Jackson for the payment of my dues or any other assessment and I take all responsibility for abuse of this privilege." There was a place for signature. As Power Hearn expressed it, "I would not think of allowing even my Church such a privilege as this"!

Power Hearn said in a wistful and plaintive way: "John, it has been terribly hard for me to keep from becoming bitter." I replied that I could understand this and indicated that I realized that he must be referring to his attitude toward those who had exerted these pressures. "No," he replied, "I mean in relation to the Church. I have always loved the Church, and now I want to take my Grandchildren to the Church every Sunday. But how can I be enthusiastic about taking them to a church, where the pastor never makes the slightest reference to this frightful situation in Mississippi?" He belongs to a Methodist Church where the pastor refrains from utterance on this question. Power Hearn is grateful for the presence of Dr. Clark and Dr. Selah, the Methodists in the heart of the city who do make clear their stand before their people.

One passing indication of his own heightened anxiety was the fact that he thought that a man, who came in, while we were eating, to sit at an adjacent table for a piece of pie and ice cream and had given us a rather straight look as he sat down, might well be a representative of the Citizens Council. We had told him that we had just tried to see William Simmons at the Citizens Council but had been unsuccessful. He thought it quite likely that we had been shadowed by this man and that he was now listening to our conversation. The man presently got up to go and we all felt it extremely unlikely that this had been his mission. But the fact that Power Hearn should be concerned about this when he had never before indicated any such comparable distress was an indication of the toll which sustained pressures have made upon him since I last conferred with him.

We did feel that Power Hearn was very happy about some developments, notably the stand of the businessmen and of the Episcopal Executive Committee. He said he had immediately called Mounger to congratulate him. We felt that Power would stand with us in whatever we undertake to do in the future, even if under the strain prevalent in the family at the present he is not able to do much publicly.

Visit to Tougaloo

It had been the mind of the larger group in preparation for the mission that we should refrain from going to Tougaloo until we had secured contact with the Governor and businessmen, lest our identification with that Institution throw a cloud over us from the start. But since these contacts had already been made and since Dr. and Mrs. Beittel had been good enough to make some contacts for us before we arrived with Rabbi Nussbaum, Power Hearn, Tom Ezell, and others, and since the Beittels have been central in their advocacy of the Council and their work on its behalf, it seemed well that we should make some overture in that direction. Accordingly, we all went out to Tougaloo on Thursday evening. There were present, beside the Beittels, Mr. Owens who is Business Manager, Dr. Borinski (refugee German, Sociologist), and Dean Branch. Dr. Borinski emphasized once again his conviction that the deterioration in the white community along the moral lines relating to honesty in communication was the most severe fact with which we had to deal. He felt that there had been "break through" in the statement of the businessmen but that this reestablishment of lines of communication between whites on a sincere basis was the fundamental need. This I think is worth recording in view of the contemplated follow-through in some area on the part of the Service Committee.

We learned that these men felt that the students at Tougaloo were taking things in their stride for the most part and that in the balance one could say that they were more heartened by what was happening than intimidated. They regretted very much that one of us was not free to speak at the Chapel on the morrow, an opportunity which had been kept for us.

I think I express the feeling of the whole group that it was well to have gone to Tougaloo lest we fail to offer some kind of encouragement to that Negro segment in which future leadership is already present by promise.

Attempt to see William Simmons

Despite the fact that Burns Chalmers is the brother of Allan Chalmers of the Legal Defense Fund of NAACP, who is probably high on the black list of the Citizens Council, and the fact that I have somehow avoided harassment up until now and hope to continue to be more or less free to move about in Mississippi in the kind of work I have been doing, both Burns and I felt a kind of leading to make an attempt at least to see William Simmons. We concurred, all of us, that he is probably the most powerful single figure in the State at the present time. Earlier reports of mine to the Service Committee have stated his background as far as this can be learned from those who have been in position to observe. I shall not repeat these findings here save to say that he has had strong fascist leanings and involvements through the years and that he represents one vicious aspect of the Citizens Council power because he is quite intelligent as well as unscrupulous. We decided to go to his office and try to see him if possible. The symbol of the Confederate Flag interlaced with the National Flag on the entrance to the offices seemed incongruous. A large portrait of General Lee on entering the office made us reflect upon the contrast between the Christian convictions and character of that man as compared to those who pretend to march under his banner in Mississippi today. The office help themselves seemed of second rate caliber. We were shown seats in a corner indicated and told that we might wait our chances. After some 40 minutes we had to leave in order for us to make our appointment with Power Hearn and reach the terminal in time for the scheduled flight home. It was with real regret that we failed to make this contact. I rather hope that before too long I might see this man himself as one aspect of follow-through on the mission, or that any sent by the Service Committee might undertake this as one of its assignments. There is no question but that William Simmons exerts more control over the Governor's decisions than anyone else and that the Statewide organization, unique in Mississippi, is largely the creation of his "genius". If we decide to "speak truth to power" at its most virulent base, it would seem wise to bring our message directly to him. Will Campbell in the period of consultation had thought that this would be fruitless and I concur that there would be no perceptible difference as a result. However, a Quaker Team that felt constrained to wait upon Hitler himself would seem to constitute a precedent in the present instance.

The Oxford Contingent

In as much as I did not myself participate in any of the contacts at Oxford and did not myself confer since then with any who did, it would seem well to refrain entirely from reporting on that segment of the Team's accomplishment. I may simply say in passing that apparently contacts were made with the Chancellor of the University, chaplains and leaders in student activities.

Conclusion

My own considered judgment, on further reflection, is that the Mission was well conceived and that it accomplished its major objectives. Contacts were made with the power structure, with Church leaders, and business heads. No one is in a position to measure the effectiveness of the Mission, but the constraint to bring the message to the attention of those in position to influence the situation was obeyed and any results must be left in the hands of God.

I feel that those chosen to be part of the official six-person team were highly qualified by reason of training and experience and that they represented well the mind and spirit of Quakerism at its best on this issue. It was a real privilege to serve as a guide to those who went to Jackson and to participate in some of the contacts.

With regard to follow-through, the clues which emerged from our part of the Mission have already been alluded to. The suggestion of Bishop Brunini, that any effort ought to be concentrated outside of Jackson, seems sound. The businessmen who signed the document that was given National publicity through the WALL STREET JOURNAL constitute a new list for our further contact and cultivation. It is apparent for my own continued efforts in Mississippi that clergy throughout the State need to be contacted individually for the sake both of the therapeutic value of release in confession for those who are troubled and the confrontation by a new opportunity to join forces with a specific organization, the Mississippi Council on Human Relations. An ecumenical group can increasingly be drawn together in the Council itself with the addition of several of the Rabbis who are concerned.

A follow-through mission ought to make direct contact this time with the NAACP leaders, staff person Medger Evers in Jackson and State President Aaron Henry in Clarksdale. This was one of my few regrets, namely that we had not seen these men as part of the Mission. Contact ought also to be made with Robert Moses, Field Representative for the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee in voter registration activities in Mississippi. No one I believe is stationed there fulltime for the Southern Christian Leadership Conference at present, but we should visit anyone in the field who is so engaged.

A man named Wroton, one of the two political figures who has opposed segregation legislation in the State Assemblies, ought to be given moral support. Former Governor Coleman should be waited upon again, though he has unhappily aligned himself with much that Ross Barnett has been trying to do recently.

If the Service Committee could afford it, a college representative in Mississippi, fulltime, should be of value. Undoubtedly Polly Cuthbertson will have some suggestions along this line. It may be that conferences for college chaplains and workers could be held and that these could be along interracial lines at Waveland for example.

I do intend myself to get over into the State every now and then to spend a few days in personal contacts, widening the circle of those who might make common cause with the new Council.

Bringing key people out of the State to conferences at Quaker House in Atlanta, for example, could also be a happy approach. This kind of relief from sustained restraint within the State would be welcome to many, and conversation could flow more freely without the characteristic strain now endured. If funds were available for this kind of thing I should be happy to work it out here and to keep expenses at a minimum through housing individuals in the homes of some of our Meeting members.

Finally, I believe that the shape taken by the concern in the assembled meeting here at Quaker House was a valid one, that subsequent events confirmed its essential wisdom, and that if those whose personal concern was responsible for the initiation of the Mission were to meet again there would be a like development of creative insight which would point the way to some form of sustained effort.

Respectfully submitted,

John R. Yungblut

10/12/62

Ga Gen
(HR)

1927 N. Decatur Road N.E.
Atlanta, 7, Georgia
October 18, 1962

Mr. Paul Rilling
Southern Area Council
5 Forsyth Street N.W.
Atlanta, 3, Georgia

Dear Paul:

Herewith is copy of some notes with reference to Dr. Tucker Callaway a copy of whose sermon I gave you today, at luncheon.

I trust it might find a place in The New South. If it does I am sure we would want quite a number of reprint copies of the sermon.

Sincerely,

Harry

H.W. Rohrer

HWR-r

GA-gen

October 31, 1962

Mr. Don McEvoy
NCCJ
114 Bank of Georgia Building
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Don:

Along the line of your memorandum on a forthcoming conference on Religious Responsibility in Race Relations, you should be aware that a conference on a somewhat similar theme will be held in Nashville December 27 and 28. These are tentative dates. The conference will be jointly sponsored by the Southern Regional Council and the Fellowship of Southern Churchmen. The theme will be "The South: Ethical Demands of Integration." About 200 persons will be invited to attend. Laymen and clergy will be involved on an interfaith basis. This will be primarily a meeting of the fairly well committed, who will consult about the problem of moving forward from desegregation to integration, etc..

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PR:mm

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA 4, PA. • AREA CODE 215 • BAring 2-1106 • CABLE, NATSTUD

November 16, 1962

TO: Members of the Southern Advisory Committee

FROM: Connie Curry, Director, Southern Project of NSA

How are you? I have been meaning to write to you for the past month and to send you the enclosed sheet on proposed plans for the Southern Project this year. As you will notice, several of the meetings have already occurred, and I have a rather strange excuse for the delay--we just last week received a supply of the new NSA stationery, and I kept on waiting for it so that you could see the new staff and committee members.

In any case, I hope you will look over the plans and let me know if you have any suggestions or other ideas. Also, you may be interested in helping out in some of the activities that will be occurring in your area.

I have also enclosed a list of the students that participated in the Fifth Southern Student Human Relations Seminar. As you can see, many of them were from colleges in the Deep South with which we have no contact in the past. We were most pleased with the group at the Seminar itself, and once again, the majority of them are doing good work in human relations programming on their own campuses. The enclosed piece on editorial reactions to the Ole Miss situation contains two articles written by Seminar participants.

We are in the process of planning several projects for next summer, and I shall soon be sending you a prospectus for your comments and suggestions. The next meeting of the Advisory Committee will be sometime in January, and I shall contact you about dates that will be most suitable.

I hope that all is going well with you, and shall appreciate hearing from you on any of the above matters.

ASSOCIATED WITH: American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U. S. Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • Young Adult Council • American Association for the U.N. • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

President
W. DENNIS SHAUL
University of Notre Dame

Assistant to the President
DOROTHEA M. KRISCH
Saint John's University

•

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Vice President
TIMOTHY A. MANRING
Washington State University

Program Vice President
STEPHEN BROCKBANK
University of Utah

Program Vice President
DENNIS R. YEAGER
Loyola of the South

Administrative Assistant
J. HARRIET DIETZ
Chatham College

Student Government Information Service Director
MARCIA KIRKPATRICK
University of Wisconsin

•

West Coast Office
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

Educational Travel, Inc.
20 West 38th Street
New York 18, New York
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

•

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

Vice President
DONALD SMITH
University of Texas

Administrative Assistant
THOMAS F. OLSON
University of Minnesota

Special Assistant
JOSEPH LOVE
Stanford University

Special Assistant
ROBERT W. BACOFF
University of Illinois

Special Assistant
HENRY N. PATTERSON, JR.
University of North Carolina

Special Assistant
MICHAEL GREENE
Antioch College

Director, Foreign Student Leadership Project
GEORGE HAZELRIGG
University of Oklahoma

Director, Special Exchanges
FRANK CRUMP
Columbia University

•

NATIONAL ADVISORS

John Cogley
Staff Administrator
The Fund for the Republic

Sidney Hertzberg
Editor
Current Magazine

Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame

Russell Kirk
Editor
The University Bookman

Ralph McGill
Publisher
Atlanta Constitution

Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University

Milton Shapp
Chairman of The Board
Jerrold Electronics

•

Chairman National Advisory Board
DR. EUGENE FONTINELL
Professor
Queens College

Chairman Financial Advisory Board
RUTH HAGY BROD

Ga
Gen

Citizenship Education Program

November 22, 1962

Septima P. Clark
Dorothy F. Cotton
Andrew J. Young

SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN LEADERSHIP
CONFERENCE

Martin Luther King, Jr., President
Wyatt Tee Walker, Director

Mr. Paul Rilling
Southern Regional Council
63 Auburn Ave.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Mr. Rilling:

I've just learned from the Georgia Council's news letter that you are moving on. Everyone likes to know that bigger and greener pastures are available. It is always good to be needed and wanted.

I wish you the greatest success but regret that a deep-sighted thinker is leaving the melting South.

I comfort myself with the thought that there will be a voice in the Nation's capital that knows the aspirations of the struggling South and can speak out to politicians.

Again I bid you God-speed and good luck.

Sincerely yours,

Septima P. Clark

SUITE 402, 41 EXCHANGE PLACE, S.E., ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA • TELEPHONE 524-1378

Ga Gen

December 5, 1962

Mrs. Septima P. Clark
Citizenship Education Program
Southern Christian Leadership Conference
334 Auburn Avenue, N.E.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Mrs. Clark:

Thank you so much for your nice letter wishing me luck in my new assignment in Washington.

I don't like to feel that I am exactly leaving the South. The state of affairs in Washington has a strong dash of Southern flavor.

I hope that we will still be in touch from time to time. Your own work and life is an inspiration to all of us in this work.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PR:mm

December 7, 1962

Mr. Harry Rohrer
1927 N. Decatur Road
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Harry:

We don't believe we can use the shorter quotation from Mr. Calloway either, but we thank him and will bear it in mind.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PR:mm
Enc.

PROJECTED PLANS
for
NSA SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS PROJECT

Constance Curry, Director
Dorothy Dawson, Assistant Director
Carol L. Hall, Secretary

FALL, 1962

September 22 — Planning Committee, South Carolina Student Council on Human Relations. The Project cooperates very closely with this council and helps to finance their annual state meeting and other activities. This group is composed of students from almost all of the colleges in South Carolina and is probably the most active statewide student human relations group in the South.

October 5 — First meeting of the Greater Atlanta Student Council on Human Relations. This group was started last year as an effort to bring together students from the twelve colleges here in Atlanta. The scope and interests of this group are quite broad, since they wish their activities and projects to cover political, economic, educational and religious issues as well as the racial issue. They are attempting to include students ranging from those interested in direct action to those interested only in discussion or study. Throughout the year we work very closely with this group in planning activities as well as in mimeographing and mailing materials for them.

October 19-20 — Planning meeting in Chapel Hill to begin working out details of the Southwide Human Relations Seminar to be held in Raleigh in the spring. This Seminar will be sponsored by the Young Adult Council and will be the first attempt to bring together Southern leaders from the various youth and student groups in the Young Adult Council. (Young Workers, college students, Young Dems, Rural Youth, etc.)

October 26-28 — Statewide meeting of the South Carolina Student Council on Human Relations. Place: Frogmore, South Carolina. Theme: "Student Involvement in the Crisis of the South". One of the workshops at the conference will be devoted to methods of preparing a campus for desegregation, and we shall be working to bring to the conference student leaders from the state-supported universities which will soon be faced with this situation. There will also be a workshop on academic freedom, and we will be providing materials and resource personnel for this.

November 22-25 Fall meeting of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee -- Nashville, Tennessee. Although this meeting will be devoted mainly to business, we will be cooperating in planning workshops or the educational aspects of the meeting.

December 7-9 Civil rights conference for students in Texas and Oklahoma. Site not yet determined. The Project will be cooperating with Vivian Franklin, a student at the University of Texas in an attempt to bring together around fifty students who are somewhat action-oriented and who are searching for new channels for their participation. Dorothy Dawson will do some traveling in this region to recruit for the conference, and she will attend the meeting as a resource person.

December (Perhaps during Christmas holidays) We are hoping to have some type of meeting that will bring together participants from this summer's Seminar and perhaps from the 1960 and 1961 Seminars. Students will give reports on events in their respective areas. (There is a possibility that this meeting will be held in conjunction with another human relations conference which will be held in Nashville the week after Christmas.)

SPRING, 1963 (Dates not yet established.)

South Central Human Relations Seminar -- The South Central Region of NSA (Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, Arkansas) has requested that we co-sponsor a seminar similar to the one we held last spring in New Orleans. We shall probably hold it there again during the Easter vacation and shall begin now to increase student participation from these Deep South states.

Young Adult Council Human Relations Seminar -- (mentioned in fall planning) This will probably be held in March, and we are hoping that youth and student leaders from the thirteen Southern states will be able to attend. We will not be financing this meeting, but our office will be active in the planning and holding of the conference.

Georgia Human Relations Seminar -- In the past there have been few meetings held on a statewide level for students interested in human relations. It is hoped that a Seminar covering the educational, religious, political and economic factors in Georgia and the South can be held here in Atlanta. By the spring, the Atlanta Student Council on Human Relations should be strong enough to act as host for the conference and to help with the necessary preparations.

Florida Conference -- In the past the Project has not had much contact with students in Florida, and none of our seminars or conferences have been in areas where they might be included. Since the attitudes on human relations differ somewhat in Florida from those in other Southern states, and since some of the student government people there have already indicated an interest in NSA programming, it is our feeling that an attempt should be made to hold a regular NSA conference that would cover many topics, including human relations. We would be working closely with the National Office of NSA on this conference and are now trying to find a conference site and local personnel to sponsor the meeting.

Deep South International Relations Conference -- Plans for this conference are very tentative, since it will be necessary to obtain extra funds and since some of the planning will have to be done by the International Commission of NSA. However, in my discussion with the National Officers of NSA, we agreed that NSA should begin to offer programming and services in areas other than human relations. We do know that Southern students have shown an interest in international affairs, and there is a possibility that students from states in the Deep South would attend a conference on this topic. Again, we are investigating possible campuses and sites where this conference might be held.

FALL AND SPRING

Newsletter -- Throughout the year Dorothy and I plan to send out periodical newsletters to participants in the Fifth Seminar and the Raleigh Voter Registration Project. This will be an attempt to keep them in touch with one another and to keep them informed on student activities and events in the South.

Information on Teaching Opportunities -- Our office receives many requests from students outside the South who are interested in working in the South after graduation. Although many of them are interested in voter registration or work with human relations agencies, some of them are interested in teaching at Negro colleges. We hope to contact Southern Negro colleges and see what teaching opportunities are available and to pass this information on to interested students.

Scholarships -- We are planning to continue the work that we have done in the past of helping to place and obtain funds for students in the South who have had to leave their colleges because of their involvement in human relations work.

College Desegregation -- We now have a list in our office of many white colleges in the South that are already willing to admit Negro students or that would like to have Negro students apply so that the policy can be clarified. Although this will have to be done on a personal basis and not through publicized lists, we are hoping that our office can be one of the channels whereby more attempts at college desegregation can be initiated.

Voter Registration -- Since the Voter Registration Project in Raleigh this summer did illustrate that students can be of some value in voter registration work, we are planning to sponsor another project this summer. This, of course, is dependent upon obtaining financial support; and the area, length of project, number of students to be involved and best means of involving them are all questions still under discussion.

Southern Student Leaders Seminar -- The National Congress of NSA passed a resolution in August urging that a seminar be held in the summer of 1963 similar to the one held in Nashville in August of 1961. This first seminar included approximately fifteen Southern Negro students for a month's study of Southern economics, politics, education, etc, and offered them ideas and methods for changing the structure of the communities which they represented. Many of these students have since shown leadership in working for the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee or other organizations, and we feel that it is again necessary for NSA to attempt to provide leadership training for a similar group of students. This Seminar is also dependent upon obtaining financial resources, and this project, as well as the Voter Registration Project, will depend upon whether money can be obtained to employ Dorothy Dawson as Project Assistant beyond February, when the funds obtained for her last year will be depleted.

Sixth Southern Student Human Relations Seminar -- As provided for in the grant from the Field Foundation, the Project will sponsor the Sixth Southern Student Human Relations Seminar to be held next August in conjunction with the National Congress of NSA.

Note: The above outline includes all of the ideas that have been discussed as possible programs for the Southern Project. I would point out that some of them are very tentative; some of them may be dropped, and others may be added as the year progresses. I would also point out that this outline does not include campus visits and programming, attendance at other conferences and meetings not sponsored by the Project, programming for international students, liaison with other agencies, and other programs or projects that may arise and require the involvement of the Project Staff.

Constance Curry, Director
Southern Project, NSA

Presbyterian Campus Christian Life

Drawer A — Emory University, Atlanta 22, Georgia

Phone DR. 3-1621, Ext. 571

J. Emmett Herndon, University Pastor

January 3, 1963

TO: Frontiers Seminar Planning Committee

RE: A Reminder

Dear Friends:

Perhaps, you, too, have let the date of our next meeting be forgotten in the rush of the holidays. So, let me remind you - it is scheduled for Monday, January 7 - 5:00 P.M.-10:00 P.M. in Conference Room A, Alumni Memorial Building, Emory University.

Since our last meeting, we have received confirmations from Ella Baker, Coordinator, and Harry Smith, Chaplain. We are, therefore, ready to start moving. I would suggest that prior to our meeting you familiarize yourself with our minutes and planning to date.

A tentative docket may be:

1) Approval of housing.
2) Approval of a working schedule.
3) Discussion of finance.
4) Discussion of publicity.
5) Assignment of definite responsibilities.
6) Plans for future meetings.
7) Etc.

An invitation is going out today via phone and letter for additional committee members to be included.

Please be prompt so that we shall be able to expedite the work before us.

Wishing you the best in the new year, I remain,

Cordially,

Emmett

J. Emmett Herndon

Ga - Gen
MM

FRONTIERS SEMINAR
A. Robertson

The Frontiers Seminar is an effort to open the eyes of participants to the world and to encourage them to wonder and to ask: Where does Christianity and the Church fit into this? It is an effort to make this question more than academic and to conduct class in the city and not just about the city and the Church.

Faced by frontiers of racial tensions and of displaced, rejected, uprooted peoples; confronted by both social workers and clergy in the same neighborhood and seeing both the settlement house and the church, the participants must ask: What, if any, is the uniqueness of the church?

Frontiers of technological upheaval and modern secularism are met. In the factory district or upper-middle class suburb, the questions-- Has the Church a mission here? If so, what? How is it now responding? Is this response adequate?--come to the forefront.

Throughout this week of saturation, the underlying personal vocational question is there. With the given situation, what is my place, my task? To what am I committed? What does such commitment mean? How does my present occupation as student relate to this?

This is a time of seeing but it is more; for the group cannot remain tourists. They begin to enter into the city and its life through the skins of those they meet and listen to and question. Harlem is different when a teen-age resident shows it to you and Greenwich Village becomes real when the Village bard who has lived there 50 years tells you about it. Garden City no longer seems tacked on to the end of a week or different or just too plush when the local pastor says: "Want to know what my cross is? Luxury. What's yours?" The relevancy of the Gospel to all states and conditions of men is no longer a Christian cliche; but is either a lie or a thing to be known experientially, tested and applied. The divided, class-segregated Church cannot be shrugged off easily.

Each participant sees magnified in the metropolis the cancers of his own community and church. At the same time he sees the world's problems telescoped for him to view. The hope is that he is more conscious of both the cancers and the possibilities of remedy.

Those invited to serve on the Frontier Seminar Planning Committee:

Warren Scott, Episcopal Chaplain, Atlanta University

Sam L. Laird, Director of Religious Activities, Emory University

Dan Rhoades, Asso. Prof., Christian Ethics, Candler School of Theology

Bill Holt, Minister, Trinity Methodist Church, Atlanta

Russell Edwards, Director, Wesley Foundation, University of Georgia

Roland Perdue, Presbyterian University Pastor, University of Georgia

Bob Busey, Associate Minister, Trinity Presbyterian Church, Atlanta

Shirley Guthrie, Asso. Prof., Systematic Theology and New Testament, Columbia Theological Seminary

Rosetta Gardner, Executive Director, Southern Regional National YWCA

Jackie Wilkes, Associate Director, Southern Regional National YWCA

Sammy Clark, Minister, Inner-City Mission, Savannah

Fran Patton, Member, Commission of World Missions, NSCF

Alling Jones, participant, Judson Memorial Church project, NYC

Lucy Morecock, President, Christian Association, Agnes Scott College

Vincent Harding, Mennonite Service Center, Atlanta

Leon Marion, World University Service, Atlanta

TRANSPORTATION Russell Edwards
(use church and city buses)

FINANCE Sam Laird

HOSPITALITY Bob Busey, Lucy Morcock

TOPIC/S "The Frontier and Ferment of Revolutionary Change"
"The Church on Frontiers of Ferment"
"Conservative-Liberal Movement"
(education, church, politics, industry, peace)

AREAS & PEOPLE power structures college complex
Atlanta newspapers (Negro and white) city complex rural complex (Covington)
Negro millionaire (unsuccessful, negro, Republican, Senatorial candidate) newly elected negro senator
Ralph McGill
NAACP
First Baptist Church - Roy McClain
Peachtree Road Methodist Church
Central Presbyterian Church - Fred Stair
Grady Hospital (one of nation's largest charity hospitals)- Chuck Gerkin luncheon with ministers
James Macky
Thompson - Urban League
Sam Masell, Jr. (Jewish vice-mayor)
Jewish influence in community visit to Jewish Synagogue on La Vista Police Chief Jenkins
Mayor Ivan Allen
Governor Sanders
Ex-Mayor Hartsfield
Martin Luther King, Jr.
Lonnie Cross - Black Muslims
Eric Lincoln
John Lipscomb - Board of Education
Stevens - Board of Education visit Garden Club
Archbishop Houlihan
welfare department - poor and illiterates
Trinity Church - Wesley House - Boy's Clubs exit of maids from white sections southern customs assimulated in "brash north" (Christian Century," Sept. issue - Sam Hill)
What influence did the Christian faith play in your political decision?

NEXT MEETING
December 5, 3:00-9:00 P.M.
Committee and coordinator
Bishop Short Lounge (Bishops Hall, Emory)

Saturday, April 6

2:00 - Registration begins
6:00 - Dinner at ITC
7:30 - Opening Worship, ITC Chapel
8:00 - General orientation by coordinator and chaplain.
Informal introductions and team assignments.

Sunday, April 7

Breakfast
10:00 Transportation to churches
11:00 Visit to church with you team

Big Bethel AME (Warren Scott)
Redeemer Lutheran (Sam Laird)
Trinity Presbyterian (Bob Busey)
First Baptist (Emmett Herndon) store-front churches (Bill Holt)
Piney Grove Baptist (Vincent Harding)
St. Bartholomew (Jackie Wilkes)
Immaculate Conception (JEH - Father McNulty)

Coffee with church groups, boards, ministers, etc. following the service.

Dinner with families or return to ITC.

4:30 ~~Leave for Emory University~~ Mulling Session
6:00 ~~5:45~~ Supper with Emory, Agnes Scott, A.U. students
7:00 meeting - small groups -
~~6:30 Meeting with students~~

~~8:30 Mulling session at Emory~~
9:00 worship
~~9:30 Leave for ITC~~

Monday, April 8 (Race and Class)

Morning schedule - Panel: Black Muslims - Lonnie Cross and Jeremiah X
NAACP - Jim Gipson
Urban League -
Southern Leadership Council - Andy Young

Afternoon sessions - (poorer whites)
Wesley Community Center Day Care Center
Sheltering Arms ~~Community Service~~
Savannah Street ~~Community Center~~ mission

Evening session - movies: "Nashville Story" (SCLC)
"Walk in My Shoes" ($8 rental)
"Raisin in the Sun" (rental)
Jim Wood - discussion leader

Martin Luther King, Jr.

Lunch - Auburn Street diners informal talks with men at Central and Decatur

Gerogia Council of Human Relations

Tuesday, April 9 (Housing and Education)

1. tour of housing in Atlanta - Robert Thompson (Urban League) or Ted Alexander, Jr. (Buses necessary)

2. team visits to schools: integrated (consult Greater Atlanta Council on Human Relations); white elementary and secondary schools; Negro elementary and secondary schools.

3. Evening - 1/ seminar with representative from Southern Regional Educational Board to talk about their goals and program in increasing the excellence of higher education in the South.

   2/ conversations with Letson, Stevens or some other representatives of the Atlanta school system - progress toward desegregation. Don Hollowell.

   3/ participation in A.U.'s non-western studies.

Mrs. Rolls, school board

Visit to Kirkwood areas - an area of rapid change; K. Presbyterian Church. Murphy High School - student council, civics class, etc. - What is the future?

Wednesday, April 10 (Economic Patterns and Industrial Structure)

	Breakfast
8:30	Opening remarks by coordinator
9:00	Acquaintance with general economic conditions and trends in Atl.; historic background for present picture, etc.
Lecturer:	Malcolm Bryan, Pres. Federal Reserve Bank.
or	Dr. Lloyd Raisty, V. Pres, Fed. Res. Bank.
or	John A. Sibley, Chm. of Bd. Trust Co. of Ga.
or	Dr. Noah Langdale, Pres. Ga. State College.
10:15	End lecture and discussion. Load transportation/
11:00	Visitation of industrial sights.
12:30	Lunch at industrial facilities.
1:00	Continue tour of industrial sights. Arrange for contrasts in conditions, etc.
6:00	Dinner
7:00	Discussion Panel "Industry and Economics in Ferment."
Panel:	Noyes Collingson, Lee Tally (John Stateton, Ed Forio) from coke, George Vandernord of G.E., Arthur Harris of Atlanta Paper Co., W.T. Alexander insurance exec., Dillard Munford of Do-It-Yourself, Richard H. Rich of Rich's. Herndon, Insurance pres.
9:00	Mulling session.
10:00	Chaplain; Theological implications of the day's findings, and worship.

Alternate Evening Program.

7:00	"The Negro Community in Atlanta Economics" W.T. Alexander
7:30	"The Local Industry; Advantages and Disadvantages in a Growing Community." Dillard Munford, or Richard Rich.
8:00	"The Labor-Management Proglem in an Economically Conservative Society." Possibility: National Labor leader who works with local organizations: or any one of the men not selected opening lecturer.

(Alt. Evening Programs, cont'd.)

8:30 "Expectations for the Economic Development of our age." Any of those not chosen as opening lecturer; or Ivan Allen, or William Hartsfield.

Thursday, April 11 (Political Structure - Rural and Urban)

	Breakfast
8:00	Coordinating session
8:30	Transportation
9:30	"Political Sturcture in Georgia and the South" Ralph McGill or Patterson
11:00	"Atlanta: Past, Present and Future" - Wm. B. Hartsfield
12:30	Noon-day luncheon meetings - Central Church
2:00	Leave for Canterbury Center (All Saints Church) or Ga. Tech Wesley Foundation
3:00	Interview-discussion with Lester Maddox
4:30	Break to look around Tech and meet students
6:00	Box xupper with Tech students
7:00	Panel discussion: Senator Leroy Johnson, Rep. James Mackay, Dr. Ben Kline, Mayor Ivan Allen, and Dr. Richards
9:00	Leave for ITC
9:30	Communion Service

Friday, April 12 (The Church's Response)

	Breakfast
8:30	Worship: Coordinating Session
9:00	Transportation
10:00	Visit to Peachtree Methodist Church
1:00	Luncheon with selected group of ministers
3:00	Visit to Central Presbyterian Church
5:30	Meeting with Interseminary groups from Columbia, Emory, ITC. (Columbia Seminary) "What is the church training ministers to do?"
8:30	Leave for ITC
9:00	Summary session of the seminar
11:00	Closing worship service

Saturday, April 13

Breakfast
Transportation to Buses,etc.

FRONTIERS SEMINAR PLANNING COMMITTEE
December 5: 3-9 P.M. - Emory University

Members present for the second meeting of the planning committee were: Warren Scott, Sam Laird, Bill Holt, Bob Busey, Jackie Wilkes, Alling Jones, Vincent Harding, Lucy Morecock, and Emmett Herndon. Excuses were reported from Russell Edwards, Roland Perdue, Shirley Guthrie, Sammy Clark, Fran Patton.

Even though minutes, as such, were not kept the following is a resume of the meeting and action following.

GENERAL DISCUSSION — Emmett Herndon made a statement concerning the task confronting the committee re. the planning of a frontiers seminar. He incicated that the time schedule will allow us only the months of January and February for completion of our plans, allowing one month to take care of last minute details. He emphasized the fact that we haven't even gotten moving yet with the time-consuming task ahead.

Considerable time was spent discussing this matter and it was agreed that we pursue our work and evaluate our progress at our next meeting. Concern was expressed re. the possible response to Atlanta, publicity, quotas, etc.

Sam Laird raised the question re. finance indicating that it was still vague how much would be underwritten and how much the students would be expected to carry. Since figures were not available, it was decided to pursue this matter (Laird and Herndon) and that we attempt to secure leadership from the Atlanta area in order to cut down on travel expenses.

It was decided that the coordinator and chaplain would be offered $100 honorarium plus travel and entertainment.

COORDINATOR — On December 6, ELLA BAKER confirmed her willingness to serve as coordinator.

CHAPLAIN — In light of this acceptance, Harry Smith is to be contacted re. chaplain. Second choice will be John Morris. (Herndon)

ADDITIONS TO COMMITTEE — It was suggested that the following be added to the committee: John Morris, John Yungblot, Samuel Johnson, Noyes Collingson (Quaker), James Mackay, Ed Grider (Central Pres.), Staughton Lynd (Spelman), Andy Young, Robert Thompson (Atlanta Urban League), Leslie Dunbar (Southern Regional Council), and students to be approved.

HOUSING — Jackie Wilkes reported concerning inquiries re. housing. Peachtree Manor Hotel would take the group at $3.75 per night; ITC would charge $2.00 per night and food at the rate of 58¢ breakfast, 81¢ lunch, and $1.11 dinner. Even though this matter was not completely settled, it was generally agreed, after much discussion, ITC is the likely choice.

QUOTES — A concern of the committee was the quota assigned by NSCF, i.e. one staff person and two students from an institution. Since many groups visiting the Atlanta area come in large groups from one or more campuses it was agreed that the quota for this situation should be one carload per campus or 5 students and one staff member.

NEXT MEETING — MONDAY, JANUARY 7 -- 5-10 P.M., Emory University

PROGRAM — A tentative report of the program committee is attached.

CENTRAL JURISDICTION

DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENTS' SEMINAR

OLD GAMMON CAMPUS
ATLANTA, GEORGIA

FEBRUARY 26—MARCH 2, 1963

Sponsored by the Division of the Local Church
General Board of Education
The Methodist Church
with the co-operation of the Central Jurisdiction College of Bishops

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 26

Afternoon

3:00 Registration

Evening

5:30 Dinner

7:00 - 8:30 Opening Session—Bishop M. L. Harris, presiding
Period of Worship
Introductions
Greetings—Dr. H. V. Richardson
—Dr. M. J. Wynn
Orientation—Dr. Ernest T. Dixon, Jr.
Address—Dr. Leon M. Adkins

8:45 - 9:45 Get Acquainted Period

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 27

Morning

7:00 Breakfast

8:00 Worship—Bishop E. A. Love, leader

8:30 - 12:00 Consideration of THE NATURE AND MISSION OF THE CHURCH—Dr. Howard Grimes

Afternoon

12:30 Lunch

2:00 - 5:00 Continuation of morning session—Dr. Grimes

Evening

5:30 Dinner

7:00 - 8:30 Presentation—Southern Regional Council
—Mr. Paul Anthony
Discussion Period

8:45 - 9:45 Preview of Selected A-V Resources

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 28

Morning

7:00 Breakfast

8:00 Worship—Bishop E. A. Love, leader

8:30 - 12:00 Consideration of APPROACHES TO LEADERSHIP AND PROBLEMS OF HUMAN RELATIONS
—Rev. Thomas Van Loon

Afternoon

12:30 Lunch

2:00 - 5:00 Continuation of morning session—Mr. Van Loon

DULE

Evening

5:30 Dinner

7:00 - 8:30 Presentation—Protestant Radio and TV Center
—Mr. Heyward Siddons

Discussion Period

8:45 - 9:45 Preview of Selected A-V Resources

FRIDAY, MARCH 1

Morning

7:00 Breakfast

8:00 Worship—Bishop M. W. Clair, Jr., leader

8:30 - 12:00 Consideration of GENERAL ADMINISTRATIVE RESPONSIBILITIES AND PROBLEMS OF THE DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENT —Leaders: Dr. James Dial
Dr. John Greene
Dr. Dennis Fletcher

Afternoon

12:30 Lunch

2:00 - 5:00 Continuation of morning session
—Drs. Dial, Greene, and Fletcher

Evening

5:30 Dinner

7:00 - 8:30 Gammon Theological Seminary Presentation
—Dr. M. J. Wynn

8:45 - 9:45 Preview of Selected A-V Resources

SATURDAY, MARCH 2

Morning

7:00 Breakfast

8:00 - 10:45 Informal Discussion Period led by Central Jurisdiction Bishops—Bishop C. F. Golden, presiding
Questions and Answers regarding relationships and responsibilities
Seminar evaluation
Plans for follow-up

11:00 Closing Service of Worship—Bishop Noah W. Moore, Jr.

Afternoon

12:30 Lunch
Adjournment

LEADERS AND RESOURCE PERSONS

Dr. Leon M. Adkins, General Secretary, Division of the Local Church, General Board of Education

Mr. Paul Anthony, Director of Field Activities, Southern Regional Council, Atlanta, Georgia

Bishop Matthew W. Clair, Jr., St. Louis Area

Dr. James Dial, District Superintendent, South Carolina Conference

Dr. Ernest T. Dixon, Jr., Department of General Church School Work, Division of the Local Church, General Board of Education

Dr. Dennis Fletcher, Director Section of Church Extension, Division of National Missions, Board of Missions

Bishop Charles F. Golden, Nashville-Birmingham Area

Dr. John Greene, District Superintendent, Lexington Conference

Dr. Howard Grimes, Professor of Christian Education, Perkins School of Theology, Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas

Bishop Marquis L. Harris, Atlantic Coast Area

Bishop Edgar A. Love, Baltimore Area

Bishop Noah W. Moore, Jr., New Orleans Area

Dr. H. V. Richardson, President, Interdenominational Theological Center, Atlanta, Georgia

Mr. Heyward Siddons, Program-Sales Co-ordinator, Protestant Radio and Television Center, Atlanta, Georgia

Rev. Thomas Van Loon, Director, Staff Services, Division of the Local Church, General Board of Education

Dr. M. J. Wynn, President, Gammon Theological Seminary, Atlanta, Georgia

Ga Gen

MLK

BOARD OF EDUCATION • THE METHODIST CHURCH

DIVISION OF THE LOCAL CHURCH

LEON M. ADKINS, General Secretary

DEPARTMENT OF GENERAL CHURCH SCHOOL WORK
WALTER TOWNER, DIRECTOR
RANDLE DEW
ERNEST T. DIXON, JR.
GLENN S. GOTHARD
WAYNE M. LINDECKER, JR.

POST OFFICE BOX 871
NASHVILLE 2, TENNESSEE

February 21, 1963

Mr. Paul Anthony
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Mr. Anthony:

For your information, attached is a copy of the letter I am writing Mr. Leslie Dunbar.

May I assure you that we are looking forward to your participation in the seminar on Wednesday evening, February 27. I will be arriving in Atlanta for the seminar on Tuesday, February 26. You may expect me to contact your office at that time.

Best wishes and I am looking forward to meeting and working with you.

Sincerely yours,

Ernest T. Dixon, Jr.

ETDjr/jh

February 21, 1963

Mr. Leslie W. Dunbar
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Mr. Dunbar:

I regret that a prolonged absence from the office has caused me to delay sending a reply to your letter of January 11. May I express my sincere gratitude and appreciation for your acceptance of our invitation to have a representative speak at the Central Jurisdiction District Superintendents' Seminar to be held in Atlanta.

In accordance with your recommendation, we have scheduled Mr. Paul Anthony for a presentation on Wednesday evening, February 27, 7:00 - 8:30 p.m. It is our hope that Mr. Anthony will make a formal presentation and then provide an opportunity for the men to engage in an informal discussion with him. The session will be held in the Administration Building, Old Gammon Campus, 9 McDonough Avenue.

Thank you very much for your cooperation and interest in the seminar. I trust that I will have an opportunity to meet you personally during my stay in Atlanta next week.

Sincerely yours,

Ernest T. Dixon, Jr.

ETDjr/jh

cc: Mr. Paul Anthony

COPY

Ga - Gen

THE METHODIST CHURCH

THE ATLANTIC COAST AREA
MARQUIS LAFAYETTE HARRIS, RESIDENT BISHOP
250 AUBURN AVENUE, N. E.
ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA

March 8, 1963

Mr. Paul Anthony
The Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Mr. Anthony:

One of my greatest undertakings is the task of helping my ministers in their efforts to make their ministries definitely relevant to the needs of our people. This, of course, demands an awareness of the forces at work in the communities of Florida, Georgia, and South Carolina where these ministers are assigned for service. A major portion of our annual graduate Refresher Course involving these pastors this year will be devoted to the problems and challenges of changing communities both rural and urban. The Southern Regional Council, in my judgment, is the best source from which such help might be secured.

I wonder, therefore, if you and/or some other members of the staff could give leadership in this undertaking on Tuesday, through Thursday, July 15-17. We could arrange the schedule, I believe, to suit your convenience. I should be happy to have a reply at an early date for the guidance of our program committee.

With kindest regards, I am

Sincerely yours,

Marquis Lafayette Harris

Marquis L. Harris

MLH:mm

Ga - Gen

March 14, 1963

Bishop Marquis L. Harris
The Methodist Church
The Atlantic Coast Area
250 Auburn Avenue, N.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Bishop:

We will be happy to cooperate in any way possible with your valuable program of July 15-17. It is very likely I will be available during that entire time and it is possibletthat Mrs. Tilly will be. If your program committee will let me know of the areas to be covered and the times you would want us, we will plan to be present. It is possible that we may also be able to offer some interesting publications for use by the group if you would like.

We are pleased to be of help.

Sincerely,

Paul Anthony
Director of Field Activities

schedule 2 b arranged btwn program will be divided between under direction

PA:mm

3 copies

Gen

mm

THE METHODIST CHURCH

THE ATLANTIC COAST AREA

MARQUIS LAFAYETTE HARRIS, RESIDENT BISHOP

250 AUBURN AVENUE, N. E.

ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA

March 15, 1963

Mr. Paul Anthony
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Mr. Anthony:

Thank you for your gracious letter of March 14 and the willingness of you and your staff to help us in our efforts to reach this critical problem with which so many of our ministers seem not to sense. To say nothing of being able to cope with it.

You will receive several suggestions as guidelines from our Program Committee well in advance of July 1. In general, an impact of changing communities and the need for new types of communication will be prominent among our listing of needs.

I am delighted to know that it may be possible for both Mrs. Tilley and you to be available at that time.

With warmest personal regards, I am

Sincerely yours,

Marquis L. Harris

Marquis L. Harris

MLH:mm
cc: Dr. J. S. Thomas
Reverend R. P, Fair

Newsletter

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA 4, PA. • AREA CODE 215 • BAring 2-1106 • CABLE, NATSTUD

April 16, 1963

Dear Friend:

The United States National Student Association, a confederation of student bodies and student governments from across the country, would like to announce its intention of holding a Civil Rights Leadership Institute for forty Southern students. The Institute will be held from July 15 to August 12th, on a college campus in Atlanta, Georgia. The Association will pay full travel expenses, room and board, and administrative expenses for each of the participants selected.

The purpose of the Institute is to provide students who are interested in participating in the Civil Rights Movement with an intensive study of historical, political, economic and other factors as they relate to Civil Rights in the South. The participants will discuss the various means of social change and will spend some time analyzing the power structure of Southern communities. The last week of the Institute will be devoted to discussing the goals of the Civil Rights movement, methods of organization, and ways of developing political awareness, responsibility and effectiveness within a Negro community. It is hoped that students who participate will use the information and experience gained at the Institute by providing more effective leadership in Civil Rights activities on their campuses and in their communities.

Four people who have been active in Civil Rights work will serve as staff-teachers for the student group. The Institute will also bring several resource people to lecture on subjects relevant to their field of competency, and a major portion of the work of the students will be discussion, research, and writing on topics from a planned curriculum.

If sufficient finances are available, NSA will take part, or all of the Institute participants to the National Student Congress in Bloomington, Indiana, during the last two weeks of August.

We are enclosing an application form. If you know of any students who would be interested in attending the Institute and who you think would profit from such an experience, would you please have him fill out the application and send it to the Southern Office, Room 701, 41 Exchange Place, S.E., Atlanta 3, Georgia, by May 15th. If you have any questions on the Institute, please address them to either Connie Curry at the above address or to Tim Manring, NSA, 3457 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia 4, Pennsylvania.

Very sincerely,

Timothy A. Manring
Timothy A. Manring
National Affairs Vice-President

Constance Curry
Constance Curry
Director, Southern Office

ASSOCIATED WITH: American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U. S. Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • Young Adult Council • American Association for the U.N. • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

President
W. DENNIS SHAUL
University of Notre Dame
Assistant to the President
DOROTHEA M. KRISCH
Saint John's University

•

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
TIMOTHY A. MANRING
Washington State University
Program Vice President
STEPHEN BROCKBANK
University of Utah
Program Vice President
DENNIS R. YEAGER
Loyola of the South
Director, Academic Freedom Project
NEAL JOHNSTON
University of Chicago
Administrative Assistant
J. HARRIET DIETZ
Chatham College
Student Government Information Service Director
MARCIA KIRKPATRICK
University of Wisconsin

•

West Coast Office
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California
Educational Travel, Inc.
20 West 38th Street
New York 18, New York
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California
Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

•

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
DONALD SMITH
University of Texas
Administrative Assistant
THOMAS F. OLSON
University of Minnesota
Special Assistant
JOSEPH LOVE
Stanford University
Special Assistant
ROBERT W. BACKOFF
University of Illinois
Special Assistant
HENRY N. PATTERSON, JR.
University of North Carolina
Special Assistant
MICHAEL GREENE
Antioch College
Director, Foreign Student Leadership Project
GEORGE HAZELRIGG
University of Oklahoma
Director Special Exchanges
FRANK CRUMP
Columbia University

•

NATIONAL ADVISORS
Sidney Hertzberg
Editor
Current Magazine
Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame
Russell Kirk
Editor
The University Bookman
Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University
Milton Shapp
Chairman of the Board
Jerrold Electronics

•

Chairman National Advisory Board
DR. EUGENE FONTINELL
Professor
Queens College
Chairman Financial Advisory Board
RUTH HAGY BROD

APPLICATION FORM

NSA CIVIL RIGHTS LEADERSHIP INSTITUTE
July 15 - August 12, 1963
Atlanta, Georgia

General Instructions

A. Please fill in this form as completely as possible. It will be used as a basis for selection of participants in the NSA Civil Rights Leadership Institute.

B. Please ignore questions that do not apply to your own experience.

C. Please print clearly or type.

D. All applications and supporting materials must be received by May 15, 1963.

1. name Mr. / Mrs. / Miss _____
(last) (first) (middle)

2. age _____

3. school _____

4. class & expected date of graduation _____

5. current school address _____

school phone number _____

dates you can be reached here _____

6. permanent home address _____

home phone number _____

dates you can be reached here _____

7. summer address _____

phone number _____

dates you can be reached here _____

8. parent or guardian _____

address _____

9. your field of academic concentration _____

10. Who contacted you or how did you hear about the Institute?

11. Please attach a statement of 1000 words or less giving:
    (1) A brief autobiographical sketch.
    (2) Your interest and experience in Civil Rights work.
    (3) Why you are interested in attending the Institute.
    (4) An analysis of your campus or surrounding community, describing opportunities for Civil Rights work.

12. Please have a transcript of your college grades sent to the address given in number 13.

13. When you have completed this form, please return it immediately to:

    Southern Office, USNSA
    Room 701, 41 Exchange Place, S.E.
    Atlanta 3, Georgia

14. (See below)

Signature _____

Date of birth _____

Place of birth _____

---

14. Please list below the name, address and position of one faculty member or community Civil Rights leader who is in a position to evaluate your abilities to benefit from the Institute and to contribute to Civil Rights activities in the South. Note: Recommendation forms will be sent directly to him.

(IMPORTANT) If you are unable to return this entire application immediately, please detach this section and mail it to us now.

recommender's name _____

position _____

address _____

your name _____

college _____

address _____

Gen

108 Burbank Drive, S. W.
Atlanta 14, Georgia
April 24, 1963

Mr. Paul Anthony
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Mr. Anthony:

On Wednesday evening, May 5 at 7:45 o'clock, the Board of Social Concern of the Georgia Annual Conference will observe its Anniversary. We are allotted a period of 45 minutes for workshop on "Negro Housing and Job Opportunity In Georgia." You have been chosen and recommended by Bishop M. L. Harris to lead in this workshop.

I am taking this opportunity to ask and invite you to participate on this panel as you are qualified to give us important information, and also to answer and discuss any questions that might arise from the audience. I feel that this will be the highlight of the Annual Conference which will convene on May 15-19, 1963 at 915 West 38th Street, Savannah, Georgia.

I trust that you can find the time to accept this invitation.

With every good wish, I am

Very truly yours,

A C Epps

A. C. Epps, Chairman
Conference Board of Christian
Social Concern

ACE:r

Ga Gen

April 25, 1963

Mr. A. C. Epps
Chairman
Conference Board of Christian Social Concern
108 Burbank Drive, S.W.
Atlanta 14, Georgia

Dear Mr. Epps:

Regrettably, a prior commitment in Alabama makes it impossible to accept your invitation to be with you in Savannah on May 15.

May I suggest Mrs. Frances Pauley, Executive Director of the Georgia Council on Human Relations, 41 Exchange Place, S.E., Room 502, Atlanta 3; or Mr. Noyes Collinson, Director of the Merit Employment Project of the American Friends Service Committee in Atlanta, 41 Exchange Place, S.E., Atlanta 3.

Either of these persons should make valuable contributions to your program if they can be present.

Again, my sincere regrets.

Sincerely,

Paul Anthony
Director of Field Activities

PA:mm

South Proj

MW

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA 4, PA. • AREA CODE 215 • BAring 2-1106 • CABLE, NATSTUD

June 4, 1963

Mr. Paul Anthony
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Mr. Anthony:

I was very glad you were able to attend the Advisory Board meeting of the Southern Project last Wednesday. Dennis and I both enjoyed the opportunity to discuss with you the problems of the Southern Project and the Association's work in the South. We found the advisory board meeting to be enjoyable and extremely worthwhile in advising us as to the work of the Southern Project and the Association.

You will recall we discussed at some length the renewal of the Southern Project and the directions that it should take in the future. As I said at the Advisory Board meeting, I am not sure when Mr. Hahn's board of Directors will be meeting to decide upon our request for renewal of the grant, but I feel that it will be sometime in the near future. I know that Mr. Hahn and his board rely a good deal on the opinions of the people on the advisory board. Consequently we would appreciate any assistance which you could give by writing Mr. Hahn, concerning continuation of the work of the project. Mr. Hahn's address is: 250 Park Ave., New York 17, N.Y.

I am enclosing a copy of the prospectus ~~af~~ you did not get one at the advisory board meeting.

Thanking you in advance, I remain

Very sincerely,

Tim Manring

Timothy A. Manring
National Affairs Vice President

TAM:lp
Enclosure

ASSOCIATED WITH: American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U. S. Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • Young Adult Council • American Association for the U.N. • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

President
W. DENNIS SHAUL
University of Notre Dame
Assistant to the President
DOROTHEA M. KRISCH
Saint John's University

•

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
TIMOTHY A. MANRING
Washington State University
Program Vice President
STEPHEN BROCKBANK
University of Utah
Program Vice President
DENNIS R. YEAGER
Loyola of the South
Director, Academic Freedom Project
NEAL JOHNSTON
University of Chicago
Administrative Assistant
J. HARRIET DIETZ
Chatham College
Student Government Information Service Director
MARCIA KIRKPATRICK
University of Wisconsin

•

West Coast Office
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California
Educational Travel, Inc.
20 West 38th Street
New York 18, New York
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California
Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

•

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
DONALD SMITH
University of Texas
Administrative Assistant
THOMAS F. OLSON
University of Minnesota
Special Assistant
JOSEPH LOVE
Stanford University
Special Assistant
ROBERT W. BACKOFF
University of Illinois
Special Assistant
HENRY N. PATTERSON, JR.
University of North Carolina
Special Assistant
MICHAEL GREENE
Antioch College
Director, Foreign Student Leadership Project
GEORGE HAZELRIGG
University of Oklahoma
Director Special Exchanges
FRANK CRUMP
Columbia University

•

NATIONAL ADVISORS
John Cogley
Staff Administrator
The Fund for the Republic
Sidney Hertzberg
Editor
Current Magazine
Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame
Russell Kirk
Editor
The University Bookman
Ralph McGill
Publisher
Atlanta Constitution
Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University
Milton Shapp
Chairman of the Board
Jerrold Electronics

•

Chairman National Advisory Board
DR. EUGENE FONTINELL
Professor
Queens College
Chairman Financial Advisory Board
RUTH HAGY BROD

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

Proposal For The Renewal Of

THE SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS PROJECT

The United States National Student Association requests a grant of $68,000.00 from the Field Foundation to extend the Southern Student Human Relations Project for two years. While it is not possible here to detail all the changes which have occurred in the South during the last four years, it is necessary to remember that these changes have not only brought new conditions, but also brought different means by which students and others seek social justice in the South. The Southern Project has created some of these changes; others have been sustained by the Project. We feel that the changes which have occurred in the tools used to seek social justice and in the attitudes of those involved in the struggle provide great challenges and, at the same time, constitute an increasing need for the continuation of the work of the Association's Southern Project.

Background

The Spring of 1960 marked the beginning of intense efforts, through direct action, to establish the equality of the Negro in the South. Sit-ins, freedom rides, voter-registration projects and demonstrations have been employed in the struggle for equal rights. Because the Association strongly believes that equality before the law is a prerequisite for sound relations between human beings, the Southern Project has been involved in much of this activity. Yet the Association realizes that increasing direct action tends to sharpen the differences between elements of the society and causes unification within the more extreme elements; the events in Birmingham, Alabama are the latest example. Our concern is to reach those students active in the struggle for civil rights, and give them understanding and knowledge; to do this the work of the Project, we believe, should be continued.

By January 1, 1964, the Southern Project will have sponsored, since January 1, 1962, a series of interracial conferences bringing together students from every state in the South. The fact that the Project is not limited to working with member schools has proven a great advantage. Participants of the past three Southern Student Human Relations Seminars have played key roles in the desegregation of Clemson and the University of Mississippi. They have helped, as well, to prepare for desegregation at the University of Alabama and other colleges and universities, both private and public, in the South. The need for that work will not decrease in the next two years; nor will the Project's opportunity to work closely with groups such as the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee. Perhaps no organization working in the South has enjoyed as much success as the Southern Project in working with activist groups while at the same time cooperating with the more traditional, less directly involved organizations. In fact, the Project has often served a useful role as moderator among groups with different approaches to the same issues.

In the past four years an increasing number of public and private institutions of higher education have either desegregated or announced publicly their desire to accept Negro students. These steps have in no way brought about any meaningful integration on desegregated campuses. "The Negro," or "the White," as the case may be, remains isolated emotionally, intellectually, and socially from campus life.

We feel that this compounds the need to work, not only with regions and larger areas, but on individual campuses, developing programs which will improve human relations and bring the members of minority student groups into the mainstream of campus activity.

As the legal barriers to integration are broken down, the issues facing the South and those in the civil rights movement become increasingly complex. The work of the present human relations conferences should be augmented, we believe, by a further task. Activist students in the civil rights movement need an intensive leadership training experience, and often, a more extensive study of the fields of history, economics, education and politics and how these issues relate to the civil rights struggle. This training and academic experience can, to some degree, be supplied through the Project.

In many respects the continued work of the Southern Project would be to build and set forth an outline of the future Southern society--the society which must be built as the present social structure changes and dies.

Proposal

The Project staff shall consist of a director, an assistant director and a secretary who shall work as employees of the United States National Student Association. The staff shall operate with the continued advice of an inter-organizational advisory board.

The addition of an assistant director would allow the Project to begin to develop more intensive programming on specific campuses. The assistant director would also provide an opportunity to develop projects for those students who are working in direct action activity with other organizations, in order to give them a broader perspective of the civil rights movement.

The goals of the Project would continue to be:

1. To establish contact with and among Southern students of good will, thereby helping to promote a concern for human relations within the "all-important" college peer group.

2. To provide an interpretative background for students both interested and disinterested in the current trends of the Southern desegregation movement--legally, educationally, economically, and politically.

3. To offer constructive alternatives for action to the current activist element among Southern students interested in civil rights and human relations.

4. To allow an interracial, interpersonal experience totally different from previous contacts for most of those participating to reinforce the more formal content of the program.

5. To serve as an avenue whereby Southern students can come to view themselves more in their roles as citizens of the nation and the world and less as citizens of the region.

6. To develop new practical applications and leadership for good campus and community relations.

PROPOSED BUDGET FOR THIRD GRANT

NSA SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS PROJECT -- 2 YEARS

I. Project Staff and Materials
Director's Salary	$12,000.00
Assistant Director's Salary	8,000.00
Secretary's Salary	7,000.00
Travel - Director and NSA Staff	7,200.00
Campus Program and Resource Materials	1,000.00
		$35,200.00
II. Seventh and Eighth Human Relations Seminars
Salary and Fees for Consultant	1,500.00
Travel - Staff and Experts	2,800.00
Travel - Participants	4,500.00
Room and Board	6,500.00
Resource and Program Materials	600.00
Promotion	500.00
		$16,400.00
III. City, State and Area Conferences
Travel Assistance for Students	2,500.00
Travel - Speakers and Experts	2,000.00
Working Papers and Materials	500.00
Local Promotion and Administration	500.00
		$ 5,500.00
IV. Advisory Board Meetings
Travel - Advisors	2,000.00
Travel - Staff	500.00
Room and Board	400.00
		$ 2,900.00
V. Administration and Support
Office Supplies	2,000.00
Postage and Shipping	1,000.00
Telephone and Telegraph	3,000.00
General Administration	2,000.00
		$ 8,000.00
	TOTAL	$68,000.00

THE METHODIST CHURCH
THE ATLANTIC COAST AREA
MARQUIS LAFAYETTE HARRIS, RESIDENT BISHOP
250 AUBURN AVENUE, N. E.
ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA

June 6, 1963

Mr. Paul Anthony
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Mr. Anthony:

Enclosed you will find announcements for the Pastors' Refresher School to be held at Gammon Theological Seminary July 15-19.

You will hear from Dr. James S. Thomas within the next few days to discuss details of schedule, etc.

With kindest regards, I am

Sincerely yours,

Marquis L. Harris

MLH:mm
Enclosures-2
cc: Dr. James S. Thomas

Gen

June 11, 1963

Bishop Marquis L. Harris
The Methodist Church
The Atlantic Coast Area
250 Auburn Avenue, N.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Bishop Harris:

Dr. Thomas and I are in touch about arrangements for the workshop.

I look forward to being with you at that time.

With best wishes.

Sincerely,

Paul Anthony
Director of Field Activities

PA:mm

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA 4, PA. • AREA CODE 215 • BAring 2-1106 • CABLE, NATSTUD

June 26, 1963

Mr. Paul Anthony
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsythe Street, N. W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Mr. Anthony:

I want to thank you for your assistance in writing to Mr. Maxwell Hahn regarding the renewal of the Southern Human Relations Project. On June 20 I received a letter from Mr. Hahn indicating that the foundation had voted to renew the project and provide us with the $68,000. requested. This means that we will be searching for an assistant director to aid Connie Curry in her work. If you have any people in mind that you could suggest for this work, I would certainly appreciate your forwarding their names to me.

In addition to that I am enclosing a copy of the revised prospectus which Dennis Yeager has proposed on a project in Southern educational problems. You will recall we discussed this project at our last southern advisory board meeting in May. Upon returning to Philadelphia from the meeting I discussed the suggestions made with Dennis and he has drafted the enclosed prospectus and outline for the project. Before submitting it to a foundation we would certainly like to get the views of as many people as possible on the proposed program. Consequently, would you be able tomake any suggestions regarding the outline of the project and the approach we have taken. I hope that you will feel free to be critical where criticism is necessary and make all suggestions which you feel are appropriate. We hope to submit the prospectus to foundations during the summer in order to begin the project this fall.

Once again I wish to thank you for your assistance and I look forward to hearing from you regarding the project on southern educational problems.

Very sincerely,

Timothy A. Manring

Timothy A. Manring
National Affairs Vice President

tam;ep

ASSOCIATED WITH: American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U. S. Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • Young Adult Council • American Association for the U.N. • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

President
W. DENNIS SHAUL
University of Notre Dame
Assistant to the President
DOROTHEA M. KRISCH
Saint John's University

•

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
TIMOTHY A. MANRING
Washington State University
Program Vice President
STEPHEN BROCKBANK
University of Utah
Program Vice President
DENNIS R. YEAGER
Loyola of the South
Director, Academic Freedom Project
NEAL JOHNSTON
University of Chicago
Administrative Assistant
J. HARRIET DIETZ
Chatham College
Student Government Information Service Director
MARCIA KIRKPATRICK
University of Wisconsin

•

West Coast Office
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California
Educational Travel, Inc.
20 West 38th Street
New York 18, New York
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California
Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

•

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
DONALD SMITH
University of Texas
Administrative Assistant
THOMAS F. OLSON
University of Minnesota
Special Assistant
JOSEPH LOVE
Stanford University
Special Assistant
ROBERT W. BACKOFF
University of Illinois
Special Assistant
HENRY N. PATTERSON, JR.
University of North Carolina
Special Assistant
MICHAEL GREENE
Antioch College
Director, Foreign Student Leadership Project
GEORGE HAZELRIGG
University of Oklahoma
Director Special Exchanges
FRANK CRUMP
Columbia University

•

NATIONAL ADVISORS
John Cogley
Staff Administrator
The Fund for the Republic
Sidney Hertzberg
Editor
Current Magazine
Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame
Russell Kirk
Editor
The University Bookman
Ralph McGill
Publisher
Atlanta Constitution
Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University
Milton Shapp
Chairman of the Board
Jerrold Electronics

•

Chairman National Advisory Board
DR. EUGENE FONTINELL
Professor
Queens College
Chairman Financial Advisory Board
RUTH HAGY BROD

A PROPOSAL FOR A PROJECT ON SOUTHERN EDUCATION

BACKGROUND

Throughout its history, the UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION has had a genuine concern for the issues confronting higher education in the United States and the student role in dealing with these issues. One of the results of this concern has been an increasing belief that the American college student has a legitimate and meaningful role to play in determining the future of higher education. Another result, a result that is more peripheral, has been a realization that there are elements in Southern history -- and in the contemporary South -- that pose special problems for higher education in that region.

Most of the acute problems in Southern education directly involve the relation of the community to the university. It should be noted (as, all too frequently, it has not been) that the current situation in Southern education is the result of complex factors. It is not simply a matter of racial segregation, nor is it merely a matter of the South's economic condition. Education in the South is the product of the Southern society. This undoubtedly, is the case in any educational system; but it is particularly true that in the change-resistant South, education is meant to reflect the society and not to submit it to examination.

Because of the conviction that students have a meaningful contribution to make to higher education and that there are problems peculiar to Southern education, USNSA wishes to undertake a project that would assist Southern students in understanding their educational system and contributing to its improvement.

AREAS OF CONCENTRATION

This project would attempt to provide Southern students with information and action programs in a number of problem areas.

One of the most important areas in which the project would work would be that of academic freedom. It is particularly important to arouse concern for academic freedom in an area of the country that has never developed a real tradition of free inquiry. Beyond this, however, it is even more important to attempt to arouse such concern in a time of social change in the South. We need only examine recent history to see the impact that attempts to preserve Southern tradition has had in restricting the freedom of the academic community. The project would attempt to develop student awareness of individual violations of academic freedom and, more important, of the pressures and social conditions that lead to such violations. Beyond arousing concern for academic freedom, the project could encourage regional cooperation among student governments and individuals in the defense of academic freedom for students and faculty members.

The Southern university, traditionally, has not offered students an opportunity to submit their society to objective examination. This fact cannot be attributed to violations of academic freedom alone, but must also rest with the faculty members, the text books, courses offered and the nature of co-curricular presentations on the campus. This project would act as a direct stimulant to free inquiry by merely raising the question of the Southern educational tradition. More important, the project could directly encourage students to initiate studies of the curriculum, the faculty resources in the social sciences, and the variety of viewpoints offered in the informal intellectual life of the campus. Using such studies as a basis, the students could undertake action projects designed to expand the opportunities for social inquiry on their own campuses.

The Negro institutions of the South would present the project with a particular type of problem, but, nonetheless, one particularly suitable for student action. Part of the work of the project would be devoted to arousing among students of the predominately white universities a concern for the quality of education being offered at the Negro universities. Programs based on this concern could be initiated on the white campuses that would tend to alleviate the isolation of the Negro campuses. Such projects would be student exchanges, book drives for libraries at Negro colleges which have lost their accreditation due to inadequate libraries, and student initiation of teacher incentive campaigns designed to interest graduates of white colleges in teaching in Negro colleges. Much of the work of the project could also be devoted to arousing among the students of the Negro campuses an interest in the quality of their own education and assisting them with programs designed to help eliminate the inequities it fosters.

One of the problems that continues to plague southern education is that of lack of financial support. While part of this problem can be attributed to the economic condition of the South, much of it must be attributed to indifference on the part of those who would benefit from better education. The project would conduct research on the current national and state proposals on higher education that would affect the South and encourage students to take an active part in influencing legislation on higher education. Thus , the project would keep students informed on the progress being made in the public financing of higher education and encourage them to support programs that would benefit education in the South.

Many of the problems of Southern education can be attributed to a lack of understanding (on the part of students and educators) of the historical forces that have shaped the region's present concept of higher education. The project would devote part of its time to research and dissemination of information on the Southern educational tradition for students and educators.

While the project would not be able to work in all of these areas at any one time, it would be able, from time to time, to devote some of its attention to all of them. The project would be able to obtain a fund of information in all of these areas that would enable it to meet the needs of students who were interested in any one of them.

PROPOSED PROGRAM

This project would be geared to developing in-depth programming on individual campuses. In order to do this, the project would need a vast fund of general information on Southern education as well as information on specific state and campus needs. It would also need an extensive list of reliable resource people among educators and students on individual campuses.

In order to achieve this, the project would devote most of its first year to research and to the expansion of its personal contacts. The project director (who would serve a two-year term of office) would spend most of the first year conducting this research and contacting individuals who are willing to work with the project.

ADVISORY BOARD

Part of the director's work in the first year would be devoted to establishing an advisory board of Southern educators who are interested in the project. This board would advise the director on the long-range development of the project, work with programs on their own campuses, and develop contacts with other educational organizations concerned with Southern education.

RESEARCH - FIRST YEAR

The project director would devote much of his own time to research on academic freedom, Negro education, public financing of higher education, and the tradition of Southern education. In addition to his own research, he would appoint three campus commissions (one each in North Carolina, Louisiana, and Georgia) to do research on educational problems of these states. Each commission would place major emphasis on examining the arrangements for public financing of education in its state. It would spend time in research on any violations of academic freedom that occur in the state during its studies. It would also be important for the commission to conduct a thorough study of the needs of the Negro institutions in the state. Each commission would prepare a research report at the end of the year that would detail its findings on the present needs of the state and suggest meaningful student action in that state.

At the head of each of these commissions would be a student on a $100. fellowship (made available by the project) which would be revewable in the second semester of the year, if his work proved satisfactory.

CONFERENCES - FIRST YEAR

The project director would be responsible for holding three area conferences, devoted to both area and South-wide problems, for educators and students. Each conference would involve, at least, a four-day program for 30 students and 12 educators. These conferences would expand the contacts of the project and allow the participants to test and exchange their ideas and experiences. They would provide the stimulation of discussion on the campuses sending participants. The opportunity provided by the conferences for introducing educators to the project would expand the research sources of the director. The project director would prepare working papers, arrange the conference in cooperation with the host school, and provide a well-rounded speaker program for the conference. At the end of the first year, students in every Southern state would have had an opportunity to participate in one of these conferences.

PILOT PROJECTS - FIRST YEAR

The project director would choose four campuses on which to conduct pilot projects during the first year. He would find at least ten students on each of these campuses to take part in the pilot projects. These students would participate in a year-long seminar on Southern education, under the project director's guidance and with the assistance of faculty members on the campus. These students would also conduct forums, discussion groups, and information campaigns on their campuses with materials made available by the project. These pilot projects would be test cases for the in-depth programming that would be the most important part of the project's work. The students from these projects would provide a nucleus around which the area conferences would be built. They would be able to serve as resource persons and administrative assistants for the conferences. The campuses chosen for the pilot projects could serve as the hosts for the area conferences.

TRAVEL - FIRST YEAR

Besides the travel involved in the area conferences and pilot projects, the project director would be expected to make short visits to twenty other schools in the South. The purpose of these visits would be to find campuses on which in-depth programs could be initiated in the following year and to present some of the students and educators on these campuses with a basic idea of the project.

SUMMER - FIRST YEAR

During the spring of the first year, the project director would choose fifteen schools (based on his previous travel) to participate in the in-depth programs of the second year. He would also choose one student at each of these schools to participate in an intensive two-week seminar (see appendix) on Southern education during the summer. This seminar would provide the students with an opportunity to study Southern education in detail as well as an opportunity to learn the techniques to be used in conducting the programs on their campuses. These students would serve as the chairmen of the programs on their respective campuses.

Besides preparing this seminar, the director would use the summer to prepare publications, compile his research, and plan the program for the coming year.

SECOND YEAR

In the second year, the Project would devote much of its time to administering the in-depth programs at individual schools. The number of participating schools would be expanded to fifteen in the second year. The programs at these schools would be patterned after the pilot projects and conducted by the participants of the summer seminar in cooperation with the Project Director.

The individual state research would be followed up with three state conferences in each of the states studied the previous year. These conferences would be oriented toward providing the participants with knowledge of the development of education in their respective states and ideas for action programs to influence future educational development. The research grants would be given to three new commission directors in different states.

The process of expanding contacts by brief campus visits would continue, in order to provide new personnel for the future development of the project. The research, of course, would be a continuing concern of the project.

CONCLUSION

Through such a program of research, conferences, campus programming, and personal contact with students and educators, USNSA feels that it will be able to assist Southern students in determining and fulfilling their role in the future of regional education. The students of the South are probably the group (within the academic community) that has the least commitment to the educational status quo. Hopefully, USNSA will be able to take advantage of this situation by using knowledgeable and responsible programming to develop a group of students dedicated to the improvement of Southern education.

FINANCES

In order to undertake this project, USNSA is requesting a grant of $26,500.00

BUDGET

Salaries:
Project director	$ 8,000.	(two years)
½ secretary	3,000.	(two years)
Travel:
Project director	2,000.	(two years)
Conferences:
Three area conferences	1,200.
Summer Conference
Travel - participants	800.
Travel - resource	300.
Room and Board (15 participants and resource people)	1,200.
Three State Conferences (second year)	600.
General and advisory board	2,000.
Fellowships:
Commission directors	1,200.	(two years)
Publications:
Academic Freedom	250.
Negro Education	250.
Financing of Southern Education	250.
History and Tradition	250.
Programming Guide	250.
Office:
Telephone	800.	(two years)
Mailing	750.	(two years)
Rent	2,400.	(two years)
Miscellaneous and equipment	1,000.
	$26,500.00

APPENDIX

SUMMER SEMINAR

Much of the content of the summer seminar will have to be determined by the project director based on the experience of his first year. The length of this seminar, as well, might have to be increased as the seminar takes shape. At present, it seems that two weeks would be a minimum. The seminar will cover at least the following areas:

1) Southern history and tradition

2) History and development of Southern education

3) General educational philosophy

4) The role of the university in the society and the traditional role of the Southern university

5) The role of the Southern university in a changing society

6) Negro education in the South

7) Public finance of Southern education

8) The student role in educational reform

9) General programming in higher education for college students

10) Specific programming devoted to preparing the projects that will be undertaken on the campuses the following school year.

The seminar will include reading periods for the participants. A required reading list will be prepared, and the participants will be expected to do some reading from a supplementary reading list during the seminar.

Ga - Gen VJ JWD PA

NALL, MILLER, CADENHEAD & DENNIS
ATTORNEYS AT LAW
2434 BANK OF GEORGIA BUILDING
ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA

SAMUEL A. MILLER
A. PAUL CADENHEAD
DOUGLAS DENNIS
JAMES W. DORSEY
EDWARD S. WHITE
HAMILTON DOUGLAS, JR.
WILLIAM W. GRIFFIN
DONALD M. FAIN
THEODORE G. FRANKEL
A. DAVID KAHN
RALPH S. FORCE
THOMAS A. RICE
C. BRAXTON POPE
C. HENRY FREAS, JR.
MICHAEL D. ALEMBIK
WALTER H. ALFORD

A. WALTON NALL COUNSEL

JACKSON 2-2200

July 1, 1963

Mr. Paul Anthony
Director of Field Activities
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Mr. Anthony:

This will acknowledge receipt of and thank you for your check covering the expenses of my recent trip to Jacksonville, Florida. I hope that I have been able in some measure to "assist" in the peaceful desegregation of Jacksonville's schools.

Cordially,

James W. Dorsey

JAMES W. DORSEY

JWD:jak

ATLANTIC COAST AREA

of

THE METHODIST CHURCH

REFRESHER PASTORS' SCHOOL

Held At

GAMMON THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

SOUTH ATLANTA CAMPUS

JULY 15-19, 1963

Sponsored By

THE DEPARTMENT OF MINISTERIAL EDUCATION

DIVISION OF HIGHER EDUCATION

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE METHODIST CHURCH

in cooperation with

THE ATLANTIC COAST AREA

THE BISHOP'S MESSAGE

BISHOP M. LAFAYETTE HARRIS

To the Ministerial members of the Annual Conferences comprising the Atlantic Coast Area,

Greetings:

A foremost challenge which faces the ordained Christian ministry today is how to communicate the Gospel message effectively to a world in which social processes and values are undergoing such rapid change. The Pastors' Refresher's School for 1963 makes a serious effort to address itself to this challenge. In addition to the usual special lecturers and workshops, a new seminar on population trends and their effects upon community change which impose new demands upon the Ministries of the church will be featured. Special staff members from the Southern Regional Council will give leadership in this phase of activity.

We urge you as members of your Annual Conference who are actively engaged in the pastoral ministry to take advantage of what promises to be a most rewarding series of experiences. PLEASE MAKE YOUR PLANS NOW. COME ON TIME AND REMAIN FOR THE ENTIRE PASTORS' REFRESHER'S SCHOOL AND AREA COUNCIL WHICH BEGINS AT 2 P.M. FRIDAY, JULY 19, AND ENDS SATURDAY NOON, JULY 20.

BISHOP MARQUIS L. HARRIS

PASTORAL PSYCHOLOGY AND COUNSELING

THE REVEREND GEORGE A. TATE

The product of a Methodist parsonage, the Reverend Mr. Tate is a native of Staunton, Virginia. He attended and finished the public schools of Staunton, after which he came to Morristown Junior College. After graduation from Morristown, he came to Clark College where he made a brilliant scholastic record. Clark conferred the A.B. degree on him in 1947. His education for the ministry has been equally brilliant. He enrolled at Gammon Theological Seminary in September 1947 and received the B.D. degree in 1950. For the past few years he has been engaged in graduate work at Northwestern University and Garrett Biblical Institute. His outstanding study with an authority in Pastoral Counseling, Dr. Carroll Wise, amply fits him to lecture in this area.

Mr. Tate has had broad experience in the pastorate: at McKendree Church, Cumberland, Maryland for two years and Ebenezer Church in Huntingdon, West Virginia for two years. After a highly successful tenure as Chaplain of Clark College for three years, Mr. Tate went to Chicago where he presently serves as Pastor of St. Luke Church and part-time Chaplain of Chicago State Tuberculosis Sanitarium.

Mr. Tate is married and is the father of a five-year old daughter.

BIBLICAL THEOLOGY

DR. EVERETT TILSON

Dr. Everett Tilson, a professor of Old Testament at the Ohio Methodist Theological School at Delaware, Ohio, received the A.B. degree from King College. After completing work for the B.D. and Ph.D. degrees from Vanderbilt University Divinity School, he did post-doctoral studies at Hebrew Union of Cincinnati (a Jewish Theological School) and at Yale Divinity School.

Dr. Tilson, who served eight years on the Vanderbilt University Divinity School faculty, has served as platform speaker for various state, regional and national student, lay and ministerial conferences, many of them non-Methodist or interdenominational in character. He has appeared as chapel and/or Religious Emphasis Week speaker on the campuses of numerous colleges and universities.

Dr. Tilson is a member of the National Association of Biblical Instructors and of the Society of Biblical Literature and Exegesis. In 1957, he served as chairman of the Conference on Christian Faith and Human Relations; from 1958-60, as president of the King College Alumni Association; in 1960, as president of the southern section of the National Association of Biblical Instructors.

He has contributed to more than 20 periodicals or journals, including Religion in Life, Encounter, Journal of Bible and Religion, The Pulpit, and The Christian Century. His books include Segregation and the Bible and The Conscience of Culture.

CONTEMPORARY PREACHING

DR. JAMES S. THOMAS

A native of Orangeburg, South Carolina, Dr. Thomas began his education in the elementary school of Claflin College. After completing elementary and high school training in Sumter, South Carolina, he returned to Claflin and received the A.B. degree in 1939. The B.D. degree was earned at Gammon Theological Seminary in 1943 and the M.A. at Drew University in 1944. Cornell University conferred upon him the Ph.D. degree in 1953.

His experiences include the pastorate of the Orangeburg Circuit in 1942 and 1943; the college chaplaincy at South Carolina State College, 1944-46; the pastorate of the York charge 1946-48. He was professor and Director of the Practical Field at Gammon Theological Seminary, 1947-53. Since 1953, he has been Associate Director in the Division of Higher Education of the Board of Education of The Methodist Church.

He is a frequent speaker at college and university vesper and convocation services, a member of the South Carolina Conference, and Chairman of the annual conference Board of Ministerial Training and Qualifications.

EDUCATOR

DR. NENIEN C. MCPHERSON, JR.

Dr. Nenien C. McPherson, Jr., is a native of Douglasville, Georgia. He has had extensive training and experience as a business man, theological professor, and pastor.

After graduating from Emory University, he went into business. He went from the Vice Presidency of Haralson Trust Company of Atlanta to Garrett Biblical Institute and Northwestern University. In three years, he had earned both the B.C. and Ph.D. degrees. In 1943, Garrett recognized his outstanding service by awarding him an honorary degree.

Dr. McPherson's rich ministerial background includes teaching Theology and Ethics at Garrett and Northwestern; Southern Methodist University; and Gammon. From 1936 to 1939, he was Director of Ministerial Education for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and from 1942 to 1946 was the President of Wesleyan College.

He has served as pastor of Peachtree Road Methodist Church, Atlanta, 1939-42; St. John's Methodist Church, Memphis, 1946-53; Fourth Avenue Methodist Church, Louisville, 1953-56; and Grace Methodist Church, Dayton, Ohio, from 1956 to the present.

He is a frequent writer and is in demand as a lecturer and preacher.

THE PASTORS' SCHOOL

PURPOSE, PLAN, AND PROGRAM

In July of 1961, under the leadership of Bishop M. LaFayette Harris, the Atlantic Coast Area held its first Refresher School for Pastors. The first session enrolled over 100 men from all sections of the area. With the full cooperation of Dr. Harley Zeigler of the Department of Ministerial Education, the Division of Higher Education, the Steering Committee recommended a continuation of the school. This is its third session.

The purpose of the School is to broaden and deepen the resources of the pastors of the Atlantic Coast Area. The program will provide opportunities for study, fellowship, and recreation. Outstanding leaders have been secured for the lecture and worship periods.

Since we cannot study with all the great preachers in person, we have arranged to meet them through their books. Your ministry will be greatly enriched by reading several great books every years.

ARE YOU USING IN YOUR MINISTRY—?
Why I Believe In God—Peter Bertocci
Good News—J. B. Phillips
The Pastor and His People—Edgar N. Jackson
While I'm On My Feet—Gerald Kennedy
Harper's Bible Commentary—William Neil

COST AND ACCOMMODATIONS

The registration fee is $5.00. The cost of room and board is $13.50. The rooms are furnished with linen. However, each person should bring towels and other personal items.

SPONSORS AND OFFICERS OF THE SCHOOL

BISHOP M. LAFAYETTE HARRIS . Atlantic Coast Area
DR. JOHN O. GROSS . . . . . General Secretary Board of Education
DR. HARLEY H. ZEIGLER . . . Associate Director Department of Ministerial Education
Director . . . . . JAMES S. THOMAS
Dean . . . . . E. WEBSTER MCMILLAN
Registrar . . . . . WILLIAM M. FERGUSON
Treasurer . . . . . ANDERSON C. EPPS

ATLANTIC COAST AREA PASTORS' SCHOOL

Representing the Georgia Conference
E. WEBSTER MCMILLAN
ANDERSON C. EPPS

Representing the Florida Conference
WILLIAM M. FERGUSON
ROGERS P. FAIR

Representing the South Carolina Conference
T. H. FISHER

JAMES S. THOMAS, Chairman

HOST
DR. M. J. WYNN, President, Gammon Theological Seminary

Ga.-S.C.-Fla.- 50

THE DAILY SCHEDULE

TIME	MONDAY	TUESDAY	WEDNESDAY	THURSDAY	FRIDAY
7:00 a.m.	Breakfast	Breakfast	Breakfast	Breakfast	Breakfast
8:00-8:50	Registration	Rev. Tate	Rev. Tate	Rev. Tate	Rev. Tate
9:00-9:50	Registration	The Bishop's Hour	The Bishop's Hour	The Bishop's Hour	The Bishop's Hour
10:00-10:50	Chapel	Dr. McPherson	Dr. McPherson	Dr. McPherson	Dr. McPherson
11:00-11:45	Registration	Dr. Thomas et al *	Dr. Thomas et al *	Dr. Thomas *	Dr. Thomas *
12:00-12:45 p.m.	Registration	Dr. Tilson	Dr. Tilson	Dr. Tilson	Dr. Tilson
1:00 p.m.	Lunch	Lunch	Lunch	Lunch	Lunch
2:00-3:15	Rev. Tate	Workshop I *	Workshop II *	Workshop III *
3:30-5:00	Recreation	Recreation	Recreation	Recreation
5:30	Dinner	Dinner	Dinner	Dinner
7:00-8:00	Dr. Tilson	Evening Worship	Evening Worship	Evening Worship
8:00-9:00	Fellowship Hour	Fellowship Hour	Fellowship Hour	Fellowship Hour *

SPECIAL WORKSHOP—THE CHANGING COMMUNITY IN THE SOUTH

Leadership in this Workshop will be provided by Mr. Paul Anthony and other members of the Southern Regional Council Staff. The exact schedule will be worked out by the Director of the Pastors' Refresher School and Mr. Anthony.

wed

June 12, 1963

Mr. James S. Thomas
Associate Director
Department of Educational Institutions
Board of Education of the Methodist Church
P. O. Box 871
Nashville 2, Tennessee'

Dear Mr. Thomas:

Thank you for the information on the Refresher Pastors' School. I shall plan to be present for the faculty meeting at 10:00 A.M. on July 15. At that time we can work out the details. The two periods you indicate for the workshop are fine. We will provide some SRC materials for the workshop.

I look forward to seeing you then.

Sincerely,

Paul Anthony
Director of Field Activities

PA:mm

BOARD OF EDUCATION • THE METHODIST CHURCH

DIVISION OF HIGHER EDUCATION

JOHN OWEN GROSS, General Secretary

JAMES S. THOMAS
ASSOCIATE DIRECTOR
DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS

P. O. BOX 871
NASHVILLE 2, TENNESSEE

June 6, 1963

Mr. Paul Anthony
Southern Regional Council
63 Auburn Avenue, N. E.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Mr. Anthony:

The Board of Managers of the Refresher Pastors' School of the Atlantic Coast Area was happy to learn that you and your staff had arranged with Bishop M. LaFayette Harris to participate in our week of study and fellowship. The enclosed program will provide some information concerning the school. The purpose of this letter is to indicate some arrangements that could not be included in the program. First of all, I want to express my appreciation to you and the members of your staff for accepting Bishop Harris' invitation to lead a special workshop on the "Changing Community in the South." If you will note the daily schedule, you will see that registration will be held from 8:00 a.m. to 12 noon on Monday, July 15. However, we plan to hold a faculty meeting at 10:00 a.m. on Monday and would be pleased to have you present.

Bishop Harris was very much interested in providing some information for his pastors on the important changes which are now taking place in the South. At present, the planning committee is inclined to provide a morning period for this session. If, therefore, you will be prepared to spend the eleven o'clock period in the morning and the first period in the afternoon at the Pastors' School, we will work out a division of labor in the faculty meeting.

If there are any books which you would like to have available in our book display, please let me know at your earliest convenience.

Sincerely yours,

James S. Thomas

James S. Thomas

JST/lhm
cc: Bishop M. L. Harris
Dr. E. W. McMillan
Encl:

July 20, 1963

Mr. Dave Fisher
Mr. Hill Bermont
WGTV
Center for Continuing Education
University of Georgia
Athens, Georgia

Dear Dave and Dear Hill:

Hurriedly, and in the interest of time, I'm sending only some of the names you need for the one-hour program in this mailing. Others will follow--on Monday, hopefully--including people from South Carolina, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, and a few from North Carolina and Florida, in all of the categories you listed, as well as newsmen, educators, and politicians, who are not included in the enclosed lists.

I'll also have to save the further information on segregationists for a future mailing.

The only reward I ask is a private screening of the completed programs.

Sincerely,

Marge

TRUMAN B. DOUGLASS, EXECUTIVE VICE PRESIDENT
HOWARD E. SPRAGG, TREASURER
287 PARK AVENUE SOUTH, NEW YORK 10, N. Y.

DIVISION OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION
EDWARD A. POWERS, GENERAL SECRETARY

SCOTT S. LIBBEY, YOUTH MINISTRY
1505 RACE STREET, PHILADELPHIA 2, PENNSYLVANIA

UNITED CHURCH BOARD FOR HOMELAND MINISTRIES

July 24, 1963

Mr. Paul Anthony
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Mr. Anthony:

On behalf of the United Church of Christ Youth Forum, I should like to extend a personal word of appreciation to you for your assistance on Monday afternoon, June 24, at our conference at Clark College.

As we were seeking to understand all aspects of the theme, "The Rights of Man" your presentation on The History of the South gave a most valuable background.

Our Youth Forum experience was most helpful and we are indebted to you for your rich contribution. Thank you for your help.

Sincerely yours,

Scott Libbey
p

Scott Libbey

SSL:jmp

$350.00

Mrs. Frederick Robin

926 Crane Road, N.E.

Atlanta, Georgia

Author's fee for community preparation booklet

Southern Leadership Project

August 5 63

Paul Anthony

August 9, 1963

BC PA

Please send 100 copies of L-44 to:

Mr. Monroe Schlactus
Anti-Defamation League
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

label attached.

Also, please bill him at the rate of .05¢ each.

GA - GEN.

August 31, 1963

To Whom It May Concern:

Many faculty, students, and graduates of Spelman College, puzzled by the news of my sudden dismissal last June as chairman of the Department of History and Social Sciences, have asked me why it happened. President Manley has declined to give me an explanation, but I shall try here to construct one out of the recent history of the college.

On June 4, 1963, the day after Commencement, with our car packed and ready to leave Atlanta for the summer, I went to the mailbox, expecting a letter stating my salary for the 1963-1964 academic year. The faculty customarily received these letters in April. This year, the President had delayed sending them. I found instead the following letter:

> Dear Mr. Zinn:
>
> Your present five-year term as a Professor ends at the close of the 1963-1964 academic year. The College does not intend to renew your employment at the end of your present term, and you are hereby notified of that fact. Further, the College has decided that your services will not be required during the 1963-1964 academic year; therefore the College has decided to pay you now as termination pay your salary for the coming year, and to dispense with your services after June 30, 1963. Accordingly, you are relieved of all duties with the College after June 30, 1963, and you will be expected to vacate your apartment by June 30, 1963. The College's check for your termination pay is enclosed.
>
> Sincerely yours,
>
> A. E. Manley

Putting all substantive issues aside for the moment, the manner in which President Manley took this action was a strange one. (Do we not, in ethics, teach our students more by what we do than by what we say?) There was no warning, no attempt at a prior conference with me, no explanation. Certainly Dr. Manley knew weeks before, perhaps months before, of this decision. But he waited until students and faculty were off campus. Yet, this is precisely the way the administration has acted before in taking arbitrary and punitive action against students or faculty: a letter sent during the summer, when the person is far away and there is no opportunity for redress, denying a scholarship to a student who expressed her mind too freely, or telling a student not to return in the fall, or giving a faculty member an ultimatum.

President Manley's action disregarded the national standards of procedure approved by the American Association of University Professors, the Association of American Colleges, and other groups. It was also a violation (as has been attested by the national office of the AAUP, and several attorneys who have read the Spelman rules carefully) of Spelman College's own "Policies and Rules Regarding Conditions of Employment for the Teaching Faculty of Spelman College".

As a full professor, with seven years of service at Spelman College, I should have had - and I firmly believed I did have - permanent tenure, by any reasonable interpretation of the rules. I came to Spelman in 1956, was promoted to full professor in 1959, and by 1963 had served the college seven years. The "Policies and Rules..." stipulate that a promotion to full professor "shall carry permanent tenure, provided the faculty member has served the institution at least six years." The national office of the AAUP says it is reasonable to assume that a person promoted to full professor who did not have six years service at the time of promotion, attains permanent tenure as soon as he does reach the six-year mark. Otherwise, one is led to the absurd conclusion that I am being punished for having been promoted so soon; in other words, if my promotion had been delayed until 1962 I would have had permanent tenure without question. Yet, this is the conclusion to which President Manley's interpretation leads. Furthermore, the administration invented a five-year contract for me. I say "invented" because there is no provision in the Rules for a five-year contract for someone in my position, and the letter of dismissal was the first indication ever given me by the administration that I was on a five-year contract.

Let me make another point about President Manley's non-observance of Spelman's own Rules and Policies.... Those Rules say: "One of the prime duties of the Dean of Instruction or the Chairman of a department is to help rectify the conduct of his colleagues. The administrative officer should therefore exhaust every reasonable means before initiating a dismissal proceeding." An hour after I received the letter I walked into the Dean's office and asked if he knew I was being relieved of my duties and would not be around next year. He said no. I asked him if he had been consulted about my dismissal. He said no. I asked if he had any complaints about my ability as a teacher. He said he had none, that he had always considered me a very good teacher.

More important, in my opinion, than legal and technical questions of tenure and rules, did not the administration have a certain moral responsibility in connection with someone who had been chairman of a department, who had served the college for seven years, who had contributed to the college in ways that it would be pointless for me to enumerate at this time?

Let me, before I go on to the substantive issues involved, mention the unmentionable, mainly in order to set it firmly aside. The unmentionable is: race. It needs to be said, because we live in such an intensely race-conscious society, that the fact of dismissal of a "white" college professor by a "Negro" college president (I put them in quotes because civilized people of the future will surely see the absurdity of such designations) is outside of what we call "the race question". In the controversy between liberals and conservatives at Spelman, people of both races were on both sides. That there seemed to be more white teachers on the liberal side occasionally brought comment among faculty and students, but I believe most of them soon realized that the factors were not racial but cultural; more of the white teachers came from northern colleges where they were accustomed to more liberal atmospheres. When I received my notice of dismissal, it was a dark-skinned student from Africa who put her head in her hands and wept. And it is the Negro students of Spelman who have been the chief victims of, the sharpest protesters against, administrative tyranny. The problem of academic freedom, which is the paramount problem in this instance, is beyond race.

Dr. Manley persists in refusing to give a reason for my dismissal, to me, to faculty, to students, to alumni, to concerned people in the community. But the reason can be stated simply: I was dismissed because I criticized the administration for what I considered were flagrant violations of the spirit of free inquiry which is supposed to pervade a liberal arts institution.

Let me now try to list some of the key points in the development of the controversy over academic freedom at Spelman:

1. In January of 1958, a very able Spelman student named Herschelle Sullivan (now working on her doctorate at Columbia in public law and government) wrote an editorial for the Spelman Spotlight, the student newspaper, which was an allegory chiding the college for its tight control of students. One of the figures in the allegory was a lion guarding the gate, not allowing young people to explore the world beyond, and the writer used a phrase like "benevolent despotism". President Manley called her in, and chastized her for writing this editorial. He also criticized the editor of the Spotlight for printing the editorial.

In my classes in American history and in Western Civilization, I had been stressing the need for independent thought, for courage in the face of repression, for bold and untrammeled inquiry. To me, any administrative effort to discourage freedom of expression was a blow at all of the values crucial to liberal arts education. I wrote Dr. Manley a long letter. I suggested that perhaps the Spelman controls were unnecessarily confining and antiquated. My main point however was that young people of ability should not be discouraged from using their talent and imagination to criticize the institutions of society. I never received a reply to that letter.

At this time five other faculty members wrote a letter to Dr. Manley expressing their concern that the intellectual and social growth of students at Spelman was limited by needless restrictions, and suggesting that students should be encouraged to develop self-discipline rather than have discipline thrust upon them. They too received no reply to their letter.

When Miss Sullivan was awarded a Merrill Scholarship to study abroad, President Manley told her he was approving the award in spite of her record. She was left with the feeling of a grudging acceptance of her as a Merrill Scholar.

2. Other faculty members, as well as myself, brought up again and again in faculty meeting what we thought was a hindrance to the education of Spelman students: freshmen were not allowed to use the main library of the Atlanta University Center. Cost was cited as a factor, but an underlying reason seemed to be the fear that students would use the library as an opportunity to meet young fellows from Morehouse College. Here was a clear example of how students were intellectually cramped by a policy which put administrative difficulties and puritanical fears above the requirements of a first-rate education.

3. When the sit-in movement erupted in Atlanta in the spring of 1960, I wrote an article for The Nation about the participation of Spelman students in this movement, and noted that perhaps one of the by-products of the civil rights movement was that the traditional Spelman emphasis on turning out

"young ladies" was changing - that the new-type Spelman student was to be found on the picket-line, or in jail, fighting for the great ideals of American democracy. President Manley resented the article, I later discovered, because he felt it was too critical of Spelman's past.

4. In December of 1961, I learned from Staughton Lynd, a new member of the history department, that President Manley was demanding some sort of non-Communist pledge, under the threat of dismissal, from another member of the Spelman faculty, a popular and able teacher. We tried to convince the President, without success, that a truly liberal educational institution should have the courage to resist the anti-Communist hysteria which might be prevalent in the community outside. The faculty member was only able to remain at the college by agreeing to make some compromise statement about Communism.

5. In 1961-62, an American Association of University Professors chapter was formed in the Atlanta University Center. I helped found the Spelman College unit of this chapter and became its first chairman. The chapter became active on matters of faculty salary, and academic freedom, and it soon became quite clear that President Manley was not happy with its existence.

6. In the spring of 1962 students were stimulated by the visit of a distinguished Spelman alumna named Marian Wright, then studying at Yale Law School, who talked to them in a general way about the need to become a force for social change. Shortly after her departure, students formulated a petition addressed to the Spelman administration. The petition started with a Preamble as follows:

> We, the students of Spelman College, because of our allegiance to, and affection for the institution, and because of our concern about our futures and the future of the college, feel compelled to speak out against certain policies which are not in accord with the principles for which the College stands. We believe that Spelman has reaped the fruits of a productive past and has upheld a find tradition - but she is not preparing today's woman to assume the responsibilities of today's rapidly changing world. In the handbook it is stated that "the acquisition of knowledge and one's attitude toward life are basic elements in the philosophy of the college." It is our contention that this philosophy is not adequately reflected in practice. The acquisition of knowledge is impaired by the conspicuous absence of an atmosphere conducive to intellectual curiosity and the pursuit of excellence. We are not overlooking the students' role in the creation of this atmosphere, but we are asking the administration to join us in taking the first steps in this direction. In connection with this idea, we propose the following changes...."

The petition then went on to make a number of specific proposals in connection with admission requirements, revision of curriculum, improvement of library facilities, a more liberal set of social regulations, etc. The students called a meeting to publicize the petition and there was a huge turnout. Chairman of the meeting was Lana Taylor, an honors student who had spent a semester at Carleton College as an exchange student. More than 300 students, over half the student body, signed the petition.

President Manley's response was an angry one. He called in 20 or 30 student leaders and berated them for circulating the petition, saying they should have utilized "regular channels". He said that if students didn't like the situation at Spelman College they could leave. He said (and insisted repeatedly thereafter, despite continued firm denials by students) that faculty members had participated in drafting the petition. He said that publicizing the petition might make it harder for the college to raise funds. He also asked the editor of the Spelman Spotlight, who had set up the petition at the printer's for inclusion in the forthcoming issue, to remove it from the paper. The editor later said it was "like a decree", and that "I didn't feel I had any choice but to obey."

Subsequently, when an AAUP committee sought to learn the facts about the pulling of the petition from the newspaper, President Manley refused to discuss the matter with them.

7. During the summer of 1962, Lana Taylor, who had been one of the leaders of the petition drive, received a letter from the College, informing her that her request for a scholarship had been denied on the ground of poor "citizenship". The previous semester, which was the 2nd semester of her junior year, she had received four A's and one B. She had been awarded the Samuels Prize as the outstanding student in the social sciences. She had been sent as an exchange student to Carleton College. On top of all this, she had been very active in the student movement for civil rights in Atlanta. When I checked into the denial of the scholarship, I learned from the Dean of Women that the charge of poor citizenship was in connection with her activities in the petition campaign. Also, it turned out, the Committee on Admissions, Appeals, and Scholarships, which is supposed to make the decisions on scholarships, had in this instance given automatic approval to a decision which President Manley made himself. Interestingly enough, this student, who the administration said acted like a poor citizen in April was in May elected president of the senior class.

I brought up the matter at an AAUP meeting, but an attempt to meet with the Committee on Admissions, Appeals, and Scholarships brought the response that the committee merely made recommendations. "The final decision is made by the president." The whole episode was a sordid one, a shocking commentary on the lack of freedom at the college. To me, it was a crass and brutal act directed against a student with rare qualities of intellect and character.

8. Just before the Christmas holidays, 1962, five members of the Atlanta-Morehouse-Spelman drama group, two of whom had won distinction for their scholastic work, were suspended for going to a party after the last performance of Summer and Smoke, without signing out. This led to a minor crisis, in the course of which twenty faculty members met informally and decided to present a motion at the faculty meeting to have a faculty-student committee review the entire arrangement of campus life and government. President Manley said that he might consider such a committee if administrative personnel were also on the committee; but in the six months that remained in the academic year no such committee was ever appointed.

9. On Monday evening, March 11, 1963, the Social Science Club at Spelman, to which I was adviser, acted upon the suggestion of another faculty member and held a meeting to air openly some of the issues connected with freedom at the College. The topic for the evening was announced as "On Liberty at Spelman". Faculty, administration, and students were all invited. About a dozen faculty members were present; President Manley had another engagement that evening; the Dean of Women and a few other administration people were there, but most striking of all, a room which usually draws about thirty or forty students to discussions was packed with over 200 students, almost all the students on campus at the time. Many had to stand outside in the hallway because they couldn't get in. Chairman of the meeting was Dorcas Boit, a student leader from Kenya, and one of the most distinguished of Spelman's African students. One by one, students took the floor and spoke their minds. Some dealt with minor complaints about campus regulations. Others gave important, and sometimes startling revelations about the degree of surveillance, paternalism, and authoritarianism at the college. As a sociological inquiry into the life and mores at Spelman College, the meeting was acutely revealing. Students spoke about housemothers eavesdropping on students, about threats made against students who spoke up at student government meetings, about the ineptitude of student government, about student fears. As one student put it:

> "We know that if we go there and say certain things we'll get repercussions. This petition...we were very strongly behind this from the start...I don't know if this is true or not but I heard that one student lost her scholarship because of 'citizenship', because of this petition, and people are afraid - there are some of us who have to graduate - we are afraid that if we sign anything we won't graduate. You're afraid to say something. You're afraid that somebody might call you in...."

Another student said:

> "I was away on exchange. I heard about the petition. When I came back I was eager to read the petition. I understand that it was to go in the newspaper....But I heard that one of the administrators threw out this page entirely....I have also heard that one of our administrators said: if you don't like the conditions around here, get out. What kind of attitude is this? Suppose we don't like segregation in the South? What are we supposed to do, go to the North, or to another country? If we don't like conditions, don't we have the right to attempt to better them?"

Students told of being cooped up in their rooms and not allowed to leave because they did not attend a concert being given on campus. They told of rooms in the dormitory being locked to keep students out so that the new furniture could be kept unspoiled. Marie Thomas, winner of Spelman's Jerome Award for artistic achievement, and one of the five suspended students of the cast of Summer and Smoke, was at rehearsal the night of the meeting, but sent a letter to be read, which spoke passionately against "our traditional, antiquated, medieval, and aged standards, rules and regulations." She concluded: "What do they mean to a modern girl growing normally and learning in our modern world today? Times have indeed changed. God give us the strength, knowledge and understanding to change with them." The students greeted the letter with tremendous applause. What was made crushingly clear at the whole meeting was the overwhelming unanimity with which students resented administrative controls.

10. To me, regardless of the validity of the specific complaints made at the meeting, it was an exercise in free speech and honest criticism, and should be treated with respect. But the administration reacted with anger. An outstanding student, who had just won a Merrill Scholarship to go abroad for her junior year, and who had spoken up at the meeting, was told by the President and Dean of Instruction that perhaps, in view of her comments at the meeting, they had made the award to the wrong person. At a faculty meeting, I suggested that the President, and those faculty who had not been present, might listen to the tape recording of the meeting (Social Science Club discussions have generally been tape recorded) to get an idea of what was on students' minds. The President said he had no time to listen to the tape. He said that "regular channels" should be utilized by students instead of having such meetings. Again at this faculty meeting, Professor Lynd brought up the proposal for a student-faculty-administration committee to inquire into campus life, which the President had said months ago he would consider. President Manley replied that there was no need of a special committee since regular channels existed. Then, with several faculty members raising their hands to speak, he stood up, said "That's all I have to say" and walked off, thus indicating the meeting was closed.

11. On April 9, I went to see President Manley, to try again to ease the tension between us. (I had visited him before, after another tense meeting where he had shut off discussion abruptly) He said the Social Science Club meeting should have been "cleared" with him. I said that the right of free assembly on campus was a fundamental right, which should not be tampered with in any way. He asked why I kept bringing up issues like the Lana Taylor scholarship. Why wasn't I interested in other things, like students cheating on exams, students stealing in the dormitories. I suggested that since our disagreement on what was fundamental was so deep perhaps a tri-partite committee might be set up to work out compromise arrangements. He said this was not necessary - "regular channels" were sufficient.

12. The last two faculty meetings were marked by: one faculty member's statement that those students and those faculty members who did not like existing arrangements at the College should leave; Dr. Manley's expression of agreement with that statement; his shutting off of discussion at both meetings, in one case simply by walking out of the room.

That last faculty meeting was Friday, May 31. At that time, Dr. Manley said that the letters announcing our salaries for next year would be in the mail on Tuesday. On Tuesday I went to the mailbox and found instead my letter of dismissal. Thus ends the rough chronology of events.

I would like now to make some concluding comments:

While much of the discontent among students at Spelman seems to be based on petty grievances over social restrictions, there are fundamental issues concealed here. What it amounts to sociologically is that we cannot today revolutionize the way of life of the South without affecting in some way all of the institutions created by segregation. The traditional tight controls, the paternalism, the authoritarianism exerted in Negro colleges in the South must give way to a more liberal atmosphere.

The South is changing, and Negro students these past few years have gone through what has been described in new nations abroad as a "revolution of rising expectations". Negro students today want more than precious tradition; they want a top-flight education. They want democracy on campus. They want to escape the paternal-maternal treatment of the past. They want freedom of speech, of press, of petition, of assembly. They want to be treated like human beings. They want to have an important say in campus life. They want, in other words, those very things on campus which the Negro people are now demanding in society as a whole, and which all people everywhere have always wanted.

The Spelman administration has been oblivious to all this. It has not moved with the times; it has not kept pace with the new expectations. It has rationalized and justified and minimized. It has been cold, unsympathetic and at times brutal to faculty and students. It has covered up the situation with those academic superfluities which can easily conceal the core of a college: new buildings, sermons, speeches, ceremonies, and an air of great piety.

To the students, especially to the bright and forward-looking students, the Spelman atmosphere was repressive and at time unbearable. Many of the most promising students as freshmen would not show up again for their sophomore year. Others would leave. Still others would get through the four years, but with deep discontent, far beyond that which college students have normally. One student who left in her senior year wrote back: "I just got tired of being agitated and locked up....I like the girls at Spelman, but I will never have any real love of the place, because it offers me nothing to love.... To me, college is a place where the student grows. But how can one grow any way but warped when one lives under warped conditions?" Another wrote from graduate school how refreshing it was to be able to walk on the grass, to smoke a cigarette, and contrasted it with Spelman: "One is never made to feel dirty about what one does." Another student leader, who had resisted an attempt by an administration person to censor a speech of hers, said: "Spelman is like a coffin. You have to fit it exactly either by stretching or shrinking. But nothing must stick out, not a toe, not a hand, not a hair." One student, also near the top of her class, said: "They seem to think we're savages, and that it is their job to civilize us."

Still, for me as a faculty member, I could be rather patient with antiquated restrictions and student complaints, and did live with them for over five years. I - and other faculty members - were only drawn into direct conflict with the administration when it began to take punitive action to suppress free speech, free press, the right of petition, and the right of free assembly on campus. As teachers, responsible for keeping alive the spirit of free inquiry, I believe it was our duty to speak out. We did. My dismissal by President Manley was one result. The resignation of Dr. Wolf was, in the immediate sense, a reaction to my dismissal, and in a more fundamental sense, a reaction to the repressive atmosphere at Spelman.

Leaving myself aside, it should be of concern to the Board of Trustees that it is in general the most gifted faculty and students who are being repelled by the present practices at the college and who will stay away in the future. It cannot be overemphasized that the crucial issue is not one or another rule or regulation, but the sanctity of the right of free expression on the Spelman campus.

There is a startling analogy between the arguments of those who would keep Spelman old-fashioned and authoritarian and the arguments of the Southern segregationists who have been trying desperately to maintain the status quo. Both speak of the necessity to hold on to "tradition", to our "way of life". Both see the first breezes of change as a hurricane, threatening to overturn the society they know. Both say: look how much progress we made under the old system. Both attribute trouble to "outside agitators". Both point to the "backgrounds" of those striving for greater freedom, whisper about their sins, and say, "they're not ready for freedom". (When Dr. Manley tried to draw my attention to stealing in the dormitories, I couldn't help thinking how the traditionalist South tries to keep attention focused on Negro crime and illegitimacy. In both situations, what needs to be constantly reiterated is that there are certain basic rights which human beings should have - rights which are independent of their faults as individuals, faults which may very well be a response to the denial of those rights.) Both pooh-pooh signs of discontent as just ordinary "griping" and refuse to recognize their meaning until the "griping" explodes in full-scale rebellion. It is the essence of statesmanship - both in a nation and in a university - to be sensitive to such signs, and to respond to them in a way which assures both order and progress. Such statesmanship has been absent at Spelman.

Student government, as the students themselves made very clear at their meeting, has so far been more illusion than reality. The presidential veto hangs over everything. It is precisely because the "regular channels " have been so frustrating that students have turned to petitions, demonstrations, and meetings, as ways of making their feelings and ideas known to the administration.

The faculty at Spelman is for the most part an intimidated one, afraid that to speak out is to endanger next year's raise, afraid they will lose their jobs. Also, many Spelman faculty are women, tied to Atlanta by their husbands' jobs, and therefore unable to go elsewhere if they should be fired. The administration, perhaps unwittingly, takes advantage of this. Faculty meetings are run in a dictatorial manner: the agenda is controlled; the time is controlled; free speech simply does not exist in the normal sense of a faculty meeting run by parliamentary procedure. The president picks the chairman and the members of faculty committees; even so, when a committee makes a decision that the president does not like, he simply ignores it or overrides it. The president often speaks to faculty members at meetings as if they are errant children. A recent example of the atmosphere of intimidation is that one faculty member said she would go to the Board of Trustees to speak against my dismissal, but she was afraid of losing her job.

All of the motions and formal observances of Christianity are present at Spelman - but the spirit is missing. There are many religious exercises, an air of piety, numerous ceremonial occasions, and compulsory chapel attendance. But with all this there is a basic lack of generosity to faculty, students, and other people. The College talks endlessly of its Christian heritage, but shows no real respect for individual human beings. The worship of things, of buildings, of furniture, of trees and lawns, has taken precedence over consideration for persons. Where is the ethical essence of original Christianity when a college spends hundreds of thousands of dollars for a single building, yet denies medical insurance to its maids and workingmen, limits the service personnel (even those with 20 or 30 years service) to one week's vacation, pays shockingly low wages to maids, laundry workers, maintenance people? There is a smallness of spirit, a petty authoritarianism, which pervades the administration's dealings with faculty, with students, with other people on campus.

Ultimately, what has happened at Spelman has not been just a blow at the dignity and self-respect of students and faculty; it has been an assault on liberal arts education, which demands, if it is to have integrity, that words be matched by behavior. The Spelman administration, by example, has been teaching its students that Christianity is rhetoric and ritual rather than human sympathy, that democracy is something to be talked about, but not practiced, that freedom is good as an abstraction but not as a concrete reality.

Fortunately, many of our students have resisted this kind of education. They see the paradoxes, the inconsistencies; that is why they have been rebelling. What is needed now is for someone in power to take those steps which will affirm to students that it is not useless to speak up in protest. I am hopeful that the trustees of the College will not be daunted by "channels". Someone must have the courage to dedicate Spelman anew to the free pursuit of knowledge, and to that atmosphere of independent and critical thinking which alone makes an institution worthy of being called a liberal arts college.

Sincerely,

Howard Zinn

PA ✓
Dictated by LWD
unmarked envelope

October 14, 1963

Mr. Warren C. Fortson
Attorney
Americus, Georgia

Dear Mr. Fortson:

At the suggestion of Mr. Claude Sitton, we are sending you enclosed some materials regarding the Prince Edward schools. These include a few background items plus three recent newsclips. We have a very large file on Prince Edward and also on other private school ventures in the South. If you would desire more information, please let me know.

Sincerely,

Paul Anthony
Director of Field Activities

PA:mm
Enc: Tax Funds for Private Schools?
Sanctuaries for Tradition
Prince Edward School Foundation materials
Newsclips

learning has no ~~age~~ limit

GEORGIA CENTER For CONTINUING EDUCATION

university of georgia/athens

October 22, 1963

Miss Marge Manderson
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsythe Street
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Marge,

The programs on the Southern Conservative and the Southern Moderate are now "in the can", thanks in large measure to your contributions. I am sorry that until today I have not had time to write you a note to let you know how much help you have been. But it was rush-rush-rush from the beginning until the end. The last program is still at the lab. Its air date will be sometime in November.

As soon as I get a print of the Southern Moderate, I will be happy to bring both programs to Atlanta and set up that private screening you requested some weeks ago.

I am enclosing several items you wanted to be returned. If I have missed something which you need, please let me know. I have a file containing materials from Southern Regional Council. And I assure you nothing has been thrown away. I'm a pack rat.

Again, Marge, many thanks to you and to Mr. Anthony. Your help is very much appreciated.

Cordially yours,

Dave

David Fisher
Producer
WGTV

DF:wlb

Phi Kappa Literary Society
FOUNDED 1820
UNIVERSITY OF GEORGIA
Athens, Georgia

MY

March 19, 1964.

Mr. Paul Anthony
Director of Field Activities
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Mr. Anthony:

Thank you for your help and council that you gave me while I was in Atlanta trying to arrange a debate on the topic "Resolve: The Public Accommodations Section of the Civil Rights Bill Is Unconstitutional" to take place at the University of Georgia.

The Citizen's Council has agreed to supply Dr. Medford Evans to defend the affirmative position for the debate.

I called Mr. William Higgs in Washington, D.C. Mr. Higgs agreed to defend the negative position if I got some type of word from Governor Sanders that the Governor would not expedite him to Mississippi while Mr. Higgs would be in our state for the debate at the University. Mr. Higgs faces criminal charges in Mississippi. I have written Governor Sanders concerning this matter but I feel that the Governor will probably not guarantee anything to Mr. Higgs. Mr. Higgs said that he thought that Representative James C. Corman of California would come to debate. I think Corman was one of the four men who drew up the C.R. Bill.

If neither Mr. Higgs nor Rep. Corman can come to debate then I will contact you at once in hope that you might be able to suggest someone who is qualified and who would want to debate. I should hear from Mr. Higgs by the 26th of March.

I would greatly appreciate any suggestions you might have concerning the proposed debate.

Respectfully,

James Baine

James Baine,
President

PHI KAPPA....Philo Kosmean

One of the finest and oldest traditions of this school is that of the literary societies, born at almost the beginning of the school and continuing until this day. Many leaders have left the town of Athens to take their places at the outposts; small towns, plantations, centers of industry, and capitols of the world. Such men came to this school and the halls of Phi Kappa rough, unpolished boys; they left these institutions cultivated, eloquent gentlemen and they built a world. To these historic halls they owed much; and in the course of time they repaid this debt in their gifts to civilization.

The hall of Phi Kappa was completed in the year 1834. At the annual meeting which followed the dedication, the great John C. Calhoun held the chair. Joseph Henry Lumpkin, the famous Georgian who returned from Princeton to found the Society in 1820, was in the audience. The Cobb brothers and Augustus Baldwin Longstreet were also among the first of the many great men who were brothers and honorary members of the Society.

The years passed to the sound of great oratory on the questions which plagued the nations of the world and the lives of the young men of the University campus. When the Civil War broke out many students joined the Confederate Army to fight for what they had debated for so long. With only five members left, the Society disbanded in 1863.

When the war ended, Federal troops occupied Athens and Phi Kappa Hall. At this time the valuable and extensive library long preserved in the hall was lost. Despite the troops, Phi Kappa resumed its meetings on January 5, 1866.

Fraternities came to the campus and for several years the battle raged between the newcomers and the old and honored literary societies.

Across the intervening century the Society has maintained its position among those students who have an interest in those things which are taking place around them. The function of Phi Kappa is to bring together those people who have a desire to discuss and debate topics of interest with other people. This goal has been reached with an excellence not found in almost any other organization for the past one hundred and forty-three years.

Active Past Members of the Society include:

Clark Howell
Henry Grady
Alexander H. Stephens
Herschel V. Johnson
ex-Governor Eugene Talmadge
Dean William Tate

Senator Richard Russell
Senator Herman Talmadge
Governor Carl Sanders
ex-Governor Vandiver
Rep. Robert G. Stephens ex-Governor Arnall

Ga - Gen

March 30, 1964

PA

BC

Please send the following to Mr. Charles Smith, Paine College, Augusta, today, marked SPECIAL HANDLING. If this order makes us low on remaining copies, please let me know. Thanks.

(Label attached.)

40 copies THE TRAGIC FELLOWSHIP OF SOUTHERNERS
James McBride Dabbs
40 copies THE ANNEALING OF THE SOUTH
Les Dunbar

Box 342
Mercer Univ.
Macon, Ga.
March 17, L964

Dr. Leslie W. Dunbar
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Dr. Dunbar:

Miss Helen Kendall will soon contact you in regard to the procurement of some free material for the Student Christian Conference at Paine College. As you may know, this is an annual, biracial, weekend meeting of college students. Any advice or assistance is certainly appreciated.

Should you be able to attend, you would, I feel, find it more than mildly stimulating. Doctors James Holloway and Clareance Jordon will lecture. Discussion groups, devotions, and a question-answer period are part.

I shall be mast happy to reserve you a place if you will write me by March 27. Total cost for weekend, April 10-12, is $6.50.

Respectfully yours,
Bobby G. Carter
Bobby G. Carter
Chm., SCC

cc.
Miss Kendall

Box 342
Mercer Univ.
Macon, Ga.
March,17,1964

Miss Helen Kendall
Chm., Comm. on Publications
Wesleyan College
Macon, Georgia

Dear Helen:

Enclosed are copies of letters to Dr. Dunbar and Miss Curry. Two especially well written brochures distributed by Southern Regional Council are:
"The Tragic Fellowship of Southerners" - James McBride Dabbs and
"The Annealing of The South" - Leslie W. Dunbar

You might mention the following to Miss Curry:
"Integration and the Negro Mood"- Harold R. Issacs- Reprint Dec.'62 Commentary
"
The Unreported Crisis in the Southern Colleges"- C. Vann Woodward Reprint Oct. '62 Harper's

MonthlyYReview (June '62) - Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta

Please ask that all material be sent by April 3 direct to:
Mr. Charles Smith
Paine College
Augusta, Ga.

Thanks for your help. See you at Paine.

Sincerely,

BGC
Bobby G. Carter
Chm., SCC

cc.
Dr. Bunbar
Miss Curry

PA

Box 422

Wesleyan College

Macon, Georgia 31201.

Dr. Leslie W. Dunbar

Southern Regional Council

5Forsyth Street N.W.

Atlanta, Georgia.

about 400 of each - special handling Out today - low - let us know -

Dear Dr. Dunbar;

Bobby Carter, chairman of the Student Christian Conference, has asked me to contact you with regard to the procurement of some free material for that conference at Paine college. Two especially well written brochures distributed by the Council are:

" The Tragic Fellowship of Southerners " - James McBride Dabbs

" The Annealing of The South " - Leslie W. Dunbar

If these material could be sent by April 3 to:

Mr. Charles Smith

Paine College

Augusta, Ga.

it would be greatly appreciated.

A sincere thank you for your help.

Respectfully,

Helen Kendall

Helen Kendall

Chm., Comm. on Publication

YWCA

National Board of the Young Women's Christian Association of the U.S.A.

600 LEXINGTON AVENUE
NEW YORK 22, N. Y.
PLAZA 3-4700
CABLE: EMISSARIUS, N. Y.

MRS. ROBERT E. SPEER
Honorary President

MISS LILACE REID BARNES
President

MRS. PAUL MCCLELLAN JONES
Vice President

MRS. EARL CRANSTON
Vice President at Large

MRS. ARCHIE D. MARVEL
Vice President,
Chairman, Central Region

MRS. EDWIN E. AUBREY
Vice President,
Chairman, Eastern Region

MRS. PAUL E. PFUETZE
Vice President,
Chairman, Southern Region

MRS. EVERETT S. CALHOUN
Vice President,
Chairman, Western Region

MRS. HOWARD STONE ANDERSON
Secretary

MRS. WANDELL M. MOONEY
Treasurer

MRS. ARTHUR LORD NASH
Assistant Treasurer

MISS MILDRED H. ESGAR
General Secretary

National Board, YWCA
Southern Region
41 Exchange Place, S. E., Suite 201
Atlanta 3, Georgia
Telephone: JAckson 5-2381

April 3, 1964

Mr. Paul Anthony
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street, Room 201
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Mr. Anthony:

This is a late, but sincere thank you for the excellent job you did at the meeting of the Inter-Organization Women's Committee at the Americana on March 23rd. The way in which you presented the situation and the forces at work served to give the group the perspective they needed to move ahead with the discussion of their responsibility in relation to the arrest and jailing of women and girls. Your talk was a masterpiece of brevity and clarity, and our thanks go to the Southern Regional Council as well as to you for the help they provided.

Sincerely,

Ruth

Ruth Lois Hill, Correlator
Southern Region

RLH:c

CC-Mr. Leslie Dunbar

YWCA

Ga - Gen -

April 14, 1964

Mrs. Phern Stanley
525 Avery Street
Decatur, Georgia

Dear Phern:

I have read the copy you sent me of your letter of April 9 to Betty. I suppose you wanted me to see it -- and I am grateful to you for sending it -- because we have been greatly interested in the growth and success of Partners for Progress.

When Partners was getting started, I said to Eliza that it offered a chance, I thought, for a greater outreach of the influence of the Atlanta Council. It seems to me now that the emergency room desegregation at Grady may bear that out, that Partners provided the extra bit of leverage to bring a measure of success to the Atlanta Council's long effort, I think too that when Partners has finished its time, many people will have caught the Atlanta Council spirit.

For it is an organization to help through what we all believe may be the most trying season the South, and Atlanta, have known. I feel sure that Betty will share your own desire to work closely together.

With all good wishes,

Sincerely yours,

Leslie W. Dunbar
Executive Director

LWD/slw

cc: Betty Vinson
Eliza Paschall

Paul Anthony
Vernon Jordan
Louis Mitchell

~~Ga. Gen~~ -

April 21, 1964

Miss Constance Curry
c/o Southern Project NSA
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Connie:

Can't let you go without a little word of parting. Your work for NSA and your contribution to the cause have been tremendous.

If the youth had to do it, no one could have helped them more than you have.

All good things now as you take on the adults.

Sincerely,

Paul Anthony
Director of Field Activities

PA:mm

April 21, 1964

Mr. M. Hayes Mizell
Director
Southern Project, NSA
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Hayes:

Welcome to you and to Pat. It's good to have you in Atlanta and with NSA. If we can be of any help, let us know.

Sincerely,

Paul Anthony
Director of Field Activities

P.S. A recent memo from Connie mentioned a card for the next advisory committee meeting. It wasn't enclosed. Can you let me have the possible dates, or the selected date, as soon as possible?

Other
~~MIS~~
USNSA

June 29, 1964

Mr. Norman Jimerson, Executive Director
Alabama Council on Human Relations
2121 Building, Room 101
Birmingham 3, Alabama

Dear Mr. Jimerson:

Pat Knight, the Assistant Director, and I were very pleased to have the opportunity to speak to you and the other state directors at the meeting at the Southern Regional Council a couple of weeks ago. I am sorry that we didn't have time to discuss in depth the student situation in your particular state. However, we do hope to be able to sit down and discuss this with you at some later time.

As I explained at the meeting, the Southern Student Human Relations Project is sponsored by the United States National Student Association. We are financed by a grant from the Marshall Field Association and are responsible for thirteen Southern states. The Southern Project is designed to increase communication among student leaders of both races and to stimulate civil rights activity. Our primary focus has been on bringing together biracial groups for study, intensive discussion, personal acquaintance, and joint action. This year we are holding our seventh annual Southern Student Human Relations Seminar where twenty student leaders will come together for a three-week period of study, discussion, and consultation with authorities on race relations. This year we will have such resource persons as James Silver, Charles Morgan, Jr., Fay Bennett and Don Slaiman. So, you can see that our purpose is not to recruit colleges for NSA or to work exclusively with NSA member schools, but, rather, we are interested in working with all students to confront them with the issues and the action that needs to be taken in the areas of human relations, community responsibility, and political involvement. We believe that with our offices in Atlanta, we can not only offer valuable resource ideas, program suggestions, and organizational aid to student groups, but also that we can challenge and confront the student so that he will be able to grow in his committment.

It would be a great help to us if you would put us on your mailing list so that we can regularly receive your mailings and, to some extent, keep up with what is going on in Alabama. It will make our work much more effective and valuable if we have some idea as to the structure of human relations activity in your state before we try to approach students there. We would especially like to know to what extent you work with college students, and if you feel that there is a possibility of forming some sort of college human relations group in your state.

Unfortunately, we will be out of our office during the entire month of August while we are at the Southern Student Human Relations Seminar and the National Student Congress in Minneapolis. We do hope, however, that if we come to Birmingham this fall that we will have an opportunity to talk with you at length. In the meantime, we would appreciate it very much if you would write us about any type of student human relations programs in your state, or any ideas or suggestions you might have concerning the potential for such groups in Alabama.

Many thanks for your courtesy and cooperation. I hope to hear from you soon.

Sincerely,

M. Hayes Mizell, Director
Southern Project, USNSA
Room 701, 41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303
JA 3-8322

MHM:rmp

The above letter was sent to the following people, with appropriate changes when necessary:

Norman Jimerson
Alabama Council on Human Relations

Nathaniel Griswold
Arkansas Council on Human Relations

Edwyn E. Lewis
Florida Council on Human Relations

Mrs. Frances Pauley
Georgia Council on Human Relations

Mrs. Thomas P. Green
Kentucky Council on Human Relations

The Rt. Rev. Msgr. Alexander O. Sigur
Louisiana Council on Human Relations

Rev. Duncan M. Gray, Jr.
Mississippi Council on Human Relations

T. Franklin Williams
North Carolina Council on Human Relations

Katherine Jones
Tennessee Council on Human Relations

Heslip Lee
Virginia Council on Human Relations

Mrs. James S. Crate
Texas Council on Human Relations

Mrs. Eliza Paschall
Greater Atlanta Council on H. R.

Charles Kelly
Houston Council on Human Relations

Ernest Lent
Human Relations Council of Greater Jacksonville.

Ga - Gen - ESCRU - Atlanta
PA
MM

MEMORANDUM

July 10, 1964

TO: Various Church Agencies

FROM: A Fellowship of Concern (Presbyterian Church, U.S.)
National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice
The Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity

RE: A Proposal for a Team Ministry Approach to Southern Communities

Your agency is invited to send one or two representatives, staff or experienced leaders, to a planning session in Atlanta, Georgia, July 29-30, and thereafter to participate in a unique and un-tried venture in selected communities in the South in cooperation with the three different Church agencies issuing this call. Following our meeting, all participating Church groups will be considered as sponsors of the program. It has been only a matter of convenience that we three Church-related organizations have acted to invite you to this planning meeting. We hope that your organization or office will be represented, taking this proposal as suggestive and advisory in nature and sharing with all of us in working out final details.

We have drawn together jointly to sponsor this call in consultation with the Rev. Robert J. Stone, Associate Director of the United Presbyterian Church's Commission on Religion and Race, whose services have been made available to us to assist in bringing our proposal to fruition.

This is what we propose and ask you to join: an interdenominational visitation program to selected Southern cities where one or more clerical or lay representatives of the major Christian bodies would devote themselves in a team to an intensive period of ministry with the hope that local Church people would come together into a meaningful fellowship and continue the dialogue and commitment after the withdrawal of the team of visitors. The cities chosen would be those with little active white leadership today. We would expect the fellowship to be interracial but our major efforts would go towards securing greater white participation.

More specifically, as the three convening agencies we are prepared to see that a man from each of our groups is freed for ten days to two weeks to join with others in going to each city sometime in the early fall where they would call on leaders within their own denomination to invite them to participate in an off-the-record dialogue on the responsibility and opportunity facing Christians in the racial crisis. Very likely three cities will be chosen to be visited in September, October, and November, one city each month. There will be no publicity of our efforts. We would hope that a continuing fellowship of churchmen would emerge from such conversations, moving at its own pace to provide effective leadership in the community. Our own commitment and approach would anticipate the possibility of full support for the Freedom Movement, but we would necessarily respect the integrity of those who must make their own decisions for local involvement.

No one admits to the need for the proverbial "outsider", but surely there is opportunity for those of us bound in common commitment to Jesus Christ to go into constricted situations to see what the Holy Spirit can do with our presence as we get to know the fears and aspirations of our brethren who labor there. Scores of communities outside of the South have found great benefit in shared concern through the Conferences on Religion and Race. It is our premise that a readiness to band together as Christians in the South may in places require the catalyst of a respectful visitor's suggesting it. We believe that the Spirit of Christ is now moving in the churches to call men to the more positive aspects of human community for which the Gospel was given and which it can both evoke and sustain.

If our statement of theological concerns is not already clear, we suggest that the statement contained in the enclosed "Brothers" card highlights the opportunity and responsibility before Christians today. Indeed, it might be the chief goal of such a team ministry that local Christians could increasingly witness to these concerns. With due respect and thanksgiving for "the Bill", we have miles to go, and it would be in this perspective that our team of ambassadors for Christ would approach the selected cities.

Accordingly, we will each send representatives to Atlanta for a planning session, with a commitment to see that a team is adequately staffed for these visitations. Will you join us by sending someone to Atlanta? If you think well of our proposal, it might be well to send the man who would laber become a part of the team ministry.

We are asking both official and unofficial agencies of the Churches, although we three conveners fall into the latter category. If the official agencies are unable to move out into uncharted opportunities for ministry, we are prepared to carry through. However, we would hope that official departments of the various denominations would be represented at least for liaison and informational purposes.

Our sessions will commence at 2:00 p.m. on Wednesday, July 29, and will end at Noon the next day. Those who would like hotel reservations at the Peachtree Manor Hotel in Atlanta should advise the Rev. John B. Morris, 5 Forsyth Street, N.W., Atlanta 3, Georgia, of their plans to attend and their arrival and departure times. Please communicate with the Rev. Robert J. Stone, Room 367, 475 Riverside Drive, New York City, as to whether you will be represented. If you are unable to attend or have someone on hand, let him know whether you can cooperate in this new effort.

Yours faithfully,

Mathew Ahmann
Executive Director
National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice

The Rev. John B. Morris
The Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity

The Rev. John Randolph Taylor
A Fellowship of Concern
(Presbyterian Church, U. S.)

Ga - Gen.

July 23, 1964

Dr. Benjamin Mays
President
Morehouse College
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Dr. Mays:

I know how crowded your schedule is, and seriously hesitate asking you to consider attending another meeting. However, the meeting described on the enclosed is, I believe, a serious attempt on the part of the president's poverty people to establish a good system of recruitment for the proposed job corps.

The problem of recruitment through regular channels in the South is difficult and the people planning the program would like to use private resources and sometimes bypass agencies like federal/state employment offices. Your knowledge of resources in the region would be very helpful to them, should you find it possible to attend. If this is not possible, we would appreciate you asking someone on your staff to represent you.

The meeting will begin at 10:00 A.M. and run until 12:30 on August 5. Mr. Cheston will probably want to speak with you or your representative privately, but that can be arranged at your convenience, probably during or immediately after lunch.

Again, my apologies for another meeting!

Sincerely,

Paul Anthony
Director of Field Activities

PA:mm
Enc.

Ga - Gen -

Office of the President

1867-1967

MOREHOUSE COLLEGE

ATLANTA, GEORGIA ▪ 30314

July 27, 1964

Mr. Paul Anthony, Director
Field Activities
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303

Dear Mr. Anthony:

If I get any vacation at all, it will come the first ten or fifteen days in August. My attendance at the meeting is doubtful.

If you do not mind, I will ask Mr. William Nix, Director of Placement at Morehouse, to attend this meeting.

Sincerely yours,

Benjamin E. Mays

Benjamin E. Mays
President

BEM gs

N.B. Let me know if it is all right to ask Mr. Nix

A CENTURY OF SERVICE BUILDING MEN

Gu-Gun.

July 28, 1964

Dr. Benjamin E. Mays
President
Morehouse College
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Dr. Mays:

We will be pleased to have Mr. Nix represent you at the meeting on the 5th.

Hope the vacation comes off and that it is a good one.

Sincerely,

Paul Anthony
Director of Field Activities

PA:mm

Ga - Gen

$160.00

Mrs. Florence Robin

926 Crane Rd., N.E.

Atlanta, Georgia

4 days consultant fees, preparation of VCHR material

Field department contingency

August 24 64

Paul Anthony

Ga - Gen -

November 2, 1964

Mr. Jack P. Turner
Turner, Turner, & Turner
1403 William-Oliver Building
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Mr. Turner:

I look forward to being with you at Trinity Presbyterian Church on Sunday morning at 9:30 o'clock.

If either you or Miss Wright wish to make any specific suggestions as to what the group might like to have me include in the brief talk, please call me at the above number or at home, 366-1165.

Sincerely,

Paul Anthony
Director of Field Activities

PA:mm
cc: Miss Betty Sue Wright
Trinity Presbyterian Church
3003 Howell Mill Rd., N.W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Ga-Gen

1583 Knob Hill Drive, N.E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30329
November 13, 1964

Mr. Harold C. Fleming
The Potomac Institute
1501 18th Street, N.W.
Washington 8, D. C.

Dear Mr. Fleming:

At the present time, I am employed by the Southern Student Human Relations Project of the U.S. National Student Association. As the secretary of the Southern Project for the past two years, I have aided in the programming and planning of human relations and civil rights conferences and workshops for southern college and university students, have attended various meetings of human relations organizations in this area, and have been, in general, in charge of the Southern Project office during the absences of the director and assistant director.

For personal reasons, I am extremely desirous of moving to Washington as soon as possible. Mr. Paul Anthony of the Southern Regional Council has advised me to contact you for employment possibilities in the areas of human relations and civil rights. I would be most appreciative if you know of or hear of anything to pass on this request and the enclosed resume.

Thank you in advance for your help.

Sincerely,

(Miss) Revelle Pergament

cc: Mr. Paul Anthony

1583 Knob Hill Drive, N.E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30329
November 13, 1964

Mr. Louis Mitchell
U.S. Civil Rights Commission
Washington 25, D. C.

Dear Mr. Mitchell:

At the present time, I am employed by the Southern Student Human Relations Project of the U.S. National Student Association. As the secretary of the Southern Project for the past two years, I have aided in the programming and planning of human relations and civil rights conferences and workshops for southern college and university students, have attended various meetings of human relations organizations in this area, and have been, in general, in charge of the Southern Project office during the director and assistant director's travels.

For personal reasons, I am extremely desirous of moving to Washington as soon as possible. Mr. Paul Anthony, of the Southern Regional Council, has advised me to contact you for employment possibilities with the Civil Rights Commission.

Although I realize that the employing of personnel is not your responsibility, I would be most appreciative of your forwarding this request and the enclosed resume to the proper authorities.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

(Miss) Revelle Pergament

cc: Mr. Paul Anthony

1583 Knob Hill Drive, N.E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30329
November 13, 1964

Dr. John A. Griffin
Community Relations Service
U.S. Department of Commerce
Washington 25, D. C.

Dear Dr. Griffin:

At the present time, I am employed by the Southern Student Human Relations Project of the U.S. National Student Association. As the secretary of the Southern Project, I have aided in the programming and planning of human relations and civil rights conferences and workshops for southern college and university students, have attended various meetings of human relations organizations in this area, and have been, in general, in charge of the Southern Project office during the director and assistant director's travels.

For personal reasons, I am extremely desirous of moving to Washington as soon as possible. Mr. Paul Anthony, of the Southern Regional Council, advised me to contact you for employment possibilities in the area of community relations.

Although I realize that the employing of personnel is not your responsibility, I would be most appreciative of your forwarding this request and the enclosed resume to the proper authorities.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

(Miss) Revelle Pergament

cc: Mr. Paul Anthony

1583 Knob Hill Drive, N.E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30329
November 13, 1964

Mr. Fred Routh
National Association of Intergroup Relations Officials
2027 Massachusetts Avenue, N.W.
Washington 6, D. C.

Dear Mr. Routh:

At the present time, I am employed by the Southern Student Human Relations Project of the U.S. National Student Association. As the secretary of the Southern Project for the past two years, I have aided in the programming and planning of human relations and civil rights conferences and workshops for southern colleges and university students, have attended various meetings of human relations organizations in this area, and have been, in general, in charge of the Southern Project office during the absences of the director and assistant director. However, I very much want to become more actively involved in human relations work.

I had originally planned to apply for the NAIRO Internship Program, January, 1965; however, in speaking with Mr. Paul Anthony of the Southern Regional Council, I have learned that the program may not be held at the first of this year. Mr. Anthony has advised me to contact you, in any case, for positions that you might know of in the area of human relations. For personal reasons, I am extremely desirous of finding a new position as soon as possible.

Thank you very much for your help.

Sincerely,

Revelle Pergament

cc: Mr. Paul Anthony

AU
MM

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA, PA. 19104 • AREA CODE 215—BAring 2-1106 • CABLE, NATSTUD

February 9, 1965

Mr. Paul Anthony
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Paul,

I've returned from my trip to the west and to the islands to begin work on some of the problems of the Association. It seems that those problems continue to increase rather than decrease. I've heard a number of comments about the Southern Project, about NSA's general reputation in the South with SNCC and SSOC and the staff of the Southern Project itself. What I have heard is simply rumor, so I don't know how much of it to believe.

I think that it would be a good idea for us to get together and talk about some of these problems. I imagine that you will be attending the Southern Inter-Agency Council meeting in Washington, D. C. on the 11th and 12th of February. I hope that Hayes will also be attending the meeting. I think it might be valuable for you and I to talk some of these things out, and also I think that it is important that I spend some time with Hayes.

I am sending along to you copies of correspondence between Father Clancy and myself which apparently has tended to aggravate some of the problems anyway. I think that it is important for you to know in what way you are implicated in the discussion of Hayes and his abilities. I think perhaps that it is suggested you are implicated in a much greater way than what you actually were. I hope you find this information valuable.

I look forward to seeing you at the Southern Inter-Agency Council meeting.

Sincerely,

Phil

Philip Sherburne
National Affairs Vice Pres.

ASSOCIATED WITH: American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U. S. Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • U. S. Youth Council • United Nations Association • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

President
STEPHEN J. M. ROBBINS
University of California
Los Angeles
Special Assistant
ROBERT KERNISH
Temple University

•

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
PHILIP SHERBURNE
University of Oregon
Student Government Vice President
MICHAEL H. LAWLER
University of North Carolina
Academic Affairs Desk
ROLAND LIEBERT
University of Wisconsin
Student Government Information Service Director
MARY MEEHAN
Trinity College
Cultural Affairs Desk
PHILIP R. WERDELL
Yale University
Civil Rights Desk
STEVEN McNICHOLS
University of California
Los Angeles
Educational Affairs Desk
LAWRENCE H. DAVIS
University of California
Berkely

•

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
NORMAN UPHOFF
University of Minnesota
Princeton University
Administrative Assistant
JAMES D. FOWLER
University of Texas
Special Assistant
ROBERT WITHERSPOON
University of Rochester
Director of Exchanges
JULIUS GLICKMAN
University of Texas
Director of Programming
HARRIET BEAL
University of Washington
Latin American Assistant
DAVID SPENCER
Harvard College
Latin American Assistant
DAVID M. LITTIG
Indiana University
University of Wisconsin

•

Educational Travel, Inc.
265 Madison Avenue
New York, New York 10016

Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303

USNSA Insurance Trust
Boatmen's National Bank
P. O. Box 1322
St. Louis, Missouri 63166

•

NATIONAL ADVISORS
Arthur S. Flemming
President
University of Oregon
Sidney Hertzberg
Editor
Current Magazine
Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame
Russell Kirk
Editor
The University Bookman
Fred Schwengel, M.C.
1st District, Iowa
Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University
Milton Shapp
Chairman of the Board
Jerrold Electronics

•

Chairman
National Advisory Board
PHILLIP H. DesMARAIS
Deputy Assistant Secretary
Department of Health,
Education and Welfare

January 23, 1965

Father T. J. Clancy
Dept of Political Science
Loyola University
New Orleans, Louisiana

Dear Father Clancy,

Your letter caught up with me while I was on the West Coast. I am glad that you did take the time to express yourself on the project.

As I believe I said before, I had hoped that I would be able to bring Hayes and Pat back together following the Southern Advisory Board meeting if it went well. I felt that their conflict was of such a nature that by discussion among a large group, the problem would have only worsened. Perhaps it would have been profitable to have gone into executive session where I could have explained the problem, and had the Board's reaction.

Hayes will be remaining with the Project at least until this grant is up. He now has a young man working with him who I feel is very competent. Hayes was quite impressed with him, and feels that they will be able to work together with no trouble. I think that Hayes' work has improved since my rather blunt conversation with him. Therefore I encourage you to proceed with plans for the Deep South Seminar with Hayes.

I am sorry that the other board members do not write me concerning their feelings on the Board meeting. I appreciate very much your candor on the problems of the project. The only way I can improve my work with the project is by hearing the comments or criticisms of the board members who have had a long association with the project.

If there is anything that you can suggest that I might do to improve the program please do not hesitate to let me know. Thanks again for writing.

Sincerely,

Phil

Phil Sherburne
National Affairs Vice Pres.

LOYOLA UNIVERSITY
NEW ORLEANS, LA. 70118

3 Jan 65

Dear Phil,

I've been meaning for some time to write you my reflections on your letter of November and here it is the last day of the Christmas holidays and I am just getting around to it. I feel all the more impelled to write because I have seen and talked to some other members of the Southern Project Advisory Board since our November meeting.

My general impression is that they were disappointed that personnel problems were not aired at the November meeting. Personnel in the Project is everything and it seems strange to gather all the people there and not say a word about it when two out of the three employees are on the way out and the other is in serious difficulty. I also get the impression that there would be general resentment (although that is too strong a word probably) if you were to make a change in the director's job without giving them any hint of it.

My principal difference with the board members I have talked to is that I do not share their high regard for Hayes. I think he is satisfactory but I do not have as high an opinion of his abilities as some of the others do. But I do think it is necessary to settle on this director's job, at least for this year. For example, I'm in a quandry right now about plans for the Deep South Human Relations Conference. Should we go ahead and plan with Hayes?

I feel a great deal of diffidence about expressing these opinions, especially since I shall be gone next year on a sabbatical. All of us on the board have strong feelings about student autonomy and this letter and most of what gooes on at the meetings has to be interpreted in that light.

Sincerely yours,

Thos Clancy

1. Thanks
2. [illegible] - [illegible] - [illegible] - [illegible] - [illegible]
3. Hayes will remain - hope for improvement - point in my talking w/ him and [illegible] w/ [illegible] diff.
4. If [illegible] let you - [illegible]
5. [illegible] good solution - what do you think
6. Thanks - candor - [illegible] quickly

November 23, 1964

Father T. M. Clancy
Department of Political Science
Loyola University
New Orleans, Louisiana 70118

Dear Father Clancy:

Thank you for your letter of November 17. I very much enjoyed the opportunity of meeting you and other members of the Advisory Board this past weekend in Atlanta.

I felt that there would be no profit in having a discussion on the personnel problems in the office. It seemed to me that with that many people, and with the nature of the difficulties, there was very little to be gained from such a discussion. The conflict seems to be based upon a tremendous personality conflict between Pat and Hayes. This conflict has reached the level where there is a tremendous emotional reaction on the part of one to the other. I had a very frank discussion with Hayes on November 10. At that time we aired a number of the difficulties within the office, and also some of what I thought were his failings in the performance of his capacity as director. He said that he was very grateful for a discussion and only wished that someone had pointed out his failures to him at an earlier date. I did hope that if the Advisory Board Meeting was quite successful, there might be a chance of Pat and Hayes working together again. I raised the question with Hayes following the Meeting and drew an entirely negative reaction. I am very concerned with the reaction that Hayes had to this suggestion and some others that I raised. I was also somewhat concerned that he felt the Advisory Board Meeting was not successful. He felt that we had not given him enough guidelines for the operation of the Project.

Revelle is leaving the Project, probably either at the end of November or on the 15th of December. Probably, this is very necessary for the successful operation of the Project. Revelle is neither efficient in her Secretarial duties, nor has she been able to operate effectively in the office. Hayes does not trust her to even type a great many of his letters, to open his mail or anything else. As a result, Hayes does spend a lot of time in the office, much of this typing his own letters.

Pat will also be leaving around the 15th of December. This is by her choice, feeling that the situation between her and Hayes is intolerable. A reconciliation is very difficult because both of them have emotional problems. I have also told Hayes that I want to see some improvement in his activities, that is, getting out to more campuses, attending student meetings and consulting with the advisors to the Project on a more informal basis. He has assured me that he will attempt to do these things, and that these are failings in his current performance. I have told him that if I am not satisfied by January 1, that he will be replaced as Director of the Project. too strong

At this point, I am not entirely optimistic about the possibilities of Hayes overcoming his failings. Paul Anthony is also very concerned about the activities of Hayes and his performance. It seems to me that our only hope is to give Hayes as much encouragement and help as is possible during the coming months. If any appreciable change is notable, and we are able to find an Assistant Director and Secretary who can work in harmony with Hayes, then I think we will have the Project on its feet again. If things don't work out, then I think our only alternative is to replace Hayes. I have given some thought to having Mike Lawler act as temporary Director of the Project, if this becomes necessary.

That is the only time you have been complicated, but that sentence should have been left out.

If you have any suggestions for an Assistant Director, or for a new Director if this becomes necessary, I would be very interest in receiving them. I would also appreciate any frank appraisal of the existing problems, and any advice you might have as to remedie

Thanksyou again for your comments.

Sincerely,

Philip Sherburne
NATIONAL AFFAIRS VICE PRESIDENT

PS:dt

LOYOLA UNIVERSITY
NEW ORLEANS, LA. 70118

17 Nov. 1964

Dear Phil,

It was a great pleasure meeting you in Atlanta. I was greatly impressed by the calibre of the NSA personnel who attended the meeting, but I do wish that I had had a chance to talk to you later.

For one thing I thought that the personnel problem of the Atlanta office should have been aired. I had heard that Revel was leaving the project and she confirmed the news after the meeting. I had heard that Pat was likewise leaving. Now I hear she is staying on for some months. I know it is hard to discuss these things with the people present.

I think that Hayes is doing a good job in general, but I think he has the tendency to stay in that office too much and read the literature, some of which he later summarizes and mimeographs. He has to get out to the campuses.

Because I talked so much in the morning and because I wanted to avoid all invidious comparison with the Curry regime, I really felt that I should keep quiet about these matters.

On the whole, however, I think the Project is doing a good job. The developements on the East Coast are very encouraging. I don't think there is any need to worry about the staff being overburdened. That office functioned with one worker for several years and I have no doubt that Hayes and Pat can do the work.

I was tremendously impressed with Mike Lawler who seems to have excellent ideas in the whole field we are interested in.

All this is written frankly to give my honest impression of the meeting. I hope you won't feel inclined or obliged to take any of it too seriously.

Sincerely yours,

Thomas H. Clancy
S.J.

Visit us in N.O.
sometime —
JMC

SIC

February 22, 1965

Gentlemen:

Please put my name on the mailing list for future meetings of the Southern Interagency Council since we are involved in a number of projects in the South.

Thank you very much.

Larold K. Schulz

The Rev. Larold K. Schulz
Executive Secretary, Committee for Racial Justice Now, United Church of Christ
289 Park Avenue South
New York, New York 10010

Recd 2/23/65

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA 19104 • CABLE: NATSTUD
NATIONAL COMMISSION (215) 222-1106 • INTERNATIONAL COMMISSION (215) 222-5722

February, 1965

Dear Friend:

We are writing to you as one who has expressed an interest in human relations and the progress of the South. It is our hope that you will apply (or help us recruit applicants) for the 8th Southern Student Human Relations Seminar. The Seminar is a unique program sponsored each summer by the Southern Student Human Relations Project of the National Student Association. This year the Seminar will be held at the University of Louisville, in Louisville, Kentucky, beginning on August 1 and ending August 20. We hope that you (or one of your contacts) will be one of the 20 bright and interested students we will select to attend this year's Seminar.

HISTORY AND PURPOSE OF THE SEMINAR: The Southern Student Human Relations Seminar was started eight years ago by student leaders who had a concern in the general area of human relations. Since that time over 120 students have participated in the Seminar and have gone on to become leaders in their communities, the academic world, human relations activities, and in many other fields. The purpose of the Seminar is to provide for Southern students an intensive study of Southern history, politics, economics, religion, culture, and minority group problems.

QUALIFICATIONS FOR SEMINAR APPLICANTS: We are interested in having students apply who have a sincere interest in the field of intergroup relations and a commitment toward solving the problems of the South in a peaceful, democratic manner. Students who apply must also be willing to commit themselves to a program of pre-Seminar preparation, and an intensive program of reading, study, lectures, and discussions at the Seminar. The students should have the ability to relate to other students in a community setting. We are anxious to attract students with sufficient commitment to merit the opportunity we are able to offer, and with the maturity to profit from this kind of experience.

The Seminar is open to students from all Southern campuses, whether or not the school they attend is a member of USNSA. While graduate students and graduating seniors are ineligible, first or second quarter seniors may apply. All other students, freshman, sophomores, and juniors, are encouraged to apply. Students who are on a terminal program at a junior college are not eligible, but junior college students who intend to transfer to a four-year Southern college to complete their education may apply. Such applicants should indicate on their applications to which college they plan to transfer. All students who are sincerely interested in attending the Seminar are encouraged to apply if they meet basic conditions, and we would caution all interested students not to under estimate their qualifications. All students who have a sincere interest in the Seminar should apply whether or not they think their qualifications are commensurate with

ASSOCIATED WITH: American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U. S. Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • U. S. Youth Council • United Nations Association • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

President
STEPHEN J. M. ROBBINS
University of California
Los Angeles
Special Assistant
ROBERT KERNISH
Temple University

•

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
PHILIP SHERBURNE
University of Oregon
Student Government Vice President
MICHAEL H. LAWLER
University of North Carolina
Academic Affairs Desk
ROLAND LIEBERT
University of Wisconsin
Student Government Information Service Director
MARY MEEHAN
Trinity College
Cultural Affairs Desk
PHILIP R. WERDELL
Yale University
Civil Rights Desk
STEVEN McNICHOLS
University of California
Los Angeles
Educational Affairs Desk
LAWRENCE H. DAVIS
University of California
Berkely

•

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
NORMAN UPHOFF
University of Minnesota
Princeton University
Administrative Assistant
JAMES D. FOWLER
University of Texas
Special Assistant
ROBERT WITHERSPOON
University of Rochester
Director of Exchanges
JULIUS GLICKMAN
University of Texas
Director of Programming
HARRIET BEAL
University of Washington
Latin American Assistant
DAVID SPENCER
Harvard College
Latin American Assistant
DAVID M. LITTIG
Indiana University
University of Wisconsin

•

Educational Travel, Inc.
265 Madison Avenue
New York, New York 10016

Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303

USNSA Insurance Trust
Boatmen's National Bank
P. O. Box 1322
St. Louis, Missouri 63166

•

NATIONAL ADVISORS
Arthur S. Flemming
President
University of Oregon
Sidney Hertzberg
Editor
Current Magazine
Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame
Russell Kirk
Editor
The University Bookman
Fred Schwengel, M.C.
1st District, Iowa
Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University
Milton Shapp
Chairman of the Board
Jerrold Electronics

•

Chairman
National Advisory Board
PHILLIP H. DesMARAIS
Deputy Assistant Secretary
Department of Health,
Education and Welfare

the Seminar standards of selection. We believe that the application procedure is so structured that the Selection Committee can make the best determination as to who is best qualified.

ADMINISTRATION OF THE SEMINAR: Planning and supervision of the Seminar is provided by the Southern Student Human Relations Project. Outstanding professional and academic personnel are brought in to expertly teach each of the areas covered in the curriculum. In addition to the Director and Assistant Director, a Consultant spends the entire period with the students. This year the Consultant will be Joseph Hendricks, Dean of Men at Mercer University, Macon, Georgia. Dean Hendricks was formerly Director of Religious Activities at Mercer, is a Baptist minister, and is currently the president of the Georgia Council on Human Relations.

COST OF SEMINAR AND NSA CONGRESS: Each Seminar participant will be granted a full scholarship which will include travel, room and board, and all expenses at the Seminar, except spending money. While it is not mandatory, the Seminar participants are expected to remain for the Eighteenth National Student Congress of NSA, which attracts over one thousand students from throughout the United States. The NSA Congress begins on August 22 and ends September 2. It will probably be held at either the University of Minnesota or the University of Wisconsin, and the Seminar participants will go there by bus or train. The basic costs of the Seminar participants at the NSA Congress will also be taken care of by the Southern Project.

NOW IS THE TIME TO APPLY: We urge you to become an applicant for the Southern Student Human Relations Seminar immediately if you are interested. Applications must be in the office of the Southern Project by March 31, 1965.

Thank you for your courtesy and cooperation.

Sincerely,

M. Hayes Mizell

M. Hayes Mizell, Director
USNSA Southern Student Human Relations
Project, Room 701, 41 Exhange Place, S. E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303

Richard L. Stevens

Richard L. Stevens
Assistant Director

SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS PROJECT

The Southern Student Human Relations Project was founded in 1960 by the United States National Student Association. The Southern Project operates on a grant from the Marshall Field Foundation and this two-year grant has been renewed twice since the Project's inception.

The purposes of the Southern Student Human Relations Project are both to educate and to stimulate action. The Project has traditionally worked for the creation of a deeper understanding of the complexities and problems of race relations by white and Negro Southern student leaders. At the same time, it has encouraged and helped these students to make a real contribution toward the resolution of many of these problems. Students are involved in the Project's programs on the basis of interest and ability, whatever their views.

While the Project is unique in its degree of flexibility, it does work on specific programs. For the past several years it has co-sponsored the Deep South Human Relations Seminar which is held in New Orleans during the spring holidays. The Southern Student Human Relations Seminar is the Project's largest single effort, and it is held each summer for three weeks. In the past, the Project has also sponsored a civil rights leadership training institute and voter registration project in the summer. The Project also works to stimulate communication between the Negro and white student community, and to create a climate of acceptance for integration on white campuses. The Project has also sponsored or co-sponsored state and regional conferences for students across the South, and has worked closely with student civil rights and human relations groups. Currently the Project is working with state-wide college human relations organizations in several states and is helping to establish such groups in other states.

The Southern Project constantly relies on the guidance of the distinguished members of the Southern Advisory Committee. Some of those on the Committee, which exists solely for the purpose of aiding the Southern Project, are:

James McBride Dabbs, former president of the Southern Regional Council; author of The Southern Heritage, Who Speaks for the South? and other books; lecturer.

Paul Anthony, Field Director of the Southern Regional Council.

Joseph Hendricks, Dean of Men, Mercer University, Macon, Georgia; President of Georgia Council on Human Relations.

C. Eric Lincoln, Professor of Social Relations and Director of the Institute of Social Relations at Clark College, Atlanta, Georgia; author of The Black Muslims in America, and My Face Is Black.

Will D. Campbell, Director of the Committee of Southern Churchmen; author of Race and Renewal of the Church.

C. G. Gomillion, Professor of Sociology and Dean of the School of Arts and Sciences, Tuskegee Institute, Alabama.

Father Thomas Clancy, S. J., Professor of Political Science, Loyola University of the South, New Orleans, Louisiana.

APPLICATION FORM

Eighth Southern Student Human Relations Seminar
August 1 - 21, 1965

University of Louisville, Louisville, Kentucky

Please attach a recent photo or snapshot of yourself here.

General Instructions

A. It is extremely important that you fill in this form as completely as possible. It will be used as a basis for selection of participants in the Eighth Southern Student Human Relations Seminar.

B. When space is insufficient, continue answers on the reverse side of the page, numbering them to match correct questions.

C. Please print clearly or type.

D. All applications and supporting materials must be received by March 31, 1965. Notice of final selections will be mailed by May 1, 1965.

1. name Mr. / Mrs. / Miss _____ (last) _____ (first) _____ (middle)
(Underline the name you prefer to be called or insert a nickname)

2. School _____

3. Class and expected date of graduation _____

4. Current school address _____

School telephone number, extension _____

Dates you can be reached here _____

5. Permanent home address _____

Home telephone number _____

Dates you can be reached here _____

6. Summer address _____

Summer telephone number _____

Dates you can be reached here _____

7. Parent or guardian _____

Address _____

Telephone number _____

8. Your field of academic concentration _____

9. Your hobbies, skills, etc. _____

10. List the important extra-curricular activities you have participated in, and the offices you have held on the campus or in the community.

11. List positions or responsibilities you will have on campus during the school year 1965-1966.

12. Describe any campus, community, or organizational experience in human relations, interracial program, or formal discussions you have had since you were a senior in high school.

13. Who contacted you about the Seminar?

14. State whether you have ever attended a USNSA national or regional congress or conference. Give the location and date.

15. As best as you can determine, do you consider yourself a radical, liberal, moderate, conservative, ultra-conservative, other?

16. Please attach a statement of 500 words or less indicating your reasons for being interested in this Seminar.

17. Please attach a brief autobiographical sketch giving the places you have lived (with dates), schools attended, significant activities in which you have participated, and awards received.

18. Please have a transcript of your college grades sent to this office immediately.

19. When you have completed this form, please return it at once to:

USNSA Southern Student Human Relations Project
Room 701, 41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303
(Telephone 523-8322)

Signature _____

Date of birth _____ Place of birth _____

DEADLINE FOR 8th SSHRS APPLICATIONS: March 31, 1965

BACKGROUND INFORMATION

We would like for you to answer the following questions so that the Seminar Selection Committee will have a total picture of your personality and life as a student. If you are selected as a Seminar participant this information will enable us to prepare a more worthwhile program.

1. What magazines, journals, newspapers, do you regularly read?

2. What books, other than those required in your classes, have you read during the past six months?

3. Do you prefer to read fiction or non-fiction? What do you consider the best book you have read within the past year?

4. What is your religious preference?

5. What are the occupations of your parents?

6. What type of music do you prefer?

7. List any other national conferences or regional (not state)meetings you have attended during the past two years.

8. Do you own a car? Year and make?

9. In which sports are you proficient?

Return this page with the other parts of your application to:

USNSA Southern Student Human Relations Project
Room 701, 41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303

RECOMMENDATIONS

Please list the name, address and position of two faculty members and one student leader who are in a position to evaluate your personal and academic qualifications. Recommendation forms will be sent directly to these people.

IF YOU ARE UNABLE TO RETURN THIS ENTIRE APPLICATION IMMEDIATELY, PLEASE SEND THIS SECTION TO THIS OFFICE NOW!

1. Name _____

   Position _____

   Address _____

2. Name _____

   Position _____

   Address _____

3. Name _____

   Position _____

   Address _____

Your name _____

College _____

Address _____

Send to: USNSA Southern Student Human Relations Project
Room 701, 41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303
(Telephone 523-8322)

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA 19104 • CABLE: NATSTUD
NATIONAL COMMISSION (215) 222-1106 • INTERNATIONAL COMMISSION (215) 222-5722

March 2, 1965

Mr. Paul Anthony
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsythe Street
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Paul,

As we discussed by telephone, I am enclosing two copies of the prospectus "Student Opportunities in Community Programs: A Directory" for you and Les Dunbar to consider and evaluate. It is my understanding that Dr. Clarence Faust, Vice President for Education of the Ford Foundation, will recommend this program to the foundation's Board of Directors on Monday, March 8.

Yesterday, March 1, the Ford Foundation unexpectedly requested that we solicit a letter of comment from individuals prominent in the field of education and social services who are familiar with our organization. Such a letter would evaluate the need for the program as well as the ability of the United States National Student Association to administer it, and would be a factor in the Board's decision. It should be addressed to Dr. Paul Ylvisaker, Director, Public Affairs Division, Ford Foundation, 477 Madison Avenue, New York; attention: John Ehle.

I regret calling upon you for this kind of assistance on such short notice; unfortunately it seems unavoidable. Both the Association and myself are deeply grateful for your help.

Sincerely,

Steve

Steven McNichols
Civil Rights Director

Enc.
SM:jsa

ASSOCIATED WITH: American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U. S. Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • U. S. Youth Council • United Nations Association • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

President
STEPHEN J. M. ROBBINS
University of California
Los Angeles
Special Assistant
ROBERT KERNISH
Temple University

•

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
PHILIP SHERBURNE
University of Oregon
Student Government Vice President
MICHAEL H. LAWLER
University of North Carolina
Academic Affairs Desk
ROLAND LIEBERT
University of Wisconsin
Student Government Information Service Director
MARY MEEHAN
Trinity College
Cultural Affairs Desk
PHILIP R. WERDELL
Yale University
Civil Rights Desk
STEVEN McNICHOLS
University of California
Los Angeles
Educational Affairs Desk
LAWRENCE H. DAVIS
University of California
Berkely

•

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
NORMAN UPHOFF
University of Minnesota
Princeton University
Administrative Assistant
JAMES D. FOWLER
University of Texas
Special Assistant
ROBERT WITHERSPOON
University of Rochester
Director of Exchanges
JULIUS GLICKMAN
University of Texas
Director of Programming
HARRIET BEAL
University of Washington
Latin American Assistant
DAVID SPENCER
Harvard College
Latin American Assistant
DAVID M. LITTIG
Indiana University
University of Wisconsin

•

Educational Travel, Inc.
265 Madison Avenue
New York, New York 10016

Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303

USNSA Insurance Trust
Boatmen's National Bank
P. O. Box 1322
St. Louis, Missouri 63166

•

NATIONAL ADVISORS
Arthur S. Flemming
President
University of Oregon
Sidney Hertzberg
Editor
Current Magazine
Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame
Russell Kirk
Editor
The University Bookman
Fred Schwengel, M.C.
1st District, Iowa
Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University
Milton Shapp
Chairman of the Board
Jerrold Electronics

•

Chairman
National Advisory Board
PHILLIP H. DesMARAIS
Deputy Assistant Secretary
Department of Health,
Education and Welfare

Student Opportunities in Community Programs: A Directory

A Proposal for the Spring 1965 Supplement

Submitted by

United States National Student Association

February, 1965

The Need:

Every summer vast numbers of American college students are released from the campus to engage in non-academic pursuits. Some loaf, some earn money, some travel; but, in increasing numbers, students are locating themselves in community service programs during the summer in an effort to aid the deprived and the disenfranchised and to gain for themselves a unique kind of education.

Last summer, for example, 150 students participated in community organization projects in six northern cities directed by Students for a Democratic Society; 800 students took part in the Mississippi Summer Project sponsored by the Council of Federated Organizations; 500 students tutored underprivileged youth in Los Angeles under the auspices of the Western Student Movement; and 2,500 college-age tutors were enlisted by the Northern Student Movement for a five-city program in the northeastern United States.

Significantly these programs, and these organizations, three years ago did not exist. Student participation increases when those who have derived meaning in working with the deprived return to campus and tell their friends. The result is more students and more programs. The need is coordination.

The Spring 1965 Supplement:

Compiled and Edited: March 1 - March 31
Production: April 1 - April 14
Distribution: April 15 - May 7

The Spring 1965 Supplement will identify, describe, and appraise community programs for student participation during the summer vacation. No attempt will be made to influence or coordinate the programs themselves, but simply to provide interested students with the information needed to make an intelligent selection. In this way, a student may evaluate teaching in a Mississippi Freedom School as compared to an internship with the Office of Education in Washington or the opportunity of tutoring slum children while attending summer classes. The Supplement will widen rather than narrow choice; it is the student who must make the decision.

The Supplement will be 8½" by 11", 32 pages plus cover, with art, and the publication run will be 40,000 copies. The principal text will consist of a description of each community program for which a student may apply. Enclosed with each delivery will be several posters advertising the Supplement and a letter suggesting ways in which it may most effectively be circulated on campus. The posters will enable students to order individual copies of the Supplement, through June 30, directly from USNSA.

The Supplement will be offered initially to Student Body Presidents, Student Editors, Employment Officers, and Deans of Students at 2,300 colleges and universities throughout the United States as well as to 350 USNSA Campus Coordinators. By the end of March these individuals will have received an announcement of the service which includes an invitation to subscribe without charge. Due to an extensive programming structure, it is expected that the demand will be greatest at USNSA member campuses. In any case, Employment Bureau Directors and Deans of Students at all institutions will receive copies of the Supplement no later than May 7. The Supplement also will be made available to student and youth groups, religious, civic and educational organizations, civil rights and community service projects, and government agencies, both local and federal, for distribution to interested students.

The Referral Service:
April 15 - June 30

Prominently displayed within each Supplement will be several cut-out referral forms. A student interested in participating in one of the community programs described in the Supplement simply fills in the requisite personal information (name, address, age, college, major, experience, name and address of parents or guardian, etc.), places the form in the addressed envelope provided and mails. Delivered to USNSA, the forms will be sorted, recorded and referred to the appropriate organization or agency. USNSA will not participate in the selection process other than to weed out obvious cranks or those who clearly fail to meet the basic requirements stipulated by the community program in the Supplement. Even this authority will be lightly exercised.

The purpose of the Referral Service is to ease the task of agencies recruiting students for summer programs by providing a selection of qualified applicants as well as to insure that every student who applies receives consideration. Thus, USNSA assumes the responsibility of making sure that every application referred in some way is processed.

The Referral Service also will serve as a means of evaluating the effectiveness of the Supplement in a report submitted to the Foundation upon completion of this project June 30.

An Annual Directory:

Pending a report on the Spring 1965 Supplement and the Referral Service, the Foundation may wish to consider underwriting an annual directory which would incorporate spring, fall and mid-year supplements. The Fall Supplement would focus on part-time opportunities in community programs for students returning to campus as well as opportunities to utilize work-study and other funds in developing local projects. In this way, perhaps more students concerned with social problems would return to campus when summer is over.

The Mid-Year Supplement would be concerned with continuing developments in community programs generally and particularly with part-time campus projects as well as with career possibilities in community service for those about to graduate in June. There may be space also for features on unique projects or outstanding student initiative in community programs.

In the spring, all three supplements would be published in one soft-cover edition for distribution by USNSA and for sale in campus book stores. More than a guide, with narrative and commentary the Directory would be a review of student participation in community programs and of the programs themselves. In this way, the Directory would have value to non-students and professionals in the field as well as to those interested in volunteering for community programs.

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA, PA. 19104 • AREA CODE 215—BAring 2-1106 • CABLE, NATSTUD

May 7, 1964

Paul Anthony
Director of Field Activities
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsythe Street
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Paul:

Frank Millspaugh of the NSA national office agrees with your idea of setting up an advisory panel to distribute the books from the Books for Equal Education project.

You mentioned that Dr. Benjamin Mays from Morehouse and Dr. L.H. Pitts from Miles College would be good for such a panel. Now, do you have any other suggestions to make in the way of persons to sit on the panel. Will you or someone from SRC be able to do this?

Any suggestions you will be able to make will be greatly appreciated.

Thank you, again.

Sincerely,

Pat

Pat Knight, Assistant Director
Southern Project, NSA
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta, Georgia

Steve Wright

ASSOCIATED WITH: American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U. S. Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • U. S. Youth Council • American Association for the U.N. • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

President
GREGORY M. GALLO
University of Wisconsin

•

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Vice President
JOEL SHARKEY
Montieth College
Wayne State University

Student Government Vice President
JACK DAVID
Rutgers College

Student Government Vice President
VANCE OPPERMAN
Grinnell College

Director Community Issues Desk
FRANK A. MILLSPAUGH
University of Illinois

Student Government Information Service Director
MARY MEEHAN
Trinity College
Washington, D. C.

Public Relations and Development
DORIS GIBSON
Loyola of the South

•

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

Vice President
ALEXANDER KORNS
Harvard College

Administrative Secretary
MARGARET R. HUNT
Pennsylvania State University
Harvard University

Director of Exchanges
JAMES T. HENDRICK
University of Illinois

Special Assistant
MICHAEL SCHWARTZ
University of Wisconsin

Special Assistant
RONALD STORY
University of Texas

Latin American Assistant
THOMAS LAMOUREUX
Ohio State University

Latin American Assistant
DAVID SPENCER
Harvard College

•

West Coast Office
2161 Shattuck Avenue
Berkeley, California

Educational Travel, Inc.
265 Madison Avenue
New York 16, New York

West Coast Office
1355 Westwood Boulevard
Los Angeles, California

Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

•

NATIONAL ADVISORS

Sidney Hertzberg
Editor
Current Magazine

Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame

Russell Kirk
Editor
The University Bookman

Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University

Milton Shapp
Chairman of the Board
Jerrold Electronics

•

Special Advisor
RUTH HAGY BROD

An — MM

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA 19104 • CABLE: NATSTUD
NATIONAL COMMISSION (215) 222-1106 • INTERNATIONAL COMMISSION (215) 222-5722

March 29, 1965

To: Program Directors, Information Directors and Staff of Anti-Poverty, Civil Rights and Community Service Organizations.

Re: SCOPE, A Directory of Summer Opportunities for Students in Community Service.

Dear Friend,

Every summer vast numbers of American college students leave the campus to engage in non-academic pursuits. Some loaf, some earn money, some travel; but, in increasing numbers, students are turning toward participation in community action programs during the summer in an effort to aid the deprived and the disenfranchised and to experience a unique kind of education. As student concern and involvment have increased, opportunities to participate have increased also. There are more projects and more kinds of projects now than there were three years ago, or even last summer. And there is pressing need for a mechanism to bring students and programs together.

SCOPE is designed to meet this need. A directory of summer opportunities in community programs, SCOPE will offer interested students a complete selection. Voter registration projects in the South, community action and tutorials in the North, federal internships and summer work camps; these and others will be represented in SCOPE. To participate students will apply directly to the project listed. By circulating accurate information in descriptive form SCOPE will be of service to both students and projects.

By May 7 the Summer 1965 edition will be distributed to USNSA Coordinators, Student Editors, Student Body Presidents, Deans of Students and Student Employment Bureau Directors at some 2,300 selected colleges and universities throughout the United States. A special mailing list of human relations committees, tutorials, etc. also will receive SCOPE for distribution on the campus.

SCOPE will be 8 1/2" by 11", 32 pages plus cover and the initial publication run will be 40,000 copies. There will be features and art but the principal text will consist of program descriptions. Underwritten by the Ford Foundation and published by the United States National Student Association, SCOPE will be distributed without charge.

Enclosed is a questionnaire concerning your summer program. Time is short before deadline and if you would like your program listed in SCOPE it is imperative that you reply immediately. Space is tight and our greatest task will be rewriting the information you provide to fit space. For this reason it is important that you take care

ASSOCIATED WITH: American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U. S. Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • U. S. Youth Council • United Nations Association • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

President
STEPHEN J. M. ROBBINS
University of California
Los Angeles
Special Assistant
ROBERT KERNISH
Temple University

•

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
PHILIP SHERBURNE
University of Oregon
Student Government Vice President
MICHAEL H. LAWLER
University of North Carolina
Academic Affairs Desk
ROLAND LIEBERT
University of Wisconsin
Student Government Information Service Director
MARY MEEHAN
Trinity College
Cultural Affairs Desk
PHILIP R. WERDELL
Yale University
Civil Rights Desk
STEVEN McNICHOLS
University of California
Los Angeles
Educational Affairs Desk
LAWRENCE H. DAVIS
University of California
Berkely

•

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
NORMAN UPHOFF
University of Minnesota
Princeton University
Administrative Assistant
JAMES D. FOWLER
University of Texas
Special Assistant
ROBERT WITHERSPOON
University of Rochester
Director of Exchanges
JULIUS GLICKMAN
University of Texas
Director of Programming
HARRIET BEAL
University of Washington
Latin American Assistant
DAVID SPENCER
Harvard College
Latin American Assistant
DAVID M. LITTIG
Indiana University
University of Wisconsin

•

Educational Travel, Inc.
265 Madison Avenue
New York, New York 10016

Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303

USNSA Insurance Trust
Boatmen's National Bank
P. O. Box 1322
St. Louis, Missouri 63166

•

NATIONAL ADVISORS
Arthur S. Flemming
President
University of Oregon
Sidney Hertzberg
Editor
Current Magazine
Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame
Russell Kirk
Editor
The University Bookman
Fred Schwengel, M.C.
1st District, Iowa
Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University
Milton Shapp
Chairman of the Board
Jerrold Electronics

•

Chairman
National Advisory Board
PHILLIP H. DesMARAIS
Deputy Assistant Secretary
Department of Health, Education and Welfare

to provide information that is both complete and accurate. Do not include any information that you would not want published. Any photographs, art or published information relevant to your organization, its history and its program, will be appreciated.

Also appreciated will be comments and suggestions about SCOPE or information about new projects or ones that may have been overlooked. We will be happy to answer your questions. You may write SCOPE at the above address or phone us at BAring 2-1246 or BAring 2-1106.

We look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

Steven McNichols

Steven McNichols
Executive Director

William Hamilton Jones

Wm. Hamilton Jones
Editor

SCOPE
United States National Student Association
3457 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19104
Telephone: Baring 2-1246 BAring 2-1106

INFORMATION ON SUMMER COMMUNITY ACTION PROGRAMS

To make SCOPE as comprehensive and informative as possible, we would appreciate your filling in this questionnaire. Without this information it will be impossible to include your programs in our listings. Please fill in a separate sheet for each program that will include summer student volunteers.

Name of sponsoring organization:
Address:
Phone number:
Name of Executive Secretary or Project Director:

A brief history of your organization; when it was founded, number of administrative personnel, areas of operation, types of projects you administer, etc. (If you have a pamphlet explaining your organization, this should be sufficient.)

Name of summer program: Location:
Brief description of program and what it is designed to accomplish:

Number of students you would like to recruit:
If the project operates in more than one area, are there options open to applicants so far as location: If so, where:

Are you interested in any special skills, and if so, what are they and are they required or preferred:

Is there a salary offered: If so, how much:

If no salary, is a living expense provided: If so, how much:

What expenses will the applicant be expected to meet:
Briefly describe the types of work which an applicant should expect to do:

What percentage of the project workers do you expect to be students:
What is the organizational structure of the project:

If you enclose any art or pictures we will do our best to see that they are included in the magazine with proper credit. Please return this form immediately to SCOPE, USNSA, 3457 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

SCOPE
United States National Student Association
3457 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19104
Telephone: Baring 2-1246 BAring 2-1106

INFORMATION ON SUMMER COMMUNITY ACTION PROGRAMS

To make SCOPE as comprehensive and informative as possible, we would appreciate your filling in this questionnaire. Without this information it will be impossible to include your programs in our listings. Please fill in a separate sheet for each program that will include summer student volunteers.

Name of sponsoring organization:
Address:
Phone number:
Name of Executive Secretary or Project Director:

A brief history of your organization; when it was founded, number of administrative personnel, areas of operation, types of projects you administer, etc. (If you have a pamphlet explaining your organization, this should be sufficient.)

Name of summer program: Location:
Brief description of program and what it is designed to accomplish:

Number of students you would like to recruit:
If the project operates in more than one area, are there options open to applicants so far as location: If so, where:

Are you interested in any special skills, and if so, what are they and are they required or preferred:

Is there a salary offered: If so, how much:

If no salary, is a living expense provided: If so, how much:

What expenses will the applicant be expected to meet:
Briefly describe the types of work which an applicant should expect to do:

What percentage of the project workers do you expect to be students:
What is the organizational structure of the project:

If you enclose any art or pictures we will do our best to see that they are included in the magazine with proper credit. Please return this form immediately to SCOPE, USNSA, 3457 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

SCOPE
United States National Student Association
3457 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19104
Telephone: Baring 2-1246 BAring 2-1106

INFORMATION ON SUMMER COMMUNITY ACTION PROGRAMS

To make SCOPE as comprehensive and informative as possible, we would appreciate your filling in this questionnaire. Without this information it will be impossible to include your programs in our listings. Please fill in a separate sheet for each program that will include summer student volunteers.

Name of sponsoring organization:
Address:
Phone number:
Name of Executive Secretary or Project Director:

A brief history of your organization; when it was founded, number of administrative personnel, areas of operation, types of projects you administer, etc. (If you have a pamphlet explaining your organization, this should be sufficient.)

Name of summer program: Location:
Brief description of program and what it is designed to accomplish:

Number of students you would like to recruit:
If the project operates in more than one area, are there options open to applicants so far as location: If so, where:

Are you interested in any special skills, and if so, what are they and are they required or preferred:

Is there a salary offered: If so, how much:

If no salary, is a living expense provided: If so, how much:

What expenses will the applicant be expected to meet:
Briefly describe the types of work which an applicant should expect to do:

What percentage of the project workers do you expect to be students:
What is the organizational structure of the project:

If you enclose any art or pictures we will do our best to see that they are included in the magazine with proper credit. Please return this form immediately to SCOPE, USNSA, 3457 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA, PA. 19104 • AREA CODE 215—BAring 2-1106 • CABLE, NATSTUD

March 31, 1965

Mr. Paul Anthony
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Paul,

Steve Robbins and I have thoroughly discussed a problem which has plagued every officer since Ted Harris, the second President of NSA - the problem of program continuity. An Executive Assistant to the President who would stay with the Association for at least a three year period in a job especially designed to maintain program continuity would, we feel, be a great asset to the Association.

NSA has expanded to the point where it is necessary for the officers to chose between curtailing long range program planning or maintaining an efficient administrative structure. It is also critical at this time to develop solid long term contact with foundations, which has not been done to date.

This individual would be hired by the President, and be responsible to him. His responsibilities would fall into two areas: financial support for long term programs, and internal office management. To attract and retain this caliber of individual, a salary of $7,000 - $8,000 must be offered with the total costs for this position amounting to approximately $10,000 - $11,000.

We are anxious to establish this position before we leave office this year. To do this, we need suggestions of where we might look for funds to support this position. We expect that after two years, the position could be funded internally. Suggestions for foundation or personal contact would be sincerely appreciated.

I look forward to hearing from you soon.

Sincerely,

Philip Sherburne
National Affairs Vice President

PS:dt

ASSOCIATED WITH: American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U. S. Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • U. S. Youth Council • United Nations Association • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

President
STEPHEN J. M. ROBBINS
University of California
Los Angeles
Special Assistant
ROBERT KERNISH
Temple University

•

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
PHILIP SHERBURNE
University of Oregon
Student Government Vice President
MICHAEL H. LAWLER
University of North Carolina
Academic Affairs Desk
ROLAND LIEBERT
University of Wisconsin
Student Government Information Service Director
MARY MEEHAN
Trinity College
Cultural Affairs Desk
PHILIP R. WERDELL
Yale University
Civil Rights Desk
STEVEN McNICHOLS
University of California
Los Angeles
Educational Affairs Desk
LAWRENCE H. DAVIS
University of California
Berkely

•

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
NORMAN UPHOFF
University of Minnesota
Princeton University
Administrative Assistant
JAMES D. FOWLER
University of Texas
Special Assistant
ROBERT WITHERSPOON
University of Rochester
Director of Exchanges
JULIUS GLICKMAN
University of Texas
Director of Programming
HARRIET BEAL
University of Washington
Latin American Assistant
DAVID SPENCER
Harvard College
Latin American Assistant
DAVID M. LITTIG
Indiana University
University of Wisconsin

•

Educational Travel, Inc.
265 Madison Avenue
New York, New York 10016

Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303

USNSA Insurance Trust
Boatmen's National Bank
P. O. Box 1322
St. Louis, Missouri 63166

•

NATIONAL ADVISORS
Arthur S. Flemming
President
University of Oregon
Sidney Hertzberg
Editor
Current Magazine
Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame
Russell Kirk
Editor
The University Bookman
Fred Schwengel, M.C.
1st District, Iowa
Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University
Milton Shapp
Chairman of the Board
Jerrold Electronics

•

Chairman
National Advisory Board
PHILLIP H. DesMARAIS
Deputy Assistant Secretary
Department of Health,
Education and Welfare

April 5, 1965

Mr. Philip Sherburne
National Affairs Vice President
USNSA
3457 Chestnut Street
Philadelphia, Pa.

Dear Phil:

A prompt reply to your inquiry since there is little I can really offer.

The idea of an Executive Assistant to the President is excellent -- so long as it does work that the individual would be around at least two or three years -- but not much longer.

The realy inquiry, where to get money, I can be of no help on. There are only the old standbys with which we're both familiar and all of us are overloading them with requests. I don't think, however, that people like Max Hahn would resent an informal inquiry to determine if there's any interest. But, on that, don't quote me.

Best.

Sincerely,

Paul Anthony
Director of Field Activities

PA:mm

Mm

#4 Sparrow Apts., Route #3
Chapel Hill, N. C. 27514
April 6, 1965

USNSA

Miss Doris Taylor
U. S. National Student Association
3457 Chestnut Street
Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19104

Dear Doris:

Enclosed is an agenda of the recent Carolinas Conference, "The Mission of Higher Education in the Changing South." One of my responsibilities in assisting with this program was the development of "working papers."

Working with the staff members of the Southern Regional Council, I selected eleven items from their publications list--covering such topics as Southern higher education, Negro employment opportunities and the Negro and the ballot. We compiled one hundred sets of these eleven items for distribution to the delegates attending the Conference.

I should add that all of the kits were not distributed at the Carolinas Conference. However, the Deep South Seminar will be considering similar topics. Consequently, I am forwarding the remaining items to the co-ordinators of that Seminar for distribution to the participants there.

Mrs. Montez Albright and Mr. Paul Anthony worked out a very fair price for the use of the S.R.C. pamphlets and materials. The total cost is $77.05. Please transfer this amount from my travel budget and/or some other unused portion of my budget and forward a check to Mrs. Albright at the S.R.C. office in Atlanta.

In addition to the kit of working papers, I prepared a bibliography which was also distributed. The cost of typing, stencils, paper, printing, etc., were "absorbed" by other sources here in North Carlina. Mr. John Brooks, of the North Carolina Fund in Durham, handled the printing for us. Enclosed is one of the resulting reading lists for your "publications file."

Thanks for taking care of the check. I'll see you soon at the N.S.B. meeting.

Sincerely,

Michael H. Lawler
S. G. V. P.

MHL:clb

2 ENCLOSURES

cc: Mrs. Montez Albright
Mr. Paul Anthony

US NSA

LWD ✓
mm

THE FORD FOUNDATION
477 MADISON AVENUE
NEW YORK, NEW YORK 10022

PUBLIC AFFAIRS PROGRAM

April 13, 1965

Mr. Paul Anthony
Director of Field Activities
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Mr. Anthony:

Many thanks for your recent letter, addressed to Mr. Clarence Faust, endorsing the NSA proposal for a student directory.

The request has since been acted upon favorably. Your views in the matter counted strongly in our consideration.

With best regards,

Paul Ylvisaker

Paul Ylvisaker
Director

USA
mm

USNSA

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA 19104 • CABLE: NATSTUD
NATIONAL COMMISSION (215) 222-1106 • INTERNATIONAL COMMISSION (215) 222-5722

June 8, 1965

Mr. Paul Anthony
5 Forsyth Street
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Paul,

I talked with Mike Lawler not long ago about the upcoming Southern Project Advisory Board Meeting and the Southern Project in general. I also had an opportunity to meet with Max Hahn of the Field Foundation recently.

It seems to me that we have four alternatives regarding the Southern Project's future. 1) we can submit a prospectus substantially the same as those submitted in the past to the Foundation. I feel sure in my own mind that this would be turned down. 2) we could submit a revised prospectus which calls for some experience, particularly in the area of tutorials. I think this prospectus would have a better chance with the Foundation, but I think it would also be turned down. 3) we could substantially change the nature of the Southern Project to include not only human relations work, but also education, academic freedom, international affairs, etc. I am almost sure that that would be turned down. 4) we could submit a prospectus for $1000 in travel funds for the officers and Southern Advisory Board and other interested individuals in the South to meet throughout this next year attempting to ascertain what sort of role a student group should play in the South, and then submit a prospectus for next year to the Foundation which would embody the program developed over the course of the past year. I think that that proposal might succeed.

Mr. Hahn exhibited very little interest in the Southern Project during our conversation. He was not at all interested in the Conference Proposal drawn up by Curt and Mike. He seemed to have little knowledge of the activities of the Southern Project, which may have been a camouflage, made it very evident that the Board would take a good hard look at the Project, having supported it for five years, and didn't give an impression of having a high regard for Hayes Mizell as Director.

Hayes was in Philadelphia last week. We talked about the future of the Southern Project and he is very pessimistic about the possibility of obtaining additional funds. He might

ASSOCIATED WITH: American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U. S. Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • U. S. Youth Council • United Nations Association • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

President
STEPHEN J. M. ROBBINS
University of California
Los Angeles
Special Assistant
ROBERT KERNISH
Temple University

•

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
PHILIP SHERBURNE
University of Oregon
Student Government Vice President
MICHAEL H. LAWLER
University of North Carolina
Academic Affairs Desk
ROLAND LIEBERT
University of Wisconsin
Student Government Information Service Director
MARY MEEHAN
Trinity College
Cultural Affairs Desk
PHILIP R. WERDELL
Yale University
Civil Rights Desk
STEVEN McNICHOLS
University of California
Los Angeles
Educational Affairs Desk
LAWRENCE H. DAVIS
University of California
Berkely

•

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
NORMAN UPHOFF
University of Minnesota
Princeton University
Administrative Assistant
JAMES D. FOWLER
University of Texas
Special Assistant
ROBERT WITHERSPOON
University of Rochester
Director of Exchanges
JULIUS GLICKMAN
University of Texas
Director of Programming
HARRIET BEAL
University of Washington
Latin American Assistant
DAVID SPENCER
Harvard College
Latin American Assistant
DAVID M. LITTIG
Indiana University
University of Wisconsin

•

Educational Travel, Inc.
265 Madison Avenue
New York, New York 10016

Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303

USNSA Insurance Trust
Boatmen's National Bank
P. O. Box 1322
St. Louis, Missouri 63166

•

NATIONAL ADVISORS
Arthur S. Flemming
President
University of Oregon
Sidney Hertzberg
Editor
Current Magazine
Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame
Russell Kirk
Editor
The University Bookman
Fred Schwengel, M.C.
1st District, Iowa
Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University
Milton Shapp
Chairman of the Board
Jerrold Electronics

•

Chairman
National Advisory Board
PHILLIP H. DesMARAIS
Deputy Assistant Secretary
Department of Health,
Education and Welfare

very well be persuaded, in fact probably almost is, that we should not submit a prospectus for a renewal of the Grant. My feeling is that Rick Stevens would probably be much more adamant in feeling that we should submit a prospectus for a program this next year. It seems to me that there is a danger in not attempting to continue the Project for this next year. First of all, contact is broken with the students with whom we have worked with the past three years. I am not sure what sort of effect the closing of the Southern Project Office would have on some of the groups that have been recently organized. It also seems to me that when you once break the momentum of the Project, that it is most difficult,both from our standpoint and from the Foundation, to consider re-establishing a new Project. However, the procedure of not asking for a renewal of the Grant might still be the wisest. There are certain other advantages I am sure you are well aware of. It would solve the staffing problem, save many difficult situations from facing the Advisory Board and also give the Foundation a breather year.

I am not sure how the whole affair should be handled with the Southern Project Advisory Board. It is my understanding that neither Charlie Jones or Mr. Dabbs will be in attendance. I don't know if Will Campbell will be there or not. It seems that this could be a rather cumbersome meeting.

I would like to hear your comments on what you think should be the future of the Project, both substantively and procedurally. Any thoughs you might have on the meeting of the Southern Advisors might also be useful. If you do not have a chance to drop me a line, I will be in Atlanta for the meeting of the Southern InterAgnecy Conference on June 16. I probably won't arrive until the afternoon session, as I do have commitments in Philadelphia for the early morning hours.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

Philip Sherburne
National Affairs Vice President

PS:dt
cc: Michael H. Lawler

USNSA

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA 19104 • CABLE: NATSTUD
NATIONAL COMMISSION (215) 222-1106 • INTERNATIONAL COMMISSION (215) 222-5722

June 28, 1965

Paul Anthony
Southern Regional Council
5 Forseyth Street
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Paul:

The staff and officers selected the following committee to meet and discuss alternative proposals for the future of the Southern Project of NSA.

Paul Anthony--Chairman
Will Campbell
Charlie Jones
Connie Curry
Joe Hendricks

We decided that it would probably not be best for one of the NSA people to talk with Maxwell Hahn in terms of the changes taking place in the foundation, and how that affects our timetable. I would be pleased if you could handle this discussion. If you feel that it would be best for someone else to do it, that is fine with me.

I think it should be someone who is fully aware of the situation and has the rapport to enter into a fruitful and frank discussion with Hahn and his successor. Please feel free to contact me concerning this matter.

Sincerely,

Philip Sherburne
National Affairs
Vice President

cc: Hayes Mizell

ASSOCIATED WITH: American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U. S. Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • U. S. Youth Council • United Nations Association • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

President
STEPHEN J. M. ROBBINS
University of California
Los Angeles
Special Assistant
ROBERT KERNISH
Temple University

•

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
PHILIP SHERBURNE
University of Oregon
Student Government Vice President
MICHAEL H. LAWLER
University of North Carolina
Academic Affairs Desk
ROLAND LIEBERT
University of Wisconsin
Student Government Information Service Director
MARY MEEHAN
Trinity College
Cultural Affairs Desk
PHILIP R. WERDELL
Yale University
Civil Rights Desk
STEVEN McNICHOLS
University of California
Los Angeles
Educational Affairs Desk
LAWRENCE H. DAVIS
University of California
Berkely

•

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
NORMAN UPHOFF
University of Minnesota
Princeton University
Administrative Assistant
JAMES D. FOWLER
University of Texas
Special Assistant
ROBERT WITHERSPOON
University of Rochester
Director of Exchanges
JULIUS GLICKMAN
University of Texas
Director of Programming
HARRIET BEAL
University of Washington
Latin American Assistant
DAVID SPENCER
Harvard College
Latin American Assistant
DAVID M. LITTIG
Indiana University
University of Wisconsin

•

Educational Travel, Inc.
265 Madison Avenue
New York, New York 10016

Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303

USNSA Insurance Trust
Boatmen's National Bank
P. O. Box 1322
St. Louis, Missouri 63166

•

NATIONAL ADVISORS
Arthur S. Flemming
President
University of Oregon
Sidney Hertzberg
Editor
Current Magazine
Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame
Russell Kirk
Editor
The University Bookman
Fred Schwengel, M.C.
1st District, Iowa
Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University
Milton Shapp
Chairman of the Board
Jerrold Electronics

•

Chairman
National Advisory Board
PHILLIP H. DesMARAIS
Deputy Assistant Secretary
Department of Health,
Education and Welfare

USNSA

July 6, 1965

Mr. Philip Sherburne
USNSA
3457 Chestnut Street
Philadelphia, Pa.

Dear Phil:

The committee meets today. All will be present except Connie, who is out of the country. Will has, presumably, talked with Max Hahn.

We will send along some sort of a preliminary report at an early date -- I hope.

Best.

Sincerely,

Paul Anthony
Director of Field Activities

PA:mm

USNSA

July 9, 1965

MEMO

TO: Will Campbell
Joe Hendricks
Charlie Jones

FROM: Paul Anthony

Enclosed is my effort to put down our thinking of Tuesday. It sounded better than than my words do now so please alter it as you see fit.

Your changes and Connie's ideas about it will be incorporated in a final report distributed to Philadelphia, Atlanta, and to the other members of the Advisory Committee.

Best.

USNSA -

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. ATLANTA, GEORGIA 30303
Jackson 2-8764

LESLIE W. DUNBAR,
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

July 28, 1965

M E M O R A N D U M

TO: NSA Southern Project Advisory Board
NSA Officers
Southern Project Staff

FROM: Paul Anthony

Enclosed are the recommendations of the special committee asked to concern itself with possible future program for the Southern Project. The Committee consists of Connie Curry, Will Campbell, Joe Hendricks, Charlie Jones, and Paul Anthony.

As the recommendations show, the committee felt its sole responsibility was to concern itself with future programs and when the supporting foundation be approached.

We would welcome your comments.

March 26, 1965

Mr. Michael H. Lawler
#4 Sparrow Apartments, Route #3
Chapel Hill, North Carolina

Dear Mike:

A brief reaction to the proposal for the seminar.

Your outline of the conference and the suggested leader participatns are both excellent. Would make a good conference anytime. Will be happy to be a part of it. But, does it miss the point?

I thought the idea was to select no more than twenty-five of the best students in the South, throw them together and let them react to the question of where do we go from here. Those of us of the advisory committee, foundations, and others, were to sit quietly around the wall and listen to what these student leaders had to say. After that we would meet, I thought, to discuss what we had heard and learned from the students themselves.

Your outline places these prime people in the position of listening again and being told and guided. I thought we wanted to be told and guided for a change.

Again, will be happy to support and participate in a conference such as the one you propose. But would be even happier to participate in one in which all of us from Dr. Gomillion to Mr. Sanford to Paul Anthony listened. There seem to be a lot of honest-to-goodness students doing things. I really would like to know what they want from us. Given the chance, they would probably tell us.

Best.

Sincerely,

Paul Anthony
Director of Field Activities

USNSA

Southern Project Advisory Board:

Dean Joseph Hendricks
Mercer University
Macon, Georgia

Reverend Will Campbell
Box 2316, Donelson Station
Donelson, Tennessee

Fathern Thomas Clancy, SJ
Layola University of the South
Political Science Department
New Orleans, Louisana

Mr. Monroe Schlactus
Southeastern Regional Office, ADL
41 Exchange Place, S. E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303

Reverend Charles Jones
Community Church
Chapel Hill, North Carolina

Dr. C.H. Parrish
Department of Sociology
University of Louisville
Louisville, Kentucky

Mr. Dick Ramsay
Southeastern Regional Office, AFSC
1818 South Main Street
High Point, North Carolina

Mr. James McBride Dabbs
Rip Raps Plantation
Mayesville, South Carolina

Dr. C.G. Gomillion
Tuskegee Institute
Tuskegee Institute, Alabama

Dr. C. Eric Lincoln
2937 Collier Drive, N.W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Miss Constance Curry
AFSC
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta, Georgia

NSA President:

Mr. Stephen J. M. Robbins

NSA National Affairs VP:

Mr. Philip Sherburne

NSA Student Government President:

Mr. Michael H. Lawler

(above same address)

3457 Chestnut Street
Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19104

Harold Fleming

Hayes Mizell
3. v of Louisville

UNITED STATES NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

3457 CHESTNUT STREET • PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA 19104 • CABLE: NATSTUD
NATIONAL COMMISSION (215) 222-1106 • INTERNATIONAL COMMISSION (215) 222-5722

August 10, 1965

Mr. Paul Anthony
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303

Dear Paul:

Thank you very much for sending on to me your memorandum with respect to the deliberations of the special committee on the future programming of the Southern Project.

I found the suggestions contained therein to be excellent and believe that the areas suggested for future programatic concentration to be ideally suited toward the types of program and activity in which the Southern Project should be involved.

I would, however, suggest one additional top priority area. This is, as you might have guessed, the area of community involvement. While I recognize some of the difficulties in working within the community and various types of development programs, I nevertheless feel that campus based projects have demonstrated themselves to be of great significance in the North and in those areas in the South where they have been tried. No doubt you are familiar with the experience of the North Carolina Council and I believe that this is one area in which the Project should certainly become involved. This is particularly ture in terms of the growing attractiveness of various non-campus-based community organization programs which, it seems to me, loose some of the great strengths of programs which are able to avail themselves of the resources and personnel of the colleges and universities located within the community.

I have not yet had an opportunity to consult with Phil or Mike Lawler with respect to the proposals and will be doing so at some length in the near future. I certainly hope that we will be able to get a proposal prepared for preliminary submission to a foundation in the near future.

Once again our thanks for your assistance and we shall be looking forward to discussing this in greater detail with you.

With best wishes,

STEPHEN J. M. ROBBINS
President

SJMR:b

ASSOCIATED WITH: American Council on Education • International Student Conference • U. S. Commission for UNESCO • World University Service • Council on Student Travel • U. S. Youth Council • United Nations Association • Nat'l Scholarship Service & Fund for Negro Students

President
STEPHEN J. M. ROBBINS
University of California
Los Angeles
Special Assistant
ROBERT KERNISH
Temple University

•

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
PHILIP SHERBURNE
University of Oregon
Student Government Vice President
MICHAEL H. LAWLER
University of North Carolina
Academic Affairs Desk
ROLAND LIEBERT
University of Wisconsin
Student Government Information Service Director
MARY MEEHAN
Trinity College
Cultural Affairs Desk
PHILIP R. WERDELL
Yale University
Civil Rights Desk
STEVEN McNICHOLS
University of California
Los Angeles
Educational Affairs Desk
LAWRENCE H. DAVIS
University of California
Berkely

•

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS
Vice President
NORMAN UPHOFF
University of Minnesota
Princeton University
Administrative Assistant
JAMES D. FOWLER
University of Texas
Special Assistant
ROBERT WITHERSPOON
University of Rochester
Director of Exchanges
JULIUS GLICKMAN
University of Texas
Director of Programming
HARRIET BEAL
University of Washington
Latin American Assistant
DAVID SPENCER
Harvard College
Latin American Assistant
DAVID M. LITTIG
Indiana University
University of Wisconsin

•

Educational Travel, Inc.
265 Madison Avenue
New York, New York 10016

Southern Human Relations Project
41 Exchange Place, S.E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303

USNSA Insurance Trust
Boatmen's National Bank
P. O. Box 1322
St. Louis, Missouri 63166

•

NATIONAL ADVISORS
Arthur S. Flemming
President
University of Oregon
Sidney Hertzberg
Editor
Current Magazine
Rev. T. M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.
President
University of Notre Dame
Russell Kirk
Editor
The University Bookman
Fred Schwengel, M.C.
1st District, Iowa
Robert H. Shaffer
Dean of Students
Indiana University
Milton Shapp
Chairman of the Board
Jerrold Electronics

•

Chairman
National Advisory Board
PHILLIP H. DesMARAIS
Deputy Assistant Secretary
Department of Health,
Education and Welfare

August 13, 1965

Mr. Stephen J. M. Robbins
United States National Student Association
3457 Chestnut Street
Philadelphia, Pa.

Dear Steve:

Suspect it will be some time before you aee this, but in reaction to your letter of August 10, I suspect you and the special committee may be using the term "community program" differently.

We felt there was a trend for all the youth groups to get off campus and into community projects. While the committee saw nothing wrong with this they did feel someone should still work with an on-campus emphasis and that this was ideally suited to NSA. However, our view of programs like the North Carolina tutorials and related programs would be that these remain essentially on-campus activities. That is they center on campus, involve full-time students, try to draw from all the campus-based resources, etc.

Even more importantly, though, the committee saw its role purely as that of advisor with final responsibility resting with the NSA policy group. I think the committee would be pleased to see greater emphasis on that Philadelphia-based responsibility. In short, you not only should feel free to determine the final proposal but you have the responsibility to do so.

The above is, of course, especially my own feeling and I was encouraged to see this held -- maybe to a lesser degree -- by the others. At some time in the past this situation got out of balance and I think it healthy that some adjustment is being made -- at least insofar as Connie, Will, Joe, Charlie and I are concerned.

Have a good convention, turn the powers over to the right man -- and come see us.

Best.

Sincerely,

Paul Anthony
Director of Field Activities

PA:mm

List of Participants
8th Southern Student Human Relations Seminar
University of Louisville
Louisville, Kentucky
August 1-21, 1965

1. Miss Carolyn Brewster

School: Miles College, Birmingham, Alabama
Class: Junior in 1965-1966
Major: History

Permanent home address: 629 McCary Street, S.W.
Birmingham 5, Alabama

2. Mr. Dale Caldwell

School: Memphis State University, Memphis, Tennessee
Class: Sophomore in 1965-1966
Major: History and Philosophy

Permanent home address: 111 Wilmar Circle
Jonesboro, Arkansas 72401

3. Miss Delores Craton

School: Arkansas State Teachers College, Conway, Arkansas
Class: Sophomore in 1965-1966
Major: Nursing

Permanent home address: Route #2, Box 115
Jacksonville, Arkansas

4. Miss Marva Fisher

School: Shaw University, Raleigh, North Carolina
Class: Senior in 1965-1966
Major: English

Permanent home address: P.O. Box 21
Merritt, North Carolina

5. Mr. Bud Frankenberger

School: Texas Christian University, Ft. Worth, Texas
Class: Senior in 1965-1966
Major: English

Permanent home address: 2504 Saratoga Drive
Louisville, Kentucky

Summer address (until July 17): P.O. Box 29093
TCU Station
Ft. Worth 29, Texas

6. Mr. Stan Frick

School: Newberry College, Newberry, South Carolina
Class: Sophomore in 1965-1966
Major: English and Sociology

Permanent home address: 207 Broad Street
Anderson, South Carolina

7. Mr. Jim Gibson

School: Mercer University, Macon, Georgia
Class: Junior in 1965-1966
Major: History and Philosophy

Permanent home address: 1457 30th Street
Columbus, Georgia

Summer address (June 14-July 22): Box 617
Mercer University
Macon, Georgia

8. Miss Jenny Graves

School: Blue Mountain College, Blue Mountain, Mississippi
Class: Junior in 1965-1966
Major: History and English

Permanent home address: 328 South Birchwood
Louisville, Kentucky 40206

9. Miss Bettie Hill

School: Mississippi Valley State College, Itta Bena, Miss.
Class: Senior in 1965-1966
Major: Business education

Permanent home address: Route #1, Box 337
Wesson, Mississippi

Summer address (present through July 9):
P.O. Box 504
Miss. Valley State College
Itta Bena, Mississippi

10. Miss Cellestine Hill

School: Woman's College of Georgia, Milledgeville, Georgia
Class: Sophomore in 1965-1966
Major: Psychology

Permanent home address: Route #1, Box 139
Haddock, Georgia

11. Miss Sue Jankovsky

School: University of Texas, Austin, Texas
Class: Junior in 1965-1966
Major: Journalism and Political science

Permanent home address: 325 Alexander
Kingsville, Texas

Summer address: 2508 Seton
Austin, Texas

12. Miss Ruth Kloepfer

School: Tulane University--Newcomb College, New Orleans, La.
Class: Senior in 1965-1966
Major: Psychology

Permanent home address: 3033 Louisiana Avenue Parkway
New Orleans, Louisiana

13. ~~Mr. H.M. Messmer, Jr.~~

~~School: Loyola University of the South, New Orleans, La.~~
~~Class: Junior in 1965-1966~~
~~Major: History (Pre-Law)~~

~~Permanent home address: 3795 Youree Drive~~
~~Shreveport, Louisiana 71105~~

14. Miss Lula Morton

School: Transylvania College, Transylvania, Kentucky
Class: Junior in 1965-1966
Major: Psychology and History

Permanent home address: 937 Effie Road
Lexington, Kentucky

15. Mr. Ray McClain

School: New College, Sarasota, Florida
Class: Sophomore in 1965-1966
Major: Political science

Permanent home address: 2519 Stratford Road
Columbia, South Carolina

Summer address: New College
Sarasota, Florida 33578

16. Mr. Maurice Rousseve

School: Xavier University, New Orleans, Louisiana
Class: Senior in 1965-1966
Major: Economics

Permanent home address: 4636 Willow Street
New Orleans, Louisiana

17. Mr. George Singleton

School: Pfeiffer College, Misenheimer, North Carolina
Class: Sophomore in 1965-1966
Major: English

Permanent home address: 317 Elm Street, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20001

18. Mr. Artis Spenser

School: Tougaloo College, Tougaloo, Mississippi
Class: Sophomore in 1965-1966
Major: Political science and Philosophy

Permanent home address: 1318 First East Street
Vicksburg, Mississippi 39180

19. Miss Catherine Tyler

School: Columbia College, Columbia, South Carolina
Class: Senior in 1965-1966
Major: English

Permanent home address: 1454 Village Road
Charleston, South Carolina

Summer address (June 7-July 31): 1637 Sunnyside Drive
Cayce, South Carolina

20. Mr. Jerry Womack

School: University of Virginia
Class: Sophomore in 1965-1966
Major: Mathematics

Permanent home address: 200 Fourth Street
Martinsville, Virginia 24112

21. Mr. Frederick Wright

School: University of Southwestern Louisiana
Lafayette, Louisiana
Class: Sophomore in 1965-1966
Major: Political science

Permanent home address: 110 Elenora Street
Lafayette, Louisiana

Summer address: 8844 South Dante
Chicago 17, Illinois

22. Miss Ann Valliant

School: University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, Arkansas
Class: Junior in 1965-1966
Major: Spanish education

Permanent home address: Route #2, Box 90
Gravette, Arkansas 72736

Summer address: 129 West Lafatette
Fayetteville, Arkansas 72701

Miss Sherry Allen
School: University of Florida, Gainesville, Florida
Class: Senior in 1965-1966
Major: Elementary Education

Permanent Home Address: 311 S. W. 27th Street
Gainesville, Florida

Unless otherwise indicated, the permanent home address is also the summer address.

Rec'd 6/21/65

PA AV USNSA

Dear Seminar Participant:

We hope that you are having a good summer and are working hard on your Seminar report or state survey. Preparations for the Seminar are moving along well, and we are looking forward to meeting you in Louisville. This letter is to tell you that because Rick Stevens, the assistant project director, and I will be out of the office during the month of July, we are trying to complete the details for the Seminar before the end of the month. We need your cooperation on this and we hope that you will give close attention to the following instructions and information.

Staff; This year the Seminar staff will consist of:

(1) Dean Joseph Hendricks, Dean of Men at Mercer University, Macon, Georgia. Mr. Hendricks is a native of Georgia, and a graduate of Mercer University and Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. He was formerly Director of Religious Activities at Mercer, and has had a close working relationship with students in both positions. Dean Hendricks is president of the Georgia Council on Human Relations, and he was also the Seminar consultant last year.

(2) Rick Stevens, Assistant Project Director,

(3) and myself.

Rick's wife, Judy, will also be with us and will be assisting us with the management of the Seminar.

Transportation: You will be responsible for making your own transportation arrangements by bus to Louisville. While traveling, you should keep an accurate record of your meals, snacks, and other expenses. This record will be turned over to us at the Seminar and you will be reimbursed for this expense. We will be happy to provide you with the cost for your bus ticket before you leave, if you complete the enclosed transportation form and return it to us by the end of June. We shall make arrangements for everyone's return transportation when we are in Madison.

Arrival in Louisville: If, for some reason, there are changes in the time that your bus is to arrive in Louisville, please notify us immediately. When you arrive in Louisville, take a cab to Threlkeld Hall-South on the University of Louisville campus. Keep a record of this expense also.

Pre-Seminar Reading: We had hoped to be able to send you a number of paperback books to read before coming to the Seminar. Unfortunately, you will not receive these until later in the month and perhaps will not be able to read all of them before the Seminar. For this reason, I want to list them now so that you can get some of them from your local library and begin your pre-Seminar reading program. All of these books are essential for a basic understanding of the subjects we will be discussing at the Seminar.

Required pre-Seminar reading:

1. Mind of the South, by W. J. Cash
2. Native Son, by Richard Wright
3. Crisis in Black and White, by Charles Silberman
4. Light in August, by William Faulkner

Secondary list; read these after finishing those above, or substitute these for those of the above you have previously read:

1. The Next Generation: The Prospects Ahead for Youth, by Donald N. Michael
2. Black Boy, by Richard Wright
3. The Burden of Southern History, by C. Vann Woodward
4. Intruder in the Dust, by William Faulkner

The Faulkner books will have to be obtained from your local library since they are no longer in print in paperback. The others will be sent to you. You are urged to read as many of these as possible before coming to the Seminar. Once there, you will be given a vast amount of materials to study and many other books will be available for you to read.

18th National Student Congress: Enclosed you will find a Congress brochure and an orange Congress registration card. It is important that you complete this card by filling in those spaces which have been marked with an "x." This card should be returned to us at once. Make sure that you have filled in all three sections of the card. Read the Congress brochure carefully and then designate the Seminars you would like to attend at the Congress; there is a space for this on the orange card. Please return all three sections of these to us immediately.

We will be in touch with you during the coming weeks. Be sure and get in touch with us if you have any problems about your travel arrangements or Seminar Project.

Sincerely,

M. Hayes Mizell, Director
Southern Project, USNSA
Room 701, 41 Exchange Place, S. E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303

MHM/nfb

I-N-F-O-R-M-A-T-I-O-N S-H-E-E-T

Eighth Southern Student Human Relations Seminar

Room and Facilities

1. All of the Seminar activities will take place in University Center on the University of Louisville campus.

2. Living quarters for all Seminar personnel, including resource people, will be in Threlkeld Hall, South.

3. Soap, towels, and bed linens will be provided. Maid service is also included.

4. The Seminar meeting room will be in Conference Room D of the University Center.

5. The Seminar library and office (typewriters and supplies available here) will be located in rooms in the University Center.

Meals

1. We will be eating all meals in the University Center.

2. The cafeteria hours are:

Breakfast (Served in Snack Bar).....	7:00 a.m. - 8:30 a.m.
Lunch.....	11:30 a.m. - 1:30 p.m.
Dinner.....	5:00 p.m. - 6:00 p.m.

3. The following is the schedule for the Snack Bar:

Monday, Wednesday, & Thursday.....	7:00 a.m. - 6:30 p.m.
Tuesday, and Friday.....	7:00 a.m. - 4:30 p.m.
Saturday & Sunday.....	Closed

Library Facilities

The participants will be able to use the University library for reference and study. The hours are:

Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday	8:00 a.m. -10:00 p.m.
Tuesday and Friday	8:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m.
Saturday	9:00 a.m. - 1:00 p.m.

Telephones

Women will be staying on the first floor of Threlkeld Hall, South, where the telephone number is 637-9892. Men will be staying on the second floor of Threlkeld Hall, South, where the number is 637-9229. The University switchboard number is 637-2531; the University Center extension is 343.

Mail

Mail should be addressed to the Seminar participant:

c/o USNSA Southern Student Human Relations Seminar
University of Louisville
Belknap Campus
Louisville, Kentucky 40208

Swimming

The swimming pool, located in the new Crawford Gymnasium, will be open from 12:00 noon until 1:00 p.m., and again from 3:00 p.m. until 6:00 p.m. six days a week. There is a slight possibility that the pool will also be open at night.

Finances

The Seminar scholarship includes transportation, room and board for the participants. However, you will need money for your own entertainment and personal expenses. Seminar participants will be able to cash checks at a bank where we will have a Seminar account.

Laundry

Students can use the laundry facilities located at the ground level of the dormitory. There are several dry cleaners near the campus.

What to Bring

1. All the Seminar and Congress material that has been sent to you.

2. Any publication, articles, etc., from your own university or community that will be helpful in discussing the topics on the curriculum.

3. Any materials which you will need to use in the presentation of your Seminar report or state survey.

4. Alarm Clock. Women should bring travel irons.

5. The weather in Louisville in August is very warm and usually quite humid. The temperature in the evening is usually about 65 degrees and ranges from 85 degrees to 95 degrees in the daytime. Students may dress casually: bermudas or cotton skirts for the women; bermudas and wash pants for the men. Appropriate clothing for special occasions in the evening and for church on Sunday should also be brought: summer cotton dresses for the women; and summer suits or sport coats for the men. Since it will perhaps be cool in Madison, Wisconsin, you should bring a sweater. Don't forget your raincoat and umbrella.

Seminar Regulations

1. In keeping with University rules, women are not allowed in men's rooms and there is to be no drinking or gambling in the residence halls at any time.

2. Seminar participants are asked to come in by 1:00 a.m. on Sunday through Thursday nights. This is vital so that the participants will be fresh for the next day's Seminar activities. Participants may stay out as late as they like on Friday and Saturday nights.

National Student Congress

You will receive more information concerning the National Student Congress shortly before coming to the Seminar and at the Seminar itself.

September 28, 1965

Mr. Phil Sherburne
President
US National Student Association
2115 "S" Street, N.W.
Washington, D. C.

Dear Phil:

First things first, most hearty and sincere congratulations on winning the election. The delegates have good sense.

Next, I hope you are moving on the future of the Southern Project. I think personnel matters may be easier to resolve than at an earlier time. And, if there is to be a new Southern Project, we ought to begin involving it as soon as possible with all else that is happening.

For several months the student work has been slowing down. Some of this has obviously to do with the summer. Some special situations, like YES in North Carolina, are taking on their very special programs. But generally things seem to be suffering from a "last few months of operation" kind of philosophy. The sooner we can think in terms of a new and ongoing program, the better. Needless to say, I'll be happy to be of any possible assistance.

Again, congratulations, and best.

Sincerely,

Paul Anthony
Director of Field Activities

PA:mm

ae AV MM

November 12, 1965

Memorandum
To: Members of Southern Advisory Board
From: Phil Sherburne

Since last spring's advisory board meeting, the officers of NSA and the staff of the Southern Project have been discussing the future of the project. In addition a subcommittee of the advisory board drew up a list of recommendations for consideration. Having recovered from the NSA Congress and the move to Washington which followed, we have now drawn up a tentative proposal for continuation and expansion of the southern project.

The proposal calls for a continuation of the human relations work of the project including the SSHRS. In an attempt to reach the students who have been involved in human relations programs or who want to go beyond these programs we feel that we must expand our efforts in community development and education. Some of this work is being done on a limited scale now. But if we are to give the southern students an opportunity to work with the problems confronting them and to have an impact on other students, then we must provide them with information and assistance to deal with problems of poverty and education. We realize that what we are suggesting at the outset is only a small beginning. But with the resources of the Washington office we hope to be able to expand the staff and material support in each of the areas.

I am enclosing with this memorandum statements of the work to be done in the three areas. From this material the actual prospectus will be drawn. As we are operating on a short deadline, I hope you will have an opportunity to read the enclosures soon. On Monday and Tuesday we will be trying to reach each of you by telephone to discuss this proposal. Neither time nor finances will permit a meeting at this date, which is unfortunate. However, I am hopeful that we will be able to discuss the major points of the proposal over the phone.

Write me

USNSA SOUTHERN PROJECT

Human Relations

Since 1959, the National Student Association has been committed to the improvement of human relations in the South, and particularly to the involvement of Southern students in human relations activities. Because of the work of the Southern Project during the past six years, hundreds of students have been stimulated to become active in human relations programs, and various organizations in the South have initiated their own student human relations activities. Such groups as the South Carolina Student Council on Human Relations, the Georgia Students for Human Rights, the Freedom Forum at the University of Florida, and the Alabama Council on Human Relations have come to depend on the Southern Project for program suggestions, limited financial aid, conference organization, and other forms of assistance. Other organizations, such as state human relations councils, and individuals have expressed an interest in utilizing the experience and skill of the Southern Project to either begin or promote student human relations programs in their areas.

Such groups as these are acutely aware that while a number of civil rights and human relations organizations have been organized since 1959, the Southern Project is the only one of these working to involve the responsible and unalienated student in a broad range of human relations activity. It is also apparant that the need for an organization with this type of orientation and experience has increased since 1959. The racial climate in the South has now improved to the extent that many students are now willing, perhaps for the first time, to become openly involved in human relations programs. Such involvement often takes place where the roots of racism are deep within the families, schools, churches, and friends of these students, and they need meaningful programs as well as moral reinforcement if their committment is to be sustained.

The human relations desk of the Southern Project should be concerned primarily with those states where human relations programs are most needed. These would be in Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Tennessee, and Florida. The director of the human relations desk would continue to relate to those students in the South who are "awakening" in their racial attitudes as well as to those student leaders who are ready and capable of initiating human relations programs on campus. The director of this desk would concern himself with trying to involve student leaders in such programs as well as with giving all students the stimulation and encouragement necessary to lead them into a more active role in the area of human relations on campus. The director would also continue to serve as a liaison between the established human relations organizations and the campus, and to inform students about programs in which they might participate. Finally, the director of the human relations desk would lend his skills at organizing, administration, and programming to whatever college groups or individuals required it.

The above general program goals would be implemented in the following ways:

1. Organize, sponsor, or help campus organizations and/or individuals to organize and sponsor conferences of local or state-wide scope. Such conferences would deal with campus human relations programming, would include representatives from other civil rights and human relations organizations, and would educate the conference on current civil rights issues. These conferences are vitally needed because they are the only opportunity that many Southern students have to be exposed to new ideas and new experiences which will liberate them from the traditional and outmoded concepts currently retarding the progress of the South.

2. Encourage history, psychology, sociology, and other college departments to inject human relations or race relations projects into their course curriculum when such would be relevant to the particular subject being studied.

3. Attempt to establish human relations council on campuses and to offer program assistance to such councils.

4. Work with state-wide student human relations groups by offering limited financial aid, program direction, and prodding them to become more relevant and active. When asked, the human relations desk would assist state adult human relations councils and/or other organizations in establishing a student division.

5. Promote a thorough integration of Southern campuses, seeking to include Negro students in every aspect of student life on predominantly white campuses. Encourage and aid campus human relations (and other) groups in their efforts to desegregate college dormitories, social fraternities, service clubs, and other college institutions which present barriers to the Negro student.

6. Constantly communicate with other Southern-based human relations and civil rights organizations as to specifics of their current program. Discuss with such organizations how students might be included in their programs.

COMMUNITY INVOLVEMENT

Southern Project

The term "community involvement" has come to denote practically any activity in which students participate in the lives and problems of any community off their campuses, whether in the immediately surrounding town or rural areas a thousand miles away: anything from doing precinct work in a municipal election to tutoring Negro elementary school children to marching in protest in Selma. The Association usually uses the term in reference to projects which involve students in direct efforts to assist various kinds of disadvantaged communities to become independent and able to compete with other segments of American society on a more nearly equal basis. These efforts range from traditional social service projects to "radical" projects like political education and community organization, but all are characterized by the direct involvement of students with Negroes, poor white city residents, migrant laborers and other poor farm workers, American Indians, Mexican-Americans, Puerto Ricans, and members of other economically or racially disadvantaged groups.

Since 1960, the movement of students into disadvantaged communities has boomed. Students have led in the reawakening of the American conscience to the "other America" and have brought fresh methodological approaches and the dynamic spirit of voluntarism to the nation's efforts to confront its social and racial problems. Students in the South, with certain notable exceptions such as the students who founded SNCC, SSOC, and the local and statewide human relations councils, have come more slowly and lately to this commitment and movement. For several reasons, the Association believes it is imperative that efforts of the Southern students to actively confront community and societal problems should be encouraged, supported, and propagated in every way possible.

The South exhibits many of the nation's most pressing social and economic problems -- particularly poverty and discrimination--in their starkest and grossest form. Too, the history and politics of the South have deterred its political and civic leaders from acting forcefully and unambiguously in response to these ills. Thus, the South needs as much or more than any other region of the country the courage, the freshness, the initiative, and the creativity which students bring to the assault on poverty and discrimination.

Community involvement projects are immensely educational, in the most significant sense of that term. When students are confronted personally and directly with the agony of poverty and discrimination and are forced to respond actively, their education is augmented and their future goals and commitments are challenged in ways that can never be duplicated by any formal academic course or lecture or book. The range of projects is so diverse that practically the entire spectrum of student ability, sophistication, political belief, or racial attitudes can be attracted. A freshman from conservative background who considers himself a racial moderate and is making his first tentative intellectual explorations of the terrain apart from the positions and attitudes his background has bequeathed him can be involved in a tutoring project which confronts him with a Negro child, his family, and the numerous barriers behind which the child lives. If the project is run with sufficient vision and sensitivity, that freshman will gradually or rapidly become aware of the larger social and economic conditions of which this child's life is a part and of the massiveness of the action required to realistically attack those conditions. Or perhaps a radical, alienated student long hostile to Southern racial traditions and socio-political structures and a veteran of protest movements is encouraged and assisted to develop a community organization project in a community near his college in which he and other students work to enable the community to become self-motivated, politically sophisticated, articulate, and powerful enough to demand from political and other officials the respect and services to which they are entitled. Rather than spending their time in movements or activities which are primarily protest or related to issues whose value is largely emotive and short-range, they are working concretely on projects to develop community self-consciousness and independence that will enable them to help themselves.

Finally, increased student involvement in their communities can lead to greatly increased institutional commitment by the colleges and universities themselves to solving social problems and developing disadvantaged communities and individuals. Some institutions have already made that commitment, as, for example, when several participated last summer in Projects Headstart and Upward Bound of the Office of Economic Opportunity, and when Tuskegee Institute directed 500 Work-Study students in service to and development of several surrounding counties, or when Mercer University decided to seek funds for a compensatory education program for Negro students in Georgia. As more and more colleges and universities, especially state-supported institutions, assume roles of ideological leadership of rather than subservience to other political and opinion-setting forces in the South, then the effects of the students working to change aspects of Southern society will be multiplied.

With this goal and rationale in mind, the Association envisions a number of areas in which its Southern office ought to be active. Perhaps these are best described in terms of the staff members who will eventually or ideally be required and the areas of responsibility of each of them.

1. Tutorial projects. Tutorials are at once the most popular form of student community involvement project that has been developed over the past several years and the most flexible. A tutorial can be a simply-structured project of one-to-one tutoring that can be set up on literally any campus and by students who have had minimal previous experience. Or it can be a highly sophisticated project with tutoring at its base but also including a wide range of activities affecting most aspects of the lives of the youngsters and their families. The Association established in March, 1965, a tutorial resources center which has collected a mass of materials relating to student tutorial projects, including reports and sample materials from over 300 projects around the country as well as professional materials of benefit to volunteer student projects. This center also encourages the production of new materials and activities that students can use and has a regular publications program of manuals, problems papers, and newsletters for the use of both new and established projects. However the center does not presently have an adequate staff to work extensively in the field, using these materials, to develop new projects and assist in the improvement of existing ones. A full-time staff member based in Atlanta could spend most of his time in the field, working with students on Southern campuses and organizing occasional conferences to encourage cooperation and cooperation and coordination among projects in one area or state. Furthermore, some existing organizations, such as state student human relations councils, could be encouraged to adopt the sponsorship of tutorials as a major program emphasis if they had the continuing advice and assistance of someone such as this staff member.

2. Community action. Other student groups are prepared to initiate and develop other projects beyond the tutorial, in the general realm of community action or community organization. These might be intensive summer or academic year projects in a single neighborhood or county or other rural area. Such a project might include a tutorial, adult literacy and education program, a Headstart-type pre-school program, voter registration and education, and formation of a community organization or association to act as spokesman for the community with political and social welfare agencies and to apply for a Community Action Program grant from the Office of Economic Opportunity. Prototypes exist in the South in such things as the Southside Virginia project of SSOC and the Virginia Student Civil Rights Committee, the Prince Edward County project of the AFSC and the Virginia Human Relations Council, the Vine City Project in Atlanta, the operation of Headstart projects by students in Carroll County, Georgia and Dade County, Florida, and the Tuskegee Work-Study project, but dozens more could be developed and even the established ones could benefit from an experienced student advisor and liaison.

3. Community action projects on predominantly Negro campuses. One way to deal with the complex of problems associated with Negro higher education in the South is to encourage students on predominantly Negro campuses to set up and administer themselves community projects in the communities around their schools or in other areas of the South during the summer. These projects have shown that they can break through the isolation often characterizing these campuses, can develop practical experience yielding increased self-assurance and independence, and can often provide concrete issues around which anachronistic administrators and repressive regulations can be challenged. Some of the larger private institutions have already initiated or participated in community involvement projects, though many of these have been developed and directed by the administrations rather than the students themselves. On very few state-supported institutions, however, have students even attempted to set up projects and on these few the students have frequently been frustrated by administrative opposition and their own inexperience. Since these campuses present many unique problems and since they are also so crucial, the Association feels a special staff member working almost exclusively on such campuses, though in cooperation with the rest of the Atlanta staff, is vital.

4. Expansion of Appalachian Volunteers. The Council of the Southern Mountains originated in 1964 a program in which students in 19 Kentucky colleges joined to work in the development of small, impoverished, isolated Kentucky mountain communities. Teams of student volunteers spend weekends and the summer in community development work away from their campuses, often focussing on the physical redevelopment of the schoolhouse and other public facilities but usually including other direct programs as well such as supplementary education for youngsters, recreation, and adult education, and health education. The program has been highly successful seems an excellent model for student assistance to rural communities, often some distance away from their campuses. It provides a vehicle for cooperation among students from many campuses as well as their institutions themselves, thus providing opportunities for campuses who consider themselves too limited in size, financial resources, or location to establish projects of their own. Our staff member would work in cooperation with the Council and with relevant federal agencies to assist students in other parts of Appalachia to develop similar programs, particularly in Tennessee, Western Virginia, and North Carolina. He would probably concentrate on one state or area at a time, and move on only when a viable program was established or when all possibilities had been unsuccessfully exhausted.

5. Migrant Laborers. Students in the South have unique opportunities to become involved in the lives and problems of America's often-neglected agricultural migratory laborers and their families. Two of the nation's largest home-base areas are located in Texas and Florida, and the migrant streams themselves pass through much of the South in the summer. Students in Wisconsin, Oregon, and California have pioneered in setting up projects in migrant communities: health education, literacy education, supplementary education for children, organization of labor unions. Federal agencies have shown a marked willingness to support many of these projects. Our staff member would collect all information possible relating to student and other volunteer projects among migrants, would stimulate interest in this kind of project on campuses in Florida, Texas, and areas in the East Coast migrant stream, and would assist students in developing the details of the projects and in securing financial support for them.

The Association proposes at this time to ask the Field Foundation to support one staff member in community involvement, with the following general areas of responsibility:

1) To work with the community involvement staff (tutorial resource center) of the national office to provide direct assistance to students who have already expressed an interest in starting or improving tutorial and related projects. He would make one or more visits of several days to each campus which requested this assistance and would advise the national office as to what sorts of materials need to be made available or written especially for the campuses in the South. He would also occasionally organize campus, city-wide conferences on tutorial projects and the social and economic problems out of which the need for them arises. Due to limitations in time, these conferences will be run primarily in cooperation with other organizations.

2) Also in cooperation with the national office staff, he would provide information and personal assistance to groups of students considering other forms of community action projects, including information about participating in or gaining funds from federal programs.

3) He will be responsible for developing final plans for staff to work in the areas outlined above and preparing prospecti and applications to appropriate foundations or govenmental agencies in order to fully implement our outlined program. If funds for all of these areas are obtained within the span of the present proposed grant, he will assume one of the five field staff positions with some general responsibility for assisting the director in supervising and evaluating the Southern office's overall work in community involvement.

THE EDUCATIONAL CHALLENGE OF THE SOUTH

One discovers a lack of proper educational standards most acutely in the deep South. Not only are the Negro institutions in this part of the country most painfully retarded, but the white institutions face comparable problems in establishing a high quality level of education, as well. Concern for this situation was manifested at the 16th NSA Congress in a resolution, and mandate to the National Staff, entitled SOUTHERN EDUCATIONAL ISSUES. Recognizing the fact that Southern education, for many reasons, is unable to provide the resources and atmosphere for free intellectual development, the resolution calls for a student and faculty in-depth study of the situation.

In keeping with its constitution and aims - "to maintain academic freedom, academic responsibility and student rights; to develop better educational standards, facilities and teaching methods; to guarantee to all people, because of their inherent dignity as individuals, equal rights and possibilities for primary, secondary and higher education regardless of sex, race, religion, political belief or economic circumstances, and to foster the recognition of the rights and responsibilities of students to the school, the community, humanity and God; USNSA, at its recent National Congress laid great emphasis on the needs of education, and especially on the need for greater equality and balance among the institutions of higher learning.

The mandate called for the National Staff to secure funds for a Southern educational project that would establish an advisory board of Southern educators and would maintain a project director who would begin making a specific study of the educational difficulties of the South. The director is to conduct several pilot projects at individual universities in the area, establishing year long seminars aimed at making the Southern student more aware of his plight, particularly in the light of southern educational history and tradition. It is hoped from this will come a greater impetus for university reform.

The students are not alone in their awareness of this Problem. Recently several large foundation grants have given to interested organizations for the purpose of working in the area, with emphasis on the needs of the Negro institutions of the South.

And in keeping with this development, the members present at the September annual meeting of the American Council on Education, manifested particular concern about the inequality in higher education. Elvis J. Stahr, Jr., President of Indiana University, was named Chairman of an eight-member committee established to investigate the issue. One of the primary concerns of this committee will be to seek ways of expanding opportunities for Negroes in higher education at faculty, administrative and student levels in all parts of the country. The Council has called for an October meeting of some thirty selected college leaders to discuss the situation and lay the groundwork for activity.

The Problem of Quality

In the general area of southern education, a professor of sociology from Florida State University reports that not only does out entire education system face the problem of numbers, but also the problem of quality, "for Southern colleges and universities have on the whole traditionally been inferior to those in other regions of the country ... According to Berelson's rankings based on the Keniston survey of 1957, not one of the twenty-two top-ranking universities in the country was located in a southern state."

He adds that "the factors responsible for the relatively low standing of southern colleges in the past continue to operate in the present, and the problem of quality cannot be solved simply by appropriating greater funds. Historically the intellectual climate at southern universities has been burdened with a narrow provincialism and a rigidly exacted uniformity which have stifled dissent and free inquiry."

In an article for HARPER's October 1962 issue, Professor C. Vann Wood reports that, "faculty dismissals and harrassments have been increasing, and reprisals against students reached a new peak this year. The outstanding cases of academic freedom and tenure in the files of the American Association of University Professors increased from thirty-seven in April 1961 to fifty-five a year later. Twenty-three of the cases and a majority of the institutions censured are in the South."

One sees a serious defect in the educational excellence of Negro Universities of the South but also, defects in the white colleges. Many immediately attribute the problem to race relations. But the problem of race cannot be considered as the only reason for the existent lack of excellence in southern education, although it does constitute a major factor. For the whole history of the southern educational tradition is being called to account.

Why does the South rank lowest in the evaluation of educational institutions? Why do faculty people rank the South as lowest in their list of preferences for areas of the country in which to teach? Dr. Russell Middleton published a recent survey in AMERICAN SOCIOLOGICAL REVIEW wherein he found that of five geographical areas of the country, doctoral candidates at non-southern universities listed the South as fifth in the preference list of places to teach and candidates from southern universities listed the South as fourth. Racial prejudice and the lack of academic freedom were the two primary reasons given for these answers. It is commonly known in academic circles that free inquiry is discouraged in many areas of the South; thus, this section of the country does not present a very attractive drawing card to those looking for a proper educational atmosphere.

USNSA did a brief study of the southern educational tradition in the past year. Several factors require a more detailed study yet to be conducted on the background of southern education; but these should be mentioned now.

Southern education, more than education in any other part of the country, is the peculiar product of the society it serves. The problems of educational hierarchy characterized by ascending power, (accompained by increasing commitment to the society), are magnified in the South. The nature of southern tradition made it impossible for education to rise above the weakness of the structure.

Southern education is not now - nor was it ever intended to be - liberal education in the true sense of the word. Higher education in the South received its real growth in the era of "Progress", the period that was inaugurated by the ending of Reconstruction. Essentially, the attitudes that led to the era of "Progress" were two. The first of these was the inescapable realization of the economic prostration of the South. The second, and the most important for education, was the need to hold fast to the ideology of the South. C. J. Cash, in his MIND OF THE SOUTH, points out the importance to the Southerner of that ideology. Speaking in the mind of a Southerner of that era, he speaks of the burning desire to rebuild the South through industry, but in the light of its old traditions, to keeping intact the ideal of "throughly stamping the traditional patterns upon the rising generations, especially in the colleges and universities, which ultimately determined what would be done in the lower schools."

It may be particularly noticed here that southern education was never intended to submit its society to objective analysis, an essential and historic activity in the university milieu. Moreover, the southern schools never meant to examine the society; but, as Cash pointed out, they were meant to act in a positive way to maintain and defend the southern way of life. Hence, there could never be a real tradition of academic freedom in the South. There could never be "liberal" examination of the social sciences. The search for truth had to be relegated to a secondary position while the needs of the Southern society were the criteria of higher education.

Today, although this position had certainly been moderated, there is still a scar left which carries over into the current educational system of the South. That is why Dr. Van Woodward can point to twenty-three cases of violation of academic freedom in (one) a given year. The influence of the state upon higher education is an undeniable factor in the South. One has only to look at a Mississippi and an Alabama to have experienced this very situation in the past year.

State influence, however, has not been the only force involved in the preservation of the Southern tradition on the campus. Trustees, religious groups, and citizens' groups have frequently seen fit to involve themselves in the internal affairs of the universities. It is fair to say that the southern university has always been fair game for any group that has felt compelled to express its indignation at the departure from the "social norms" on the campus.

Higher education in the South, coming as it did, in the era of "Progress" and engendering the social problems of that era in its educational system, began its growth in an atmosphere that excluded academic freedom. The Southern University is still plagued with by this problem in its relations with the state legislatuve, the community, and internally, in the fears it engenders among administrators and faculty members. The problems of the southern university in recruiting academic staff can certainly be traced, among other things, to this tradition setting forth a lack of academic freedom.

Violations of academic freedom occur to both faculty and students without discrepancy in the educational arena of the South. Recently, it was learned that at the University of Alabama, students were made to sign an oath upon registration, that they would do no writing or commenting on racial matters for publications. The ban will be extended, according to a university spokesman, "until the trouble is over," No date was given as to the estimated time that it would all be "over".

In retrospect, one can see many problems with the Southern educational system. Perhaps to begin to alleviate the problem one should attempt an understanding and comprehension of southern history, and the impact that it has had on the Southern education. Finances alone will not remedy the problem. The South does need more educational facilities, it does need higher salaries for its teachers and administration people, it does need to enable more students, regardless of race, color, or creed, or economic status to attend the universities. But, perhaps, most important of all, it needs to create an awareness among the educators and the educated of the situation that exists, and a deeper appreciation of the real aims of higher education. The problems that exist in the South are ideological as well as material. Excellence in the field of higher education only exists where there is a forum for free inquiry, where society can be studied objectively and with freedom among the individuals of that society.

Our society is making increasing demands on the educated individuals that comprise it. More responsibilities must be met in a more complex environment. It is becoming essential to have a background in the field of higher education, and to have a better background than ever before. Given our highly technological age, there is less room for mistakes. Academic work has begun and must be continued to meet certain of the needs of our era. In areas already behind the rest of the country in the development of this emphasis on the full use of the educational background, the process is more laborious and the results slow to be seen. But here it is even more important to concentrate time and energy, for the need is vital.

And so students and the educators must face the challenge of the South. Indeed all members of society must confront this problem, for they will all feel its defects.

USNSA calls upon its members and friends to support their endeavor to work effectively in the South and to expand its programs where possible. Perhaps this is an area where students and faculty both Negro and white, can work together more properly as students and faculty than as representatives of different races to achieve a common goal.

It will be a long and arduous project to significantly change the Southern educational tradition, and those working in the South will often be disheartened. Nevertheless, with Professor Iredell Jenkins of the University of Alabama, who chose to stay in the South for this very reason, one might say, "The place to fight for a principle is where it is a living issue, not where it is an accomplished fact, and still less where it has become a mere object of sanctimonious congratulations."

USNSA would hire one individual to work full time on an education project in the South. This project would attempt to provide Southern students with information and action programs in a number of problem areas.

One of the most important areas in which the project would work would be that of academic freedom. It is particularly important to arouse concern for academic freedom in an area of the country that has never developed a real tradition of free inquiry. Beyond this, however, it is even more important to attempt to arouse such concern in a time of social change in the South. We need only examine recent history to see the impact that attempts to preserve tradition has had in restricting the freedom of the academic community. The project would attempt to develop student awareness of individual violations of academic freedom and, more important, of the pressures and social conditions that lead to such violations. Beyond arousing concern for academic freedom, the project could encourage regional cooperation among student governments and individuals in the defense of academic freedom for students and faculty members.

The Southern university, traditionally, has not offered students an opportunity to submit their society to objective examination. This fact cannot be attributed to violations of academic freedom alone, but must also rest with the faculty members, the text books, courses offered and the nature of co-curricular presentations on the campus. This project would act as a direct stimulant to free inquiry by merely raising the question of the Southern educational tradition. More important, the project could directly encourage students to initiate studies of the curriculum, the faculty resources in the social sciences, and the variety of viewpoints offered in the informal intellectual life of the campus. Using such studies as a basis, the students could undertake action projects designed to expand the opportunities for social inquiry on their own campuses.

The Negro institutions of the South would present the project with a particular type of problem, but, nonetheless, one particularly suitable for student action. Part of the work of the project would be devoted to arousing among students of the predominantly white universities a concern for the quality of education being offered at the Negro universities. Programs based on this concern could be initiated on the white campuses that would tend to alleviate the isolation of the Negro campuses. Such projects would be student exchanges, book drives for libraries at Negro colleges which have lost their accreditation due to inadequate libraries, and student initiation of teacher incentive campaigns designed to interest graduates of white colleges in teaching in Negro colleges. Much of the work of the project could also be devoted to arousing among the students of the Negro campuses an interest in the quality of their own education and assisting them with programs designed to help eliminate the inequities it fosters.

One of the problems that continues to plague southern education is that of lack of financial support. While part of this problem can be attributed to the economic condition of the South, much of it must be attributed to indifference on the part of those who would benefit from better education. The project would conduct research on the current national and state proposals on higher education that would affect the South and encourage students to take an active part in influencing legislation on higher education. Thus, the project would keep students informed on the progress being made in the public financing of higher education and encourage them to support programs that would benefit education in the South.

Many of the problems of Southern education can be attributed to a lack of understanding (on the part of students and educators) of the historical forces that have shpaed the region's present concept of higher education. The project would devote part of its time to research and dissemination of information on the Southern educational tradition for students and educators.

While the project would not be able to work in all of these areas at any one time, it would be able, from time to time, to devote some of its attention to all of them. The project would be able to obtain a fund of information of all of these areas that would enable it to meet the needs of students who were interested in any one of them.

This project would be geared to developing in-depth programming on individual campuses. In order to do this, the project would need a vast fund of general information on Southern education as well as information on specific state and campus needs. It would also need an extensive list of reliable resource people among educators and students on individual campuses.

In order to achieve this, the project would devote most of its first year to research and to the expansion of its personal contacts. The project director would spend most of the first year conducting this research and contacting individuals who are willing to work with the project.

Through such a program of research, conferences, campus programming, and personal contact with students and educators, USNSA feels that it will be able to assist Southern students in determining and fulfilling their role in the future of regional education. The students of the South are probably the group (within the academic community) that has the least commitment to the educational status quo. Hopefully, USNSA will be able to take advantage of this situation by using knowledgable and responsible programming to develop a group of students dedicated to the improvement of Southern education.

U. S. National Student Association
2115 S St. N. W.
Washington, D. C. 20008

SPECIAL DELIVERY

Mr. Philip Sherburne
National Affairs Vice President
U. S. National Student Association
3457 Chestnut Street
Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19104

Dear Phil:

The purpose of this letter is to introduce briefly the origins and development of the enclosed proposal.

This idea originated from a conversation I had with the Reverend Charles Jones here in Chapel Hill, After mulling on it for a while, I met with Curt Gans on two occasions, and we began to formulate it in more specific terms. Curt provided a very valuable historical perspective in thinking out the specific purposes of this seminar. With a clearer idea of the scope and format for the meeting, I discussed it with Hayes in Atlanta. Hayes had himself been thinking along the same lines but in terms of an early Fall meeting. Hayes then spoke with people in and around Atlanta, Mr. Leslie Dunbar, Mr. Joe Hendricks and Mr. Paul Anthony. I spoke with Miss Connie Curry in Washington after the Inter-Agency meeting and again during the recent meeting of staffs of state human relations councils in Atlanta. While in Virginia, I contacted Miss Pat Knight to get the benefit of her campus traveling on behalf of the Southern Project and more recently for the Virginia Council on Human Relations.

The above is a brief history, so to speak, of the enclosed proposal. Everyone contacted is enthusiastic about the idea. Generally, the feeling is that we are at a critical juncture in the history of student action in the South. There is a great need to reassess our goals and methodology in the context of larger social forces at play in the South and in regard to particular changes occurring within the Southern student community.

I should add that a seminar co-ordinator has been contacted and has expressed interest in administering the program. Mr. James Scott received his undergraduate degree and his M. A. from the University of North Carolina. Jim was very active in student affairs while attending the University, including student government, the Y, human relations programing, civil rights activities and work with foreign students. Jim spent a year in Panama and is presently working in Arlington, Virginia. He is planning on enrolling as a doctoral candidate in Latin American Studies at the University of Texas next September.

I would like to suggest the following general agenda:

A. Contact the Southern Project advisers for suggested revisions and comments on the draft-prospectus.

B. Contact other adults who you and Hayes feel would provide a valuable critique of the proposed program.

C. Begin to initiate the usual informal contacts from adults to the foundations on behalf of the program.

D. Make appointments with certain foundations for Hayes, yourself and me to present the prospectus.

Further, I would like to suggest a somewhat unusual idea regarding presentation of the prospectus to foundations. Personally, I feel that it would be very valuable to compile a brief document containing the testimonial letters from a few outstanding student leaders from Southern campuses. For example, I have discussed this program with Miss Mollie Volk, student body president at Mary Washington College of the University of Virginia. Bob Spearman, student body president at the University of North Carolina, is doing a short critique of the program for me. Five or six letters from students such as Mollie and Bob would certainly be a striking evidence of the interest in such a program. If you feel this idea has merit, please contact me; I would be happy to compile a document containing the comments of such outstanding undergraduate leaders on Southern campuses.

I look forward to hearing from you in the very near future.

Sincerely,

Michael H. Lawler

Michael H. Lawler
Student Government
Vice President
U. S. N. S. A.

MHL:gtl

ENCLOSURES

TO: Mr. James A. Johnson, chairman, National Supervisory Board, U.S.N.S.A.
Mr. Hayes Mizell, director, Southern Project, U.S.N.S.A.
Mr. Stephen J. M. Robbins, president, U.S.N.S.A.
Mr. Phil Sherburne, national affairs vice president, U.S.N.S.A.
Mr. Richard L. Stevens, assistant director, Southern Project, U.S.N.S.A.
Members, Southern Project Advisory Board.

FROM: Mr. Curtis Gans, member, Southern Project Advisory Board.
Mr. Michael H. Lawler, student government vice president, U.S.N.S.A.

RE: Seminar on "The New Day in the South."

DATE: March 13, 1965

Enclosed is the working draft for a prospectus requesting funds to "call a meeting of the minds." W. J. Cash stressed the paradoxes of the Southern character, the qualities which bred statescraft in one instance and vicious acts of individual violence in the next. One such paradox is that of the Southern rhetoric. The rhetoric of the Gene Talmadges, the Watsons and Wallaces is heard and remembered. While the words of one of the South's finest rhetoricians went unheeded for so long: "To every man his chance, to every man, regardless of his birth, his shining opportunity--to every man the right to work, to be himself, and to become whatever thing his manhood and his vision can combine to make him..." That was the "promise of America." But as Mr. Leroy Collins said in a recent speech in Alabama, in the South "we never deeded over the property."

However, there is a "New Day" in the South. We are slowly deeding over that "promise," the promise of dignity, of full citizenship, of equal opportunity. Speaking of his native state, Governor Terry Sanford put it this way: "North Carolina is facing a New Day...the people of North Carolina are ready to go--ready to make this New Day of opportunity a New Day of achievement."

Southern students have been one of the primary instruments in this new day of social progress. In the past it has been the cause and achievement of a courageous and committed few. However, many have seen certain significant changes in large numbers of Southern students, white and Negro.

"Where there is no vision, the people perish." (Proverbs 29, 18) This old proverb summarizes the extreme need for a "meeting of the minds." We must have a vision of what is taking place in the Southern student community and a vision of how the Southern Student Human Relations Project and the National Student Association will relate to this "New Day" in the student and larger Southern community.

Enclosed is the first draft of a proposed seminar on the changing South. The prospectus is organized in five sections: 1) an introductory discussion of the past activities of the Southern Project; 2) a discussion of the need for this program; 3) a description of the proposed seminar; 4) a model program; and 5) a proposed budget. It is expected that the first section would be expanded by the present Project staff before submitting this proposal to the foundation(s). Also, the Student Government Vice President would draft a summary of the activities of the two officers who have served in the South in recent years.

Respectfully,

Michael H. Lawler
Student Government
Vice President
U. S. N. S. A.

Chapel Hill, North Carolina

PROPOSAL FOR A SOUTHWIDE SEMINAR ON THE NEW DAY IN THE SOUTH

I. Introduction: The Southern Project

Since 1959, the United States National Student Association and the Field Foundation have been conducting a unique experiment---the Southern Student Human Relations Project. What was the initial, primary focus of this program? Broadly, it was to cause students to confront th problems of the segregated society. By exposing students to experiences and attitudes antithetical to their inherited acceptance of the segregated society, it was hoped they might develop a critical attitude toward the central social issue of their day. Further, it was hoped that these students might proceed from this social consciousness to an active pursuit of solutions and involvement in the means of social change.

Most unique was the inter-racial character of the Project's activities. This particular aspect of its programing testified to the Association's belief that such social change could best be brought about by the efforts of both races working hand-in-hand...as symbolized by the now famous button of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee.

In 1960, the focus of the Southern Project was forced to adapt to an abrupt change on the Southern scene--the sit-in movement. The sit-in movement and subsequent civil rights activities caused a quick reassessment of the immediate responsibilities of the Association and of the Southern Project. While the Project continued to hold its annual student human relations seminar and to initiate campus programs on the racial issue, a large part of the Director's efforts were directed towards active support of the civil rights direct action movement.

II. The Present Situation: The Need for the Program

We are at another critical juncture today in the life of the Southern Project and in the history of the Southern student community. The task is no longer that of confronting Southern students with "liberal" views. In the main, the task is no longer that of supporting direct action movements which dramatize the effects and conditions of the segregated society. Public accommodations, though a hard fight, was an easily demonstrable issue. The irrationality and wrongness of the segregated society was relatively an easily exposed viewpoint and practice. We cannot afford the luxury of thinking that the job has been completed by either the passage of the 1964 Civil Rights Act or the shift towards moderation by many Southern whites, students and adults. Neither can we long afford to treat the "racial question" as a separate problem; it must be examined and solutions pursued in the context of its underlying causes and the broader problems and neglects in Southern life and society.

We are clearly at the juncture of enacting various programs directed at our manifold and inter-related problems. The creation of the "New Day" must concern itself with the problems of education, of economic development, of poverty, of politics and of training in leadership skills and the development of commitment to broad community transformation. If there is to be a New South rather than a mere extension of an urbanized North in a Southern setting, if there is to be a meaningful intergration of people, and if the South is to progress from an under-developed region into a fully developed society---then students and adults must direct their activities at the unity of the problems listed above as well as the racial question.

Thus, the Southern Project must once again change the direction of its policies and programing. It must expand its considerations and more important, meet the needs of students as they begin to act in these problem areas. The development of student leadership that will not only play a role now but also make an adult contribution to the developing New South is more fully seen as a central problem and responsibility for the Southern Project. Simply put, we are no longer attempting to create "interest." The challenge now is to direct and to assist the already apparent "interest" in active and constructive programs.

First, it is necessary to understand the various forces that are now at work in the South. Second, it is necessary to examine the changes in the Southern student community. There is clearly a need to give some form and content to the idea of the New South and to define a meaningful division of labor towards its creation. Then finally, there is a need to discover and to define clearly the role of the student, of the Southern Project and of the National Student Association, in light of this new situation.

It is with these needs in mind that the United States National Student Association proposes a southwide seminar on the New Day in the South.

III. The Proposed Seminar: A Description

The seminar will be an extensive and intensive discussion of the above questions. The seminar participants will be: the Southern Project advisers; the Project staff; the N. S. A. national officers (president, national affairs vice president and student government vice president); a small, select group of undergraduates, recognized for their leadership and understanding of the student community; selected Southern adult leaders, whose contributions in specific fields will serve to provide a more substantive discussion of the dynamics of the South today; and selected foundation representatives, who might emerge from the program with a more well-defined idea of useful investment of financial resources in future student endeavors.

This three-day program will be held in the informal atmosphere of retreat at a conference ground in North Carolina. The program will contain a minimum of rhetoric and a maximum of detailed, in-depth discussion of the various aspects of the aforementioned problems. The more formal aspects of the program will utilize a speaker and panel discussion format. The quality of the individuals participating will greatly reduce the problem of background reading and introductory commentary. The participants are gathered to develop the directions for the future based on their knowledge of the past and present.

The program will be co-ordinated by a full-time director with the assistance of the staff of the Southern Project and the N. S. A. national officers. A prospective director has already been contacted. The director will be employed for five weeks prior to the commencement of the program. He will have the aid of a secretary for the final four weeks of this period. The seminar will be closed to the press and other persons in order to insure a maximum opportunity for frank examination of the questions before the participants.

In order to insure the highest quality of undergraduate participation, the proposal requests that their travel, room and board be paid in full by the grant. The Southern Project staff and the national officers will rely on their normal funds for travel. The Southern Project advisers' travel will also be funded in the usual manner. Room and board for the advisers, staff and officers will be included in the conference budget. Costs for additional adult consultants and and participants will be funded by their respective organizations, in the case of foundation representatives, and by the grant, in the case of other speakers and panelists.

A complete record of the conference will be maintained. This procedure will be handled by the conference secretary and the use of recording devices. Extracts from the conference will be useful for future publications by the Southern Project and the National Office.

This program is a necessary step in order to insure that the Southern Project and the Association will continue to make a meaningful contribution to the future of the South and specifically, to insure some real direction to present and future student action on the campus and in the community.

In order to accomplish this task, the United States National Student Association, a confederation of more than 300 member student governments, requests $3500 for a Southwide Seminar on the New Day in the South.

IV. The Seminar Agenda: A Model Program

The following agenda is a model; its function is to provide an idea of the content and format of the program. This draft agenda is, of course, subject to modification. The draft provides examples of the types of participants to be employed in the panels and lectures. The sole purpose of including these personalities is to give a more complete picture of the proposed program. The seminar director will be responsible for selecting the final actual participants, in consultation with the Southern Project advisers, the Project staff and the national officers.

Friday

7 p.m. Currents of Change in the South.

This is a two-part program designed to focus the more specific aspects of the program in the larger framework of the changing South. Each participant will present a 15-20 minute "position paper" with particular emphasis on recent developments in his field and future trends. There will be a short break between the two presentations. After the formal speeches, the program will proceed into a discussion format between the authors of the "position papers" and the seminar participants.

A. "Problems and Trends in Higher Education"
Mr. Fred Weaver, Vice President of the University of North Carolina.

"The Changing Economic Structure"
Professor Bishop, Chairman of the Department of Agricultural Economics, North Carolina State College of the University of North Carolina at Raleigh.

Break: 15 Minutes.

B. "New Prospectives on Southern Politics"
Mr. Terry Sanford, former Governor of North Carolina.

"What Directions Now? The Struggle for Equality"
Miss Connie Curry, former director, Southern Project; presently with the American Friends Service Committee.

9 p.m. Discussion of Presentations.

Saturday

9 a.m. The Role of Higher Education in the Changing South.

This discussion is a specific examination proceeding from Mr. Weaver's more general remarks. It should present the current and future manner in which the academic community, private and public, is relating and will relate to social change in the South. Mention should also be made of non-institutional experiments such as Continuing Education programs, the Advancement School of North Carolina and other educational programs outside the academic community proper. The four presentations will be approximately 20 minutes each.

A. Mr. John Ehle, the Ford Foundation.
C. G. Gomillion, Professor of Sociology and Dean of the School of Arts and Sciences, Tuskegee Institute.
Dr. Alexander Heard, President, Vanderbilt University.
Dr. Benjamin Mays, President, Morehouse College.

B. Open Discussion.

12 noon - 1 p.m. Lunch.

1 p.m. The National Student Association and the Southern Project: Past and Present Activities.

This will be an historical analysis and discussion of past and present programs and relationships with civil rights and human relations groups in the South. Participants will examine past and present institutional programing in terms of goals, type of program and people involved. The present director of the Southern Project will give an introductory synopsis of the Project's activities and goals; the present national affairs vice president will cover National Office programing and relationships to civil rights groups.

Miss Connie Curry.
Mr. Curtis Gans, past National Affairs Vice President; present member, Southern Advisory Board.

Mr. Hayes Mizell, Director, Southern Project, U. S. N. S. A.
Mr. Phil Sherburne, National Affairs Vice President, U. S. N. S. A.

This discussion should make very clear the assumptions of the past, the past analysis of the methods of social change and assumptions as to "reaching" white and Negro students. A short discussion session will be necessary to clarify statements and to allow for discussion among the panel members. The panel discussion should be approximately one hour in length; the group discussion about 30 minutes.

Break: 15 Minutes.

4 p.m. Where Are the Churches and Human Relations Councils Going?

This presentation will employ a similar format to the above. Rev. Will Campbell will give a brief analysis of the role of religious groups, including the Church proper and campus religious groups. Mr. Paul Anthony will give a summary analysis of past and present activities of the more active human relations councils in the South. Then the remaining panel members will give a very specific discussion on problems, alternative directions and probable directions for both of these groups. The discussion of the Church should give more emphasis to the direction of churches in college communities and the directions that student religious groups are taking on social action, political awareness and community service programs. Some portion of this discussion should emphasize the present and possible role that students are playing in conjunction with human relations councils, city and state.

Mr. Paul Anthony, Director of Field Activities, Southern Regional Council; member, Southern Advisory Board.
Rev. Will D. Campbell, Director of the Committee of Southern Churchmen; member, Southern Advisory Board.
Father Thomas Clancy, S.J., faculty, Loyola University of the South; member, Southern Advisory Board.
Chairman, Houston (Texas) City Council on Human Relations.

6-7 p.m. Dinner.

7 p.m. A Summary of Past and Present Student Action.

This presentation should examine such items as the sit-in movement, the Mississippi Summer Project, the North Carolina Intercollegiate Council, student efforts in South Carolina on a compulsory school attendance law and student tutorial programing. The primary function of this series of talks is to present a close factual background of what students have been and are doing in the South. The discussion should be program and activity oriented as opposed to analyzing the various "philosophical" premises of certain groups and the students' attitude toward certain forms of activity on and off the campus. Each participant should make about a 20 minute presentation. A very brief question-answer period will follow merely to clarify primarily factual information. This discussion will serve as a springboard for the later detailed analysis and more lengthy dialogue on present student attitudes towards civil rights, human relations programing and community action projects.

Mr. Julian Bond, Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee.
Mr. John Brooks, former adviser, N. C. Intercollegiate Council; present legal counsel, North Carolina Fund.
Mr. Curtis Gans.
Miss Pat Knight, former Assistant Director, Southern Project; present staff, Virginia Council on Human Relations.
Mr. Hayes Mizell.

9 p.m. The Southern Student Community.

This is the key discussion of the entire program. It must "pick apart" the student "mind of the South" today. Each participant should provide examples to support his analysis of current thinking and attitudes towards key issues on the Southern campus, white and Negro.

Mr. A. Beardsley, campus minister, Hollins College.
Mr. William Geer, faculty, University of North Carolina.
Mr. Mike Lawler, student government vice president, U. S. N. S. A.
Mr. Ralph Lee, student, North Carolina A & T College.

Mr. Hayes Mizell.
Mr. Bob Spearman, student body president, University of North Carolina.
Mr. Tony Stanley, faculty, Bennett College.
Miss Mollie Volk, student body president, Mary Washington College of the University of Virginia.

These individuals can each speak specifically to certain points; the total sum of their dialogue should present a composite view of the Southern student community. This presentation will be divided into two sections of four panelists each. For example, Mr. Spearman should particularly discuss the attitudes of student government personnel towards certain issues and types of programing. Mr. Lee should discuss the attitude of students on the Negro campus towards involvement, post-sit-in movement. What are their personal goals? What is the atmosphere of the campus and its impact on the students? Miss Volk should give particular attention to the activities and concerns as manifested in a Southern women's college. Mr. Lawler should provide some form of over-view derived from his campus traveling. Mr. Geer should discuss the attitudes explicit and implicit from his experience with students in the classroom. The logical distinction is between the view of the student by a student and the view of the student by an adult member of the academic community. The adult members of this discussion will be responsible for providing some picture of present attitudes in the context of past thinking and activities from their longevity in the academic community. The students should provide some keener insight into directions of student leadership and the potential resources and interest in playing an active role on the college campus.

This discussion will be open end. It is assumed that the program will break into small informal group discussions about 11:30 p.m. Only the discussion can determine when this evening program will close.

Sunday

10 a.m. Non-denominational Church service for all seminar participants.

11:30 a.m. Lunch.

1 p.m. An Institutional Response.

This final program will be organized into concurrent discussions, with the participants divided into three groups. It is felt that this discussion of institutional responses to the "situations" should be conducted in smaller groups than the previous presentations. Each participant will most certainly want to participate fully in the discussion, and this necessitates such a format. Members of the Southern Advisory Board, the Southern Project Staff and the National Office will be evenly apportioned among the three sections. This will enable the policymakers to consolidate all comments, proposals and viewpoints. Each of the three groups will be "structured" to the extent that one or two participants will "respond" to the previous discussions of this seminar. From that point the groups will proceed to discuss specific proposals in terms of new policies, programs, priorities, relationships with other groups in the South, etc.

Group I:
Mr. Hayes Mizell.
Mr. Phil Sherburne.

Group II:
Mr. Paul Anthony.
Mr. Mike Lawler.

Group III:
Mr. John Brooks.
Mr. Bob Spearman.

Close of Conference.

The Southern Project Advisory Board will meet immediately after the seminar for a discussion of the conference in terms of Southern Project and National Office policy, needs and programing. This meeting will continue Sunday evening and Monday, closing in time to permit all participants to return home to their usual occupations by Tuesday morning.

V. Proposed Budget

ITEM		COST
Rooms for participants:	$3 per day for 60 people three days and two nights	$ 360.00
Food for participants:	$2 per day for 60 people Friday dinner through Sunday lunch	250.00
Travel:	$30 per person for 40 people (We will pay travel for all student participants. Adviser, Officer and Project travel can come from present U. S. N. S. A. and Project travel budgets.)	1200.00
Conference co-ordinator:	$500 per month for five weeks	625.00
Conference secretary:	$250 per month for four weeks	250.00
Telephone and telegraph:		250.00
Postage:		50.00
Supplies:		75.00
Rentals:	(Typewriter, tape recorder, etc.)	50.00
		$3110.00
Administrative costs:	(10% of the above total)	311.00
Total cost:		$3421.00

Suggestions of the Special Committee of the NSA Southern Advisory Committee

(The committee met on July 6 in Atlanta. Present were Will Campbell, Joe Hendricks, Charlie Jones, and Paul Anthony. Connie Curry could not be present.)

The committee feels there are three basic ideas to be remembered in any future program development for the Southern Project. These are:

(1) Programs should be based on servicing needs which now exist. (There is a large number of concerned, interested students attempting to do a great variety of things and with the need for considerable assistance. Therefore such resources as may be available should be directed toward these needs rather than in other areas, such as working with or attempting to educate the "uncommitted." This latter group will be reached more efficiently by assisting and directing those students who are already available.

(2) No serious problem exists in the nature of overlapping or duplicating of efforts by the several groups working in the region. (There may be several specific places where there is a need for greater coordination of effort, but this should not be confused with a surplus of resources. This general area could use legitimately far more resources, staff persons, and programs than are available or anticipated.)

(3) The Southern Project should be a campus-based operation. (Several groups which began with an on-campus emphasis now tend to be concerned more and more with the community generally. This is commendable. However, there remains a need and potential for on-campus program which should not be ignored. This, the committee feels, is the most valuable and logical area on which the NSA Southern Project should concentrate.)

The Committee recommends three areas of concentration for future program:

I. Civil Liberties

There are strong indications of the growing strength of the ultra-conservative groups. Even more appalling, there is a general ignorance on the part of college students of the realities of our political system, the significance of the Bill of Rights, the danger of censorship, the right of dissent, the world of civil liberties. The Project should concern itself with this and encourage ferment and programs on as many campuses as possible. (This should specifically include Negro as well as white campuses.)

Among the ways to do this would be:

Work with campus newspapers
Conducting opinion polls
Work with specific departments, such as departments of political science and with university and college administrators
Work with student governments where possible
Seek the cooperation and support of campus groups such as the AAUP.

II. Integration of the college campus

All too often the beginning of the process of desegregation signals the end of concern for achieving integration in numbers or in campus life. The project should concentrate on programs toward achieving:

Significant integration in the number of students
Integration of all campus and campus-related life
Providing processes of self-evaluation by which interested groups could determine facts ranging from administrative policy to social activity
Assisting Negro students now on campus
Work with administrations.

III. Liaison and Administrative Support

Project staff has shown remarkable skill in bringing together professionals in the field of human relations and the involved students. This, and related areas of liaison, should be continued and expanded. Emphasis should be given to liaison between:

Students and adults
The several local, regional and national student groups.

As a part of this function the committee feels the Project should provide direction and guidance to emerging groups, especially in the area of administration. The committee recalls several instances where groups have failed to achieve commendable goals partly because of a lack of skills in development and administration. We feel the Project could make a unique and valuable contribution by meeting this need.

Relative to the above programs the committee suggests the following concerning staff and implementation:

If at all possible, there should be a minimum of three persons on the staff of the Southern Project, with adequate travel funds.

All of the staff should be versatile enough to work in each of the three program areas. This, we feel, will be more efficient than attempting to have three persons each a specialist in one area.

While one person would be the administrative head of the operation, we do not envision a director and a field staff but rather all of the staff working in program.

We encourage the greatest possible use of student and adult consultants.

Finally, we recommend that the concerned staff and policy people proceed to develop an application along such lines as they wish and submit it to the proper foundation on the regular schedule.

C O P Y

Allen M. Woodall
Graduate of University of Georgia
On University Board of Regents

Director - New Atlanta paper

(Frances Pauley had some detailed data on him on a sheet about paper. Joan Masuck there in Atlanta had many encounters with him when he opposed having Ralph McGill speak here.)

On a Community Planning Board (appointed by County Commission.).

Son works with him.

His motivating drive - making money, and he has.

Think he is the front man for many of the conservatives who are influential. Editorializes against both papers.

- -

W. C. Woodall

Father of Allen

In newspaper work for years. Now either publishes or edits The Industrial Index, regional paper about industry, etc.

Special interest, history of this area.

Long time on school board.

Not radical or rabid as son; suppose son is using him because of his "better" stature or status in community. Am not sure if all editorials bear his name. He let Mr. Dimon know he had nothing to do with one about me in connection with his blast of Dr. Mays.

Mrs. Masuck may have some copies of the editorials. Believe they blasted Southern Regional Council in one as they related McGill to it. (or it may have been an American Legion publication.)

If I find out anything else, I'll mail it later.

A. Dimon

ARTHUR J. LEVIN
41 Exchange Place, S. E.
Atlanta, Georgia

4/11

Mr. Paul Telling
Southern Regional Council
Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Paul:

Concerning invitations to and minutes of Southern Interagency meetings, I would appreciate your including all of our southern regional directors whose names and addresses are attached.

This was the procedure in the past and I don't know why it was changed. If you will, please send each (excluding me this time) a notice of the May 2-3 meeting in New Orleans.

Thanx and regards

Art

Mr. Nathan Perlmutter
ADL
330 Seybold Building
Miami, Florida

Mr. Irwin Schulman
ADL
535 GRAVIER ST. - SUITE 806
NEW ORLEANS 12, LA.

Mr. Robert C. Kohler
ADL
216 N. 2nd St., Room 306
Richmond, Va.

Mr. Ted Freedman
Suite 209
2405 San Jacinto St.
Houston 2, Texas

Mr. Arthur J. Levin
ADL
41 Exchange Pl., S.E.
Atlanta 3, Ga.

MEMO TO: Southern Advisory Committee

FROM: Constance Curry, Southern Project Director

This is not exactly the monthly report that I had hoped to send to each of you, but I did want to bring you up to date on some Project activities before the next meeting of the Advisory Committee. Because of so many meetings and conferences during December, we have decided to hold the Advisory Committee in January. (Date have been discussed in personal letters to each of you.)

I have seen many of you since August and have been able to discuss the Third Southern Student Human Relations Seminar with you. For those of you who have not heard, it did take place, and I do think it was successful. I am not really sure what a successful human relations seminar is, but in any case, the sixteen students, the Consultant, Will Campbell, the Assistant Director, Bob Alexander, and I survived the four weeks; the majority of the resource people were excellent; the participants were extremely helpful in writing and in passing intelligent resolutions on human relations during the NSA Congress; and most of the students have stayed in touch with me since August and have been engaged in everything from sitting-in to writing newspaper articles. I plan to have a complete Seminar report ready for the Advisory Committee meeting.

The months since August have been completely filled with activities in three areas: the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, the Atlanta student movement, and the planning and attending of conferences in other parts of the South.

At the National Congress of NSA a resolution was passed urging NSA to"cooperate in every way possible" with the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, the student group which is now the administrative and coordinating body for the Southern student protest movement. Because its office is located in Atlanta and because it has had only one staff person to do an enormous amount of work, I have spent a great deal of time working with its program. This has included a South-wide conference on nonviolence held here in Atlanta in October, an election day action project, a Christmas shopping withholding campaign, and the Thanksgiving meeting of the Committee itself.

As all of you know, Atlanta has been a center of real "activity" this fall, beginning with massive sit-in demonstrations in October. These were followed by the thirty-day truce, which brought no acceptable solutions. Since that time we have had picketing and the closing of lunch counters practically every day. Although as a policy I have tried not to be overly active in the Atlanta student movement, at several points a rather necessary role of liaison between the students and other groups has developed, and the Project has often had an opportunity to help fulfill this need. The Project has also tried to help in the efforts to involve Atlanta white students in the movement, and there have been several of them picketing every day.

I have also been working with Atlanta students on several projects not directly connected with the student protest movement. This has included helping to plan inter-racial student workcamps with the American Friends Service Committee and working on an inter-collegiate newspaper called Georgia College Student News and Views.

The South Central region of NSA, which includes Arkansas, Louisiana, Alabama and Mississippi, held a regional assembly November 11-13 in New Orleans. This was a very significant meeting, because it was the first time in many years that students from these states had been able to meet on an integrated basis. In all the topics discussed there was a strong emphasis on human relations, and I plan to return to New Orleans after Christmas to follow up interest in starting a continuing student human relations group. This trip to the assembly in New Orleans became unexpectedly a rather unforgettable affair, since on Sunday I accompanied a group of white students to Baton Rouge for a special session of the State legislature. I can truthfully say that the debate on the school issue was the most discouraging spectacle I have ever witnessed.

I have also made several trips to Chapel Hill, N. C. to help plan a State human relations seminar, which was held December 10-11. There were fifty students in attendance, and the theme of the seminar was "Problems and Promise in a Changing South." Edward P. Morgan and Dr. Warren Ashby were the main speakers, and I felt that the weekend was very worthwhile. The number of participants was small enough so that almost everyone was able to express himself in workshops, and it was very meaningful to me to be out of the direct action of the studen movement for awhile and into an atmosphere where Negro and white stude grow merely from meeting each other for the first time.

I have been in correspondence with groups in other areas, and in the spring we are planning to have human relations seminars in Texas and Virginia definitely, and hopefully in several other states in the Deep South.

As in the past, I have been in close contact with many agencies and organizations; I saw many of their representatives at both the fall Southern Inter-agency Conference and at the National Association of Intergroup Relations Officials Annual Meeting in November. The different agencies have continued to be of inestimable help to me and to our program.

In looking over this brief report I have had to laugh, because so many of the things I have mentioned have such terribly long and complicated stories behind them; but describing them would take a book

It's hard to believe that the Project has been in existence for a year, and I am going to take a week's vacation at Christmas and try to write a full report on this first year's work. I shall try to send you this immediately after Christmas so that it can be discussed at the Advisory Committee meeting.

May I just say to all of you again how deeply grateful I am for your constant interest and help. As I think back to our very first meeting a year ago, I realize that I could not have done without my Advisory Committee, either personally or in my work. I am looking forward to seeing you in January, and in the meantime I wish each of you all the joys of this season.

LIST OF PARTICIPANTS AND STAFF
FOURTH SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS SEMINAR

1. SOUTHWESTERN UNIVERSITY
Dan Bowen
3447 Rockwood Avenue
Memphis, Tennessee

2. THE UNIVERSITY OF THE SOUTH
Timothy Carr
803 W. Druid Road
Clearwater, Florida

3. UNIVERSITY OF ALABAMA
Judy Carter
2435 Helton Avenue, A.C.S.
Gadsden, Alabama

4. UNIVERSITY OF LOUISVILLE
Jane Clay
2133 West Madison Street
Louisville 11, Kentucky

5. LOYOLA UNIVERSITY
Doris Gibson
Star Route
LaGrange, Kentucky

6. DUKE UNIVERSITY
Sally Hobbs
115 Pinecrest Road
Durham, North Carolina

7. MISSISSIPPI STATE UNIVERSITY
David Johns
P.O. Box 576
State College, Mississippi

8. AUSTIN COLLEGE
Luis Manueco-Jenkins
Austin College
Sherman, Texas

9. BISHOP COLLEGE
John Mayshack
Route 2, Box 34-A
Hughes Springs, Texas

10. UNIVERSITY OF GEORGIA
Bob Miller
944 W. Lyle Road
College Park, Georgia

11. CLEMSON COLLEGE
Randy Mishoe
Route 4
Conway, South Carolina

12. UNIVERSITY OF ALABAMA
Irvin Penfield
Box 4119
University, Alabama

13. BERRY COLLEGE
Yoniece Perry
Route 1, Box 163
Glen Allen, Alabama

14. SOUTHERN UNIVERSITY
D'Army Bailey
969 Ford Place
Memphis, Tenn.

15. WOMAN'S COLLEGE OF GEORGIA
Faye Powell
Box 315
Gray, Georgia

16. SPELMAN COLLEGE
Johnnie Price (Miss)
P.O. Box 335
Woodstock, Georgia

17. GEORGIA STATE COLLEGE
Stuart Strenger
1516 Beechcliffe Dr., NE
Atlanta 6, Ga.

18. JACKSON STATE COLLEGE
Walter Williams
Box 7028, Jackson State
Jackson, Mississippi

19. SCARRITT COLLEGE
Bob Zellner
Highlander Folk School
Monteagle, Tennessee

STAFF

Seminar Director--
Constance Curry
Room 701, 41 Exchange Pl., SE
Atlanta 3, Georgia (JA 3-8322)

Seminar Consultant--
Reverend Will Campbell
Box 1083
Nashville, Tennessee (CY 1-7850)

(The above addresses are correct for the summer)

INTER-AGENCY LUNCHEON GROUP

Mr. Harold Arnold, Urban League
239 Auburn Avenue
521-2355

Miss Ella Baker, Human Relations Proj.
41 Exchange Place, S. E., Rm. 301
525-2372

Rev. Ed Brown, Congregational Church
41 Exchange Place

Miss Eunice Brunson, Executive Director
YWCA-72 Edgewood Avenue
524-3416

Miss Dorothy Cotton, Southern Christian
Leadership Conf. 208 Auburn Avenue
Ja. 5-1763

Mr. Warren Cochran, Butler St. YMCA
22 Butler St., N.E.
Ja. 4-0246

Mrs. SueJette Crank, YWCA
599 Tatnall Street, S. W.
Ja. 3-0543

Miss Connie Curry, National Students Assn.
41 Exchange Place, S. E.
Ja. 3-8322

Rev. Ed Driscoll, Ga. Council of Churches
63 Auburn Avenue
Ja. 4-0971

Miss Rosetta Gardner, YWCA Nat'l Student
Secretary, 41 Exchange Place, S. E.
Ja. 5-2372

Mr. James Gisbon, NAACP
236 Auburn Avenue, N.E.
Mu. 8-6064

Mrs. Caroline Gillespie, Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity
5 Forsyth Street, 525-7975

Mrs. Grace Hamilton, YWCA
41 Exchange Place, S. E.
Ja. 5-2381

Mrs. Florence Harris, YWCA
41 Exchange Place, S. E.
Ja. 5-2381

Mrs. Ruby Hurley, NAACP SE Region
859½ Hunter Street,
Mu. 8-8868

Mr. Vernon Jordan, Ga. Field Secretary
NAACP--859½ Hunter Street
Mu. 8-6-64

Mr. Ed King, Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee, 197½ Auburn Avenue
688-0331

Mr. Leon Marion, World University Service
41 Exchange Place, S. E. Room 301
Ja. 5-2372

Dr. Thornton Merriam, YMCA Special Project
145 Luckie Street
521-0352

Rev. John Morris, Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity, 5 Forsyth St.
525-7975

Mrs. Eliza Paschall, Executive Director
Greater Atlanta Council on Human Relations
41 Exchange Place, S. E., - 525-6469

Mrs. Frances Pauley, Executive Director
Georgia Council on Human Relations
41 Exchange Place, S. E., -525-6468

Mr. M. T. Puryear, Urban League
239 Auburn Avenue
521-2355

Mr. Dick Shapiro, Anti-Defamation League
41 Exchange Place, S. E.
Ja. 3-1618

INTER-AGENCY LUNCHEON GROUP CONT'D

Mr. Robert Thompson, Urban League
239 Auburn Avenue, N.E.
521-2355

Mr. Wyatt Walker, Southern Christian
Leadership Conf. -208 Auburn Avenue
Ja. 5-1763

Mr. Charles Wittenstein, American Jewish Committee
41 Exchange Place, --Ja. 3-8451

Rev. James Wood, SCLC
208 Auburn Avenue
Ja. 5-1763

Mrs. Julie Wright
859½ Hunter Street Room 107
Mu. 8-6064

Mr. John Youngblut, Quaker House
1384 Fairview Road, N.E.
Dr. 3-7986

Call -
Dahlonega - Leon Smith
864-2291 64
Fri - Wed
Comm mbrs - name, etc.

66

111

Leadd -

Open 1 p

GA-
Gen-
LD ✓

Telephone 688-7510

Educating for Brotherhood

THE NATIONAL CONFERENCE OF CHRISTIANS AND JEWS, INC.

GEORGIA REGION
1144 Bank of Georgia Building
Atlanta 3, Georgia

DIRECTOR
Don McEvoy

PR — do they know about Fellowship Southern Christian Conference?

NATIONAL CO-CHAIRMEN
Carrol M. Shanks
Robert D. Murphy
Lewis L. Strauss
CHAIRMAN EMERITUS
James F. Twohy
PRESIDENT
Lewis Webster Jones
EXECUTIVE VICE-PRESIDENT
Sterling W. Brown
TREASURER
Herbert J. Osborne

SOUTHEASTERN DIVISION
VICE-CHAIRMAN
Walter W. Craigie
VICE-PRESIDENT
Leonard P. Aries
ASSOCIATE DIRECTOR
Gordon W. Lovejoy

GEORGIA REGION
NATIONAL BOARD MEMBERS
Dr. S. Walter Martin
Dr. Herman L. Turner
A. J. Weinberg
Hon. Andrew J. Ryan, Jr.

ATLANTA ROUND TABLE
CO-CHAIRMEN
Dr. Herman L. Turner
A. J. Weinberg
Robert S. Lynch

COLUMBUS ROUND TABLE
CO-CHAIRMEN
Louis T. Kunze
Aaron Cohn
S. A. Roddenbery, M.D.

SAVANNAH ROUND TABLE
CO-CHAIRMEN
Thomas J. Dillon
A. H. Tennenbaum
Julius R. Holt

REGIONAL SECRETARY
Mrs. Billie M. Dell

MEMORANDUM

TO: Robert Thompson
Clarence Coleman
Eliza Paschall
Frances Pauley
Paul Rilling
Noyes Collinson
Martin Luther King, Jr.
James O. Gibson

The list of persons attached have been invited by the NCCJ to attend a meeting on October 10th to do some preliminary planning for a conference on Religious Responsibility in Race Relations which we hope will be held this winter.

Your name does not appear on this list for one reason only ----- i.e. We wanted the exploratory work done by persons whose agencies or organizations are directly related to a church or religious institution.

I hope that you will understand that this action was taken strictly as a matter of strategy and not in an attempt to by-pass or exclude any of the other agencies or persons who are working in the field of Human Relations.

As the project develops we will need your counsel and support. I will keep you posted on progress..... and be calling on you for advice!

Sincerely,

Don McEvoy

Don McEvoy, Diredtor
Georgia Region, NCCJ

FOR YOUR INFORMATION:

Invitations to this planning meeting have gone to the following persons:

The Reverend Walter Donovan
Director, Catholic Charities

Mr. G. Albert Lawton
President, Catholic Interracial Council

The Reverend Vincent Brennan
Marist College - Catholic Council on Christian Unity

Rabbi Jacob M. Rothschild
The Temple

Mr. Monroe Schlactus
Director, Anti-Defamation League

Mr. Charles Wittenstein
Director, American Jewish Committee

Dr. Harry Richardson
President, Interdenominational Theological Center

Dr. Benjamin May
President, Morehouse College

Mr. John Morris
Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity

Rev. Vincent Hardy
Mennonite House

Rev. John Youngblood
Quaker House

Dr. Paul Garber
Agnes Scott College

Mrs. Phil B. Narmore
President, United Church Women

Dr. Norman Shands
Pastor, West End Baptist Church

Dr. Robert E Lee
Pastor, Lutheran Church of the Redeemer

Dr. Herman L. Turner
Greater Atlanta Council of Churches

The Georgia Council on Human Relations

Presents

The WASHINGTON, D.C., PUBLIC SCHOOL STORY

with Dr. Carl F. Hansen, Superintendent of Schools, Washington

WAGA-TV 12:30 - 1:00 p.m. Sunday, May3

Dr. Hansen is making the trip down to Atlanta especially to be on this program, which is the second in a series designed to present factual information on the progress of desegregation in Southern cities. He will be interviewed by:

Mr. Devereaux McClatchey, former President of Atlanta Board of Education

and

Mr. Harry B oyte,

Chairman of Executive Committee of HOPE,Inc.

THE GEORGIA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

The Georgia Council on Human Relations (formerly the Georgia Committee on Interracial Cooperation) has for forty years sought to further human dignity and justice for all individuals of whatever race, creed or national origin. In the belief that every person ought to have freedom to develop his potentialities and to render his greatest contribution to society, we strongly advocate that the public schools, colleges and universities be preserved in accordance with the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, and that they be further strengthened as well. We hold that the efforts of all citizens to this end should be guided by at least the following principles:

1. The good of the whole community should be the framework for judging the good of any part.

2. School officials and other public officials should set an example of self-discipline in accord with the laws and the spirit of the laws.

3. Teachers, parents and students should cooperate with patient integrity in working out solutions to the complex problems that lie ahead.

It seems to us clear in the light of these principles:

- That the children and the young people of the whole community should have the opportunity for education of high quality, according to the ability of each, in a peaceful and productive environment;

- That the responsibilities of the several levels of government, local, state and federal, can be harmonized, bearing in mind the American tradition of safe-guarding local initiative and responsibility;

- That straightforward facing of the facts and a willingness to work together should be the concern of all.

We are reminded that discrimination in public schools because of race is now forbidden. A policy of defiance of the law can only serve to delay the constructive work that must be done. What we do positively is squarely in the power of the citizens of Georgia and of our elected officials. The means chosen to achieve excellent education must reflect the principles of integrity, self-discipline, and concern for the public welfare.

The Executive Committee of
The Georgia Council on Human Relations
63 Auburn Avenue N. E., Atlanta, Georgia

Friday

Dear Mrs Knox,

I was so sorry I did not get to the Board meeting Wed., but my Mother's visit came first since she comes only once or twice a year - and just for a few days at a time. She came especially for my birthday on Tues. I was thinking of the group as they met.

Please let Mr. Cowart and Mr. Killing know we are looking forward to their visit to our group on this next Thurs., the 22nd. We are announcing that Mr. Killing will speak to us - since this is his first time. We'd like for him to talk 15 or 20 minutes - then leave a good bit of time for discussion. We need help on publicity ideas, projects, etc. Thank you for all your help.

Sincerely,
Armine Dixon

PARTICIPANTS AND STAFF
FIFTH SOUTHERN STUDENT HUMAN RELATIONS SEMINAR

Director:
Constance Curry
Rm. 701, 41 Exchange Pl. SE
Atlanta 3, Georgia
Phone: JA 3-8322 (office)
JA 3-4566 (home)

Consultant:
Rev. Will D. Campbell
Box 1083
Nashville, Tenn.
Phone: CY 1-7850

Name	College	Address at School	Home Address
John Arradondo	Okla. City Univ.	1909 N.W. 24th Okla. City 6, Okla.	Box 161 Altus, Okla.
Joan Browning	Ga. State College Atlanta	240 Ponce de Leon Atlanta 8, Ga.	(same)
Sondra Cloth	Xavier Univ. New Orleans	413 N. Galvez St. New Orleans, La.	(same)
Sandra Freedman	Atlantic Christian College	1122 W. Nash St. Wilson, N. C.	(same)
Anthony Gagliano	Loyola Univ. New Orleans	1715 N. Claiborne Ave. New Orleans 16, La.	(same)
Cliff Hewitt	Berry College Mt. Berry, Ga.	c/o school	Box 11 Jennings, Fla.
Faye Hooks	St. Andrew's Presbyterian Coll. Laurinburg, N. C.	c/o school	923 McKimmon Rd. Fayetteville, N. C.
Sherman James	Talladega College " , Ala.	c/o school	1510 Jasper Ave. Hartsville, S. C.
Harold Littleton	Clemson College Clemson, S. C.	Box 5933, school	Barefoot St. Hartsville, S. C.
Miles Lovelace	Univ. of Miss. Oxford, Miss.	Box 2465, school	990 Marble St. Memphis, Tenn.
Delano Messer	Benedict College Columbia, S. C.	c/o school	1943 W. 12th St. Jacksonville 9, Fla.
Peggy Patterson	Birmingham-Southern College, Birmingham	c/o school	319 Baublits Dr. Warrington, Fla.

Name	College	Address at School	Home Address
Barbara Posey	Univ. of Okla.	Brooks House Norman, Okla.	2029 N.E. 14th Okla. City, Okla.
Steve Richardson	Southwestern at Memphis	c/o school	5915 Dillingham Shreveport, La.
Robert Roberts	Univ. of Ala.	1807 20th Ave. E Tuscaloosa, Ala.	(same)
Ellen Shockley	Univ. of Texas	704-A W. 25th Austin 5, Texas	N. T. Box 5651 Denton, Texas
Joe Louis Smith	Southern Univ., Baton Rouge, La.	c/o school	1301 Gibbs St. Mansfield, La.
Barbara Sublett	Florence State College, Florence, Ala.	Box 916, school	Rt. 1, Box 242 Huntsville, Ala.
Charles Trueworthy	Appalachian State Teachers' College, Boone, N. C.	233 Justice Hall, school	4608 2nd Rd. N Arlington 3, Va.

Yes, there are others...

who, like yourself, share a compassionate concern for the right of every human being to live, to work, and to mature in a community that makes its goods, services and opportunities for growth available to all its citizens.

There are others...

who believe, as you do, that the time has come for Atlanta to reassert her leadership role...to achieve positive human relations goals because these goals are right, because they are needed, because they are implicit in the word "American".

There are others...

who want, as you do, to help Atlanta attain equal opportunities for all in the specific areas of health, education, housing and employment...and who realize that a supporting climate of opinion is vital to their achievement.

Come, and join hands...join your own personal good will and desire to act with that of other women and women's organizations...

ON...Tuesday, March 17th at 10:30 a.m.

AT...The Downtown YWCA, Corner of Edgewood at Ivy Street

IN...PARTNERS for PROGRESS

Atlanta women of all faiths who are committed to the foregoing principles

---

If you cannot attend the March 17th meeting, we invite your future participation.

Please sign and return to:

PARTNERS for PROGRESS
P. O. Box 15238, Atlanta 30333

Yes, I want to work with you.

( ) I can contribute my time.

( ) I can contribute funds. My check for $_____ is enclosed.

( ) I support your goals, but have no time or extra funds at present. Please put me on your mailing list.

Name _____

Address _____ Telephone _____

PA ✓
VJ ✓
PWS
MET GA. Gen
MM-file

There Are Others...

PARTNERS for PROGRESS
P. O. Box 15238
Atlanta 30333

Steering Committee

MRS. CECIL ALEXANDER
MRS. DAN BURGE
MRS. DEJONGH FRANKLIN
MRS. DONALD ROSS GREEN
MRS. GEORGE J. GUNNING
MRS. HENRY COOK HAMILTON
MRS. SIDNEY JANUS
MRS. HAMILTON LOKEY
MRS. PHIL NARMORE
MRS. DAVID NEIMAN
MRS. FRED W. PATTERSON
MRS. JOHN PATTON
MRS. BRITTAIN PENDERGRAST
MRS. HARRY V. RICHARDSON
MRS. EDWARD M. VINSON
MRS. J. R. WILSON, SR.

List of names given to Ga. Council to contact in regard to "Monitor" Beautiful Voice Contest -

1. Mrs. (Thaddius) Georgia Allen
   984 Palmetta Avenue, S.W.
   PL. 8-4508

2. Mrs. (T. Herman) Mildred Graves
   (Washington High School)
   2057 Verbenna, S.W.
   SY. 4-6342

3. Mr. Ray (Rayfield) McIver
   (876 W. Hunter, JA. 2-6295 - address of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Arthur C. McIver)
   Mr. McIver's telephone number can be obtained through Mr. Burrus at Spellman.

4. Mr. Baldwin Burrus (correct spelling? pronounced Burroughs.)
   Department of Speech
   Spelman College
   MU. 8-2148

5. Mrs. (G. L.) Cecil Edwards
   1132 W. Fair, S.W.
   PL. 5-8531

Ga. Gen. FA ND MM

A PROPOSAL: WOMEN FOR PROGRESS

Organization to Increase Supporting Public Opinion for Equal Opportunity in Metropolitan Atlanta

* * * * * *

Atlanta has for so long been heralded as the Southern city which is making noteworthy, peaceful transition that our very success is providing a handicap in dealing realistically with current problems. For we have been lulled by our own success story into thinking that everything is going smoothly and that others are "taking care of the whole thing."

In the past several months Atlanta has witnessed growing discontent among its Negro citizens with the lack of progress in opening up public accommodations and employment opportunities to the total population. A formal statement, "Call for Democracy" presented by the united leadership of nine civil rights organizations outlined the aims and pressing objectives of the Negro community.

The business and political leadership of Atlanta has responded in several ways:

1) The Chamber of Commerce appealed to businesses to voluntarily open their facilities to all members of the public. They also asked employers to hire and promote employees on the basis of merit, not race.

2) The Retail Merchants Association made a similar appeal for open facilities and equal employment opportunities.

3) The Fulton County legislative delegation to the Georgia Assembly urged a voluntary end to discriminatory practices.

4) The Fulton County Commissioners responded in much the same way.

5) Mayor Ivan Allen, Jr., requested and granted authorization by the Board of Aldermen to appoint a Co-ordinating Committee to "provide a vehicle for consideration of the proposals made by the Negro Leadership Conference."

6) The Board of Aldermen adopted a resolution calling for the voluntary end of discriminatory practices by public and private in employment and services.

7) Several ministerial groups have issued a call for support of the objectives stated in the "Call for Democracy."

On its face, these various actions would seem a gratifying response . Unfortunately, not enough has been accomplished in practical terms to assure continued peaceful progress. Protest on the one hand, and exhortations to voluntary virtue on the other, are by themselves not enough to insure the appropriate social, economic and political climate required for modern metropolitan growth.

The reasons for the lack of more actual progress are easy to understand. Business leaders have responded to Negro pressure not out of any firm convictions that the welfare of the city requires; not even out of the sense of "doing the right thing" They have responded in the main out of fear of increased community turmoil and its disadvantageous economic consequences. Inevitably, therefore, their attitude has been one of grudgingly "giving in" and timourously inching ahead. Thus, instead of a united community moving forward together, what exists is a tug-of-war atmosphere, marked by sporadic advances and retreats. This atmosphere provides the opportunity for conflict which dissident elements in the community can and do exploit skillfully.

Thus, we stand not only at the brink of unparalled progress, as so many Atlantans believe, but also at the brink of disaster, -- disaster, which could easily sweep away much of the progress already made. This then, is the psychological moment for positive action to tip the scales in favor of progress.

Happily, the nucleus of an organization already exists which can take this positive action. This is Women for Progress, which was originally conceived as an ad hoc committee to command and support the Chamber of Commerce's appeal for voluntary integration. It consisted of 600 women leaders representing approximately 100 civic, philanthropic and religious and cultural groups. Women for Progress limited its activity to securing endorsements of Chamber policy which they presented in a scroll to the Atlanta Chamber. The scroll contained a pledge of the signers to patronize those businesses who make their goods and services available to everyone, and to urge their organizations to do the same.

Their efforts were so successful that when leading civic figures were considering what means could be employed to initiate a community-wide program of support, Women for Progress came immediately to mind. The original leaders of Women for Progress were called together to decide what role they could play in such a campaign. What follows is a synthesis of the ideas expressed in that meeting:

1) Women for Progress can develop simultaneously public expression of approval for open public accommodations and equal employment opportunities. This can be done by arranging for special citations to cooperating institutions, gathering signatures, and by employing the conventional devices of public relations.

2) Women for Progress can develop public support for governmental agencies which are likewise modernizing their concepts and practices.

3) Women for Progress can let the people of Atlanta know what the facts are. For instance, they can inform the public of what businesses are cooperating; develop support for such businesses to insure new growth, and reduce fears of economic loss.

4) Women for Progress can help develop public demand and and popular support for the establishment of an official Community Relations Commission. Such a Commission could sponsor a continuing program of community education to help make clear that discriminatory practices are against the public policy; could negotiate problems before they reached the crisis stage; could receive complaints of violations of agreements reached through negotiations; and thus broaden the base of popular support for movement towards non-discriminatory policies by public and private institutions.

This is not an easy project. It will require a knowledge of the city and its institutions, community and public relations skills, and the ability to inspire the enthusiasm of large numbers of volunteers. And of course, it will require money.

We are therefore, inviting the thoughtful attention by community leaders of how Women For Progress can best be organized, activated, and supported. What such leaders might want to consider is what its immediate objectives should be, what its formal structure should be and what its life-span should be.

For our first task must be to enlist the aid of level-headed, responsible leadership. We invite you to join with us in considering these questions.

Respectfully submitted,

September 18, 1953

MEMO TO: George S. Mitchell, Chairman, Civil Rights Commission
National Association of Intergroup Relations Officials

FROM: Louise P. Blackham, Secretary, Western Region

RE: "Violence and vandalism on the West Coast"

The story on the West Coast, from Vancouver, B.C. to Los Angeles, California, is a healthy one, the general feeling being--"All is (practically) quiet on the Western Front." It is significant that the few indications of violence that have occured have all been connected with the moving of a Negro or Oriental into a previously all white neighborhood.

The cases are so few I give you some comments--for your information rather than for the report.

Vancouver, B.C. -- "In Western Canada there has been a complete absence of "violence and vandalism" for many decades with the exception of hysteria concerning the Japanese-Canadians following Pearl Harbor."

"Recently a synagogue was badly damaged by a group of children - currently under investigation - the first indication of anything of this nature in Western Canada."

Seattle -- "Basic picture a healthy one - no actual violence in years."

Oregon -- "Picture is good."

"Practically no real violence and vandalism in this area."

"One cross was burned during recent years on the lawn of a Negro family (newly moved to neighborhood)."

San Francisco -- "Not much - never has been since the anti-Chinese riots of the last century."

"Extremely quiet in past several years."

Los Angeles -- "Comparison of incidents of violence occurring in 1951 - 1953 period with prior years would result in a finding that there were more during the past two years. But, when one looks at the number of new areas which have been opened up and the speed with which others are being opened it is a little short of amazing that there has been no situations in which mob violence has taken place."

Along with this story of virtual absence of "violence and vandalism" must go the story of educational and preventive work which have, without question, influenced-if not produced this picture. Western cities and states maintain active organizations and committees for the special purpose of eliminating the evil of discrimination either by law or by ~~direct~~ public attitude. Programs of these groups throw light on the probable reason for the "quietness" of the situation out here; the bringing together of people of a community to discuss problems; training courses or other efforts to improve attitude and action of local police in matters of race relations; public education work through Institutes, Speakers Bureaus and use of mass media; leadership in action on actual cases of discrimination; and promotion of civil rights legislation.

Discrimination exists in all its well known aspects. There are threats in cases of minority families moving into "white" neighborhoods. But there is evidence that this attitude is recognized as intolerable. Increasing public criticism is voiced by groups and individuals; newspapers are forthright in criticism, ~~decisions~~; law enforcement departments are actively cooperative; old Civil Rights laws are being improved and new ones created.

A CHRONICLE OF VIOLENCE IN BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA

FIL

This chronology is based on newspaper reports of violence in Birmingham and its environs from 1954 to mid-summer, 1958.

1954

January 3. The FBI office in Birmingham launched an investigation of the December 28th slaying of Moses Jones, Negro prisoner, by Sheriff Hill of Clarke County. Jones had been a Federal Government witness against Sheriff Hill in a liquor conspiracy case the previous fall.

December 31. It was reported that the City Commission voted a 30-day suspension of police officers Lynch and Siniard for beating Negro prisoner, Charles Patrick.

1955

April 18. Two discharged Birmingham police officers and a city jail warden were acquitted in federal court of depriving Negro Charles Patrick of his civil rights. Patrick claimed he was beaten by officers while the warden was present. The warden was suspended from his post for 10 days.

1956

September 13. John Kasper, speaking to a rally of some 500 persons applauded the appearance of Ku Klux Klansmen at a Citizens Council rally, saying, "We want trouble and we want it everywhere we can get it."

September-October. "The Southerner," edited by Ace Carter of the North Alabama Citizens Council, carried a column headed, "To Buy or Not to Buy (There Should Be No Question)," and listing Ford, for its "vicious program of using dollars to integrate." He also accuses corporations of promoting interracial programs, selling the idea that "the white Southerner is a bully, coward, or something very distasteful."

1957

January. The home of Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, Negro minister and leader of the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights, which staged a one-day defiance of city bus segregation laws, was heavily damaged by dynamite on Christmas night.

March 23. Hooded Klansmen slugged a television newsman and knocked him to the ground when he attempted to take pictures at a public rally in East Lake Park, where some 500 Klansmen listened to a speaker denounce the press as "Communist inspired."

April 10. Nat King Cole, Negro singer and pianist, was attacked by a group of white men as he played for a white audience in Municipal Auditorium. Maximum jail sentences were imposed on four of the attackers, members of the White Citizens Council; two others were fined.

(Violence, 1957, con't.)

June 11. Two young Negro men told of being kidnapped, taken into a woods and being beaten with rubber hoses. Harold Cunningham, 19, and Henry Silent, 21, said they were beaten after being questioned about where they were "two Saturdays ago."

August 26. Three of nine Negro families who signed a petition requesting integration of Birmingham schools reported they have been receiving threatening telephone calls.

September 4. A 34-year-old Negro was kidnapped and emasculated by a group of white men wearing hoods and robes. The man, Judge Aaron, was taken to a Veterans Administration hospital, where doctors said he had been severely beaten and "100 percent" emasculated. Three men were convicted of mutilation and sentenced to 20 years.

September 10. Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth was beaten and threatened with death by an angry mob when he attempted to enroll four Negro children at all-white Phillips High School. Three men were charged with assault with intent to murder in the beating of the Negro minister.

November 2. Four homes purchased by Negroes in the once all-white section of Fountain Heights were dynamited over a period of several months. White property owners in the area have formed an association designed to prevent sales of homes to Negroes.

November 15. The KKK demonstrated throughout Jefferson county and distributed pamphlets calling on white employers to discharge all Negroes and warning businessmen that the Klan would boycott them if they continued to employ Negroes.

December 7. A Negro school janitor, Woodrow Johnson, told authorities he was taken into a wooded area by a group of white Klansmen and beaten.

December 31. The home of a Negro family which moved into a white neighborhood and ignored a warning fiery cross was damaged by a bomb explosion. The house, in East Birmingham, was occupied by the Otis Flowers family.

1958

April 28. Fifty-four sticks of dynamite left in a satchel at Temple Beth-El failed to go off when a fuse went out. The dynamite sticks had enough power to demolish the synagogue. Harry Horwitz, administrative director of the Temple, said he could offer no explanation.

May 18. The tower of radio station WEDR fell over in U-shape with the lower part still standing. Perry L. Thompson, an announcer at the station, said they guy wire had been cut. Thompson entered the May 6 Democratic primary race for lieutenant governor, but later withdrew. When the station went on the air about three years ago, the tower it used then was damaged by vandals.

May 29. A radio station with all-Negro programs, recently the target of threats and sabotage, was smeared with painted "KKK" signs.

June 30. Bethel Baptist Church, of which the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth is pastor, was damaged by a bomb for the second time in less than two years.

(Violence, 1958, con't.)

July 19. (Birmingham) explosions hit two houses in an area newly occupied by Negroes. Three whites were "caught in the act" and two men required treatment for cuts and bruises inflicted by a Negreo group a few minutes after the dynamite blast.

October 19. Birmingham police disclosed the arrest of two men who admitted telling a Negro janitor that a Jewish temple (in Atlanta) would "probably be the next to be bombed."

CROSS REFERENCE SHEET

NAME OR SUBJECT:

Madison, Ga. Prison Inmates

REGARDING:

Prison intimidations

DATE
June 28, 1999

(SEE)
NAME OR SUBJECT:

NAACP, Atlanta, Georgia

Letter from "Carolyn" arrested October 19, 1957

Dear Friend:

I am writing to let you all hear about Bubba.And they took him out of jail at night and they brought him back to jail and I see them when they brought him in.

They blindfolded him in the jailhouse. Two of the cops brought him back to the jail that night and he was bleeding and two of the cops beat him. Cherry and Randolph McDonald and Mansfield. It was a girl in jail with me. Her name is Ira Lee. They have sent her to the state reformatory now. Please don't you all call my name. And I want you all to help me if you all can. And please you all don't think hard of me cause I didn't tell you all about this when you were down here. Everything is the truth and please you all don't mention my name.

Every thing I am saying is the truth. And I saw it. Me and Ira Lee. We saw everything happened and we saw them when they brought him back to jail wrapped him in a blanket and cops stayed in the jail with him. Mr. Chapman is the cop that stayed with him in jail. And he called him and he didn't say anything. And if you all need me I will tell the truth on the stand. And if you all come back I will tell the truth. And please don't you all call my name.

Carolyn

File Dawson

(Covering letter sent to Ruby Hurley)

"I am sending this letter that the girl wrote in jail. She could not talk to the FBI when they were there because the Sheriff had told her what he would do to her. Gene stay in the ~~xxxx~~ cell with her every night. She say if something don't soon be done she will have her baby in jail. They want to keep her now because she know too much. Something must be done to protect her.

"We need a undercover man or two down here. She say she had worried so much about James Brazier death and the way he was begging until she can't sleep so she sent this letter so I could get it to the FBI. She slipped this letter out of jail. I am sending both betters. One is a recopy. One sheep of paper is her handwriting. Please see to it that the FBI gets it. Try to have some to get to her. It really need a tape recorder in there some so she could turn it on. You try."

XX

~~1. Conviction~~ ~~Appointed~~ Who?
Tried - jury? - Counsel?
~~date of conviction? sentence?~~

ATA WORLD

'Cross Burners' In Florida Sought

6/8/58

ST. PETERSBURGH, Fla. — (UPI) — Police sought the "cross burners" Saturday who set off a fiery display adjacent to city-owned Spa Beach, closed to prevent racial integration.

The cross was burned late Friday night at the tip of Vinoy Point, which runs parallel to the beach. No arrests were made, but officers

(Continued on Page 7, Col. 6)

NAACP Asks U.S. Intervene At Dawson

6/14/58

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People Friday asked the civil rights commission and the attorney general to intervene in Dawson, Ga., where the NAACP says Negroes are being terrorized. The NAACP said the FBI already has entered the case.

In telegrams to Washington, NAACP Executive Secretary Roy Wilkins said:

"Negroes are being shot, terrorized and intimidated by local officials solely because of their race and to prevent their free exercise of their federally secured rights . . . Investigation by federal arm is only means of forestalling continued blatant violations of civil rights of Negroes in Dawson and in Terrell County, Georgia."

Dawson Officials Deny Capital Paper 'Fear' Story

Atla Const 6/9/58

By JACK NELSON
Constitution Staff Writer

DAWSON—Police officers and other officials Sunday denied a Washington Post writer's charge that Negroes of this south Georgia town are gripped by "an atmosphere of fear."

The Post story, datelined Dawson, charged that Negroes had been subjected to brutalities and indignities by policemen.

Officer Weyman B. Cherry retorted Sunday: "Anything I did I would do again if the circumstances were the same."

"Like any other man, a policeman has to defend himself," declared Cherry, a 31-year-old World War II infantry combat veteran.

Dawson mayor V. L. Singletary and Police Chief Howard Lee described Cherry as a "good officer."

"He is one of the most level-headed officers I have worked with in my 13 years on the force," Chief Lee said.

Both said they had received no complaints—either from Negroes or from whites—about police treatment.

Cherry said the Washington Post reporter who wrote the story of alleged brutality did not bother to ask him about the incidents. "You are the first reporter who has contacted me," he said.

Cherry, father of a 12-year-old girl and a four-year-old boy, showed a Constitution reporter a plastic rain-covering from the top of his police cap. It had a slit in it.

"That's where Countryman almost got me," Cherry said. "He swung at me with a switch-blade knife. It knocked my cap off.

Continued on Page 5, Column 4

Defense, Not Brutality, Dawson Officer Says

Continued from Page 1

When he started to swing again, I shot him."

Willie Countryman was one of two Negroes who died after tangling with Cherry. Countryman died almost immediately from one shot. James Brazier died about a week after being struck with what police reported was a blackjack. (The Post said he was hit twice with a gun.)

According to the Post, the "atmosphere of fear" began Sunday, April 20, when Brazier was struck. The Post quoted an unidentified Negro witness as saying Brazier was struck twice with a gun and was "senseless" the following morning, and had to be carried to mayor's court.

Cherry said he and another officer arrested Brazier because the Negro had interferred earlier in the day when police were arresting his father, O'Dell Brazier, on a drunk-driving charge.

Cherry said he had arrested Brazier several times previously on drunk and disorderly charges.

"He never gave me much trouble except when he was drinking," Cherry said. "He was drunk and wild-eyed this time and said, 'Y'all ain't got no right to lock me up and aint' no . . . damn body gonna lock me up'."

SWUNG AND MISSED

Cherry said Brazier swung at him and missed.

"He was fighting and raising sand," Cherry said, "so I pulled out my black-jack and hit him to get him under control."

Cherry said Brazier walked into his cell and was examined by a doctor that night. Mayor Singletary said Brazier walked into Mayor's court the following morning.

"I continued his case when he failed to respond to my questions," Mayor Singletary said.

Brazier's relatives took him to a Columbus hospital where he died April 25 following a brain operation. The Post reported the death certificate showed death was caused by a skull fracture.

FBI GETS REPORT

FBI agents took a statement from Cherry concerning the Brazier incident.

But Chief Lee said the agents decided not to take a statement from the policeman concerning Countryman's death because he (Chief Lee) insisted that the city attorney be present.

Chief Lee said that after FBI agents questioned several Negroes concerning the Brazier incident, "some of the outlaw Negroes seemed to resent the local police even more."

At night, Cherry and another officer patrol the town in a cruiser. The only other policemen on duty are a foot patrolman downtown and a radio operator.

A coroner's jury cleared Cherry in the death of Countryman the day after the shooting.

Officer Robert Hancock, who with Cherry was investigating a noise in the Negro neighborhood at 1:15 a.m. on May 25, testified at the inquest that he did not see Countryman until he sprang from a dark place and swung at Cherry with a knife.

Concerning the shooting of Tobe Latimer, whom the Post identified as an electrician and plumber, Cherry had this to say:

"Latimer runs a juke joint. I've been down to his place and carted off Negroes he had cut up with knives. He's got a long record.

"We had received a call that Latimer was creating a disturbance and selling moonshine at his juke joint.

"We eased up near the place and I looked through the window. He was pouring drinks from a half-gallon big-tip jar, a fruit jar; I slipped in a door behind him and he ran out carrying the 'shine with him. I caught him and he threw the jar, trying to bust it. It didn't break.

He tried to get the jar again and I grabbed him by the collar. He turned around and grappled with me and grabbed for my gun.

"I said, 'Turn loose, Tobe, or I'm gonna shoot you,' and he said, 'You just gonna have to shoot, then.' I shot him in the buttocks 'cause I didn't think it would hurt him too bad.

"After he fell he grabbed the fruit jar and broke it. He was treated at the hospital and released after two days."

Atl Jrn 6/9/58

Dawson Chief Denies Story Of Negroes 'Living in Terror'

Special to The Atlanta Journal

DAWSON, Ga., June 9 — The chief of police of Dawson said Monday that a Washington (D.C.) Evening Times-Herald story that Negroes in Dawson are living under terror "just isn't the truth."

"Ninety-seven per cent of our Negroes are satisfied," Police Chief Howard Lee said. "Those that are always raising hell are kicking and as long as they break laws, they will go on kicking."

The Washington story was based on three incidents in which a Dawson police officer shot or hit three Negroes in shortly over a month's time. Two of the Negroes died.

* * *

"I HAVE personally investigated each case," the chief said Monday, "and I would have done the same thing if I had been in his place."

Meanwhile, the FBI in Atlanta revealed Monday that its agents are conducting an investigation of "the over-all situation in Dawson." They said information will be turned over to Asst. Atty. Gen. W. Wilson White, for him to decide whether any federal case is involved.

Officer Weyman Cherry, a 31-year-old former combat infantryman, said that in each case he acted "because there was no other way out."

The first man who died was hit when he was resisting arrest, the police officer said. Officer Cherry said he hit him with his blackjack. The Washington story said he hit him twice with his gun.

The Negro, James Brazier, died eight days later after a brain operation.

* * *

ON MAY 24 Officer Cherry wounded Tobe Latimer when, he reported, they were struggling while placing Latimer under arrest.

The third incident, the next night, involved the fatal shooting of Willie Countryman, whom Officer Cherry said attacked him with a knife.

Chief Lee said Officer Cherry "is one of the best policemen I have every worked with.

"He catches most of the trouble because he is always on at night, when trouble, especially drinking trouble comes up. Certainly the man is entitled to defend himself," he said.

* * *

CHIEF LEE SAID a reporter from the Washington paper was in Dawson "because of a letter some outlaw Negro wrote to them."

Dawson Mayor V. L. Singletary said he considers Officer Cherry "a very good policeman."

Officer Cherry father of a 12-year-old daughter and a 4-year-

Officer Cherry, father of a 12-force in 1955. He said that he had no incidents until the three which occurred recently.

He said he and another officer went to arrest Brazier on charges of disorderly conduct, interfering with an arrest and threatening an officer.

Another officer earlier had arrested his father on drunken driving charges, to which Brazier reportedly objected and interfered.

* * *

OFFICER CHERRY said that the Negro hit the other officer and began fighting.

"I hit him with my blackjack. Even after that we had to handcuff him to bring him in," he said.

Chief Lee said Brazier was examined by a doctor when brought to jail and that nothing was found wrong. Later he said the doctor returned to the jail on another case at 2:30 a.m. and found blood in Brazier's ear.

"He told us not to let him go to sleep because there might be a fracture," the chief said.

The next morning the judge put the trial off for a week and Brazier was released to his family. He underwent a brain operation in Columbus and died a week later.

* * *

THE OTHER MAN who was killed, Countryman, reportedly attacked Officer Cherry and another officer with a knife. Mr. Cherry's car is ripped by what he reported to be a knife thrust.

"He jumped me from behind while we were checking out a complaint," Officer Cherry said, "I never knew he was there until he landed on me."

"When he tried to swing his knife again, I shot him," Officer Cherry said.

The day before the Countryman incident, Officer Cherry shot Latimer during a tangle when he was reportedly trying to escape with "a jar of shine."

Latimer is presently out on bail and is "able to get around," the officer reported.

* * *

THE FBI FIRST entered the case after the Brazier incident. Atlanta FBI officials declined to comment on what the investigation has revealed.

Officer Cherry said that no one had contacted him from the Washington newspaper.

As for the charges that the Negroes in Dawson are living "in an atmosphere of fear," Officer Cherry said he had never heard bigger untruths "in all my life."

Chief Lee expressed the same opinion.

They both said that the story "senseless" the following morning "senseless" thef ollowing morning

Officer Cherry said that Brazier did not lose consciousness when he struck him.

The chief said that no complaints have been received from either Negroes or whites about treatment in Dawson.

"If these had been white men, everyone would have just said the officer was doing his duty," the chief said.

"We welcome the true facts and anybody who wants to tell them," the chief said.

* * *

OFFICER CHERRY said that he does not know why Countryman jumped him.

"Word was out that he said he would get me. I don't know why. I don't think it had anything to do with the other incidents," he said.

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

June 9, 1958

Mr. Alfred Friendly
Managing Editor
The Washington Post
1515 "L" Street
Washington 5, D. C.

Dear Al:

The enclosed story on Terrell County from the Atlanta Constitution will make clear my reasons for feeling that there was hardly a chance for a proper expose' by Georgia newspapers. The Atlanta Journal ran approximately the same kind of white wash.

A lot of good people down here are mighty grateful to you for taking this one on and to Bob Baker for the fine job he did.

Sincerely,

Harold C. Fleming
Executive Director

HCF/mf
Enclosure - 1 (Atl. Const. story on Terrell County, Ga.)

Wash. Post

Death and Violence Terrorize Negroes Of Georgia Town

6/8/58

By Robert E. Lee Baker
Staff Reporter

DAWSON, Ga., June 7—The Negroes of this south Georgia town are scared.

This is what has happened:

• A Negro was beaten severely in his front yard by police.

• He was hauled senseless into court and died from a crushed skull five days later.

• Another Negro was shot to death in his back yard by police.

• A third Negro was shot in the buttocks by police when they investigated a disturbance call at a juke joint.

• A Negro mother was slapped in jail when she went to visit her son there.

• Two dozen Negroes tried to register to vote; many were teachers; all "failed."

• One teacher who had a four-year college degree "failed" a test for illiterate voters and was fired from teaching.

It is an atmosphere of fear among the Negroes that has brought Federal Bureau of Investigation agents to Dawson twice in recent weeks to investigate the deaths.

It is an atmosphere of indignation which makes probable the filing of affidavits with the Federal Civil Rights Commission.

It is an atmosphere of despair at getting help here in

See DAWSON, A12, Col. 1

Death 'and' Violence Terrorize Negroes of Dawson, Ga.

DAWSON—From Page 1

Dawson that drove a few Negroes to tell their story to this reporter.

They were afraid to be caught talking to a reporter in their Dawson homes. They set up elaborate plans for meeting at night outside the city and outside Terrell County.

Behind Drawn Shades

They talked softly, earnestly behind tightly drawn shades. They froze at outside sounds. They exacted a promise they would not be identified. They kept their number small because they feared police informers among their own race.

They watched the clock and left the haven singly and at intervals so they wouldn't be out after an 11 p. m. "curfew." They traveled predetermined and separate routes to their homes.

They told stories of police brutalities and indignities. They told of resulting great unrest and terror among Dawson Negroes.

Police Concede Unrest

Later, Dawson Police Chief Howard L. Lee and Terrell County Sheriff Z. T. (Zeke) Matthews conceded there is unrest among the Negroes. But beatings and the two deaths resulted from resisting arrest, they said.

They blame the unrest on television news broadcasts originating up North with talk about integration and civil rights. And they blame it on the "communists."

"You know, Cap'," said Matthews, "there's nothing like fear to keep niggers in line. I'm talking about 'outlaw' niggers.

"And we always tell them there are four roads leading out of Dawson in all directions every two hours because he had a little blood in his ear," Chief Lee said.

Next morning the father was led before Mayor V. L. Singletary presiding over the weekly Mayor's Court. Young James had to be carried there.

The father was fined $115, but his son was senseless, unable to speak or support himself. Mayor Singletary postponed James Brazier's case and told his family to bring him back for trial on the next Monday.

Surgery and Death

Instead, the family took him to Terrell County Hospital where a doctor urged them to rush him to Columbus, Ga., Medical Center for immediate brain surgery.

They did. James was operated upon immediately. He never regained consciousness and died Friday, April 25. The death certificate stated that James Brazier died from a skull fracture caused by being struck with a blunt instrument.

Funeral services were held Wednesday, April 30, at the I Hope Baptist Church in Dawson. On the same day, Odell Frazier was arrested again, this time for running a stop sign. He forfeited $25 collateral.

The story of James Brazier's death, which rifled through the Negro community, sifted to some of Dawson's white people. They complained to Chief Lee about the beating.

Chief 'Aggravated'

Chief Lee produced the dead man's police record. It dated back to March, 1954, and showed he had been arrested seven times and fined a total of $243 for speeding and drunkeness.

The Washington Post

Map locates Dawson, Ga. Terrell County Sheriff Z. T. (Zeke) Matthews said authorities always tell Negro residents "there are four roads leading out of Dawson in all directions and they are free to go any time they don't like it here."

a fellow officer were making a routine cruiser check of the Second ave. Negro area and heard "whopping and hollering."

They parked a short distance away and walked toward Countryman's back porch, Lee said, when the Negro jumped at Cherry "from nowhere" with a switch-blade knife and was felled with a single shot that struck him near his belt buckle.

Negroes said they heard no disturbance that night; the only gathering was at another

The police patrol car was by.

Boy Shouted 'Bang'

"This boy made believe he had a shotgun," said Chief Lee. "He aimed it at the policeman and shouted, 'bang'."

Some of the ball players were among his informants, Chief Lee said, and they later told him that Flagg had boasted that "no policeman was going to lock him up in jail."

Billy Flagg was locked in jail and when his mother came to see him, she was locked in jail too.

"She was carrying on about her boy being locked up," Lee explained. "We put her in there to cool her down."

Billy Flagg was charged with disorderly conduct and forfeited $18 collateral. Negroes said the police had roughed him up, but Chief Lee denied it.

"Neither the arresting officers nor I had our blackjacks at the time, so I know it wasn't so," he said. Flagg was arrested because you got to keep trouble down."

Rumors Stir Fears

Wild rumors raced throughout the Negro community as fear gripped it and many of them upon investigation proved to be false.

On Monday morning, the day after Countryman was killed, a coroner's jury cleared Officer Cherry in connection with the death. The officer shot the man in self-defense and in line of duty, the jury ruled.

But the violent death brought the FBI into Dawson again. Two agents from Columbus were in town Tuesday.

FBI Comes Again

"These FBI men investigating everything aggravates me," said Chief Lee. "I don't

Georgia, Terrell County is an important cog in State politics because of the county unit system in primaries.

Terrell County, with its 2,500 persons, has two unit votes in selecting the Democratic nominees, the only nominees that count in Georgia. Fulton County (Atlanta) with 600,000 persons has six unit votes.

So Atlanta, with 48 times the population of Terrell County, has only three times the voting power.

Barriers on Balloting

Teacher Rejected

Also as in all rural counties in Georgia, Terrell County Negroes just aren't allowed to vote in numbers. Earlier this year, the Legislature recamped the voter registration system with a candid view of thwarting future Negro registrations.

Georgia law requires a registrant to read, interpret and write any paragraph of the Federal or State Constitution. If he fails that, he can take a test for so-called illiterates and be registered if he successfully answers 20 of 20 specific oral questions.

In Dawson on April 7, about 23 Negroes attempted to register. Many were teachers. None of them made it.

The Dawson registrars tested the Negro applicants one by one, each alone. Here is what the Negroes reported of their secret meetings with this reporter:

Teacher Rejected

A Negro teacher with a four-year Bachelor of Science degree from a Georgia college was rejected because, the registrar said: "You slurred the word original."

The teacher had been trying to register for two years. After the last rejection, the teacher was called before a school official and reprimanded for "getting too big." Subsequently he was fired.

Another teacher who "failed" the literacy test was told all 11 answers were wrong and was rejected.

Said another Negro who was rejected:

"There is an old joke about the Negro who was asked by the Georgia registrar what such-and-such section of the Constitution meant.

"'It means ah ain't goin' to git to vote,' he replied.

"I used to laugh at that joke. I don't think it's funny any more."

Said another:

"One of the questions they asked me was what are the qualifications of a juror in Georgia. I felt like telling them you must be white. I might as well have told them that. I was rejected anyhow."

What They Are Asked

Other questions on the test include:

- "What is the republican form of government?"
- "What does the Constitution of the United States provide regarding the suspension of the privilege of habeas corpus?"
- "What does the Constitution of Georgia provide regarding the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus?"
- "How many may a State be admitted to the union?
- "What are the names of the Federal District judges in Georgia?
- "What are the citizens of Georgia?
- "What is treason against the State of Georgia?
- "How does the Constitution of the United States provide that it may be amended?"

Some of the Negroes, in spite of their fear following the violence of recent weeks, intend to file affidavits with the Civil Rights Commission because they have been barred from voting.

Sheriff's Opinion

Said Sheriff Matthews:

"Well, Cap', I believe we ought to be strict about who votes. There isn't a nigger in Georgia who wouldn't take over if he could. They want all the power.

"The nigger has progressed under our system and we sure wouldn't progress under his. Isn't that right? I tell you this, Cap', all this agitation is the work of communists."

The sheriff is a pleasant-appearing man whose only symbol of authority is a tiny badge clipped to his shirt pocket. A veteran of 27 years supervising a chain gang, he is now watching his waistline and drinks only one coke a day.

He said there is no longer an official curfew for Negroes in Dawson.

"This administration didn't see fit to have one," he said. "But we need it, the way things are going. A man who knows the nigger can tell when dissatisfaction is brewing. Niggers up late at night are suspicious."

Informal Curfew

The Negroes who talked to this reporter said police enforce an informal curfew and all Negroes must be off the streets by 11 p. m. or go to jail if they don't have a good excuse.

Chief Lee is a wiry man with an odd combination of cold brown eyes and a quick, affable smile. He wears a starched white Police Chief's cap and a sparkling white, short-sleeved shirt.

He specifically requested that the following remarks be included among his quotes:

"My order to police is that we answer calls to niggers the same as to whites and give them the same protection. And the only trouble we have with niggers is the chronic cases—the ones who go crazy, I call it.

"Everything that has happened is due to drinking, mixing wine and beer and 'shine, and, hell, you can't wait to find out what a crazy nigger is going to do.

Television Blamed

"We're just as good to niggers as they'll let us be."

Then he added:

"The nigger resents everything the white man has, all you've got, all I've got. I've noticed things have gotten worse since television.

"They all got television sets up there and hear all the news over NBC and CBS, telling what the Supreme Court has done and what the Federal Courts say and all about civil rights, and they begin thinking.

"We've had trouble. We're going to have more of it."

Mayor Singletary is a quiet, pleasant man. He sat on a sofa in his automobile showroom and said business was bad. He seemed weary when he said:

"Race relations are generally good. We've got lots of whites worse than niggers. We've got lots of good niggers around here."

The Mayor of Dawson paused and then said:

"You know, being mayor is a civic duty around here and there's only one good thing about it.

"You can't succeed yourself."

Police Concede Unrest

Later, Dawson Police Chief Howard L. Lee and Terrell County Sheriff Z. T. (Zeke) Matthews conceded there is unrest among the Negroes. But beatings and the two deaths resulted from resisting arrest, they said.

They blame the unrest on television news broadcasts originating up North with talk about integration and civil rights. And they blame it on the "communists."

"You know, Cap'," said Matthews, "there's nothing like fear to keep niggers in line. I'm talking about 'outlaw' niggers.

"And we always tell them there are four roads leading out of Dawson in all directions and they are free to go any time they don't like it here."

The events leading up to the first death, which triggered the tension and fear, happened on Sunday, April 20.

James Brazier, 31-year-old Negro, came upon police as they were arresting his father, Odell Brazier, on a charge of drunken driving.

What Sparked Fears

Young Brazier asked the police to stop beating his father. According to Negroes who told the story at a secret meeting with this reporter, Chief Lee said the son tried to interfere with the arrest of his father who was resisting the officers.

James Brazier drove his father's car to their home at 312 N. Ash st. Police took Odell Brazier to jail.

Later, police went to the Brazier home to arrest young Brazier for interfering with his father's arrest. At home were James Brazier, his wife and four children.

A Negro witness gave this account:

"These two policemen came up and grabbed James and dragged him toward their car and one of them held a gun on him and said: 'I ought to shoot you.'

"They kicked him twice, once in the groin, and his little [illegible] boy ran up and [illegible] like that,' and one of the officers hit the boy aside.

'Struck With Gun'

"James was struck on the head with a gun and slapped across the face with a gun and they shoved him into the car and slammed the door on his feet."

Chief Lee said James Brazier "bucked and put up a scuffle and they had to hit him on the head with a blackjack."

James and his father spent Sunday night in jail. Chief Lee said a doctor, called to the jail to help a chronic white drunk, also examined James.

The doctor said to put him by himself and wake him up

Funeral services were held Wednesday, April 30, at the I Hope Baptist Church in Dawson. On the same day, Odell Frazier was arrested again, this time for running a stop sign. He forfeited $25 collateral.

The story of James Brazier's death, which rifled through the Negro community, sifted to some of Dawson's white people. They complained to Chief Lee about the beating.

Chief 'Aggravated'

Chief Lee produced the dead man's police record. It dated back to March, 1954, and showed he had been arrested seven times and fined a total of $243 for speeding and drunkeness.

"It sure aggravated me when those white people came to me, complaining like that," said Lee. "I got hot."

The FBI launched its first investigation.

Tension reached its present height following a sequence of events on the weekend of May 23. Violence and death again struck in the Negro community.

That Friday night, Tobe Latimer, 48, a Negro electrician and plumber, was shot in the buttocks by Police Officer W. B. Cherry, who was identified by witnesses as a participant in the Brazier beating.

The Dawson business district is patroled at night by a foot officer equipped with a walkie-talkie. Two officers in the town's lone patrol car tour the rest of Dawson.

Shot by Policeman

On this night, Chief Lee said, a Negro complained to the foot officer that Latimer was raising a fuss in a juke joint. The cruiser was notified by radio.

Officer Cherry's report stated that Latimer was drunk and disorderly and was shot only after he grabbed the officer and refused to let go.

Negroes claim that Cherry warned Latimer not to break [illegible] while he was carrying, but Latimer did break it and was shot.

"All the niggers around town were laughing about where old Tobe got shot," said Chief Lee. Latimer was hospitalized, forfeited $25 collateral and faces a December trial on a charge of possessing moonshine whisky.

Sudden death came on that weekend too.

At 1:15 a. m. Sunday, May 25, Officer Cherry shot Willie Countryman, 32, Negro driver for the Royal Crown bottling company. The shooting occurred in Countryman's back yard. He died from an abdominal wound on the way to the hospital.

Chief Lee said Cherry and leading out of Dawson in all directions and they are free to go any time they don't like it here."

a fellow officer were making a routine cruiser check of the Second ave. Negro area and heard "whopping and hollering."

They parked a short distance away and walked toward Countryman's back porch, Lee said, when the Negro jumped at Cherry "from nowhere" with a switch-blade knife and was felled with a single shot that struck him near his belt buckle.

Negroes said they heard no disturbance that night; the only gathering was at another house where women were making cookies for a church affair.

"This boy Countryman surprised me," said Chief Lee. "He had only been arrested twice before and seemed to be a good nigger.

"My nigger informants—you not to have informants to learn what's going on—tell me Countryman had sworn to 'get' Cherry for Brazier's death. Countryman and Brazier were first cousins. All the niggers are kin up there."

Negroes said Brazier and Countryman were not related.

'All Drunked Up'

Chief Lee continued to talk about the Countryman case:

"I remarked on the way to the hospital how quick he died. I had to shoot one in the stomach a few years ago and he lived five or six days.

"The doctor opened Countryman up and he had bled all over inside. You could smell the moonshine in his blood. He was all drunked up."

Chief Lee said he also had to kill another Negro a few years ago.

"He pulled a knife on me and I shot him right in the chest at 30, 40 feet," he said.

Countryman's death did not end the weekend of terror and indignation for Dawson Negroes.

At 11 a. m. Sunday, Billy Flagg, 21, was throwing a ball around with half a dozen other Negroes near the County Medical Center at the edge of town.

Rumors [illegible]

Wild rumors raced through out the Negro community as fear gripped it and many of them upon investigation proved to be false.

On Monday morning, the day after Countryman was killed, a coroner's jury cleared Officer Cherry in connection with the death. The officer shot the man in self-defense and in line of duty, the jury ruled.

But the violent death brought the FBI to Dawson again. Two agents from Columbus were in town last Thursday.

FBI Comes Again

"These FBI [illegible] investigating everything aggravates me," said Chief Lee. "I don't mind the [illegible] We got nothing to [illegible]

"But coming down [illegible] the time is a waste [illegible] payers' money.

"It aggravates me [illegible] cause the FBI starts [illegible] niggers and then the niggers get to thinking they're important and it stirs them up."

Negroes who told their story to this reporter at secret sessions said the recent weeks was only a climax to rough treatment in recent years.

They told about three Negroes who were beaten when charged with swearing in front of a white woman. They told about a "curfew" violator who ended up with chunks of flesh ripped from his back.

They told about a Negro accused of tooting his horn at a white girl. The man escaped down a creek amid pistol shots and now lives in another State, they said.

Question of Voting

The Negroes said the recent violence has brought to a head other unsatisfactory aspects of their life in Dawson which previously had gone unchallenged. They resent blocks placed in their way to keep them voteless.

In 1956, Terrell County had 3486 registered white voters and 105 Negroes. Today, an estimated 45 Negroes are registered and they say those are not permitted to vote in city elections.

Like all rural counties in [illegible]

[illegible] fully answers [illegible] official questio[illegible]

In Dawson on A[illegible] 28 Negroes attem[illegible] ister. Many we[illegible] Some of them ma[illegible]

The Dawson [illegible] the Negr[illegible] one by one, each [illegible] what the Negr[illegible] one of their se[illegible] with this reporte[illegible]

Teacher Rejected

A Negro teache[illegible] year Bachelor of [illegible] from a Ge[illegible] rejected bec[illegible] said: "You [illegible] original'."

[illegible] teacher h[illegible] register fo[illegible]

Population of Dawson Is 55 Per Cent Negro

By a Staff Reporter

DAWSON, Ga., June 7—Dawson is in the dead center of Terrell County, a typical Black Belt county with rich earth for growing peanuts and cotton and a large Negro population.

Forty-six miles to the west of Dawson is the Alabama line. Ninety-five miles south is Florida.

Terrell County has 12,500 persons, 67 per cent Negro. More than half the people work the land. A few whites own most of it; few Negroes own any land at all.

Dawson, the county seat and only urban place in the county, has 4500 persons, 55 per cent Negro. It has a drab business section along Main st—small one-floor stores in need of paint, agricultural processing plants, a modern sports shirt factory, a hotel, a motel, a bank, scattered gasoline stations, automobile and farm implement stores.

Unused Car Line

An unused trolley line hangs limply over much of Main st. Unlike many Southern towns, no glittering supermarkets or other modern stores have been built.

The only building of stature is the red brick courthouse with a clock tower visible for miles. It is at Stonewall and Lee sts. and a modest monument unveiled there in 19[illegible] honors Judge James M. Griggs, a Congressman who died in 1910.

It is inscribed: "As great [illegible] the greatest; as humble as [illegible] lowest."

Refugee Camp

A nearby tablet notes [illegible] of a Confederate [illegible]

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

June 9, 1958

VIA AIR MAIL

Mr. Robert E. Lee Baker
The Washington Post and Times-Herald
1515 "L" Street, N. W.
Washington 5, D. C.

Dear Bob:

Congratulations and thanks for a bang up job. I thought you would be interested in seeing what your colleague Jack Nelson had to say about it in the Atlanta Constitution. The Journal did likewise.

We missed you at the raucus dinner for Colonel John Popham. But when I mentioned that I had seen you recently, it launched Pop on a string of reminincences about you and your achievements that lasted well into the night.

I thought you would like to know that some good church people are mobilizing in the wake of your article to see what can be done about the Dawson situation.

Come see us again.

Sincerely,

Harold C. Fleming
Executive Director

HCF/mf

Enclosures - 1 (Atl. Const. story on Terrell County, Ga.)

VIA AIR MAIL

June 10, 1958

Mr. J. R. Wiggins
Executive Editor
The Washington Post Times-Herald
1515 "L" Street, N. W.
Washington 5, D. C.

Dear Mr. Wiggins:

We are most grateful to the Post for Bob Baker's very able job of reporting the brutalities and terror in Dawson, Georgia. I know you will be glad to know that this article has provided stimulus for various organizations and individuals here to seek remedies for this appalling situation.

The purpose of this letter is to ask permission to reproduce Mr. Baker's article in its entirety for distribution by church leaders in Georgia. It is probable that the reproduction will be done under the sponsorship of the United Church Women, but until such time as the governing body of that group can meet and act formerly, some of its leaders have asked me to see if permission can be secured. If I may have your agreement, I shall personally undertake to see that the project is properly and responsibly carried out.

Since the Post's readership in this area is very slight and the Georgia press shows no disposition to give Mr. Baker's findings a fair hearing, we feel it is vital that people of good will in Georgia have an opportunity to read the article in full. I hope that I may have an early and favorable answer to this request.

With kindest regards,

Sincerely,

Harold C. Fleming
Executive Director

HCF/mf

PAT JC -
F.Y.I.
HCF

The Washington Post
AND
Times Herald
1515 L STREET, N.W. WASHINGTON 5, D.C. REPUBLIC 7-1234

JAMES RUSSELL WIGGINS
EXECUTIVE EDITOR

June 12, 1958

Mr. Harold C. Fleming
Executive Director
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
63 Auburn Avenue, N. E. - Room 432
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Mr. Fleming:

This will authorize the reproduction of Mr. Baker's article on Dawson, Georgia, as suggested in your letter of June 10th. Thank you for writing.

Sincerely yours,

J. R. Wiggins

VIA AIR MAIL SPECIAL

June 13, 1958

Mr. Robert E. Lee Baker
The Washington Post Times-Herald
1515 "L" Street, N. W.
Washington 5, D. C.

Dear Bob:

Here are copies of the four (4) affidavits so far secured. The carbons from which these reproductions were made were rather blurred, but I think they are readable.

We'll be watching the Post with interest.

All the best.

Sincerely,

Harold C. Fleming
Executive Director

HCF/mf
Enclosures - 4.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS
Ernest Angell
Katrina McCormick Barnes
Daniel Bell
Dorothy Dunbar Bromley
Ralph S. Brown, Jr.
Lisle C. Carter, Jr.
Richard S. Childs
William A. Delano
Edward J. Ennis
Morris L. Ernst
John F. Finerty
Osmond K. Fraenkel
Walter Frank
Lewis Galantiere
Walter Gellhorn
Julian E. Goldberg
Louis M. Hacker
August Heckscher
Frank S. Horne
B. W. Huebsch
Sophia Yarnall Jacobs
John Jessup
John Paul Jones
Dorothy Kenyon
Dan Lacy
Walter Millis
Gerard Piel
Elmer Rice
George Soll
Barent Ten Eyck
J. Waties Waring
Howard Whiteside
Edward Bennett Williams

NATIONAL COMMITTEE
Chairman
E. B. MacNaughton (Ore.)
Vice-Chairman Emeritus
Bishop Edward L. Parsons (Calif.)
Vice Chairmen
Pearl S. Buck (Penna.)
Prof. Albert Sprague Coolidge (Mass.)
Prof. J. Frank Dobie (Texas)
Lloyd K. Garrison (N.Y.)
Dr. Frank P. Graham (U.N.)
Palmer Hoyt (Colo.)
Dr. Karl Menninger (Kans.)
Loren Miller (Calif.)
Morris Rubin (Wisc.)
Lillian E. Smith (Ga.)
Mrs. Sadie Alexander (Penna.)
Thurman Arnold (D.C.)
Bishop James Chamberlain Baker (Calif.)
Roger N. Baldwin (N.Y.)
Alan Barth (D.C.)
Francis Biddle (D.C.)
Dr. Sarah Gibson Blanding (N.Y.)
Catherine Drinker Bowen (Penna.)
Prof. Julian P. Boyd (N.J.)
Van Wyck Brooks (Conn.)
John Mason Brown (N.Y.)
Howard F. Burns (Ohio)
Prof. James R. Caldwell (Calif.)
Dr. Henry Seidel Canby (Conn.)
Prof. Robert K. Carr (D. C.)
Prof. Allan Knight Chalmers (Mass.)
Stuart Chase (Conn.)
Grenville Clark (N.H.)
Dr. Rufus E. Clement (Ga.)
Prof. Henry Steele Commager (Mass.)
Morris L. Cooke (Penna.)
Prof. George S. Counts (N.Y.)
Prof. Robert E. Cushman (Tenn.)
Elmer Davis (D.C.)
Melvyn Douglas (N.Y.)
Prof. Thomas H. Eliot (Mo.)
Walter T. Fisher (Ill.)
James Lawrence Fly (Fla.)
Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick (N.Y.)
Prof. Ralph F. Fuchs (Ind.)
Prof. Willard E. Goslin (Tenn.)
Prof. Mark DeW. Howe (Mass.)
Quincy Howe (N.Y.)
Dr. Robert M. Hutchins (N.Y.)
Gerald W. Johnson (Md.)
Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson (D.C.)
Dr. Percy L. Julian (Ill.)
James Kerney, Jr. (N.J.)
Benjamin H. Kizer (Wash.)
Dr. John A. Lapp (Ill.)
Mrs. Agnes Brown Leach (N.Y.)
Max Lerner (N.Y.)
Prof. Robert S. Lynd (N.Y.)
Prof. Robert Mathews (Ohio)
Dr. Millicent C. McIntosh (N.Y.)
Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn (Calif.)
Harry C. Meserve (N. Y.)
Donald R. Murphy (Iowa)
Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer (N.J.)
Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam (D.C.)
Henry Parkman (Mass.)
James G. Patton (Colo.)
A. Philip Randolph (N.Y.)
Elmo Roper (N.Y.)
John Nevin Sayre (N.Y.)
Prof. Arthur Schlesinger, Jr. (Mass.)
Joseph Schlossberg (N.Y.)
Dr. Edward J. Sparling (Ill.)
Prof. George R. Stewart (Calif.)
Mrs. Dorothy Tilly (Ga.)
Prof. Edward C. Tolman (Calif.)
William W. Waymack (Iowa)
Stanley Weigel (Calif.)
William L. White (Kans.)
Aubrey Williams (Ala.)
Dean Benjamin Youngdahl (Mo.)

AMERICAN CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION

170 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK 10, N. Y.
Founded 1920 ORegon 5-5990 Incorporated

Ernest Angell, Chairman, Board of Directors
Ralph S. Brown, Jr., Elmer Rice, Vice Chairmen
Edward J. Ennis, Osmond K. Fraenkel, Barent Ten Eyck, General Counsel
Katrina McCormick Barnes, Secretary, B. W. Huebsch, Treasurer
John Haynes Holmes, Norman Thomas, Directors Emeritus

Patrick Murphy Malin, Executive Director
Alan Reitman, Assistant Director
Jeffrey E. Fuller, Assistant Director
Louis Joughin, Assistant Director
Louise C. Birnie, Administrative Assistant
Rowland Watts, Staff Counsel
Irving Ferman, Washington Office Director
Roger N. Baldwin, Adviser, International Work
Marie M. Runyon, Membership Secretary

July 30, 1958

Mr. Harold C. Fleming
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
63 Auburn Avenue, N.E. - Room 432
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Re: Dawson case

Dear Harold:

A quick check of the Georgia code indicates that a felony is defined in Section 26 - 102 as an offense, a conviction for which renders one liable for death or imprisonment in a penitentiary. Each offense in the penal code specifies the penalty on conviction and the place to be confined, such as "a penitentiary". I assume that the conviction under consideration is a felony conviction. A penitentiary is defined in Section 102 as a place where "felony convicts are confined at hard labor."

There are such things, however, as county penitentiaries, and if it seems desirable to pursue this matter further, it would be important to check whether our subject is in fact confined to the county jail or a technical penitentiary. If it is a county jail, a habeas corpus proceeding in the state courts would almost surely result in her immediate transfer to a pentitentiary. Before we went ahead on this, we would do further checking with Georgia lawyers, but I am reasonably confident that this is the situation. There is no point in proceeding further with research, however, until we have some assurance that this is a step she wants us to take, as outside interference might put her in jeopardy, and in any event we would need her authorization to proceed. I will let the matter rest until I hear further from you.

Sincerely yours,

Rowland

Rowland Watts
Staff Counsel

August 8, 1958

Mr. Rowland Watts, Staff Counsel
American Civil Liberties Union
170 Fifth Avenue
New York 10, New York

Dear Rowland:

Your letter on the Georgia law respecting penal confinement was very helpful. My general feeling is that the possible remedy is not sufficient to warrant making a project of the case. However, Ruby Hurley is away for an extended period, and I would like to discuss the matter further with her before we make a final decision.

On the question of a suitable Georgia lawyer, my inquiries among friendly lawyers point strongly to Harold Russell as an excellent choice. I am not acquainted with Russell myself, but his competence and character are respected by those who know him. As you know, his firm is one of the major and most conservative hereabouts, and it is something of a surprise that he should feel able to take on civil liberties. But, assuming he can, that only makes him a better candidate.

I'll be looking forward to further word from you as the effort progresses.

Cordially,

Harold C. Fleming
Executive Director

HCF:ls

August 11, 1958

Mr. Robert E. Baker
Washington Post Times-Herald
1515 "L" Street, N. W.
Washington 5, D. C.

Dear Bob:

A chat with Lucius Pitts disclosed the following additional information about Terrell County. Lucius was in Dawson last week still concerned with the school situation in general and the dismissed teachers in particular. He found the Negroes of the area, including teachers with whom he has had a good relationship in the past, generally afraid of him and afraid to discuss the situation further.

These facts he considers general knowledge:

(1) No Negro teachers have had their contracts renewed for the coming school year.

(2) The number of dismissed teachers - those who have received letters stating that their services will not be required in the 1958-59 school year, is now ten. There remains hope that some of these will be reinstated before the opening of school. Of the ten, three are principals. One of the principals has been with the Terrell County school system for more than 10 years. None of those dismissed have been given a reason for the action.

(3) The school board, at a recent meeting, again announced that no equipment would be returned to the Negro schools from which it had been taken. They reasoned that much equipment had been moved about, Negro to Negro, white to white, Negro to white, white to Negro, etc., and that no unfair distribution was involved.

(4) The Dawson News ran an editorial criticising the school board for this latest decision concerning the equipment.

The Georgia Teachers and Education Association (Lucius's organization) are determined to "bust this one wide open." They feel they have a good chance of winning since integration et. al., is not involved. Lucius is of the opinion that the people of the State Department of Education and the State School Building Authority are very concerned about this situation and are actually frightened of the results unless they can get the Terrell County Board to completely reverse itself.

Biggest concern arises from the fact that since 1951 all school districts have received from the State, $300 per year per teacher for equipment and maintenance. Until the 1957-58 school year, none of this was spent for Negro schools although with more than 60 Negro teachers the county in effect received better than $18,000 per year for this purpose. Negro schools had little or no janitorial service, no electricity, no running water, no toilets, etc. (Currently it is impossible to reach the new Negro high school by car after a heavy rain. Students lay planks across the yard to get across the mud.) In addition, the State School Building Authority put up all of the new Negro school buildings, although each school district also receives $200 per teacher per year for capital outlay.

Lucius is of the opinion that you could use any of the above information if the need arose, though, if possible, it might be desirable to have a local or state official or some other appropriate person tell you these things.

Have also talked with Amos Holmes, Georgia NAACP secretary, who is Ruby's right hand man in their interests in Dawson. He tells me that the young woman who was in the Dawson jail at the time of the Brazier beating is Ira Lee Gladden. She is now at Reidsville State Farm, he believes. "Carolyn" is, of course, still in the Dawson jail.

Holmes has had several recent visits from the FBI. He believes they were last in Dawson just before the federal grand jury met in Macon.

Holmes turned up a Negro who was possibly a witness to the Brazier beating. The man is the night watchman at the gin where the beating is supposed to have occurred. The watchman told several Negroes he knew all about the beating. However, he now denies that he knows anything, stating that on the night in question, he left the gin around 1:30 a.m., and went home.

Some time ago, "Carolyn" smuggled a letter out of the jail. That letter and the covering letter which came to Ruby are enclosed. This is a rough copy as taken over the phone. This letter, possibly in slightly altered form, was given to the FBI.

Holmes says that he will be happy to give you such information and documents as he has on hand, if you need them. He is at Ruby's office, 859½ Hunter Street, N. W., phone MUrray 8-8869.

Sorry that it has taken so much to cover so little.

Regards.

Sincerely,

Paul Anthony
Administrative Assistant

PA/mf
Enclosures - 2.

DRAFT

We, the Executive Committee of the Georgia Council on Human Relations, are distressed by the developments in Terrell County which are tarnishing the good name of our state in the eyes of the rest of the nation.

Only recently, the conscience of the nation was shocked by stories of police brutality in the County Seat, Dawson; this was followed by an exposé in a Georgia paper of the questionable handling of school equipment in the county. Now, the U. S. Department of Justice, after an investigation by the FBI, has filed suit charging discrimination in voter registration. Among those declared ineligible due to illiteracy were Negro public school teachers. It is disturbing that our state officials, instead of seeking the facts in the situation, have immediately pledged all the resources of the state to the defense of the registration practices in question.

As citizens of Georgia, who believe in adherence to due process of law, we feel there are certain questions which must be raised. Our regard for the good name of our state, our concern for fair play, and our conscience compel us to speak out.

How is it that one state agency, a Board of Registrars, may declare illiterate a group of persons certified as qualified teachers by another state agency, the State Board of Education?

What does this say about ~~our~~ the so-called "separate-but-equal" system of education which ~~we~~ is so ardently defend as fair?

If, indeed, there is nothing wrong and nothing to hide from public scrutiny, why do state and local officials seek to hinder a thorough and honest investigation of the facts?

The Georgia Council on Human Relations, committed to our democratic form of government and believing in equal justice under law, urges our state officials to honestly examine these questions we raise.

9/12/58

The Department of Justice Is Smug Over the Terrell County Vote Case

By HAROLD DAVIS

Washington.

THE DEPARTMENT of Justice is feeling mighty self-satisfied about its lawsuit against the voting registrars of Terrell County, Ga.

Although they are lawyers over there at Justice and don't do much bragging about what they hope to do, a smack of anticipated victory hangs over the place.

On a visit there this week, this writer was told by a responsible official that Terrell County was selected with ease as the first place where the voting provisions of the Civil Rights Act of 1957 will be tested.

OTHER PLACES

Justice says it had several other places it could have filed its first suit — like Webster Parish, Louisiana, for example. But after only a modicum of consideration, the powers that be in the civil rights division decided Terrell was the spot.

Terrell County, of which this writer is a native and where his family and friends still live, has taken an all-out drubbing this spring and summer.

On Sunday, June 8, this writer picked up The Washington Post and Times-Herald and there in big, black letters on the front page was an "expose" of what the newspaper said were terrible conditions down in Dawson, the county seat.

The newspaper had dispatched an eager young reporter named Robert E. Baker to Terrell to look into charges of alleged police brutality and discrimination against Negroes in voting. Mr. Baker is The Post's racial expert.

He is the scion of an old Virginia family, and when he writes from the South as he did from Dawson, he signs himself Robert E. Lee Baker, in hopes, no doubt, that the spirit of Marse Robert will lend his imprimatur to what is said.

Anyway, Robert E. Lee Baker reported the uncontested fact that two Negroes had been killed by police and another had been hurt. It wasn't these facts alone that made his story sensational. It was the filler material he larded in between them.

Harold Davis is The Atlanta Journal's Washington correspondent.

Baker told his readers that an atmosphere of fear pervades the county and cited interviews with Negroes about how they were denied the right to vote. He really hammed it up.

Baker's story made a splash here and gave the Georgia congressional delegation quite a shock. It was read by members of Mr. Eisenhower's commission on civil rights, by the Justice Department people, and by all the hoards of others who buy the 390,000 copies of The Washington Post and Times-Herald.

It put Terrell County indelibly on the Washington map.

As many a Georgia politician has discovered to his sorrow, a big newspaper carries a respectable wallop.

A month or so later, Terrell County was mixed up in another little ruckus. The County Board of Education moved some equipment out of Negro schoolhouses and put it in white ones and wouldn't move it back.

ONCE MORE

To nobody's surprise, that made the front pages here, too. It put the name of Terrell County once more before Mr. Eisenhower's commission on civil rights, the Justice Department people, and the public at large.

With a reputation for being so notorious, it was inevitable that poor Terrell would get it first from the Justice Department. The county almost selected itself.

The department didn't have any trouble digging up more sensational facts down there. They discovered that on April 7, several Negroes tried to register to vote and were turned down as being illiterate.

Four of them were college graduates with good degrees, one had a master's degree and another was studying for one.

A key man at the Justice Department laughed and told this writer: "Nobody, not even a football player, can go through college and not learn how to read and write."

His attitude shows the Justice Department is figuring on having some fun out of this case. And poor Terrell County, its troubles are just beginning.

ATLANTA JOURNAL
ATLANTA CONSTITUTION
SEP 14 1958

File

TO THE OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES,
WASHINGTON D. C.

Dear Sirs:

Your attention is called to matters herein after set out which, I believe, concern the function of your office and toward that end your assistance is respectfully sought.

On Saturday morning, February 7, 1959, my father, Jim Harry Gibson, was arrested by the Sheriff of Terrell County, Georgia, on a charge of having received stolen goods. A specific characterization of the good illegally received was an overcoat which had been pledged bo my father, by another for cash loaned and services rendered, totaling, three dollars.

Thirty minutes subsequent to the above arrest I went to the office of the sheriff and inquired about bail for my father. Responsive to which I was told, by the sheriff, that the bail bond for his release was $1,000.00. Thereafter, I returned with a property owner of the community, acknowledged by the sheriff to be qualified to stand his bond, but that the sheriff stated that he was not at this time ready to release him. Twenty-four hours later, I requested of the sheriff that he be released on bail bond, still the sheriff redused and does now refuse. During the latter period my father was not allowed to see anyone.

Supplemental to the above facts, it is relevent, I should think, to mention that incidents of the above gravity have maintained over a period of 17 months. Starting with my fathers efforts to secure improved school facilities for Negroes in Terrell County and thereafter attempting to aid qualified Negroes to register to vote in that county.

Relevant too, is perhaps the fact that my mother, Irene Grace Gibson and I are petitioners in the registration suit brought by your office against the Board of Registrors of Terrell County, Georgia.

In my considered opinion a history of these repeated incidents are infringements and violations of my fathers civil rights as guarenteed by the Constitution of the United States.

Your assistance in this matter shall be greatly appreciated.

Yours truly,

Nancy L. Gibson

PROGRAM FUNCTIONS AS DEFINED IN THE STATEMENT OF POLICY AND AIMS
OF THE
SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

1. To create in each state a representative body of white and Negro citizens, to consider in full democracy the necessary steps toward genuine integration.

2. To serve as a convincing demonstration of Southerners working together as fellow citizens without regard to race.

3. To strive to create an atmosphere in which artificial distinctions and discrimination based upon race will no longer persist.

4. To stimulate local interest to work for local solutions in full democracy, in order that legislative and judicial rulings may be translated into justice in everyday life.

5. To seek practical solutions rather than spectacular pronouncements.

6. To encourage effective functioning of enlightened citizens through the civic life of their communities, rather than becoming a mass pressure organization.

7. To further its objectives through fact-finding, conference and persuasion, and through consultation with public agencies and officials.

8. To counteract appeals to prejudice and violence by demagogues, professional bigots and hate organizations.

9. To present the facts about the region and their implications.

ks/12/3/54

FUNCTIONS OF CENTRAL OFFICE

The most important function of SRC in this period of social transition is to open the lines of communication among all facets of Southern people without regard to their race, creed, socio-economic status, or national origin. Whenever national, regional, state, or community problems are being considered the interests of all citizens must be taken into account and all must be represented in the policy making group.

The Central Office should act as an instigator, coordinator, and reviewer of the activities of the state organizations on a diminishing basis in the time continuum. As with financial assistance, so with professional assistance, much aid must be provided in the early stages of the program.

There is a pressing need for constant and systematic evaluation of the program in terms of process toward the established goals and a constant re-evaluation of methodology, assumptions, and goals themselves by pragmatic experience. (see Appendix 1)

There is a need to spell-out and set down the basic assumptions under which the Council operates. Too many assumptions, too much knowledge from experiences are kept in the heads of the staff instead of the office files.

There is a need to more closely define the role and function of each staff member and the inter-relation of staff personnel. Job analysis and description is but a start of this process and should not be seen as an end in themselves.

There is a need for a realistic look at the situation, our resources (both professional and financial) to meet it, and the program of operation envisaged by Board and staff.

Memo . . . FROM THE DESK OF

. . . . FRED B. ROUTH . . . .

HCF at Program committee meeting 9 Dec 54.

THERE ARE BUT TWO BASIC COMMITTMENTS TO THE FUND FOR THE REPUBLIC:

1. To create on-going effective agencies in the the field of human relations in the 12 Southern states.

2. Financial: to raise indigenously certain sums of money for central and state operations.

December 10, 1954

MINUTES OF PROGRAM PLANNING COMMITTEE MEETING
December 9, 1954

Attendance: Morris Abram
Mrs. James Birnie
Philip Hammer
Miss Josephine Wilkins
Harold Fleming - staff
✓Frederick Routh "
Grace Hamilton "

The committee requested the staff to complete answers to the following questions as a basis for the committee's on-going work:

I. What are the specific and binding conditions of the grant to the SRC from the Fund for the Republic?

II. How is the overall program of the SRC developed?

A. What is the role of the Board?

1. How is the agenda for Board meetings prepared?

2. What information and materials are sent to Board members before Board meetings; and what materials and information are sent to Board members regularly?

B. What is the role of the Executive Committee?

C. What is the role of the staff?

III. What are the functions of the central staff and how are the responsibilities for these functions distributed?

A. What criteria are used to determine use of each staff member's time?

IV. How is program related to budgeting?

V. What steps are being taken to meet the SRC's obvious responsibilities in critical areas of the South like Clarendon County, S.C. and Prince Edwards County, Va.?

It was agreed that these questions should be typed and sent for further consideration to committee members and that a second meeting to review and complete the necessary questions would be scheduled.

 It has been suggested that the next meeting be planned for either Tuesday, December 14th, or Wednesday, December 15th, in order that this step may be completed.

We are sending you under separate cover a complete set of the memoranda which has been sent to SRC's members in the states.

rnf

CONSULTANTS FOR SRC STATE ORGANIZATIONS

COMPETENCIES:

A. Required:
1. Ability to quickly establish rapport with people.
2. Technical ability and skills in field of consultation.
3. Intimate knowledge of his area of state.

B. Desirable:
1. Experience in organizational work.
2. Professional training in the broad field of social sciences.
3. High degree of verbal ability.

Personality:

A. Required:
1. Committment to democracy (non-authoritarian).
2. Mature, integrated personality structure.

FUNCTIONS:

A. Communication and Information:
1. To serve as observer-recorder-reporter for state office.
2. To interpret program of SRC to area's "spark-plugs".
3. To keep abreast of developments in South through SRC publications, Southern School News, etc etc.,

B. Process:
1. To ferret out "spark plugs" in area and involve them in state organization. (Future Board members etc.)
2. To consult with state Executive Director and other consultants in planning state programs.
3. To work with state Exec. Director in programs in specific area.
4. To assist state Exec. Director in professional interpretation of program to state Board of Directors.
5. To keep finger on the pulse of the community he serves.
6. To help build a democratic climate of opinion in his area to prevent effectivness of demagoguery.
7. To work for an increasing committment and understanding of democratic process by Negro & white leadership.
8. To make himself and his services known and available to local officials, particularly public school people.
9. To assist local people who desire to inaugurate integrated democratic groups.
10. To assist people in thinking in terms of problem-solving rather than "togetherness for togetherness sake."

Board of Trustees
MAX F. MILLIKAN, President
JAMES PHINNEY BAXTER, 3d
PERCY W. BIDWELL
ROBERT R. BOWIE
HARVEY H. BUNDY
ERWIN D. CANHAM
JAMES TERRY DUCE
LELAND M. GOODRICH
LINCOLN GORDON
BRUCE C. HOPPER
MANLEY O. HUDSON
JOSEPH E. JOHNSON
JACOB J. KAPLAN
MILTON KATZ
JEROME PRESTON
TRACY S. VOORHEES
ARNOLD WOLFERS

LEONARD W. CRONKHITE
Trustee Emeritus

JACOB J. KAPLAN
Secretary-Treasurer

WORLD PEACE FOUNDATION

FOUNDED IN 1910

40 Mt. Vernon Street, Boston 8, Massachusetts

The activities of the Foundation are focused upon the task of making the facts of international relations available in clear and undistorted form

Staff

ALFRED O. HERO
Executive Secretary

ROSEMARY KLINEBERG
LILO L. SCHONBACH
Editorial Associates

December 28, 1959

Mr. Paul Rilling
Southern Regional Council
63 Auburn Avenue
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Paul:

I have finally returned to Boston and organized the comments of something like a hundred observers withwhom I discussed the problem of "The South and World Affairs". After discussing the matter with various adult educators at the national headquarters of the interested world-affairs organizations and with my own trustees, we have decided to write up what should be studied and who might do the work, submit it for comment to interested people, then assemble a committee composed of Messrs. Millikan, Joseph Johnson of the Carnegie Endowment, possibly several thoughtful heads of other national organizations operating in the South, and several intelligent Southerners interested in the project and well regarded in their region. The committee will help us to revise the proposal in final form for submission to the Ford Foundation and, possibly, Rockefeller Brothers Fund.

The attached draft is being circulated to interested people who will help us rewrite it. You will observe that your name appears prominently in Study IX, and that I have reorganized my thoughts considerably since our chat. It seems wise to combine the study of the whole congeries of programs designed to stimulate responsible thought on foreign affairs in the hands of one individual in order to assure constant standards, a unified approach, and minimum duplication. This does not mean that you need, in fact, to do all the leg work yourself. You might draw in others on an honorarium or hourly basis to gather information on programs of organizations with which they may be much more familiar than you. Along these lines, a recent conversation with Dorothy Robins indicates that I should upgrade my evaluation of her as one to look at women's groups. A reservation is, of course, her employment by a single agency operating in the South. On the other hand, I hear equivocal comments on Guion Johnson as a candidate for the task of dealing with Southern females. I did not get an opportunity to chat with Jean Russell. You will also observe that we hope to have a separate job done on clergy and religious organizations, so you may omit them.

You will note that I expect to look into a number of related matters in Study VIII; I shall certainly pass on to you pertinent observations for whatever use they may be. I have also gathered quite a bit of data about Southern programs from national headquarters of various organizations which I could pass on. I am particularly familiar with certain Jewish groups, the Council on Foreign Relations, the American Assembly, and the CED.

I have been informed by many observers that you are the best man to shoulder this chore, both by virtue of your talents and experience and due to your independence from the current programs in this business. You will also note that you are being asked to handle the "hottest" of the several studies, the one which is at the same time most likely to turn up with practical suggestions on what both national and local organizations ought to be doing over the next generation and to step on the toes of some of our associates who are emotionally identified with particular programs and particular individuals in the South. I have worded the attached draft so that you can put these comments on current, past, and potential programs into the mouths of other people - my impression is that the John Griffins, Carlton Pritchards, Ross Pritchards, Allen Gosnells, and others of similar talent are more or less agreed on what's wrong with some of the programs now going on and what kinds of people and institutions are most likely to spend a buck intelligently.

You should rewrite Study IX to your taste; you are much more familiar with your own commitments and the complexity of this task than anyone here. You may assume that we will not know before June whether we shall be supported or not and therefore that you and your helpers would not be able to start before the summer, at best. You may also assume that most of the studies in our package will probably take a couple of years to complete since no one will be working more than part time. Your rewrite should include your estimate of the expense of Study IX, to include honoraria or salary of whatever help you will need, travel and related costs, stationary, postage, etc., and a fair compensation for your own labors.

I hope you will be able to have your rewrite and its price tag in my hands by February 1. You might also recommend Southern candidates for the over-all committee who can both help to open doors in the South and provide some support if we are attacked by irresponsible elements.

Thanks in advance for your cooperation.

Cordially,

Alfred O. Hero
Executive Secretary

AOH/amw

Enclosures

Board of Trustees

MAX F. MILLIKAN, President
JAMES PHINNEY BAXTER, 3d
PERCY W. BIDWELL
ROBERT R. BOWIE
HARVEY H. BUNDY
ERWIN D. CANHAM
JAMES TERRY DUCE
LELAND M. GOODRICH
LINCOLN GORDON
BRUCE C. HOPPER
MANLEY O. HUDSON
JOSEPH E. JOHNSON
JACOB J. KAPLAN
MILTON KATZ
JEROME PRESTON
TRACY S. VOORHEES
ARNOLD WOLFERS

LEONARD W. CRONKHITE
Trustee Emeritus

JACOB J. KAPLAN
Secretary-Treasurer

WORLD PEACE FOUNDATION

FOUNDED IN 1910

40 Mt. Vernon Street, Boston 8, Massachusetts

The activities of the Foundation are focused upon the task of making the facts of international relations available in clear and undistorted form

Staff

ALFRED O. HERO
Executive Secretary

ROSEMARY KLINEBERG
LILO L. SCHONBACH
Editorial Associates

February 11, 1960

Mr. Paul Rilling
Southern Regional Council
63 Auburn Avenue
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Paul:

We have been encouraged to submit a draft set of proposals to the Taconic Foundation in time for preliminary consideration at its forthcoming Board meeting in early March. It would be helpful if we could have from you some general estimate of whatever you would like to see done under Proposal IX. In the event that you are interested in several alternatives, depending on the funds available, it would be useful if you could describe the alternatives in a few words, together with their respective price tags. We will press for the amount necessary to do what you wish to do, but we should know what is "negotiable" in case such dealings are necessary.

This does not mean that your actual procedure might not change somewhat from your description in this preliminary proposal, but it would help us considerably if we had thumb-nail descriptions and figures for these informal discussions.

Cordially,

Alfred O. Hero
Executive Secretary

AOH/amw

February 16, 1960

Via Air Mail

Mr. Alfred Hero
Executive Secretary
World Peace Foundation
40 Mt. Vernon Street
Boston 8, Massachusetts

Dear Al:

I am sorry to be so belated in responding to your letters, but things have been somewhat active in our field of work in recent months, as you may have noted.

I become increasingly doubtful concerning my role in your projected study of the South in world affairs education. I am most interested in your plans and would love to become involved in it, but the continued pressures of my job make me wonder whether I could do justice to the role you have assigned to me. I hope you will let me reserve the right to make a decision after the determination of the availability of sufficient funds sometime in June. The work here tends to slacken somewhat during the summer and I would probably be in a better mood to commit myself at that time anyway.

I am in approval of the plan outlined in proposal IX as contained in your original draft. I see no need to change the draft. I believe that were I to undertake this study plan, it could be achieved with the assistance of two consultants who would head up a survey of the work of the women's organizations and of university based adult education. I have some thoughts in mind of persons who could handle these aspects, but have not attempted to commit them pending further reactions from you and more certainty concerning the availability of funds.

I would suggest the following general budget for a two-year study:

1.	Consultants honorarium	$3,000
2.	Stenographic services	750
3.	Communications	600
4.	Travel for director and consultants	2,000
5.	Study director's fee	5,000
	TOTAL	$11,350

The study director's fee is based on the assumption that the equivalent of some 90 days would be required as a minimum and that much of this time would have to be taken during vacations or as leave time from present work.

You asked for Southern candidates for the overall committee. I don't have any particularly original thoughts on this. Most of the people I think of you are already familiar with, such as John Griffin, Carlton Pritchard, Cullen Goznell. Other thoughts would be Dr. Donald Strong, Political Science Department, University of Alabama, Mr. Don Hollowell, Negro attorney in Atlanta, Ralph McGill, Sylvan Meyer, editor of the Gainesville Times, Mrs. William Paulley, coordinator of world affairs discussion program here and prominent in women's and civic affairs in Georgia. This list is much too centered in Georgia. Let me know if you want me to make some effort to secure more names in other parts of the South.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Field Director

PMR/sm

Board of Trustees

MAX F. MILLIKAN, President
JAMES PHINNEY BAXTER, 3d
PERCY W. BIDWELL
ROBERT R. BOWIE
HARVEY H. BUNDY
ERWIN D. CANHAM
JAMES TERRY DUCE
LELAND M. GOODRICH
LINCOLN GORDON
BRUCE C. HOPPER
MANLEY O. HUDSON
JOSEPH E. JOHNSON
JACOB J. KAPLAN
MILTON KATZ
JEROME PRESTON
TRACY S. VOORHEES
ARNOLD WOLFERS

LEONARD W. CRONKHITE
Trustee Emeritus

JACOB J. KAPLAN
Secretary-Treasurer

WORLD PEACE FOUNDATION

FOUNDED IN 1910

40 Mt. Vernon Street, Boston 8, Massachusetts

The activities of the Foundation are focused upon the task of making the facts of international relations available in clear and undistorted form

Staff

ALFRED O. HERO
Executive Secretary

ROSEMARY KLINEBERG
LILO L. SCHONBACH
Editorial Associates

August 12, 1960

Mr. Paul Rilling
Southern Regional Council
Auburn Ave.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Paul:

I have recently returned from two months interviewing in the Southeast and am about to depart for two weeks there again. We have finally been notified by the Rockefeller Brothers Fund that they will be unable to support a study of world affairs in the South. They had previously been the most encouraging of the several foundations with which we had conducted discussions. Several proposals have been submitted to a number of other foundations but we feel that you and the other individuals interested in participating in the study we proposed should be informed that it appears that foundation support may be difficult to come by. It may develop that the over-all project is carried out, but on the other hand we would not be surprised if we were forced to limit the study to a relatively small part of the over-all proposal.

Sincerely yours,

Alfred O. Hero
Secretary

MH:lrb

August 16, 1960

Mr. Alfred Hero
World Peace Foundation
40 Mt. Vernon Street
Boston 8, Massachusetts

Dear Al:

Thank you for the progress report concerning the proposed project. I am sorry to hear that you have received discouraging news from the Rockefeller Brothers Fund.

I am glad to see that you are carrying through with your interviewing in the Southeast. I will be interested to hear from you from time to time concerning your progress.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Director of Field Activities

PMR/am

(DRAFT)

Proposal for a Study of the South in World Affairs

I. Proposal.

The World Peace Foundation is preparing for support by one or more major foundations a two-year study of the reactions of important segments of the population of the South (the former Confederacy, minus Texas west of Galveston, southern Florida, and parts of Virginia near the District of Columbia) to world affairs.

Whereas Senators and Congressmen from this region were, on the whole, more inclined than representatives of most other sections to favor active international policies until approximately ten years ago, larger proportions of representatives of the South than of any other region are now tending to support more nationalist, if not isolationist, policies, particularly those in the economic field. Survey and other data tend to show similar trends in public opinion in the South - for instance, whereas the proportion in favor of the Marshall Plan in 1947-1950 was larger in the South than elsewhere, the percentage currently in favor of economic assistance to underdeveloped countries is smaller in the South than in any other geographical section. Though the South is very heterogeneous with respect to interest and understanding of foreign policy, successive investigations of knowledge about world affairs have discovered that Southerners are statistically more ignorant of most international matters than are their compatriots in other sections. Diverse studies of exposure to international content in mass media indicate that the fraction of the Southern population which reads the more responsible literature is considerably less than elsewhere. Although these differences are attenuated when individuals of similar occupations in various sections of the country are compared, they seldom disappear even then. Serious programs on world affairs emanating from national radio and television systems are less likely to be scheduled in the South than in any other region, and Southerners are less apt to pay attention than other Americans even when such programs are locally available. Less resources per capita are expended on adult education in foreign affairs in the South than in any other part of the country, and a smaller proportion of the population are directly affected by such programs where they do exist.

Unfortunately, we know less about the international behavior of Southerners than about that of other Americans; relatively little empirical research has been focused on this problem; the social sciences in the South are not as developed as in most other parts of the United States; and financial support for such research has been of a relatively low order of magnitude. Mass media, organizations, and others in world-affairs communication and education have therefore little systematic knowledge as a guide for the designing of approaches to stimulate more responsible attention and thought with respect to foreign policy in the South.

We propose, therefore, a pilot study which would investigate the reactions of Southerners and their leaders to continuing major issues of American foreign policy, some important sources of those reactions, and potentially effective means of encouraging wider interest and more serious discussion and reflection on foreign affairs in that part of America.

II. Organization of the Study.

A. Auspices

The research will be under the auspices of the World Peace Foundation, whose Board of Trustees is composed of well-regarded persons from universities, research organizations, and various fields of practice in international relations. Active since 1910 in the study of foreign affairs and in the publication of critical literature in that field, the World Peace Foundation is currently sponsoring a seven-volume series of studies designed to organize existing knowledge in the social sciences relevant to the attitudes and behavior of major segments of the U.S. population toward foreign relations.[1]

B. Study Supervision

The proposed study will be under the general supervision of a committee chaired by the President of the World Peace Foundation, Mr Max F. Millikan, and composed of two particularly qualified trustees of that foundation, several of the most thoughtful leaders of organizations active in world-affairs education and communication in the U.S., and several individuals who are especially sensitive to international thought and action in the South. This study committee will submit the research design in final form for financial support to a major foundation, assist the several researchers wherever pertinent, coordinate the study as a whole through the staff of the World Peace Foundation, and select the final manuscripts for publication. Neither the committee nor the World Peace Foundation will be responsible for the views expressed in the research reports, which will be those of the several authors alone.

C. Direction

The study will be coordinated by Mr Alfred O. Hero, Executive Secretary of the World Peace Foundation, who also supervised the series of studies of citizen participation in international relations sponsored by the World Peace Foundation. Mr Hero is generally acquainted with many parts of the South and intimately familiar

---

1. Studies in Citizen Participation in International Relations, World Peace Foundation, 1959-1960. The seven volumes and dates or expected dates of publication are:

I. Americans in World Affairs - May, 1959
II. The Influence of Non-Governmental Groups on Foreign Policy-Making - April, 1959
III. Some Principles of Opinion and Attitude Change - July, 1960
IV. Mass Media and World Affairs - October, 1959
V. Voluntary Organizations in World Affairs Communication - February, 1960
VI. Opinion Leaders in American Communities - August, 1959
VII. Cross-Cultural Contact and American Attitudes Toward World Affairs - September, 1960 with limited sections within it. He was reared in the South, received his graduate training there, and performed considerable interviewing of Southern populations while a member of the staff of the Human Relations Research Office, G-1, Department of the Army, 1950-1952.

III. Foci.

More detailed descriptions of parts of the proposed study are attached (Appendices I-IX).

1) Mr Charles O. Lerche, Jr., Professor of Political Science at American University, intends to describe trends in recent years among Southern Senators and Congressmen with respect to legislation in important international fields. He will then attempt to trace sources of these trends by interviewing a small sample of Southern representatives in Washington, investigating the pertinent pressures operating on them in Washington, and studying certain relevant factors in their home districts.

2) The staff of the World Peace Foundation will inventory and synthesize existing data on attitudes toward world affairs in the South, on shifts in attitudes over the past fifteen years, and on exposure of Southerners to different sources of information and ideas in foreign relations. This proposal also includes provision for a new survey of international behavior and related variables focused on Southerners alone.

3) Messrs Wayne Danielson and John Adams, Associate Professors of Journalism at the University of North Carolina, intend to analyze the contents of a cross section of Southern newspapers, including several circulating primarily to Negroes, in order to describe the amount and prominence of space devoted to international matters, the quality of that coverage, and the tone of opinion expressed. This analysis of content will be followed either by interviews of a sample of the publishers and staffs of the papers studied or an essay by a leading Southern newspaper "statesman" in order to discuss both the forces contributing to the current treatment of foreign issues and possible directions of change among various kinds of newspapers.

4) The fourth investigation consists of a study of the international behavior of a sample of Southern businessmen, manufacturers, and bankers, to include their views on continuing issues, the sources of their information and ideas, and organizations and other vehicles capable of involving them in serious analyses of the international scene.

5) Mr Harold Isaacs, Research Associate at the Center for International Studies at MIT, intends to study the international behavior of a sample of Southern Negroes, to include their views and comprehension, the sources of their information and ideas, and major factors relevant to stimulating wider and more responsible attention to foreign relations among them.

6) The sixth investigation will apply itself to similar aspects of international behavior of a sample of Southern lawyers.

7) The seventh will include a survey of serious programs dealing with foreign relations in churches and church-affiliated groups in the South and an analysis of the international views and sophistication of a sample of clergymen and influential laymen in the three major Southern faiths - Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish.

8) Mr Alfred O. Hero, Executive Secretary of the World Peace Foundation, will study a sample of Southerners who are among the most interested and knowledgeable 0.5 percent with respect to foreign questions, to determine how they became so different from most of their associates, how they maintain their sophistication in this field, what their roles are in their respective social settings, to whom they communicate what they know about world issues, and their suggestions whereby national, regional, and local organizations may help them to expand the range of their influence on the views of their fellows.

9) Mr Paul Rilling will direct a study of past and present programs of voluntary organizations and educational institutions, insofar as they have aimed at enhancing public thought and comprehension with respect to foreign policy; also he will draw out the considered views of perceptive Southerners relative to the kinds of programs most likely to be effective in the future and the sorts of people and institutions most apt to execute such programs successfully.

The proposed study does not include all the complex aspects of world affairs behavior in the South which have actual or potential influences on the foreign policy of the United States. Such a study would be of considerably greater expense than the one proposed here. We have, for instance, omitted the quality of attention to foreign affairs in Southern high schools and colleges. A survey of the teaching of international relations in Southern institutions of higher learning has already been completed and published,[1] but no systematic analysis of the actual and potential impacts of Southern secondary schools has come to our attention. Nor will we devote much attention to trade unions in the South. Professor Walter Galenson of the University of California at Berkeley is currently surveying pertinent programs of labor unions throughout the United States and will devote some attention to Southern unions. We have also omitted specialized attention to rural elites, although we have included some of the most influential urban ones - newspapermen, lawyers, businessmen, and clergymen. Some peripheral investigation of rural leaders will undoubtedly take place within studies 1, 2, 6, 7, 8, 9, but we shall not attempt to study the international views, sources of information, and participation of a cross section of plantation owners, proprietors of large cattle farms, county (parish) political leaders, and the like. We have also omitted any study of the more subtle and indirect impacts of universities and colleges beyond their faculties and student bodies, though Study 9 will consider, inter alia, world-affairs programs of university extensions, business schools, and other formalized efforts to involve the adult citizenry.

1. Fred Cole, International Relations in Institutions of Higher Education in the South, Washington, D.C., American Council on Education, 1958.

Proposal I

I. Trends on International Questions among Southern Congressmen and Senators. Southern Senators and Congressmen have historically been more favorable to most active international policies than representatives of most other regions. However, during the past decade Southerners in Congress have tended to vote more and more in nationalist, if not isolationist, directions, particularly on international economic issues.[1] Each election seems to send a higher proportion of Southern isolationists or neo-isolationists to Washington; and formerly internationalist representatives who have not been unseated are frequently tending to approach their more isolationist newer colleagues in the voting behavior. A number of perceptive observers feel that the trend, rather than remaining static or receding, may well continue and thus render passage of legislation required for an active foreign policy more difficult than at present.

Various reasons have been advanced for this trend: 1) Cotton, tobacco, rice, and other agricultural products are relatively less

---

1. Generalizations to follow are from the following studies: Rowland T. Berthoff, "Southern Attitudes toward Immigration, 1865-1914," Journal of Southern History, 17, 1951, 328-360; Wayne S. Cole, "America First and the South," Journal of Southern History, 22, 1956, 36ff; Alexander DeConde, "The South and Isolationism," Journal of Southern History, 24, 1958, 332-346; Paul H. Douglas, "A New Isolationism - Ripples or Tide?" New York Times Magazine, August 18, 1957, 10, 54-56; George L. Grassmuck, Sectional Bases in Congress on Foreign Policy, Baltimore, 1951; Marian D. Irish, "Foreign Policy and the South," Journal of Politics, 10, 1948, 306-326; Malcolm E. Jewell, "Evaluating the Decline of Southern Internationalism through Senatorial Roll Call Votes," Journal of Politics, 21, 1959, 624-646; V. O. Key, Southern Politics in State and Nation, New York, 1950, 353; Charles O. Lerche, Jr., "Shifting Southern Political Attitudes toward U.S. Foreign Economic Policy," Paper presented at the 1958 meeting of the Southern Economics Association; Charles O. Lerche, Jr., paper presented at the 1958 meeting of the Southern Political Science Association; Samuel Lubell, Revolt of the Moderates, New York, 1956, 100-101, 223-224, 292; Duncan MacRae, Jr., "Dimensions of Congressional Voting," Berkeley and Los Angeles, 1958; Glendon A. Schubert, Jr., "Politics and Constitution: the Bricker Amendment during 1953," Journal of Politics, 16, 1954, 257-298; Paul Seabury, "The Waning of Southern Internationalism," Princeton, Center of International Studies, 1957; and Howard R. Smith and John F. Hart, "The American Tariff Map," The Geographical Review, 45, 1955, 337.

important to the Southern economy than heretofore, and whereas the elites involved with these agricultural products were formerly concerned with foreign markets, current Federal agricultural policies render interest in foreign sales less pressing. Moreover, the proportion of the population in agriculture has decreased sharply, eliminating a major countervailing force to economic isolationism. 2) "High tariff" industries, especially apparel and textiles, have moved South. The leaders of these industries not only want protection, but also feel that technical and economic assistance to underdeveloped countries will tend to produce competing foreign enterprises based on less expensive labor. Even producers of raw cotton fear that economic assistance to such countries as Egypt will increase competitive foreign cotton. Discovery of petroleum in Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama has likewise reinforced protectionism. 3) Southern mass opinion was never really internationalist. Hostility to "furriners" and outsiders generally has long been more marked in the South than elsewhere. True representatives of the masses, as distinguished from the rural gentry, have been isolationists in Washington for over seventy years. Knowledge of foreign affairs has been less in the South, even among elites, than among comparable segments of the population of other regions. In recent decades political machines have fallen more and more under the influence of demagogues of relatively humble origins who have little of the identification with internationalism of the aristocracy. These demagogues appeal to the "rednecks", both in the country and among the recent migrants to the city. Replacement of upper-class representatives by individuals of "Populist" or "business" support in recent years has meant a decrease in support for international legislation. Those traditional Senators and Congressmen still remaining, formerly relatively independent of pressures on foreign questions, are no longer free to act as "statesmen". 4) World affairs is seldom a public issue in Southern elections, whereas race invariably is. Particularly since the May, 1954, decision of the Supreme Court, Southerners have felt that pressures from the "outside" have demanded changes in the "peculiar institution" and they have therefore become more xenophobic and more apt to withdraw from foreign affairs. Several studies have found a close association between isolationist views and antagonism to desegregation. 5) Whereas economic assistance abroad was originally designated for Caucasian societies, it is now destined primarily to colored countries. 6) Southern internationalism in previous decades may have been a product of identification of the gentry with the British elite, of the generally greater bellicosity of Southern as compared with other masses (that is, for support of activist military policies), and of the desire for trade. Previous "internationalism" was seldom a sophisticated reaction to complexities of foreign affairs. 7) Southern representatives are predominantly conservative on fiscal matters, feel that national budgets should be spent on less privileged groups at home, and have been dubious of spending abroad even under Democratic Administrations. However, not only do they think that this spending has continued too long, but also they feel less pressure to support foreign economic assistance under a Republican Administration. 8) Likewise, Southern representatives resist awarding "excessive" powers to a Republican Administration, as indicated by their support of the Bricker Amendment. 9) Due to these and other factors, Southern representatives make "deals" with conservative Republicans, thereby supporting nationalist or neo-isolationist policies in which they have no direct interest.

However, none of these political, economic, and sociological explanations is entirely valid, as indicated, for instance, by two Senators from the same state taking quite different international positions. Personal inclinations of the individual representative must also be important in determining his international posture.

Mr Charles O. Lerche, Jr., formerly of Emory University, now Professor of Political Science at American University, proposes to to organize these disparate studies about Southern behavior in Congress and the individual and socio-economic-political bases for same, and then to investigate further the forces that have brought these changes about. A PhD from the University of North Carolina, Mr Lerche has spent much of his career at Southern universities and has recently presented two papers to the Southern Political Science Association and the Southern Economic Association respectively on trends toward economic isolationism among Southern representatives in the House.[1] He is the author of a recent book on the formulation of foreign policy in the United States.[2]

After extracting the findings of existing studies, Mr Lerche intends to trace trends on international issues not investigated thus far, such as participation in international organizations and regional alliances, military as compared with economic and technical assistance abroad, overseas defense commitments, military intervention (e.g., in Lebanon, support of MacArthur against Truman in Korea), arms limitation, and international exchange of persons. He will compare shifts in these spheres with those on trade and aid to see whether or not they have been simultaneous and among the same individuals. Mr Lerche then plans to select a small sample of three influential Congressmen (or Senators) from constituencies whose representatives have been and remain largely internationalist, three from districts whose representatives have been and have remained relatively isolationist, and three whose representatives

---

1. Op. cit.

2. Charles O. Lerche, Jr., Foreign Policy of the American People, New York, Prentice-Hall, 1958.

were formerly internationalist, but have become isolationist. He will then interview these representatives to determine their expressed explanations of why they vote as they do and why they may have changed. Mr Lerche then will gather available information about the pressures on these individuals from interest groups in Washington and in their districts. He will evaluate material on the nature of their constituencies, dealing with economic, political, and other factors. He will visit their districts, interviewing academic, mass media, and other perceptive observers of the relevant factors. He will evaluate some of the local sources of fact and opinion on foreign affairs, such as the content of newspapers, radio and TV programs, discussions in Chambers of Commerce, Rotaries, clubs, and other groups, and attempt to assess their effects on the Congressman concerned.

Although Mr Lerche will certainly not be able to consider all the complicated factors underlying the votes of individual members of Congress on all aspects of foreign policy, the results of his study should help educators and others to understand the nature of the problem and to stimulate responsible discussion and thought on international matters within influential segments of Southern opinion.

(DRAFT)

Proposal II

II. Trends in Mass Behavior in the South toward Foreign Affairs. Analysis of selected attitude surveys and audience studies tends to indicate that trends among Southern representatives in Washington are not unrelated to similar trends in public opinion in that region. For example, a larger majority in the South than in any other part of the country supported aid to Britain, the exchange of destroyers for bases, Lend-Lease shortly before our entry into World War II, freer trade in 1946, and the Marshall Plan in 1948-1950. On the other hand, recent surveys indicate that the South now contains the largest proportion of citizens opposed to long-term loans to underdeveloped countries, continued technical assistance and capital grants, particularly to such countries as India, Yugoslavia, and Poland, and other nations not formally allied with the United States. Southerners seem more inclined to agree with "Fortress America" statements and antagonistic stereotypes applied to foreigners. They appear to be more apt to support reduction of taxes through decreases in foreign economic commitments. They seem, on the whole, more opposed to or unfamiliar with analytical habits of mind applied to social and political issues, even when race is excepted.

Southerners have been repeatedly discovered to be statistically more ignorant, on the average, of most facts about basic foreign-policy issues than are the populations of other parts of the country. The more sophisticated the content, the lower the relative circulation of national printed media dealing with foreign affairs in the South as compared with elsewhere. For instance, Southerners are less than one-half as likely as other Americans to read one or more of the following: The New York Times, the Christian Science Monitor, The Guardian (Manchester), Harper's, the Atlantic, The Reporter, The Nation, or the New Republic. They are an even smaller fraction of the national audience for books on foreign questions. Fewer of them per unit of population read newsmagazines, and they are less inclined to read whatever foreign coverage appears in their own press than are their counterparts in other sections. Southern TV and radio stations are less likely to carry national programs dealing analytically with international problems. Furthermore, as compared with other regions, a smaller proportion of the population who could pay attention because they are within range of these broadcasts actually does. Southerners are statistically much less likely to participate in organizations, educational programs, and other vehicles involving responsible discussion of world affairs, and they are less inclined to talk about that field informally with family, friends, and associates.

These comparisons are derived from miscellaneous surveys and audience studies analyzed for the World Peace Foundation series, Studies in Citizen Participation in International Relations. It is proposed that the World Peace Foundation staff make a systematic inventory of opinion and audience data gathered since 1945, tracing trends in attitudes, interests, and knowledge over the last fifteen years. The Department of State sponsored a series of six studies of national samples every year from 1946 through 1957, which were executed by the National Opinion Research Center. These studies posed the same or similar questions over the years, permitting us to observe international attitude changes with occurrence of various international and domestic "crises", such as the Supreme Court decision on May, 1954. These and other surveys included from time to time questions on such subjects as race relations, labor-management relations, taxation, military service, religious fundamentalism, states' rights, "cultural" subjects, and other social and political issues, allowing analyses of the patterns of thought and action which tend to go with various international orientations.

Synthesis of audience research including the South could indicate the degree to which specified segments of the population, such groups as the better educated, or the higher income, or the urban versus rural, or the white versus Negro, etc., expose themselves to specific magazines, newspapers, and TV programs. This data has been gathered over time and its analysis could likewise provide insights on trends in tastes among different audiences. Finally, scattered intensive studies of small samples in the South are to be found among masters' theses and other unpublished material which might provide more profound understanding of international behavior of limited groups in individual communities.

If sufficient funds were available, a new survey could be designed to include questions on which national norms were available and then applied to a large (2000 or more) Southern sample by the Survey Research Center, National Opinion Research Center, or other appropriate agency. Most national samples have included too few Southerners to permit comparison of attitudes, knowledge, and other international behavior of different important segments of the Southern population, such as the urban professional, business, and proprietary elite with the rural elite, plantation sections with less traditional areas, Negroes with Whites of similar education, old with young, those born in the South with "carpetbaggers", etc. Some of the more sophisticated organizations interested in race relations, mental health, and other fields of research and action in the South could likewise make use of the results of such a survey if questions of interest to them were included. It is probable that discussions with other agencies would indicate additional matters on which questions might be posed.

A possibly somewhat less expensive alternative would be to insert questions in surveys which will be made of the South under other auspices, particularly during the forthcoming electoral campaign. In this way we could pay only part of the costs of the survey. However, such would undoubtedly be substantially less useful than a specially designed survey wherein we proscribed the sample and a battery of interrelated questions.

Whether or not such a new survey could be performed, we would interview a number of perceptive Southerners who might help us in interpreting the results of our analyses. For example, we would want to gain thoughtful impressions pertinent to the hypotheses that Southern Methodists and Quakers are much less pacifist on international questions than their co-religionists elsewhere, that internationalist "utopianism" is virtually non-existent, except among a few urban Protestant clergymen, that lower-class rural people who migrate to cities are in the majority opposed to further "spending" abroad, that rural cotton growers are adopting views hostile to economic assistance abroad and the protectionist attitudes of their customers (textile executives), and that Protestants and Catholics, if of similar education and social status, have similar international attitudes and media habits. We might determine whether many Southerners actually consider the race of proposed recipients of economic assistance, or think of economic and technical assistance as means of stimulating foreign competition with Southern products.

Finally, the report incorporating these findings would attempt to relate them to more general findings about Southern society noted in existing demographic, sociological, historical, and literary sources, such as the rigidity of social stratification, the role of women, the nature of Southern education, overtones of violence and "hell-of-a-fellowism" in certain social groups, rural and frontier values, and hostility to analysis from the "outside".

(DRAFT)

Estimated Expense in Addition to Labor of the World Peace Foundation Staff

Analysis of Existing Data

Retabulation of surveys	$4500
Travel and Related Costs	1500
Postage, Stationery, etc.	300
Total	$6300

Survey and Analysis of a Southern Sample of 2000 - approx. $16,000

(DRAFT)
Proposal III

III. Southern Newspapers and World Affairs. Undoubtedly, the majority of Southerners who have views on foreign policy gain them from local newspapers, popular magazines, local TV and radio transmissions, and informal conversations with associates. Study II, above, will organize existing data on popular magazines, TV, and radio. We know that Southerners, on the whole, are less apt to read any paper at all, are less inclined to read available foreign coverage in whatever papers they do read, are less likely to read editorials and columnists in the international field, are less apt to read about foreign affairs in more than one paper, rely less on newspapers for information on foreign policy matters, and that fewer of them than of inhabitants of other regions want an increase in foreign coverage in their papers.[1] Nevertheless, Southerners still learn much of the little most of them know about international relations from their local papers.

It is proposed that a cross section of Southern papers be analyzed over a period of several months for coverage of foreign affairs. The analysis should include papers from small cities as well as large metropolitan areas and several papers of predominantly Negro circulation, perhaps some 40 in all. It should consider the prominence of space allocated to foreign affairs, the kinds of coverage included and omitted, emphasis on important issues versus personalized trivia, and the tone of the editorials and columns on major international matters. The analysis might compare incoming UP and AP material with actual content of the papers. These content analyses might include papers in the nine congressional districts studied by Mr Lerche (Study I, above). The researchers could then interview a sample of publishers and editors of the ten most sophisticated and ten least sophisticated, or most isolationist, papers, attempting to draw out indications of the forces making the international coverage such as it is in the various papers, and hunches about influences which may bring about change. The interviewers might attempt to discover, inter alia, the relative importance these communications elites attach to public understanding of foreign relations, the degree to which they conceive of communication of foreign affairs as an objective of their papers, the interrelationship of local sensitivities to race relations and newspaper content on foreign policy matters, etc.

---

[1] Alfred O. Hero, Mass Media and World Affairs, Boston, World Peace Foundation, 1959, 103-104.

Associate Professors Wayne Danielson and John Adams of the School of Journalism at the University of North Carolina are tentatively interested in performing a study as is described above. Three other candidates with somewhat different backgrounds at other Southern institutions have also been proposed.

A possibly less expensive alternative to the interviews of policy makers of twenty papers would be a comment on the completed analysis of international content and tone of the approximately 40 papers by a Southern newspaper "statesman", such as John N. Popham of the Chattanooga Times, Robert Brown or Nelson Poynter of the St Petersburg Times, Wallace Carroll, formerly of the Winston-Salem Sentinel, now of the New York Times, or Harry Ashmore of the Fund for the Republic. Such a "think piece" might analyze why these papers are as they are and the probable forces that may bring about change.

(DRAFT)

Proposal IV

IV. American Foreign Policy and Southern Businessmen, Industrialists, and Bankers. As the South develops from an agricultural to an industrial economy, we may expect the number and relative influence of the business, manufacturing, and financial elite to increase, [illegible] Unfortunately, our knowledge of the international attitudes and actions of these Southerners is largely impressionistic.

Observations of diverse thoughtful Southerners indicate that we probably have serious cause for concern about the rather irresponsible views and relatively low sophistication with respect to international questions among many of the economically successful. One survey of textile executives and mill owners in a county within 60 miles of Atlanta found that over half the people working in textiles were employed by firms whose leadership was strongly protectionist.[1] Members of the faculties of the School of Business Administration of the University of North Carolina and the Department of Economics at Duke University estimate that the great majority of textile executives in North Carolina are of similar mind and that many of them would support a reduction in taxes through significant decreases in foreign economic assistance.[2] One North Carolina textile leader resigned from the CED due to a publication advocating freer trade. The indications are that North Carolina textile executives and owners may be "liberals" on international matters compared with their counterparts in South Carolina and Alabama. "House organs" and other communications emanating from some textile elites seem to be aimed at converting to protectionism both mill workers and growers from whom the mills purchase cotton. At least one such

1. Report of a Trade Survey by the League of Women Voters of Athens, Ga., 1956.

2. Especially Professors Willard J. Graham and Frank DeVyver of the University of North Carolina and Duke University respectively.

company paper makes the point that textile workers, cotton growers, and other Southerners are taxed to support technical and economic assistance to help underdeveloped countries to produce cotton and textiles to compete with theirs.

Many thoughtful observers fear that Birmingham may be the prototype for the future in the South. It has grown from a population of 26,000 in 1888 to well over half a million in 1960, largely through industrialization provided by Northern capital and controlled in the North; it has drawn in workers from among rural "woolhats"; it has produced a nouveau riche in a hurry, many of whom are rather unsophisticated, insecure in their social status, and lacking in the "aristocratic" traditions of older elites. Unfortunately, diverse observers consider Birmingham one of the most reactionary major metropolitan centers in America in a wide variety of social and public fields, and its business elite among the least responsible in their views on major national and international matters. They fear that rapid industrialization will produce more Birminghams. International orientations of many of the new oil rich in Shreveport, another fast-growing city, seem to support this hypothesis.

Even in the major port of the region, New Orleans, a much older community, well-placed observers feel that anti-protectionist views are general, particularly among those who benefit from foreign trade, but that support of trade is frequently a compartmentalized attitude on the surface of an otherwise very conservative personality. Thus, many of the local business community appear to feel that past waste in international economic assistance indicates that it should be severely curtailed, that the UN and its specialized agencies are, at best, ineffective, and, at worst, subversive of Southern ways of life, and that many of our allies will probably not fight when the chips are down and therefore we should concentrate more of our military budget here rather than in the Eastern Hemisphere. Few New Orleans businessmen seem to have much general knowledge or responsible views on major foreign questions.

Furthermore, audience research on such publications as Harpers, The Atlantic, The Reporter, the New York Times, and the Christian Science Monitor indicate that business, managerial, and proprietary strata in the South are, on the whole, considerably less likely than similar people elsewhere to expose themselves to such serious fare on world affairs. Southern businessmen, more often of rural backgrounds, seem to be more hostile to taxes; many of them appear to consider that reduction of foreign economic commitments is the best way to reduce taxes. There seem to be fewer countervailing forces acting to internationalize Southern businessmen than is the case in many other parts of the country. Moreover, many Southern businessmen seem little impressed by rather cosmopolitan, often liberally educated, internationally sensitive leaders of national corporations in the North, that is, businessmen who "sell out" to labor unions, accept "socialist" arguments, etc. Some Southerners talk of being taxed for spending abroad which benefits primarily the manufacturers of machinery, located outside the South, when this money could be spent on their "underdeveloped" area, the South.

On the other hand, various observers comment that some of the younger business, managerial, and financial people, particularly among migrants from outside the South, are interested in and relatively responsible about world problems. Some of these may even be found in the textile industry, though a number of transplanted Yankees seem at least as conservative on international matters as their Southern-born colleagues. The leadership of many of the larger concerns with national and sometimes international interests seems likewise relatively responsible on foreign matters - corporations such as Reynolds Metals, Scripto Pencil, Coca Cola, and Winn-Dixie Stores. Jewish economic leaders appear, on the average, to be considerably more thoughtful and sophisticated on international questions than comparable Gentiles.

Considering these random observations, a limited, but systematic, study of the international behavior of these influential people should be made. Depending on the individual running the study, the following seems a feasible line of action:

With the help of local informers in business schools, chambers of commerce, and elsewhere, choose a broad sample of relatively "successful" subjects representative of the major business, manufacturing, and financial fields in the South. The sample should include individuals with enterprises of exclusively local resources and markets, others with regional concerns, and still others with considerable economic involvement in national and/or international business. It should include such fields as textiles and apparel, consumer products, banking, utilities, lumber, construction, petroleum, retailing, and foreign trade, as well as branches of such national concerns as Freeport Sulphur, General Motors, Ford, and U.S. Steel. The sample should include some who were born and educated in the South and others who were raised and educated elsewhere, some who are "self-made" and others who inherited their affluence, some who expect to locate permanently in the South and others who will probably be transferred out.

A questionnaire, patently supported by individuals and institutions having prestige with the recipients, could be mailed to this sample of several thousand. Depending on the results of this questionnaire, a smaller sample of a hundred to a hundred and fifty could be selected and interviewed. Since the gaining of access and establishment of rapport with these Southerners will be major problems, relatively mature faculty members of prestigious Southern business schools should do the interviewing. If the director of the study did all of the interviewing himself, he would be obliged to make use of leads and insights provided by local business schools, chambers of commerce, etc., in approaching subjects. It might be preferable for him to interview primarily in geographical sections or industries with which he was already familiar, using interviewers from several different business schools to cover the several parts of the South or types of enterprises in the South. For example, Associate Professor Frederick S. Morton of the Graduate School of Business at the University of Virginia is best acquainted with enterprises in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia, and might be interested in concentrating his attention there. Professor John Fulmer at the School of Industrial Relations at Georgia Institute of Technology and/or Mr William Emerson, Chief of the Southern Bureau of Newsweek, would be particularly useful in and around Atlanta and Birmingham. Several candidates, one at LSU and the other at Tulane, come to mind for New Orleans, Shreveport, and possibly a semi-rural environment in Mississippi. Professor Frank DeVyver of the Department of Economics at Duke University, formerly vice president of a textile concern and somewhat of a specialist on the textile industry, might be asked to handle the textile men. At least half a dozen, and preferably as many as a dozen, communities should be studied through interviews.

The precise content of the questionnaires and interviews would be determined after some pilot interviewing and consultation with various observers of the Southern business community. The following aspects should probably be included: 1) The subjects's sources of information and interpretation of foreign matters - books, magazines, papers, electronic media programs, participation in voluntary organizations, universities, informal conversations with associates, etc. 2) His evaluations of such serious media as the Sunday New York Times and analytical magazines, and of such organizational programs as those of the CED, the Council on Foreign Relations, and its local committees, the FPA and its affiliates, the American and Southern Assemblies, and universities. 3) His views on such continuing issues as trade, economic, technical, and military assistance, active policies in international organizations, and a vigorous foreign policy in general. 4) What he does with his views on foreign affairs - efforts to influence mass media, organizations, and individuals. 5) Whether or not most of his associates agree with his international orientation. 6) His reactions to business and other acquaintances who are more knowledgeable on international matters than he. 7) The relation of his international behavior and his views on such matters as race, labor relations, taxes, etc.

The results of this study should help to describe the pattern of international behavior and some of its sources among Southern businessmen, and guide voluntary organizations in designing means of stimulating them to think more seriously in this field.

Proposal V

V. Southern Negroes and Foreign Affairs. Roughly 30 percent of the population of the South (by our definition) is still Negro. Only approximately a quarter of these Negro adults, largely in urban situations, now vote. The gradual enfranchisement of the remainder will bring the international orientations of the Negro population to bear on Southern politics and their reflection in Washington. We are only beginning to understand the views, sources of knowledge, and emotions with respect to foreign policy matters that Negroes are likely to bring to the polls.

As among other segments of the Southern society, the bits of information and the thoughtful impressions we have been able to collect about Southern Negroes tend to indicate that we should make a serious effort to comprehend the dimensions of their behavior toward the international scene. Successive surveys of opinion have indicated that Negroes, on the whole, seem to be more conservative on foreign questions than whites; for example, they seem to want funds devoted to economic assistance abroad to be spent on less privileged groups here; they are more inclined to apply negative stereotypes to foreigners; and they are less likely to support an active foreign policy generally. Negroes, on the whole, appear more ignorant of most foreign matters than is the general U.S. population. Successive studies of readership of serious material dealing with foreign affairs find that Negroes are severely underrepresented. Spot checks of diverse Negro periodicals tend to lead one to hypothesize that though there has been an increase in space devoted to foreign matters, particularly to Africa and other colored countries, much of this is trivial, such as reporting that "Socialite X was received at a cocktail party by Nkrumah", or "Entertainer Y talked with Nehru", and some of this international content seriously distorts balanced interpretations of international phenomena. Negroes are relatively few among listeners and viewers of analytical programs dealing with foreign affairs on radio and television. Some observers of the Negro scene fear that enfranchisement will tend to accord political influence to emotional, unbalanced, attitudes toward Africa and, possibly, other "dark" societies, as well as to press for less responsible foreign policies generally in favor of a further shift of attention to domestic questions.

Most of these statistical differences unfavorable to Negroes are reduced when Negroes and Whites of similar education and social status are compared. However, a study of 10,000 college graduates in 1947 indicated that Negroes in the sample at that time were less interested in world affairs, less exposed to serious discussions of foreign affairs, and more nationalist, conservative, or neo-isolationist on half a dozen major foreign questions.[1] A study now in progress of the Negro elite in New Orleans tentatively concludes that they are even more conservative on international matters than a comparable white sample in that city; well over half of these privileged Negroes favored severe curtailment of foreign economic assistance to reduce taxes and indicated other orientations demanding less vigorous foreign policies. The Negro Catholic elite, over half the sample, was particularly conservative on foreign affairs.[2] A number of Negro professors of political science, business administration, and social science at Southern institutions tend to agree to a considerable degree with a recent book, Black Bourgeoisie,[3] to the effect that "successful" Negroes tend to be even more oriented toward conspicuous consumption, social climbing, and "bourgeois" habits than comparable whites; these observers note

1. The Time Study, Bureau of Applied Social Research, Columbia University, 1947.

2. From a conversation with Professor Daniel Thompson of the Department of Sociology, Dillard University.

3. E. Franklin Frazier, Glencoe, The Free Press, 1957.

how difficult it has been to involve these elites in any serious discussions of international issues - they seem too busy making money and "showing off".[1]

These phenomena, if true, are due in large degree to the underprivileged position of Negroes in America, including the generally lower sophistication and greater emphasis on vocational skills of Southern Negro colleges. There seems considerable agreement among the most sensitive Negro intellectuals that, though improving, the atmosphere of most Negro colleges, as that of Negro society generally, gives little encouragement to interest in foreign affairs and intellectual pursuits generally - the learning of practical skills which will land a job is too important. Finally, both Negro and white adult educators throughout the South seem to agree that few Negroes seem interested in participating in thoughtful programs on foreign affairs, whether segregated or integrated.[2]

Fortunately, several competent scholars are interested in investigating this problem on a systematic basis. For example, Mr Harold Isaacs of the Center for International Studies at MIT is currently studying attitudes, knowledge, and communications behavior of Negro elites on foreign affairs, particularly with respect to Africa and to the relationship of their international attitudes to domestic race relations. He is interested in broadening his current

---

1. From conversations with Mr Samuel Westerfield, Dean of the School of Business, Atlanta University, Mr. Robert Martin, Professor of Political Science, Howard University, Mr William Howard, Associate Professor of Political Science, Florida A and M, Mr Daniel Thompson, Professor of Sociology, Dillard University, Mr Hugh Smythe, formerly Professor of Anthropology, Atlanta University, Mr Andrew Torrence, Associate Professor of Social Science, Tuskegee Institute, and others.

2. Conversations with Peter Siegle, Center for the Study of Liberal Education for Adults, Paul Rilling, Field Director, Southern Regional Council, John Benson, Assistant to the Director, Kellogg Center for Adult Education, University of Georgia, Hugh Smythe, formerly of Atlanta University, Daniel Thompson, Professor of Sociology, Dillard University, Andrew P. Torrence, Associate Professor of Social Science, Tuskegee Institute, Samuel Dubois Cook, Associate Professor of Political Science, Atlanta University, and others.

investigations to consider some of the aspects of interest to us which he had not previously intended to study. He would like to have a graduate student analyze systematically the international content of several Negro magazines and newspapers with considerable circulation in the South - his research has indicated that many literate Negroes derive a considerable part of their views therefrom. Such an analysis would observe changes in both subject matter and tone over the past decade; Mr Isaacs believes that attention to Africa has increased significantly in recent years. If the study described in II above takes place, particularly a new survey of a Southern sample, we will have an indication of attitudes and knowledge of the Negro masses in the South. Mr Isaacs would like to invite several perceptive Negro intellectuals in the South to organize existing data and make a limited number of interviews to improve his interpretation of quantitative material and to look into the degree to which Negro elites, universities, voluntary organizations, churches, civic groups, diverse mass media, and other sources communicate foreign affairs to important groups in Negro society. He would then like to make a new tour of the South, broadening his sample of Negro influentials, gathering impressions from Negro observers, and expanding his questions to aspects of international behavior he has not considered systematically before, such as vehicles whereby Negroes in various walks of life might be involved in serious discussions of foreign relations.

Proposal VI

VI. Southern Lawyers and Foreign Affairs. The legal profession in many sections of the South has a uniquely influential position. It tends to dominate political machines from the county or parish to the Congressional level; rural and small-town lawyers often have considerable prestige with their compatriots, sometimes being called "judge" even though they have no formal claim to that title; and they tend to be more active than businessmen, manufacturers, and financiers in a diversity of voluntary organizations dealing with public matters. Although Southern lawyers are, on the average, less inclined to participate in organized programs dealing with international relations than are lawyers in most other regions, a few of the more thoughtful of them are frequently one of the crucial groups involved in organizing and conducting such programs. Moreover, lawyers who are active in such activities tend to be better informed and less conservative than participants from the business, manufacturing, and banking community.

On the other hand, Southern lawyers are very diverse; undoubtedly the majority of them reflect the attitudes of their Southern clients. Faculty members at Southern law schools who have attempted to involve "successful" lawyers in meetings and other programs dealing in a responsible way with foreign-policy questions report an array of frustrating experiences. Those who have viewed lawyers in other parts of the country tend to say that the proportion of Southern attorneys informed, interested, and likely to become involved in foreign affairs is smaller than in most other locales, though such lawyers are a small minority everywhere.

We propose that a competent faculty member of a Southern law school, similarly intellectually inclined Southern lawyer in active practice, or a lawyer teaching or practicing outside the South who was raised in that region, perform a pilot study on influential

Southern lawyers with respect to foreign affairs. The researcher should be intimately familiar with the nuances of the Southern legal profession, connected with an institution or firm of prestige with Southern lawyers, and sophisticated in international relations.

Depending on the views of the researcher, a research design might entail enlisting the assistance of local law schools, Bar Associations, and others in order to select a sample of several thousand influential lawyers in different walks of life throughout the South. A questionnaire, perhaps similar to that used on businessmen (see IV above), could be signed by the necessary prestige symbols and circulated to this sample. Depending on the results of this questionnaire, the researcher might interview a sample of a hundred or more, drawing out their international views, evaluating their comprehension of basic international issues, pinpointing the sources of their interpretations (mass media, organizations, informal contacts, etc.), describing to whom, if anyone, they communicate their views and knowledge, and discovering leads for stimulating them to further thought on world affairs and, for the more thoughtful, to more active assistance in influencing political representatives and in communicating with their fellow citizens.

Proposal VII

VII. Clergy, Active Laymen, and Churches and Church-Connected Associations in World-Affairs Communication. Churches and church-associated agencies perhaps constitute the potentially most effective institutional vehicles for communicating understanding of foreign affairs to audiences below the small sophisticated elite in the South. A higher percentage of Southerners than of other Americans are affiliated with churches; they are considerably more likely than inhabitants of other regions to go to church on Sunday; and they are much more apt to attend church-sponsored meetings during the week. In small towns and rural sections the church frequently constitutes the only social activity outside the home for adults, particularly for women. In many agricultural communities virtually no leisure activity can "get off the ground" without church agreement, if not active support. Moreover, the indications are that Southern clergymen are, on the whole, more interested in international affairs than most other walks of life, university academicians, some journalists, and a minority of lawyers excepted. Southern clergymen who are interested seem frequently poorly informed, their interest springing primarily from humanitarian, ethical, and religious motives. However, they are apparently less inclined to be utopian than some of their Protestant colleagues in other sections (particularly Southern Methodists compared with other Methodists). Although many poorly educated ministers of fundamentalist orientations continue to show apathy, if not antagonism, to analysis of social and political issues within their churches, gradual education and urbanization are reducing their influence and increasing the sophistication of some of them. Moreover, allied groups, such as the United Church Women and the Women's Division for Social Action of the Methodist Church, are seriously interested in communicating better comprehension of foreign affairs. The latter, for example, included in world-affairs discussions in 1958 some 40,000 Southern Methodist women. Furthermore, the National Council of Churches is currently embarked on a major effort to communicate world affairs within Southern, as well as other, Protestant churches, and many of those connected with this program are judiciously optimistic about its impact in the South.

We propose that a critical study be made of the status quo and potentialities of world-affairs communication through Southern religious and religious-associated organizations, including Negro ones. The only systematic survey of adult education which has come to our attention was made of rural churches ten years ago, dealt only peripherally with foreign affairs, focused primarily on agricultural sections outside the South, and virtually omitted Negro churches.[1] A researcher, preferably of Southern background, who is sophisticated in international relations and in techniques of communication of international relations and familiar with Southern clergymen and churches should be secured to do this study. He should first gather as much information as available on local programs from national and regional headquarters and field representatives of religious bodies. He might then solicit the assistance of an interested social scientist in designing a questionnaire and selecting a broad sample of clergymen and active laymen. The objectives of the written survey would be to inventory existing world-affairs activities in Southern chruches and pertinent international attitudes and behavior of clergymen and active laymen. Either the same, or a separate questionnaire, signed by the proper individuals, might go to each of the three major religious groups - Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish. Depending on the results of the questionnaires, the researcher could do a more intensive study through interviews of a hundred or more clergymen and influential laymen in the three religious groups. Since the preponderant religious groups in the [1] Orden G. Shucker, "Adult Education in the Rural Church," in Charles P. Loomis (ed), Rural Social Systems and Adult Education, East Lansing, Michigan State College Press, 1953, 196-230.

South are Protestant, the researcher should probably be of that faith himself. However, since some 80 percent of Southern Catholics, southern Florida excepted, live near the Gulf coast between Mobile and Lake Charles, it might be desirable to have the interviews of priests and Catholic laymen made by Fr Joseph Fichter, S.J., of the Department of Sociology at Loyola University in New Orleans, Mr Philip Des Marais, Vice President of Dominican College in New Orleans, or a similar person. The former is currently studying some of the public and social attitudes of 4500 American priests, including Southern ones, and is seriously interested in the relationship of racial and public-affairs attitudes among Southern Catholics. He has also performed a study of Catholics in North Carolina while at the University of North Carolina Graduate School. The latter is a political scientist who is active in a diversity of local projects both within the Church and outside designed to stimulate public interest and thought in foreign relations. Similarly, the researcher might secure a perceptive Southern rabbi or other individual familiar with synagogues and Jewish religious leaders to interview Jewish subjects, unless he wished to do so himself.

The resulting report should provide a systematic critical inventory of world-affairs activities in Southern religious and religious-connected organizations, an analysis of the international sophistication, thought, and actions of Southern clergymen, a discussion of important factors relevant to communication of foreign affairs within different types of religious institutions, and suggestions for more effective lines of action.

(DRAFT)

Proposal VIII

VIII. The Internationally Sophisticated Southerner. The potentially most effective instrumentalities for stimulating more responsible thought on foreign affairs are the less than one-half of one percent of Southern adults who are already relatively interested, knowledgeable, and in contact with serious outside sources of information in that field. Some of these individuals have continuing rapport with less interested associates in their locales, contacts which no outside medium or individual can duplicate. In final analysis, virtually all successful programs in world affairs must depend on the support and efforts of these atypical people. Only one pilot study on the identity of these cosmopolitan citizens and their activities in a Southern town has come to our attention, and that a decade and a half old.[1] We propose a systematic investigation of these highly atypical Southerners in a variety of settings.

The synthesis of data on audience characteristics of serious literature dealing with foreign affairs organized during Study II, above, will produce some relatively firm generalizations about these people, plus a larger number of hypotheses to be investigated through interviews. Our next step would be to select a sample of eight or so communities or counties (parishes), based on multiple criteria: 1) Some where circulation of serious publications, viewership of analytical TV programs, and participation in responsible, high-content programs in foreign affairs per unit of population are relatively high, and some where audiences and participants are very few. 2) Communities as representative as feasible of the diverse "Souths" - traditional cities and fluid, rapidly growing cities, ports and inland cities, Protestant Anglo-Saxon sections and Latin Catholic sections, market communities, textile communities, and heavy-industry communities, plantation counties and "hill billy" counties, etc. 3) Some with large, "old", secure Jewish communities, others with small, isolated Jewish communities. 4) Some with large proportions of Negroes, others with few. 5) Preferably locales on which serious community studies have already been performed, thus providing advance information on community organization, social and communications stratification, and knowledgeable interviewees. Based on these multiple criteria, the following seem attractive candidates: New Orleans, two plantation and two "Cajun" parishes in Southern Louisiana, Natchez, a cotton-producing rural section in the Mississippi Delta, Birmingham, Camden and surrounding cattle and cotton areas in Alabama, Atlanta, Rome, Macon, York and surrounding area in South Carolina, Charlotte, a county in East Tennessee, and Memphis.

1. Frank A. Stewart, "A Sociometric Study of Influence in Southtown," Sociometry, 10, 1947, 11-31, 273-286.

The staff of the World Peace Foundation would assemble a diversity of "leads" to the interested and informed citizens of the communities selected. Subscription lists to such periodicals as the Sunday New York Times, the Christian Science Monitor, the Manchester Guardian, Harpers, Atlantic, The Reporter, The Nation, the New Republic, Foreign Affairs, The Foreign Policy Bulletin, the Headline Series, and Current History would provide a beginning. We would compare these with lists of active participants in such world-affairs programs as those of the Council on Foreign Relations and its affiliated Committees, the CED, the FPA and its affiliates, the American Foundation for Political Education, the Fund for Adult Education, university extensions, certain business schools, Leagues of Women Voters, AAUW's, and sections of the Council of Jewish Women. The resulting master list would be checked with Southern regional directors, field directors, and individuals in national headquarters of these organizations for further information. In those sample communities where participation in such programs and readership of such serious literature are zero or near zero (as is the case in the two "Cajun" parishes, the Mississippi Delta county, and Camden and environs), we would use subscription lists to Time and Newsweek, and possibly U.S. News and World Report (for comparison).

Mr Alfred O. Hero, Jr., of the World Peace Foundation staff would interview approximately 200 of these interested and relatively informed citizens. In communities where he has had no previous entrée, or where he knows none of the interviewees, he will be preceded by letters of introduction from pertinent outsiders to potentially helpful interviewees. He will interview all "informed" individuals available in the rural and semi-rural settings - his pilot investigation using the above approach produced only four in one southern Louisiana plantation parish and five in another nearby, and the majority of these individuals knew one another; he will probably experience difficulty finding as many as one or two in the county he has in mind in rural Mississippi, and not many more in and around Camden, Alabama. He will perhaps interview as many as twenty in the smaller cities, and forty diverse individuals in two or three large ones. In some cases several individuals may be interviewed together, reducing time and expense.

The interviewer will attempt to gain information on the following: 1) Approximately how knowledgeable about IR the individual is. 2) How he believes he became interested - undoubtedly in a social setting which did not encourage such concerns. 3) His sources of information on world affairs - books, magazines, outside and local newspapers, radio and TV programs, voluntary organizations, informal contacts, etc. 4) His reactions to world-affairs programs with which he is familiar, if any. 5) How he views his communications role in his locale and the degree to which he actually transmits world affairs beyond the handful of others of similar sophistication and interest in that field. 6) How concerned he is about local opinion on international matters and the behavior of his representatives in Washington. 7) What he would have world-affairs organizations, foundations, and other outside groups do in order to help him to comprehend international phenomena, to exchange interpertations with other knowledgeable individuals, and to improve his impact on local opinion and/on his political representatives. 8) If education, occupation, and social status do not come to light during the interview, they will be requested before departing. After interviewing the sample of interested and informed, the interviewer will spot check several individuals mentioned as among those to whom they communicated information or ideas on international issues to validate the interviewees' statements.

This study will inevitably be obliged to deal with the role of the Southern Jew in the sample communities and in Southern society in general. Though apparently somewhat less informed, intellectual, and exposed to analytical treatments of world issues than non-Southern Jews of similar status, Southern Jews are several times more numerous among readers of serious printed material and participants in world-affairs activities than one would assume from their numbers in the population. Mr Hero has already analyzed existing literature on the Southern Jew and is discussing this matter with a number of observers in the South and elsewhere. In interviewing Jewish subjects, the interviewer will attempt to discover how secure the interviewee feels in his community, the degree to which he may fear instigation of anti-Semitism and other undesired effects if he takes an active position in public affairs contrary to local norms (owner of a retail business in a town including but three Jewish families and dominated by a textile elite, for example), and his actual communication of world affairs beyond the Jewish group. The answers to the latter question will have to be validated among the Gentile community. The interviewer will search for differences on the above matters for different occupational groups, natives versus in-migrants, men versus women, large versus small, isolated Jewish communities, etc.

This study will likewise run into the question of the impact of the university professor on Southern thinking in foreign affairs, but we shall not have the time and resources necessary to study systematically this complex matter.

A sample as small as the one we have in mind will not provide data that can be handled well statistically. However, we believe that we shall produce considerably more trustworthy insights on the actual and potential roles of these thoughtful Southerners than is now available to world-affairs educators and other interested persons.

Estimated Expense in Addition to Labor of the World Peace Foundation Staff

Travel (approximately four trips from and to Boston)	$600
Hotels, meals, taxis, and miscellaneous expenses for a total of approximately one hundred days in the South	1600
Telephone, stationery, postage, etc.	300
Total	$2500

Proposal IX

IX. World-Affairs Adult Education in the South. We propose a systematic, critical analysis of past and current programs in the South designed to stimulate responsible thought on foreign affairs and a survey of the views of the most perceptive Southerners in this field on the kinds of programs, institutions, and individuals worthy of support in the future. Mr Paul Rilling, Field Director of the Southern Regional Council and formerly Coordinator of the American Foundation for Political Education in Georgia and Field Consultant of the Institute of Citizenship of Emory University, is interested in conducting such a study.

Since the impact of organizations devoted exclusively or primarily to international relations may be less than that of diverse groups for whom world affairs is only one of several interests, this research should not be limited to such bodies as the Foreign Policy Association, the Council on Foreign Relations, and the American Association for the United Nations. It should likewise include quality foreign-affairs programs, insofar as they exist, of such agencies as the Committee for Economic Development, the American and Southern Assemblies, university extensions, law schools, business schools, the League of Women Voters, the American Association of University Women, the National Council of Jewish Women, the American Jewish Committee, the American Foundation for Continuing Education, the Friends' Service Committee, the Cooperative Extension Services, libraries, foreign-visitors' centers, and those women's groups and service clubs which conduct serious programs. Church-connected groups will be studied by another investigation (Study VII), and labor unions in world-affairs education are currently under study by Professor Walter Galenson of the University of California at Berkeley.

Insofar as Mr Rilling is not already familiar with these operations, he will seek guidance from national and regional headquarters and interviews with knowledgeable individuals. He will coordinate the part time efforts of several investigators well acquainted with particular categories of agencies, such as women's groups, who may employ questionnaires, letters, interviews, and other methods for gathering and evaluating information.

Mr Rilling will be interested, inter alia, in the content of these diverse programs, their effectiveness from diverse points of view, the kinds of Southerners they attract and their probable influence on their participants and, indirectly, on others with whom the participants communicate, the ramifications for both Whites and Negroes of integrated versus segregated meetings, locally designed as compared with nationally produced programs and materials, methods of stimulating participation and later use of whatever is learned, and the relationships of race relations and participation in world-affairs programs (e.g., the hypothesis that race relations has absorbed the talents and energies of many who, if in other parts of the country, would probably be active in foreign affairs).

Mr Rilling, either simultaneously with the above critical evaluation or later, will consult with a cross section of the most experienced, effective, and thoughtful individuals in the South connected with world-affairs education and communication in order to draw out their suggestions for future activities in this field and their views on the qualities required in practitioners and organizations to carry them out effectively. His published report will include both the results of his critical survey and the consensus of views of the most qualified observers on the kinds of programs, individuals, and organizations most worthy of future support.

A PHI DELTA KAPPA COMMISSION PROJECT

ACTION PATTERNS IN SCHOOL DESEGREGATION

BY HERBERT WEY AND JOHN COREY

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
ROOM 432, 63 AUBURN AVENUE, N. E. ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA
JAckson 2-8764

HAROLD C. FLEMING
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

A Council to attain, through research and action, the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South.

August 22, 1957

MEMORANDUM

RE: Anticipated Public School Desegregation in Southern and Border States.

For your convenience and information, SRC has compiled the following summary material on previously all white schools which are expected to desegregate in September, 1957. We are also listing a further category of schools, some of which are prominently involved in litigation and some of which have received applications for admittance and face possible litigation. In this second category, there is apparently little likelihood of integration at the beginning of the academic year 1957-58, although in some instances there is a possibility of action leading to integration during the school year.

Schools and School Systems Planning Integration in September, 1957:

Arkansas	Fort Smith	Schools will start plan of gradual integration beginning with first grade level.
	Little Rock	Desegregation will begin at the high school level.
	Ozark	Ozark High School will begin desegregation at all high school levels.
	Van Buren	Under court order to desegregate in September.

Kentucky	Hopkins McCracken Scott Union Webster	Federal court orders requiring initiation of full desegregation programs were handed to these five counties. The last two were scenes of crowd disorders at Clay and Sturgis last fall.
Maryland	St. Mary's Co.	Desegregation will begin in elementary grades.
	Montgomery Co.	Two additional schools will desegregate.
Missouri	The following schools plan to desegregate:
	Butler Co.	Poplar Bluff High (two upper grades)
	Daviess Co.	Gallatin Elementary
	Jackson Co.	Independence Elementary
	Johnson Co.	Holden Elementary
	Laclede Co.	Lebanon Elementary
	St. Louis Co.	Eureka Elementary
	Washington Co.	Potosi Elementary
North Carolina	Charlotte	The Charlotte school board announced assignment of five Negro students to previously all white schools: Harding High, 1; Alexander Graham Jr. High, 2; Piedmont Jr. High, 1; Central High, 1.
	Greensboro	The transfer of five Negro students to Gillespie School (elementary and junior high levels) and one Negro student to Senior High School was approved by the Greensboro school board.
	Winston-Salem	One Negro student was assigned by the school board to Reynolds High School.

Oklahoma	Kinta District	This district will desegregate for first time.
	Marietta District	Desegregation is planned for September.
Tennessee	Nashville	First grade integregation in all Nashville public schools is scheduled for September, in compliance with a federal court order.
Virginia	Arlington Co.	Arlington County is under District Court order to abolish segregation in September; however, the District Court did not authorize parents to ignore the requirements of state pupil placement laws. If Virginia's Pupil Placement Act is used to bar Negroes from admittance to integrated school system, and if these cases are brought into court, the constitutionality of the Placement Act will then be considered.
West Virginia	Hardy Co. Mason Co.	Desegregation in these counties, planned for September, will leave only two counties, Jefferson and Hampshire, with segregated school systems.

Schools in Which Integration Action is Pending at Present Time:

*Delaware	All Districts	All presently segregated districts have been ordered by the District Court to integrate, and requested to ready a plan for the desegregation operation before fall term, 1957. The State Board of Education is seeking an appeal to the Circuit Court. This action will, in all probability, preclude any integration activity this fall.
Florida	Dade County	The Fifth Circuit Court reversed the decision of the District Court (which had dismissed a school entry suit). A decision by the school board as to their choice between two alternatives - preparing for trial or asking the Supreme Court to review the ruling - has not yet been made.

	Palm Beach Co.	An application suit was dismissed by the District Court on the ground that the applicant wanted to move outside of his normal school district. This decision is being appealed.
Kentucky	Allen Co. Anderson Co. Barren Co. Christian Co. Edmonson Co. Gallatin Co. Garrard Co. Spencer Co. Warren Co.	These nine Kentucky counties have plans for desegregation but dates have not been announced, as far as we can determine.
*Louisiana	New Orleans	The city school system is under Court Order to integrate; however, the order is being contested on a legal technicality. No planning has been done for integration in September.
North Carolina	Bryson City	Applications of six Negro students were refused by school board. There are no indications that the action will be reversed, unless the statement that if protest is made "the school board will probably hold another meeting" implies some chance of reversal.
	Caswell Co.	Forty-three Negro students have applied for admission to previously all-white schools for the fall term of 1957. The applications, "and possibly others," are expected to come before the Board of Education this fall.
	Chapel Hill	The application of one student was rejected. At the present time the parent is undecided as to whether he will appeal the ruling.

	Old Fort	The McDowell County Board of Education rejected applications of 66 Negro students on the ground that applications were not on proper forms and should have been filed with the principal of Old Fort School.
	Raleigh	One request for admission was refused. A hearing before the School Board has been requested by the parents, as a preliminary step to court action.
South Carolina	Clarendon Co.	No time limit was set in the court order specifying integration in Clarendon County.
Texas	Dallas	Under court order to desegregate, but with no specific time indicated A policy statement will be made by the school board in August.
	Galveston	Plans to desegregate in September, 1957, were halted by an act of the state legislature prohibiting further integration except by approval of the district's voters in an election. No case testing the validity of this law has been filed.
	Houston	A suit has been filed asking District Court to set a definite date for integration. No subsequent action has been reported.
	Mansfield	Federal District Court has ordered Mansfield to integrate, but no actual integration has been accomplished and no plans announced
	Port Arthur	Plans to desegregate in September were halted by state legislature; see Galveston.
	Stanford	Plans to desegregate in September were halted by state legislature, see Galveston.
Virginia	*Charlottesville	The District Court will withhold desegregation decree until the U. S. Supreme Court has acted on the state's Pupil Placement laws. The Supreme Court does not reconvene until October 7.

*Newport News	Circuit Court orders to desegregate have been stayed pending Supreme Court action on pupil placement laws of the state. Schools will open on a segregated basis, since no action will be taken by Supreme Court prior to October.
*Norfolk	Circuit Court desegregation was stayed pending Supreme Court action, as in the case of Newport News.
Prince Edward Co.	Under court order to desegregate, but no definite time has been set.

---

*Schools or districts in which possibility of integration action appears more immediate.

AUGUST, 1950
Vol. 5 No. 8

New South

All material presented in New South may be used freely by other publications. A credit line will be appreciated.

Freedom to Serve

New Policies in the Armed Forces

EVER since the beginning of World War II, the military services have been increasingly preoccupied with the question, How can Negro servicemen best be utilized? The question, it should be noted, is not regarded by the services as primarily a moral one. Their main concern lies in making the most efficient use of all personnel and, at the same time, maintaining a high degree of morale. When it came to Negro servicemen, this seemed an almost impossible dilemma to some military leaders. They were prepared to admit that racially segregated units resulted in inefficiency and waste of skills. But they were also convinced that abolishing segregation would bring about friction, impaired morale, and further loss of efficiency.

What the services have discovered in the past few years is that the dilemma was an artificial one — it did not really exist at all.

As the United States once more enters a period of at least partial mobilization, the role of the Negro serviceman will be importantly changed. All three of the major services have modified their policies to admit Negroes to the full range of training, jobs, and military units. The new policies — and how they were developed — are described in a report of the President's Committee on Equality of Treatment and Opportunity in the Armed Services, published in May, 1950. The Southern Regional Council here presents a summary of that report.

An important step in this process of discovery came in 1948 when the President issued his Executive Order 9981. The order stated: "It is hereby declared to be the policy of the President that there shall be equality of treatment and opportunity for all persons in the armed services without regard to race, color, religion, or national origin. This policy shall be put into effect as rapidly as possible, having due regard to the time required to effectuate any necessary changes without impairing efficiency or morale."

Committee Appointed

To implement this policy, the order also established the President's Committee on Equality of Treatment and Opportunity in the Armed Services, made up of distinguished citizens who had demonstrated their leadership in both administration and human relations. The job of the Committee was to advise and assist the armed services in developing policies which would achieve the objective set by the President.

On May 22, 1950, the Committee issued its first report, a summary of the progress made to date. The report, entitled "Freedom to Serve," tells a remarkable story. It is an account of how the armed services' policies with respect to race have been virtually transformed in the last few years.

At the very start, the Committee ran head-on into two basic assumptions that had long determined military thinking about Negro utilization: (1) Negroes do not have the education and skills to perform efficiently in the more technical military occupations; and (2) Negroes must be utilized, with few exceptions, in segregated units in order to avoid grave difficulties.

Meeting the military on its own premise and considering the question purely from the viewpoint of military efficiency, the Committee had serious doubts about this reasoning. It conceded that, owing to lack of educational advantages, Negroes as a group do not measure up to the same standards of skill and ability as the white population. But, it asked, does this group difference justify denying to the individual Negro — solely on the grounds of race — the opportunity to qualify for, and serve in, any job whatsoever? At the same time that segregation deprived the skilled Negro of equal opportunity and deprived the service of his skill, it also magnified the inefficiency of the unskilled majority by concentrating them in separate units.

The second question still remained to be dealt with: that is, Would the break-down of segregation result in even greater loss of efficiency because of impaired morale? For an answer to this question, the Committee examined the Navy's experience.

The Navy

Since February, 1943, the Navy has gradually been integrating Negro sailors in general service, as contrasted with the old practice of limiting Negro enlistments to the messman's branch. The Navy's revision of policy went through several phases. First, Negro sailors were assigned exclusively to shore installations and harbor craft. As the influx of Negro selectees increased, however, the Navy found that it could not provide employment for all of them in these limited assignments. In late 1943, as an experiment, two ships were manned with Negro crews under white officers. As a next step, the Navy assigned Negroes to the crews of 25 auxiliary ships of the fleet, limiting the assignments so that Negroes would not make up more than 10 per cent of any given crew. The success of this experiment led to the opening up of all auxiliary fleet vessels to Negroes, and, in 1946, the Navy took the remaining step of opening up all general service assignments without restriction.

The order declared: "Effective immediately all restrictions governing types of assignments for which Negro naval personnel are eligible are hereby lifted. Henceforth, they shall be eligible for all types of assignments in all ratings in all activities and all ships of the naval service. . . . In the utilization of housing, messing and other facilities, no special or unusual provisions will be made for the accommodation of Negroes."

No Racial Friction

Had the Navy experienced any difficulty as the result of its policy of assigning men solely on the basis of individual ability and the needs of the service? The Committee asked this question not only of commanding officers but also of petty officers and lower grades, both white and Negro. All of those questioned replied that there had been no racial friction.

The thing that most impressed the Committee about the Navy's experience was that in the relatively short space of five years the Navy had moved from a policy of complete exclusion of Negroes from general service to a policy of complete integration in general service. In this about-face, the Navy had not been primarily motivated by moral considerations or by a desire to equalize treatment and opportunity. Chiefly, the Navy had been influenced by considerations of military efficiency and the need to economize human resources. Equality of treatment and opportunity, the Navy had discovered, was a necessary and inevitable condition and by-product of a sound policy of manpower utilization.

The Navy's experience was revealing, but some military officials doubted that it was conclusive. Negroes, they pointed out, made up only 2 per cent of the sailors in general service. The proportion in the Army and the Air Force was much larger, ranging between 7 and 10 per cent. Would integration prove as satisfactory with that relatively greater percentage of Negroes? The affirmative answer was supplied by the experience of the Air Force, whose Negro strength was between 7 and 8 per cent.

The Air Force

During World War II the racial policy of the Air Force was that of the parent Army — a 10 per cent restriction on Negro enlistments, utilization in segregated units, and greatly limited job opportunities. By the end of the war many high-ranking officers in the Air Force were convinced that the concentration of almost all Negroes in a relatively narrow range of duties had deprived the service of many skills which were lost by reason of segregation. But they did not begin to find a way out of this dilemma until the President issued his executive order in July, 1948. Then the Air Force set to work to evolve a policy which would simultaneously improve the efficiency of the service and extend equality of opportunity to all personnel.

The net result was a new policy, announced in May, 1949, which read in part as follows:

"There will be no strength quotas of minority groups in the Air Force troop basis . . .

"Qualified Negro personnel may be assigned to fill any position vacancy in any Air Force organization or overhead installation without regard to race . . .

"All Air Force personnel will be considered on the basis of individual merit and ability and must qualify according to prescribed standards for enlistment, attendance at schools, promotion, assignment to specific duties, etc.

"All individuals, regardless of race, will be accorded equal opportunity for appointment, advancement, professional improvement, promotion and retention in all components of the Air Force of the United States."

Within six months' time, this new policy was in almost complete effect throughout the Air Force. And the President's Committee found it was working well. Almost without exception the commanders interviewed by the Committee's staff stated that they had put the new policy into effect with some misgivings. They did not for a moment question the accuracy of Headquarters opinion that "the traditional utilization of Negro manpower primarily in Negro units has contained certain elements of waste and inefficiency." But they doubted whether, in open competition with whites, many Negroes would be able to qualify for technical positions, and they questioned whether the gain in manpower utilization would be worth the trouble they expected to result from assigning Negroes to white units.

Without exception commanding officers reported that their fears had not been borne out by events. A far larger proportion of Negroes than expected had demonstrated their capacity to compete with whites on an equal basis, to absorb highly technical school training, and to perform creditably in their subsequent assignments. Furthermore, commanders testified that racial incidents had diminished, rather than increased, since the new policy had gone into effect. With all schools and jobs open on a basis of merit, officers were no longer plagued with complaints of discrimination. Some officers who candidly stated their personal preference for the old ways nevertheless volunteered that the new program benefited the service and caused less trouble.

The Army

By the end of World War II, the Army had come to the conclusion that its policy over a long period of years had not proved satisfactory and that changes must be made in the utilization of Negro troops in the postwar Army. To this end, the Army convened a special board of general officers, known as the Gillem Board, and charged it with submitting recommendations to the Secretary of War and the Chief of Staff.

In the winter of 1945, some 2,500 Negro soldiers from the supply services had answered a call for volunteers for front-line duty. These Negro volunteers had been formed into platoons and assigned to white companies. The combat performance of these platoons had effectively established the feasibility of integration at this level without difficulty. The Board acknowledged the success of this experiment in its conclusions:

"Experiments and other experience of World War II indicate clearly that the most successful employment of Negro units occurred when they were employed as units closely associated with white units on similar tasks, and a greater degree of success was obtained when small Negro organizations were so employed."

Recommendations

On the basis of this and other evidence, the Gillem Board made six principal recommendations:

(1) Negro units in the postwar Army should in general conform to white units.

(2) Qualified Negroes should be used in overhead units.

(3) A staff group in Army Headquarters and in every major command should be created to supervise racial policy and practice.

(4) Periodic surveys of manpower should be made to determine positions that Negroes could fill.

(5) Re-enlistment should be denied to the "professional private" (men of low qualifications who habitually re-enlisted and, in the case of Negroes, kept the 10 per cent quota filled.)

(6) There should be experimental groupings of Negro and white units.

Three years after the Gillem report, the President's Committee found that there had been little progress toward the goals set up by the report. Moreover, in the Committee's opinion, segregation and the 10 per cent quota on Negro enlistments made the achievement of those goals virtually impossible. As a result, the Committee made further recommendations to the Army, which were adopted early in 1950. The most important points of the new policy are as follows:

Present Policy

"Army school quotas . . . will make no reference to race or color. Selection of personnel to attend Army schools will be made without regard to race or color. . . .

"Military Occupational Specialties will be open to qualified enlisted personnel without regard to race or color. . . .

"In furtherance of the policy of the President . . . it is the objective of the Department of the Army that Negro manpower possessing appropriate skills and qualifications will be utilized in accordance with such skills and qualifications, and will be assigned to any (overhead) or (organized) unit without regard to race or color."

As a final step, in March, 1950, the Army abolished the quota system limiting Negro enlistments to 10 per cent of total strength.

The Army's job of integration is a considerably larger one than either the Navy or the Air Force faced. Negro soldiers at the beginning of 1950 constituted between 9 and 10 per cent of total enlisted personnel. Many of them were in all-Negro combat and combat support units which formed part of the immediate striking force. The Committee agreed that all of these Negro units could not be broken up immediately, but that consideration must be given to the number of men involved and the time required to screen, train, and reassign them.

It is still too early to appraise the effect of the Army's new policy. But Freedom to Serve concludes by saying: "The Committee firmly believes that as the Army carries out the Committee's recommendations which it has adopted, then within a relatively short time Negro soldiers will enjoy complete equality of treatment and opportunity in the Army."

Bigotry and Fighting Men

THE inconsistency of race hatred and bigotry with our democratic ideals has seldom been put more concretely than it was by W. H. Lawrence in a recent issue of the New York Times Magazine. Writing from Korea, Mr. Lawrence said in part:

"For this correspondent, fresh from the politics-as-usual (or even worse-than-usual) atmosphere of the recent South Carolina primary election, another contrast is apparent between these two worlds: a contrast of the unworthy and the finest moments of democracy. In Carolina two men fought for a seat in the United States Senate, offering as their principal qualification the ability to uphold white supremacy and oppose the program of the President of the United States.

Answer to Bigotry

"Here in Korea white, black and yellow men, under the direction of the same President, are fighting and trying to uphold the principle that men of whatever color should be free to govern themselves in a democratic society and not be subject to a totalitarian communism imposed by force of arms. . . . But while waiting for transport I saw the most convincing answer to the racial appeals of the Carolina politicians. An ambulance plane from the Korean front, allowed to take off because of the urgency of its errand, rolled to a stop on the airstrip where Red Cross ambulances were lined up. The walking wounded came out.

"The first man off the plane was a big Negro rifleman with a patch over one eye. Then a sandy-haired white man wearing a crucifix and clutching his wounded arm. There were several others, black and white, and then the litter patients, about equally divided.

"Here they were united in the bond of sacrifice, suffering and fighting in a battle so that some yellow men could rule themselves. It was a far cry from the rantings of Johnston and Thurmond on the theme that only white men were fit to rule and that Negroes must always play a subordinate role to a white master. . . .

"With disgust I recalled the terribly low level struck by both candidates for senator from South Carolina.

Hatred Is Taught

"It seemed hardly possible that the same country in which such appeals for high office could be made also furnished these black and white men I had seen fighting and dying and suffering together so that yellow men could be free to run their own lives. A song from my favorite musical, 'South Pacific,' furnished a partial clue: 'You've got to be taught to hate.'

"These kids obviously had not been taught to hate each other or anybody else for that matter. A few more days of combat would give them the bitter incentive to kill their North Korean enemies. But the common sacrifice and suffering they are enduring should keep them from ever hating each other over the circumstance that one has a skin of different color from another."

The Chattanooga Times sounded a related note in an editorial of August 17.

"One of the brightest chapters in Korea," declared the Times, "is being written by Negro troops attached to the 24th Infantry Regiment on the southern tip of the defense line. Their military proficiency and bravery under fire is worthy of the highest praise . . .

"These soldiers are a credit to their race and to their nation. They reveal the perfidy of those who said Negroes would never fight for America, would never take up arms against Communism.

"They stand and fight and die as proof that love of country and devotion to democratic ideals knows no barrier of race, creed, or color."

The Slum-Clearance Plan That Wouldn't Quit

THIS is the story of a city with a slum, a plan to replace it with decent public housing, a few people determined at all costs to block the plan, and some other people who wouldn't give up.

The place was Marietta, Georgia, a hustling city of 26,000 about twenty miles north of Atlanta. Mariettans are proud of the fact that theirs is "the fastest growing city in Georgia." They are proud of the new industry and new business which have located there since the war. They are proud of the progressive attitudes that have characterized the city administration.

Slum Housing

But one thing they are not proud of is the slum housing in the Mulberry-Cole Streets area. There, ninety Negro families live in over-crowded, dilapidated shacks. In many cases, the only sanitary facilities are outside toilets shared by several families. The area is infested with rats, flies, and mosquitoes, which breed in abundance amid the filth and decay. City and county health authorities have warned of the danger of epidemics, the fire chief has pointed to the fire hazard, and others have called the area a spawning ground for crime and delinquency.

To make matters worse, this collection of unsightly hovels is located just behind the Fifth Ward's fashionable white residential section fronting on Cherokee Street.

Fortunately, Marietta has a Housing Authority which faced the same problem before and found a solution. That was in 1940 when public indignation over slum conditions was at high pitch. The solution was two federal housing projects, Clay Homes (for whites) and Fort Hill Homes (for Negroes). There was bitter opposition then, as now, to the idea of public housing, but the proponents won out and Marietta became the first small city in the United States to acquire any considerable amount of public housing.

Various individuals and groups played an important part in the success of the housing effort a decade ago, among them the crusading Cobb County Times and, of course, the Housing Authority itself. But no one contributed more energy, influence, and determination than did then Mayor L. M. Blair. As the moving spirit of the slum-clearance program, Mayor Blair earned for himself the local title "father of public housing." Here is what he had to say later about Clay and Fort Hill Homes: "The other people of the community, who have not lived in these projects, will certainly welcome the news that, in these two areas, there has not been a single serious crime committed since their erection, that living conditions have been improved a thousandfold and that they have not been a burden on either the local government or the federal government."

Housing Authority's Plan

With this background, it was not surprising in the spring of 1950 when the Marietta Housing Authority took steps to wipe out the city's worst slum and replace it with a low-rent federal housing project. Nor was it surprising when prompt and violent opposition to the move appeared. One thing was surprising, though: Heading the opposing forces, unrivalled in his eloquent condemnation of this "socialistic" plan, was none other than former Mayor L. M. Blair. Once the initial shock had worn off, however, even this turned out to be not so surprising. Mr. Blair and his fellow objectors, it appeared, all owned sizeable chunks of property on Cherokee Street and elsewhere in the well-to-do vicinity of the slum area.

Negro Property Owners

It should be understood right off that the controversy was not split along racial lines. Along with Blair and other white persons, a number of Negroes were also opposed to the slum-clearance project. They too were property owners in the Mulberry-Cole Streets area and had been led to believe that they would receive for their property only a token payment of $500 each. The Housing Authority sought to reassure them by pointing out that local appraisers had recommended a total of $120,000 for the purchase of sixty lots.

Some of the white opponents' arguments took a different turn. "Congregating 125 Negro families in the backyard of a decent, respectable white district," they maintained, "would harm both whites and Negroes." The fact that Negroes were already congregated there, and under the most appalling conditions, apparently caused these gentlemen no misgivings. In their view, if the Housing Authority's plan were put into effect, property in and around the disputed area would be devalued, and that was reason enough why the project should either be built elsewhere or not be built at all.

The quality of these objections was not sufficient to impress the Housing Authority, also made up of local citizens. The Authority had some reasons of its own for insisting that the Mulberry-Cole Streets area was the logical site. These were some of them:

(1) The Mulberry-Cole Streets slum was an eyesore and a menace to the health and well-being of the community.

(2) That site would satisfy the dual purpose of the public housing program — to provide new units and to replace an equivalent number of substandard dwellings.

(3) Without that site, federal approval for a forty-year self-liquidating loan of approximately $1,000,000 would be jeopardized.

(4) The charge of "socialism" was nonsense, since the development would be financed by sale of bonds to private individuals and the development would ultimately be owned by the local Housing Authority.

For these and other reasons, the Authority stood firm by its decision. But the objectors had only begun to fight, and their first weapon was ready at hand. They appealed to the City Planning Commission to forbid rezoning of the Mulberry-Cole Streets area for multiple-unit housing — an essential first step for the Housing Authority. After a hearing marked by heated debate, the Commission ruled against the Housing Authority, holding that Marietta's "master zoning plan" would be disrupted by any rezoning of the contested area.

Fruitless Appeal

The executive director of the Housing Authority, Ed Baskin, was not slow to react. He pointed out publicly that the Commission's policy would rule out the project altogether, since the only areas in the city zoned for multiple-unit housing were those already occupied by apartment houses; if all rezoning was barred, there would not be sufficient space anywhere. So Baskin took the case to the next highest authority, the Zoning Board of Appeals. On June 7 that body upheld the Planning Commission, and the only recourse left was the City Council — or the people themselves.

It was widely believed that City Council, under the provisions of state law, had authority to overrule the Planning Commission and approve rezoning of the disputed area without further ado. But that was not the decision. Instead, the Council voted five-to-two in favor of a city-wide referendum on the question, to be held July 14. A clear expression of the will of the people, it was felt, would put an end to the controversy for good and all. And so it might, but it was not to be achieved without an effort. For on July 1 the Cobb County Superior Court granted an injunction to L. M. Blair and 59 others forbidding the city to carry out the proposed referendum. The injunction had been sought on grounds that the amendment to the city charter under which City Council acted was unconstitutional.

Mayor's Secret Weapon

It was at this apparent impasse that Sam Welsch, the present mayor of Marietta, stepped vigorously into the picture. Mayor Welsch had favored the referendum from the start and, in spite of the injunction, was determined that it should not go by the board. In fact, he had already publicly declared that if the injunction petition was granted, he would employ a "secret weapon" to make the referendum possible. Now, with the date of the forbidden referendum less than two weeks away, Mariettans waited doubtfully for the mayor to loose his mysterious blast. Loose it he did, though it was not the revolutionary move that might have been expected. Actually it was an old, time-honored custom: The Mayor was going to stage his own private straw vote.

The opposition filled the air with cries of "Foul!" Welsch, they said, was violating the law, flouting the court's injunction. The mayor answered that he was doing nothing of the sort. The injunction, he asserted, applied only to the holding of an official referendum utilizing tax money and city employees. "If a man uses his own funds," he added, "he can poll anyone at any time on whatever question he wants answered. When a court can stop that, we no longer have a democracy."

In any case, the private referendum was held. And, when it was over, no one was in doubt about how the public felt. Of the registered voters who turned out for the poll, 1,458 voted for the slum-clearance program and only 72 against it.

The overwhelmingly favorable vote was particularly embarrassing to the Councilman from the Fifth Ward, who was stoutly opposed to the plan—who was, in fact, employed as attorney by the opposition. Before the poll, he had rashly declared he would resign from the Council if his ward did not vote against the slum-clearance proposal; the vote in the Fifth Ward was 497 to 51 in favor of the proposal. When reminded of his offer, the Councilman replied, somewhat feebly, that many of those opposed had not voted at all, out of respect for the court injunction. His critics uncharitably reminded him that he was elected to office by a vote of only 242, less than half the number that had voted for the housing move.

Inspired by the unequivocal expression of public sentiment, City Council quickly passed an ordinance rezoning the Mulberry-Cole Streets area. The path was cleared for slum clearance and public housing.

As July came to a close, it looked mightily as though underprivileged Negroes in Marietta were going to get some decent housing.

NEW SOUTH

Published by

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

63 Auburn Avenue, N. E.

Atlanta 3, Georgia

Paul D. Williams.....President
Guy B. Johnson.....Vice-President
Carter Wesley.....Vice-President
Harold L. Trigg.....Vice-President
John H. Wheeler.....Vice-President
Charles S. Johnson....Chmn. Exec. Com.
George S. Mitchell....Executive Director
Mrs. Norma Huff.....Sec.-Treas.
Harold C. Fleming....Dir. of Information

Subscription rate.....$1.50 a year

ATLANTA, GEORGIA, AUGUST, 1950

To attain through research and action programs the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the region.

Armed Forces
J S Mat.

INTEGRATION
and
THE NEGRO OFFICER in the Armed Forces
of the
UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

MARCH
1962

Armed Forces

1963 STAFF REPORT

FAMILY HOUSING AND THE NEGRO SERVICEMAN

Submitted to the
UNITED STATES COMMISSION ON CIVIL RIGHTS

ASSAULT

UPON FREEDOM OF ASSOCIATION

ASSAULT UPON FREEDOM OF ASSOCIATION

A Study of the Southern Attack on the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People

AMERICAN JEWISH CONGRESS

15 East 84th Street New York 28, N. Y.

From - Equal Employ't Oppty

Jan, 1953 -

p. 53 -

"In proportion to population, Negroes participate to a greater degree than whites (in the labor force) because a larger ratio (sic) of Negro women must work to supplement the family income.

See - Table 8, p. 105

With the dwindling of jobs for unskilled people, persons w/o sufficient training to undertake skilled occupations will be unemployable.

DR. J. M. NABRIT
1/15/58

Hope, John III —
"The Problem of Unemployment as It Relates to Negroes," Section 8 (pp 173-225) in Studies in Unemployment, prepared for the Special Committee on Unemployment Problems, U.S. Senate, 86th Congress. 1960. Washington. U.S. Gov't Printing Office. $1.50

Buckley, Louis J.
"Discriminatory Aspects of the Labor Mkt of the '60's" — INTERRACIAL REVIEW, March, 1961

See —
The American Dream..
Equal Opportunity
Report on the Community Leaders' Conference Sponsored by PCEEO 5/19/62

pp. 30 – 34 –
for articles on minority youth, their employment, and their education.

Also – esp. pp. 36–37

(OVER)

BE SURE TO NOTE EWAN CLAGUE'S OPENING Pgh's - page 54

MANPOWER REPORT

Reissued March 1963

INDUSTRY EMPLOYMENT GROWTH SINCE WORLD WAR II

A high rate of employment growth is a fundamental requirement if the American economy is to provide jobs for its increasing population and also continue to raise the standard of living of its workers. The growth of American industry in the past has been one of the sources of American strength, but the growth in the past 5 years has raised questions regarding its adequacy. Moreover, the growth which has taken place has led to changes in the structure of employment which pose a challenge to workers seeking to adapt to industry's job needs.

Between 1947 and 1962, the number of nonfarm workers in the United States increased by more than one-fourth with the addition of 11.4 million jobs to the economy. The gross national product rose by two-thirds in real dollars. Earnings of factory workers rose from about $50 per week in 1947 to close to $100 in 1962. Even with price increases discounted, the gains in factory workers' earnings were substantial, amounting to 45 percent between 1947 and 1962.

These advances, however, were concentrated in the first decade of this 15-year period. Industry employment growth during the past 5 years, in fact, has not kept up with the performance of the previous 10 years, either in magnitude or composition.

During the past 5 years, from 1957 to 1962:

The rate of job growth slowed down appreciably in the private sector of the economy.

Between 1947 and 1957, private nonfarm industries increased their employment by an average of 700,000 jobs, or 1.7 percent, each year; from 1957 to 1962 the annual rate of gain fell to 175,000 jobs, or 0.4 percent.

Structural changes were also taking place which added to the problem of reemployment of displaced workers.

As the rate of job growth slowed down, there was a speedup in the long-term shift in the pattern of job growth, away from the output of goods and toward more services. The proportion of all workers in the goods-producing industries—agriculture, manufacturing, construction, and mining—fell from 51.3 percent in 1947 to 45.9 percent in 1957, and to 41.8 percent in 1962 (table 3). The rate of decline in the latter period was two-thirds greater than in the earlier period.

And the overall rate of economic growth and employment also moved down.

From 1947 to 1957, the gross national product rose by 45 percent in constant dollars, or at an annual rate of 3¾ percent. During the past 5 years, however, the increase in GNP has amounted to about 15 percent, or an annual rate of 2.9 percent. The slowdown has occurred primarily in the output of goods and in construction. (See table 1.)

An even greater slowdown in growth is reflected in employment. Between 1947 and 1962, the number of wage and salary workers on nonfarm payrolls rose to 55.3 million, a gain of 11.4 million, or 26 percent. Of this rise, 21 percentage points were gained in the 10-year period following 1947, and 5 percentage points in the past 5 years. The annual rate of increase in the last 5 years (0.9 percent) was only about half the rate during the previous 10 years (1.9 percent). During the early pe-

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR: W. WILLARD WIRTZ, SECRETARY
OFFICE OF MANPOWER, AUTOMATION AND TRAINING: SEYMOUR L. WOLFBEIN, DIRECTOR

Annual Rates of Industry Employment Growth, 1947-57 and 1957-62 1/

1/ Data used for 1947 and 1957 are annual averages of monthly totals; those for 1962 are preliminary averages.

2/ Employment represents payroll employees in nonfarm industries and total employment in agriculture.

riod, an average of 900,000 new jobs (including government) was being added to nonfarm employment each year; during the recent period, the yearly increase was about 485,000. Moreover, the composition of this growth has changed radically. Between 1947 and 1957, 76 percent of the job growth was in the private sector of the nonfarm economy, the remainder in government; between 1957 and 1962, only 36 percent of the job growth has been in the private sector. (See tables 2 and 4.)

Table 1

GROSS NATIONAL PRODUCT, BY MAJOR TYPE OF PRODUCT 1947–57 AND 1957–62

Gross national product	Output (billions of dollars, 1954 prices)			Annual rate of increase (percent)
	1947	1957	1962[1]	1947–57	1957–62
Total GNP	282.3	408.6	471.5	3.8	2.9
Goods	163.3	223.4	247.1	3.2	2.0
Services	94.7	141.2	173.2	4.1	4.2
Construction	24.3	44.0	51.2	6.1	3.1

[1] Preliminary

Employment Distribution

These different rates of growth have resulted in significant changes in the distribution of employment. As noted before, in 1947 the goods-producing industries (agriculture, manufacturing, mining, and construction) accounted for 51.3 percent of all industry employment; in 1957 they accounted for 45.9 percent; and by 1962 the proportion had been reduced to 41.8 percent. These proportions represent a significantly faster rate of decline from 1957 to 1962 than in the previous period. By contrast, very rapid job growth—accounting for an increasing share of total employment—has been taking place in State and local governments, in the service industry and in finance, insurance, and real estate. The big increase in government employment is mainly in the school systems, reflecting not only population growth, but the rising demand for a better educated labor force.

The effect of recessions is one important explanation for the decline in growth and the shift in industry pattern: We had two recessions during the first 10-year period and two during the most recent 5-year period. Each recession affected mainly the goods-producing industries. Large numbers of production workers were laid off during each business downturn, and employment levels were never fully restored during the subsequent recoveries as a result both of rapid changes in technology and the lack of new gains in product demand.

However, in considering the periods as a whole, including both the recessions and the recoveries, it seems apparent that the private sector of the economy during the past 5 years has not continued to

Table 2

CHANGES IN EMPLOYMENT BY INDUSTRY SECTOR 1947–57 AND 1957–62

Industry sector[1]	Employment (in thousands)			Annual employment change
				1947–57		1957–62
	1947	1957	1962[2]	Amount (thousands)	Rate (percent)	Amount (thousands)	Rate (percent)
Total nonfarm employment	43,881	52,904	55,325	902	1.9	464	0.9
Industries of recent job growth[3]	21,233	27,738	31,306	651	2.7	714	2.5
Private	15,759	20,112	22,121	435	2.5	402	1.9
Government	5,474	7,626	9,185	215	3.4	312	3.8
Federal	1,892	2,217	2,341	33	1.6	25	1.1
State and local	3,582	5,409	6,844	183	4.2	287	4.8
Industries of recent job decline[4]	22,648	25,166	24,018	252	1.1	−230	−0.9
Agriculture	8,256	6,222	5,190	−203	−2.8	−206	−3.6

[1] Nonfarm employment totals are based on establishment payroll data; agricultural employment on household survey data.
[2] Preliminary.
[3] Industries of recent job growth in the private sector comprise: service and miscellaneous, trade and finance, insurance and real estate.
[4] Industries of recent job decline comprise: manufacturing, mining, contract construction, transportation and public utilities.

provide new jobs at the same rate as during the decade following World War II. Most of the industries which provided the lift to the job market in the first postwar decade have either slowed down or declined during the past 5 years. For the entire period since the end of World War II, the industries of major job growth in the private economy were construction, trade, services, and finance. But in both trade and construction the principal advances took place before 1957; since then, employment growth in trade has slackened substantially, and there has been an actual decline in construction.

Table 3

DISTRIBUTION OF INDUSTRY EMPLOYMENT (INCLUDING AGRICULTURE) 1947, 1957, AND 1962

Industry	1947	1957	1962[1]
Total (including agriculture):
Number (thousands)[2]	52,137	59,126	60,515
Percent	100.0	100.0	100.0
Goods-producing industries	51.3	45.9	41.8
Manufacturing	29.8	29.0	27.7
Durable goods	16.1	16.7	15.6
Nondurable goods	13.7	12.4	12.1
Mining	1.8	1.4	1.1
Construction	3.8	4.9	4.5
Agriculture	15.8	10.5	8.6
Service-producing industries	48.7	54.1	58.2
Transportation and other utilities	8.0	7.2	6.5
Trade	17.2	18.4	19.1
Finance, insurance, and real estate	3.4	4.2	4.6
Services and miscellaneous	9.7	11.4	12.8
Government	10.5	12.9	15.2
Federal	3.6	3.7	3.9
State and local	6.9	9.1	11.3

[1] Preliminary.

[2] Represents payroll employment in nonfarm industries and total employment in agriculture.

NOTE: Sum of individual items may not add to totals because of rounding.

Service

Only the service industry has continued to expand employment at close to its former rate; this industry which includes personal, business, and professional services, has shown a total rise of more than 50 percent between 1947 and 1962. In the finance, insurance, and real estate industries, where total growth has amounted to about 60 percent since 1947, recent gains (since 1957) have been at a slower rate.

One of the accompanying features of the growth in service-type employment is reflected in a slowdown in the expansion of full-time scheduled jobs. While total nonagricultural employment (wage and salary and all other) increased by 6.6 percent, or 3.9 million, between 1957 and 1962, the number of workers on full-time schedules[1] increased by 2 million, or by 4.1 percent. In other words, only one-third of the employment increase since 1957 represents work on jobs having full-time schedules. Much of this undoubtedly represents the needs of the workers; many of the large numbers of women entering the labor market in recent years have been attracted by the availability of part-time jobs. However, it is not known to what extent full-time jobs would have been filled had more of them been available. Moreover, the nature of the increases in employment in recent years has a bearing on the extent of economic growth we have experienced.

Government

Only in the public sector of our economy has there been any increase in the rate of job growth since 1957 as compared with the earlier period. The growth in government employment has been overwhelmingly at the State and local level and primarily in the school systems. Other public services have also required more workers as the population has expanded and our cities and urban areas have grown.

Each year between 1947 and 1957 State and local government employment grew by an average of 4.2 percent, accounting for 187,000 additional jobs yearly; each year from 1957 the growth rate has averaged 4.8 percent or 287,000 additional jobs yearly.

Manufacturing

Rates of employment growth in the largest sector of our economy, manufacturing, are difficult to appraise since recessions and prosperity alike have affected employment in this sector more drastically than elsewhere. However, between 1947 and 1957, both relatively good years, the manufacturing industries added 1.6 million new jobs, an increase of 10 percent; since 1957, the number of workers in manufacturing has declined by 425,000 or 2.5 percent.

The net result is, that over the entire 15-year period, the proportion of manufacturing employment to total nonfarm payroll employment declined from 35.4 percent in 1947 to 30.3 percent in 1962. Moreover, the brunt of these lost jobs was borne entirely by production workers; in the past 5 years alone, their number decreased by a total of 775,000.

[1] That is, those actually working 35 hours or more per week, and those who could if they chose to work full time. The latter are usually full-time workers who are on part-time for noneconomic reasons.

White-Collar Versus Blue-Collar Workers

During the postwar period, employment of blue-collar production workers in manufacturing has fluctuated sharply, tending in general to decline, while the number of white-collar jobs within this sector has continued to increase. Manufacturing industries, which employed 13.0 million production workers in 1947, employed only 12.4 million in 1962. During the same period factory output rose by 80 percent. One reason for this dramatic increase in output with fewer workers lies in the equally dramatic rise in the importance of workers supporting the production workers. These nonproduction workers—executives, office personnel, engineers, and scientists—who help develop the improved techniques making greater production possible, have risen from 2.6 million in 1947, 16 percent of total factory employment, to 4.3 million, or 26 percent of the total, in 1962.

Nonproduction workers in manufacturing have increased even during the past 5 years while total manufacturing employment has declined. However, the greatest rate of gain in nonproduction workers occurred during the 1947–57 period, at an annual rate of 4.5 percent, while during the past 5 years, annual nonproduction worker growth has slackened to about 1.7 percent.

Other Industry Sectors

The remaining major sectors of the private economy are primarily those which are contracting—agriculture, which now has 37 percent fewer workers than in 1947, transportation and other utilities, which is 6 percent lower (mainly because of declines in the past 5 years), and mining, which is down by 32 percent.

By Herman Travis
and
Richard Seefer
Division of Manpower Analysis and Reports

Table 4

EMPLOYMENT CHANGES IN NONFARM INDUSTRIES AND IN AGRICULTURE, 1947–57 AND 1957–62

Industry sector[1]	Employment (in thousands)			Annual employment change
				1947–57		1957–62
	1947	1957	1962[2]	Amount (thousands)	Rate (percent)	Amount (thousands)	Rate (percent)
Total Nonfarm Employment	43,881	52,904	55,325	902	1.9	484	0.9
Manufacturing	15,545	17,174	16,750	163	1.0	−85	−0.5
Durable goods	8,385	9,856	9,443	147	1.6	−83	−0.8
Ordnance and accessories	27	140	215	11	17.9	15	9.0
Lumber and wood products	845	655	607	−19	−2.4	−10	−1.5
Furniture and fixtures	336	374	381	4	1.1	1	0.4
Stone, clay, and glass products	537	595	572	6	1.0	−5	−0.8
Primary metal industries	1,279	1,355	1,166	8	0.6	−38	−3.0
Fabricated metal products	989	1,167	1,118	18	1.7	−10	−0.9
Machinery	1,375	1,586	1,459	21	1.4	−25	−1.7
Electrical equipment	1,035	1,344	1,528	31	2.7	37	2.6
Transportation equipment	1,275	1,909	1,645	63	4.1	−53	−2.9
Instruments and related products	267	342	358	8	2.5	3	0.9
Miscellaneous manufacturing	421	387	393	−3	0.8	1	0.3
Nondurable goods	7,159	7,319	7,308	16	0.2	−2	(3)
Food and kindred products	1,799	1,805	1,772	1	(3)	−7	−0.4
Tobacco manufactures	118	97	89	−2	−1.9	−2	−1.5
Textile-mill products	1,299	981	881	−32	−2.8	−20	−2.1
Apparel and related products	1,154	1,210	1,235	6	0.5	5	0.4
Paper and allied products	465	571	602	11	2.1	6	1.1
Printing and publishing	721	870	933	15	1.9	13	1.4
Chemicals and allied products	649	810	850	16	2.2	8	1.0
Petroleum and related products	221	232	196	1	0.5	−7	−3.3
Rubber and plastic products	323	372	389	5	1.4	3	0.9
Leather and leather products	412	373	361	−4	−1.0	−2	−0.6
Mining	955	828	647	−13	−1.4	−36	−4.8
Contract construction	1,982	2,923	2,696	94	4.0	−45	−1.6
Transportation and public utilities	4,166	4,241	3,925	8	0.2	−63	−1.5
Trade	8,955	10,886	11,571	193	2.0	137	1.2
Finance, insurance, and real estate	1,754	2,477	2,793	72	3.5	63	2.4
Services and miscellaneous	5,050	6,749	7,757	170	2.9	202	2.8
Government	5,474	7,626	9,185	215	3.4	312	3.8
Federal	1,892	2,217	2,341	33	1.6	25	1.1
State and local	3,582	5,409	6,844	183	4.2	287	4.8
Total Agricultural Employment	8,256	6,222	5,190	−203	−2.8	−206	−3.6

[1] Nonfarm employment based on establishment payroll data, agricultural employment on household survey data.

[2] Preliminary

[3] Less than 0.05 percent.

LIST OF PUBLICATIONS

The following reports, prepared by the Office of Manpower, Automation and Training, are available upon request. An order form is provided below. Please print your name and address.

☐ An Explanation of the Manpower Development and Training Act outlines the provisions of the act: the programs relating to Manpower Research, Development, and Utilization (Title I); Training and Skill Development (Title II); and Miscellaneous (Title III). 15 pages.

☐ Farm Families, Youths, Operators, Workers, and the Manpower Development and Training Act outlines the provisions of MDTA as they relate specifically to farm people. 8 pages.

☐ Training + Opportunity = Jobs
gives highlights of the training provisions of MDTA. 6 pages.

☐ Growth of Engineering Employment in the United States, 1950–60
discusses the factors related to the increasing employment of engineers, the major functions engineers perform, and shifts in their geographical and industrial distribution. 4 pages.

☐ Trends in Farm Employment and Training Needs
discusses the effect of increasing technology on farm population and employment opportunities. 4 pages.

☐ Manpower and Immigration
presents a profile of immigrants since 1947, their occupational and age distribution, and their contribution to America's manpower needs. 4 pages.

☐ Industry Employment Growth Since World War II
summarizes trends between 1947 and 1962 in employment of nonfarm workers in major industrial sectors. 6 pages.

ORDER FORM

TO: Office of Manpower, Automation and Training
U.S. Department of Labor
Washington 25, D.C.

☐ Please send me ..... copies of the reports I have checked above.

☐ Please add my name to the mailing list to receive future publications.

NAME .....

STREET .....

CITY, ZONE, STATE .....

Please print your name and address.

Table 8. Changes in Employment Status and Occupation of the Labor Force of the Southern States of the United States between 1940 and 1960.

Employment & Occupation	No. in 1000's 1940	No. in 1000's 1960	Percent Change	No. in 1000's 1940	No. in 1000's 1960	Percent Change
	White Male			Nonwhite Male
Total Labor Force	9,220	11,472	24.4	2,746	2,380	-13.3
Unemployed	1,095	465	-57.5	351	169	-51.9
Total employed	8,126	11,007	35.5	2,395	2,211	-7.8
Professional...	406	1,024	152.6	37	63	72.8
Farmers...	1,869	738	-60.5	621	154	-75.1
Managers...	817	1,298	58.9	23	32	37.2
Clerical...	963	1,470	52.7	29	83	192.4
Craftsmen...	1,045	2,106	101.5	88	185	110.2
Operatives...	1,295	1,969	52.0	261	477	83.1
Pvt.Hsehld.Wkrs...	11	6	-43.4	65	17	-73.3
Service Wkrs...	364	412	13.3	205	272	32.5
Farm Lbrs...	868	304	-65.0	570	246	-56.9
Other Lbrs...	498	538	8.0	492	493	0.3
Not Reported	54	412	664.2	12	128	952.3
	White Female			Nonwhite Female
Total Labor Force	2,378	4,999	110.2	1,342	1,548	15.4
Unemployed	320	226	-29.4	143	117	-18.2
Total employed	2,058	4,774	132.0	1,199	1,431	19.3
Professional...	325	668	105.6	54	107	101.2
Farmers...	49	34	-29.9	46	15	-68.4
Managers...	103	226	118.6	7	14	93.7
Clerical...	654	1,958	199.4	11	67	516.0
Craftsmen...	17	55	229.6	1	6	360.2
Operatives...	435	807	85.4	60	123	103.8
Pvt.Hsehld.Wkrs...	162	160	-1.2	701	638	-8.9
Service Wkrs...	216	539	149.3	106	297	180.3
Farm Lbrs...	76	46	-38.7	199	69	-65.2
Other Lbrs...	16	20	24.2	10	13	24.4
Not Reported	28	245	774.3	8	80	892.1

Sources: U.S. Censuses of Population of 1940 and 1960.
1940: Vol. III. Labor Force. Pt.1, U.S. Summary, Table 4.
1960: U.S. Summary. Detailed Characteristics, Tables 195 and 251.

Taken from —
The Negro Leaves the South (Selected Tables)
by Horace Hamilton
a paper presented to Am. Asso. for Adv of Science annual meet Dec 26-30, 1963
See Also the report (paper) itself - pp. 17-23

Table 9. Changes in Employment Status and Occupation of the Labor Force of the Non-Southern Conterminous United States, by Sex and Color between 1940 and 1960.

Employment & Occupation	No. in 1000's 1940	No. in 1000's 1960	Percent Change	No. in 1000's 1940	No. in 1000's 1960	Percent Change
	White Male			Nonwhite Male
Total Labor Force	26,947	31,329	16.3	1,030	2,023	96.4
Unemployed	4,142	1,441	-65.2	327	210	-35.8
Total employed*	22,806	29,889	31.1	702	1,812	158.1
Professional...	1,428	3,289	130.3	21	83	290.2
Farmers...	2,472	1,474	-40.4	35	19	-45.4
Managers...	2,460	3,231	31.4	27	50	85.1
Clerical...	3,332	4,254	27.7	37	165	346.6
Craftsmen...	3,777	5,962	57.8	48	195	303.4
Operatives...	4,525	5,726	26.6	115	444	286.3
Pvt.Hsehld.Wkrs...	45	25	-43.7	25	12	-52.4
Service Wkrs...	1,450	1,634	12.7	178	269	51.0
Farm Lbrs...	1,251	611	-51.1	44	32	-27.5
Other Lbrs...	1,918	1,679	-12.4	144	271	89.0
Not Reported	174	1,236	611.4	5	203	4066.7
	White Female			Nonwhite Female
Total Labor Force	8,623	14,500	68.2	501	1,261	151.7
Unemployed	1,118	735	-34.2	125	124	-0.8
Total employed	7,505	13,764	83.4	375	1,137	202.4
Professional...	1,068	1,881	76.1	14	82	500.4
Farmers...	65	66	1.5	3	2	-48.0
Managers...	312	521	67.0	5	13	199.0
Clerical...	2,512	5,711	127.3	14	180	1200.1
Craftsmen...	98	179	82.9	1	11	680.7
Operatives...	1,528	2,111	38.1	44	206	365.2
Pvt.Hsehld.Wkrs...	887	601	-32.2	212	259	22.3
Service Wkrs...	878	1,759	100.3	59	236	298.1
Farm Lbrs...	43	121	182.1	2	5	118.2
Other Lbrs...	139	65	-53.2	11	12	9.4
Not Reported	95	738	678.2	3	130	4181.7

Sources: See Table 8.

*Armed forces included in the total labor force and the total employed.

Table 10. Changes in the Percent Distribution of Employed Persons in the Non-Southern States by Occupation, Sex, and Race, 1940-1960.

Occupation	% Distribution 1940	% Distribution 1960	Difference 1960-1940	% Distribution 1940	% Distribution 1960	Difference 1960-1940
	White Male			Nonwhite Male
Total Employed	100.0	100.0	-	100.0	100.0	-
Professional...	6.3	11.3	5.0	3.1	4.8	1.7
Farmers...	10.8	5.1	-5.7	5.2	1.1	-4.1
Managers...	10.8	11.1	0.3	4.0	2.9	-1.1
Clerical...	14.6	14.6	-	5.4	9.4	4.0
Craftsmen...	16.5	20.5	4.0	7.1	11.2	4.1
Operatives...	19.8	19.7	-0.1	16.9	25.5	8.6
Pvt.Hsehld...	0.2	0.1	-0.1	3.7	0.7	-3.0
Service Wkrs...	6.3	5.6	-0.7	26.2	15.4	-10.8
Farm Lbrs...	5.5	2.1	-3.4	6.5	1.8	-4.7
Other Lbrs...	8.4	5.8	-2.6	21.1	15.6	-5.5
Not Reported	0.8	4.2	3.4	0.7	11.7	11.0
	White Female			Nonwhite Female
Total Employed	100.0	100.0	-	100.0	100.0	-
Professional...	14.0	13.7	-0.3	3.7	7.2	3.5
Farmers...	0.9	0.5	-0.4	0.9	0.2	-0.7
Managers...	4.1	3.8	-0.3	1.2	1.2	-
Clerical...	32.9	41.5	8.6	3.8	15.9	12.1
Craftsmen...	1.3	1.3	-	0.4	0.9	0.5
Operatives...	20.0	15.3	-4.7	12.0	18.1	6.1
Pvt.Hsehld...	11.6	4.4	-7.2	57.5	22.8	-34.7
Service Wkrs...	11.5	12.8	1.3	16.1	20.8	4.7
Farm Lbrs...	0.6	0.9	0.3	0.6	0.4	-0.2
Other Lbrs...	1.8	0.5	-1.3	2.9	1.0	-1.9
Not Reported	1.2	5.4	4.2	0.8	11.4	10.6

Sources: (1) U.S. Census of Population, 1960. U.S. Summary. General Social and Economic Characteristics. PC(1) 1C. Table 88. Also the corresponding State Census Reports.
(2) 16th Census of the United States, 1940. Vol. III. The Labor Force. U.S. Summary. Table 63.

Table 11. Changes in the Percent Distribution of Employed Persons in the Southern States by Occupation, Sex, and Race, 1940-1960.

Occupation	% Distribution 1940	% Distribution 1960	Difference 1960-1940	% Distribution 1940	% Distribution 1960	Difference 1960-1940
	White Male			Nonwhite Male
Total Employed	100.0	100.0	-	100.0	100.0	-
Professional...	5.0	10.0	5.0	1.5	2.9	1.4
Farmers...	22.8	7.2	-15.6	25.8	7.2	-18.6
Managers...	10.0	12.6	2.6	1.0	1.5	0.5
Clerical...	11.8	14.3	2.5	1.2	3.9	2.7
Craftsmen...	12.8	20.5	7.7	3.7	8.6	4.9
Operatives...	15.8	19.1	3.3	10.9	22.2	11.3
Pvt.Hsehld...	0.1	0.1	-	2.7	0.8	-1.9
Service Wkrs...	4.4	4.0	-0.4	8.5	12.6	4.1
Farm Lbrs...	10.6	3.0	-7.6	23.7	11.4	-12.3
Other Lbrs...	6.1	5.2	-0.9	20.5	22.9	2.4
Not Reported	0.6	4.0	3.4	.5	5.9	5.4
	White Female			Nonwhite Female
Total Employed	100.0	100.0	-	100.0	100.0	-
Professional...	15.6	14.0	-1.6	4.5	7.5	3.0
Farmers...	2.4	0.7	-1.7	3.8	1.0	-2.8
Managers...	5.0	4.7	-0.3	0.6	1.0	0.4
Clerical...	31.4	41.1	9.7	0.9	4.7	3.8
Craftsmen...	0.8	1.2	0.4	0.1	0.4	0.3
Operatives...	20.9	17.0	-3.9	5.0	8.6	3.6
Pvt.Hsehld...	7.8	3.4	-4.4	58.2	44.7	-13.5
Service Wkrs...	10.4	11.3	0.9	8.8	20.8	12.0
Farm Lbrs...	3.6	1.0	-2.6	16.5	4.8	-11.7
Other Lbrs...	0.8	0.4	-0.4	0.9	0.9	-
Not Reported	1.3	5.2	3.9	0.7	5.6	4.9

Sources: (1) U.S. Census of Population, 1960. U.S. Summary. General Social and Economic Characteristics. PC(1) 1C. Table 88. Also the corresponding State Census Reports.
(2) 16th Census of the United States, 1940. Vol. III. The Labor Force. U.S. Summary. Table 63.

Address by Daniel P. Moynihan
Ass't Sec of Labor before 16th Ann. Conf. of
N. C. L. C. H.
Wash, D.C.
3/19/64

Negro male wage earner further behind white worker in pay in 1962 than he was in 1957.

1951 – N.W. got 62% of W.W.
1962 – N.W. got 55% of W.W.

OVER ★★

M. also stated that:

"... many desirable job opportunities are opening up, but sufficient qualified Negroes are often not available to fill them because they had been denied the schooling or the skill needed as preparation. Sometimes, of course, the education and training was open, but the motivation to take advantage of them was lacking because no opportunities were forseen in the future.

THE CONSEQUENCE IS THAT MOST NEGROES ARE IN THE UNSKILLED and SEMI-SKILLED OCCUPATIONS -- JOB AREAS THAT AUTOMATION AND THE OTHER INNOVATIONS OF OUR TECHNOLOGY ARE MAKING MOST EXPENDABLE.

Possible title to article - suggested only from Moynihan speech -

INEQUALITY IN THE MARKETPLACE — THE NEGRO WORKER AND AUTOMATION

Rev.

"We are left with the paradox that even equality guaranteed by law and practiced by employers does not guarantee ultimate equality in the marketplace. The unskilled cannot accept skilled work; the high-school dropout cannot hold a job requiring college training.

If every discriminatory barrier to fair employt came down as of this moment, all the cumulative barriers to equal employment opportunity that are a consequence of past discrimination would remain. The employment of Negroes would not suddenly increase in proportion to their opportunities, because they would not be qualified to take advantage of them.

It is this current inability to take advantage of whatever opportunities the law will guarantee that define the nature of the problem that will continue to face us even after the C.R. bill has passed.

(E.E:- After the Law - Now what?)

The Job Problem

Pub 5/2/64

Editor, The Wall Street Journal:

Although I acknowledge the dangers of Federal paternalism foreseen by Tocqueville and restated by you in your editorial of Apr. 21, it seems to me that one cannot let the matter drop there. For civilization consists at least in part, I take it, of intervening in the most efficacious manner available to us against the full operation of the natural law of survival of the fittest. That is to say, we will not choose to solve the problem of our unemployables by permitting them to perish through starvation or by hurtling them over the cliff, a la Sparta. And, make no mistake about it, automation is creating a growing number of unemployables.

This fact is masked today by a widespread resort to featherbedding of various sorts and by the staggering (though hopefully temporary) expenditure of effort on arms production. But in the long run the level of competence required to obtain gainful employment will be going up at the same time, on fairly good evidence, the average intelligence is heading in the opposite direction. If today a person with an IQ of 80 finds it difficult to hold a job, tomorrow it may be 90 and so forth. When the curve reaches 120 will we still be harboring our unemployables in sheltered workshops or begrudgingly supporting them on relief?

The gulf continues to widen between those who hold that we cannot continue to tolerate poverty in our affluent society and those who maintain, on the other hand, that Governmental interference is surely destroying self reliance and individual initiative. As the annual welfare bill continues to mount, there is a growing restiveness that there must be some other way. The welfare solution is satisfying neither to donor nor to recipient.

Perhaps the guaranteed annual wage plan is not the best response we can devise, but lack of an acceptable solution does not make the problem go away.

DAVID W. KEAN

Sunnyvale, Calif.

Lloyd James Elliott, Ph. D.

The Triple Revolution

News from US Dept of Labor
Weekly news Digest
Week of 6/15/64

Wirtz -
"Human Scrap Heap Building Up"

See file of this for lots of employment - poverty - racial info!

POVERTY- UNEMPLOYMENT

Causes of unemployment and action versus unemployment

Source: Samuel Lubell, Fortune, July, 1964, p. 266

... The tax cut was presented as a way of ensuring "full employment" by priming more spending, with little real attention given to the many varied causes of unemployment.

Last year I did an exhaustive survey of unemployed workers to determine why we had so high a jobless rate in a booming economy. I concluded that the unemployment figures on which both Democrats and Republicans rely are no longer an accurate measure of our economic performance. Largely because of labor unions and corporate economic strength, we have turned most of our economy into a protected fortress. The worker with enough seniority to be within the fortress gets the high wages and fine fringe benefits of our modern society. Those who are outside the fortress bear the brunt of the unemployment.

The same people get thrown out of work repeatedly because they are low in seniority. With any downturn in the economy, they are the first to go. If inflation pushes up labor costs, those without seniority are most vulnerable when efforts to cut costs are made. I have interviewed young people of thirty and thirty-five who have never held a steady job in their lives. They have been laid off time and time again. Many live mainly for the time when they will finally build up enough seniority to be assured of working steadily. Waiting for seniority has become part of the pattern of industrial living. Often the wives of those without seniority must go to work to supplement the family income.

This unemployment survey emphasized the need for examining the different kinds of unemployment on a cause-and-effect basis. Neither party has given the unemployment problem the kind of study that is needed.

Jobless Teen-Age Negroes

Need of Disadvantaged Youth for Male Worker as Model Stressed

TO THE EDITOR:

As one who for the past year has devoted himself almost exclusively to the problem that Edwin L. Dale Jr. discusses in his Aug. 23 news article, "Joblessness Rate of Negro Youths Climbed to 25 Per Cent," let me try to shed some light on his paragraph "There is no ready explanation here for the continuation of a huge army of Negro teen-age unemployed in a generally prosperous economy."

There is an explanation. The Negro boy often grows up in a matriarchal society where, unlike his white counterpart, he finds no male worker model that he can either emulate or respect. That same boy comes to school where his books rarely if ever show him Negro men at work in the middle-drawer vocations to which most youths can realistically aspire.

In the movies and on TV the Negro success stories he sees are in the world of entertainment and sports (how many Billy Eckstines or Willie Mays' can talent provide or a society sustain?).

A Negro youth has to find out for real, that there is a wide world of middle-drawer jobs to which he has a right to aspire; that this world of work embraces far more than the car-washer at the one end and the heavyweight champion of the world at the other; that the President's Equal Job Opportunities (Plans for Progress) program is for him, too.

Given this hope, perhaps the self-fulfilling prophecy that "black" means "back" will begin to lose the vicious hold it has held for so long over so many Negro children.

The Negro boy must see the Negro man as a worker—in the machine shop, in the accountant's office, in the law firm. He must see this in his textbook, in films and above all, in real life. CHARLES G. SPIEGLER,
Research Associate, Project English,
Hunter College.

New York, Aug. 23, 1964.

New York Times - Aug 23 1964

Edwin L. Dale

"Joblessness Rate of Negro Youths Climbed to 25 Per Cent."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Rep. Vinson Escorts Lynda Bird; Automation Feeds Race Riots

By DREW PEARSON

Washington.

AFTER HIS acceptance speech in Atlantic City, President Johnson asked Hubert Humphrey and Rep. Carl Vinson, the elder statesman from Georgia, to accompany him back to his hotel room.

"My shirt is wringing wet," he explained. "I want to change it for the birthday ball."

However, Vinson, who is 80 and likes to get to bed early, hoped to avoid going to the ball. So, after the shirt-changing, the Georgian edged to the door of the hotel room.

His exit was suddenly altered by the appearance of Lynda Bird Johnson, the President's older daughter.

"If you think you are going to get out of going to the ball, you are mistaken," she said, grabbing his arm. "You are my date. My sister Luci has a date with another fellow."

So the venerable, sometimes-crusty Vinson went to the ball like a lamb.

RACE PROBLEM

This column recently reported how independent canneries were being merged or gobbled up by the big chain stores, thus creating fewer markets for farmers. Here is how this situation also affects current race riots.

When the Phillips Packing Co. of the Eastern Shore of Maryland was sold to Consolidated Foods of Chicago, it threw approximately 2,375 Negroes in Cambridge, Md., out of work. Consolidated Foods automated the Phillips cannery, and automatically employment dropped from 2,500 seasonal workers to 125 workers.

The 2,375 unemployed Negroes have helped make Cambridge one of the sorest racial spots in the nation. Unemployment among Negroes is 25.4 per cent.

Washington Merry-Go-Round appears regularly in the daily Atlanta Journal.

In 1964, efforts were made under the Manpower Development Training Act to remedy Cambridge's unemployment problem. But it was discovered that 70 per cent of the Negroes tested by the manpower training program were ineligible for retraining chiefly because they could not read or write.

Similar situations have occurred all over the country. When rural people, most of them Negroes, are eliminated by the cotton picker, the corn picker, the tomato picker in order to lower either the price of food or increase dividends, their only hope for survival is the welfare roll, unless someone bothers to teach them how to read and write.

In wealthy Montgomery County, Md., almost in the shadow of the Capitol, beans used to be picked by migrant Negro labor. But housing standards for migrants were raised to the point where the canneries found it more profitable to use machine pickers. Machine pickers actually waste the crop, bring a lower overall price to the farmer, and have thrown thousands of Southern Negroes out of work. Not merely the Southern Negro, but Maryland Negroes within 30 minutes' drive of the White House cannot be retrained for other jobs without remedying the nation's No. 1 poverty problem—illiteracy.

RESOLUTION

Congress has before it a joint resolution designating Sept. 14-19 as National Literacy Week.

However, the aid to education bill, providing a more fundamental remedy for illiteracy, is still blocked in the Rules Committee thanks to certain recalcitrant congressmen.—(c1964.)

22

Poets hit automation

(The following poems were taken from "The Machinist" of August 20. "The Machinist" is published by the International Association of Machinists.)

THE IDEAL WORKER

Clyde is the worker who never lets up,
Never pauses to sip Seven-Up.
He never smokes or takes a break;
He has no use for coffee or cake.
Never vacations or asks for more money.
Clyde never laughs—to him nothing is funny.
He's company property from stern to stem—
You see, Clyde was made by IBM.
They say he cuts labor costs, makes no mistakes.
But he'll never buy what the company makes.

—Contributed by Bob Vegas.

ODE TO AUTOMATION

Automation, Automation
Oh its quite the new sensation
With its quantum computation
And its cosmic information.
As this potent innovation
Blithly sweeps the nation
Careless of its imputation
Spawning boredom and frustration.
Thus the race—humanitation
With no zeal or motivation
Lost desire for osculation
Saw the end of propagation
And the race in devastation
Shrivelled in its habitation
Leaving only Automation.

—Contributed by Clare O'Brien.

2E

THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, AUGUST 30, 1964.

8 CLEVELAND BANKS REJECT COLOR LINE

Special to The New York Times

CLEVELAND, Aug. 29—The eight commercial banks of this city have assured an interracial committee that they will grant mortgage loans without regard to color, race or religion.

The statement on minority housing was the second major accomplishment of the organization of leading business and professional leaders and spokesmen for minority groups. Early in the month the committee endorsed the proposed program of the city's new school superintendent, Paul W. Briggs.

The committee was formed last April after a civil rights protest over new school project ended in the death of demonstrator and a night of rioting.

The committee said the banks "have given assurances that they make residential loans to any credit-worthy customer regardless of his color, race or religion if he has stability of employment, a record of honesty and credit responsibility, and if the home he owns or is buying has an approved value sufficient to support the loan within their lending limits."

The banks are the Cleveland Trust Company, National City Bank of Cleveland, Central National Bank, Society National Bank, Union Bank of Commerce Capital Bank, Continental Bank, and Bank of Cleveland.

For fall golfers—S.F.A.'s exclusive stretch flannel twosome

In a charcoal grey wool and Dacron® polyester blend to allow the golfer great freedom of move-

Sleek and jump suit evenings

The newest après-ski—or pared down

ABLE

cratic convention, David J. McDonald,

Poverty

Missouri Teamster 9/4/64

SEEMINGLY 'NONDEPRESSED'

More than $7,398,000 in Federal funds intended to help depressed areas won't be available to them.

The money went to nine relatively healthy counties in Delaware, Hawaii, New Hampshire, and Vermont, Government auditors said last week in a report criticizing the Area Redevelopment Administration (ARA). Congress' watchdog on Government spending, the General Accounting Office (GAO), said $787,000 in Area Redevelopment Act funds and $6,611,000 in Accelerated Public Works (APW) funds had gone to "seemingly nondepressed" counties. Both programs are administered by the ARA.

The General Accounting Office said the counties receiving the money did not qualify as depressed areas under the unemployment and underdevelopment criteria established by the Area Redevelopment and Accelerated Public Works acts.

Partly because of the aid to nondepressed areas, the Government auditors said, no money is now available for areas actually in economic trouble. Only $52,000,000 is on hand for Area Redevelopment Act programs, and there are $168,000,000 in projects pending. More than $700,000,000 worth of APW projects are pending, and no money is left.

The auditors' report charged the ARA with misreading Congress' intent in establishing the two programs.

But the ARA said that even if the nine counties didn't qualify as depressed areas, they qualified for aid under sections of the two laws that authorize distribution of aid "widely among the several states, so far as is feasible and proper . . . and in as many areas and under as many different circumstances as possible."

A Commerce Department regulation, based on these clauses, permits aid to the most depressed area in each state. But the General Accounting Office suggested the regulation be rescinded.

Comptroller General Joseph Campbell, head of the GAO, said aid to areas that weren't actually depressed was not authorized under either program.

Under the Area Redevelopment Act, long-term loans are provided for industrial, commercial, and public facilities in order to build up the economic base of the area receiving assistance. The APW program provides grants for short-term, job-producing public works projects.

The ARA said it had approved aid to both depressed and nondepressed areas as long as the proposed projects were feasible and money was available. Last week the agency admitted that until Congress voted more money areas seeking any Area Redevelopment or APW funds will have to forget it.

9/4/64

MISSOURI TEAMST

FAMILY FEATURES

Illiterates, Uneducated Are Helped By New Manpower Act

LANSING, Mich. (PAI) — L. V. Drake, 29, lost the best job he ever had at a furniture store here last summer because he was "low on my learnings."

Drake has a wife and three small children to support, the oldest six years of age. He has since worked as a houseman at a local hotel at 86 cents an hour, while moonlighting as an apartment house janitor. Last winter, Drake again faced total unemployment.

Born in rural Tennessee, Drake thinks he had three or four years of schooling in a one-room all-Negro school. While he can scrawl his name, he "never did" learn to read. He has worked the crops but dropped out of the migrant stream several years ago because of lack of work.

Drake is one of 150 hard-core unemployed and seriously underemployed now enrolled in the Job Training Center at Lansing's old St. Mary's school, a few blocks from the Michigan State Capitol.

On the day he was interviewed, he had come to the center to borrow three dollars to pay for a prescription for one of his children who had just been released from the hospital. A $250 hospital bill for the child had been paid from welfare funds, following a plea from one of the Center's counselors.

Like other married family heads with two or more dependents, Drake receives an allowance of $36 weekly, paid by the Department of Labor under the Manpower Development and Training Act. He has no other present source of income but is looking for a part-time job to help his family get by during the year of training ahead.

So far as he is concerned, the unique school at Lansing represents a golden opportunity to help himself. Drake wants to be a welder or a mechanic. His ambition is to earn $100 a week so he can "give his kids a break." He thinks he can do it if only he can learn to read and write. He began classes in late June and is beginning to recognize simple words.

The Lansing Job Training Center is one of 64 experimental and demonstration projects approved by the U. S. Department of Labor's Manpower Administration.

The Center has involved close cooperation among Federal, State and local agencies and a non-profit nongovernmental contractor. It was made possible by the provisions of the Manpower Development and Training Act which was passed with strong backing from organized labor.

MDTA permits the Labor Department to authorize allowances equal to the average state unemployment compensation — $36 in Michigan — to heads of families enrolled in the program.

MDTA also permits the payment of $18 weekly to unmarried enrollees between ages of 17 and 21. Unmarried trainees over 21 — and there are several in the Lansing project—receive no governmental allowance of any kind. Early statistics—compiled in May when there were 46 trainees—showed that two-thirds were receiving MDTA allowances.

The law permits trainees to work up to 20 hours weekly without jeopardizing their allowances. Strenuous efforts have been made to find part-time work for the trainees but unskilled part-time work within the present capability of the trainees has not been easy to find. John L. Gaffney, director of the Center, has estimated that about a fourth of all trainees now have part-time employment.

Uncle Sam Is Really Needed

A growing Federal role in local affairs is not only necessary, the author argues, but is desirable for the general welfare.

By MICHAEL D. REAGAN

WHICH areas of general welfare policy — housing and urban renewal, education, highways, hospitals and health, labor standards and unemployment compensation—are best left to the state and local governments? Which require national legislation, funds and standards, either in the form of Federal grants-in-aid or full national programs?

These questions arise naturally and inevitably out of the constitutional principle of federalism, and are among the hardiest of American political perennials. They are also among the liveliest and most controversial of this election year. Because issues of state-local-vs-Federal action seem likely to be more conspicuous in the campaign discussions of 1964 than has been the case since the nineteen-thirties, it may be well to take a calm look at the limits of localism now.

What are the financial and political capabilities of state and local governments for dealing with general welfare problems? What are the problems and obstacles? Is there a national interest in public welfare policies? What happens when attempts are made to return functions to the states? To answer these and related questions we need to examine the resources of state and local governments, the record of state-local action, and the meaning of the general welfare in a national community.

FIRST, let us note that the states, cities and towns, the school and sewage districts, the highway authorities and the multitude of other special-function bodies that make up the maze of American subnational government have not, contrary to the impression in some quarters, atrophied in the face of the national Government's participation in general welfare problems. In fact, their activity has increased fantastically. As measured by expenditures, state-local government shows an increase from $13 billion in 1942 to $77 billion in 1961. Because it has been as difficult to increase revenues as it has been to hold down spending (although the Tax Foundation estimates a 326 per cent increase in state-local taxes since 1946), the result of heavy activity has been an extraordinary increase in state-local debt.

While the national debt rose 13 per cent in the years 1946-63—and did so to the accompaniment of much political wailing—the state-local rise was a whopping, though almost unnoticed, 448 per cent. If the national Government's budget should curl our hair, it should fairly frizzle as we contemplate state-local finances. And city fathers faced with demands for increased services may just pull their hair out entirely as they run up against the debt-limits imposed upon municipalities by the governments of 34 states.

While the taxable resources of the nation are, distributively, the resources of the 50 states, it is much harder for the latter to tap those resources. Property and sales taxes are heavily used by state-local governments, compared to the Federal Government's greater reliance upon individual and corporate income taxes. If people's incomes rise, so does the national Government's tax share—and more than proportionately because of progressive rates. But if the value of a property increases, the city tax collector obtains no automatic increase; that awaits the slow process of revaluation.

EVEN greater are the political problems. Property and sales taxes are flat-rate taxes, and thus regressive. The man with a $4,000 income buying a $200 appliance may pay a 3 per cent sales tax ($6). The man with a $40,000 income pays the same amount of tax, but notices it less. Similarly with the property tax. It has therefore long been a basic tenet of the liberal creed that such taxes should be utilized as little as possible. The conservative, on the other hand, objects with equal vehemence to the notion of an income tax; it is progressive in rate structure and will hit him harder. The result is often a stalemate on tax increases while expenditures and debt go on rising.

Add to these difficulties the historic dominance of state legislatures by rural representatives not much impressed by the needs occasioned by urbanization and industrialization. This makes it understandable why the cities have in recent years run to the national Government for financial aid in the form of grants that bypass the state level. Urban renewal and airport construction are notable examples. In the words of Mayor Richard Lee of New Haven, "We have reached a point where the urban slum problem alone is greater than the farm problem. And with all these . . . things we have to do—providing police and fire protection, paying school teachers an adequate salary and offering a host of other services—the cities cannot solve these problems alone."

FINALLY, interstate competition for industry inhibits higher taxes to finance better general welfare programs. The fear is that if a state imposes an income tax, or raises its business receipts tax beyond that of a neighboring state, then national firms looking for new plant locations will not come in. The reasoning may be faulty (many other factors enter into such decisions), but the fear is there and it counts.

In short, although one can make a case in the abstract for state-local potential resources, the obstacles—as much political as economic, but just as real—are such as to make much of the potential unavailable.

Next, let us (Continued on Page 130)

THE U.S. IS HERE—In our complex society, there are cannot afford alone. One example is highway construction,

MICHAEL D. REAGAN is a professor of political science at the University of California at Riverside and the author of the recently published "The Managed Economy."

sher all spots...but of the 'n spots

ee washing, es any back!
ts in and ur dishes for hours anded by hwasher for finest

JOINT AID—As the sign indicates, the state agency serving these jobless men draws on a Federal affiliation.

Uncle Sam Is Really Needed

(Continued from Page 31)

look at some parts of the state-local record. Education is probably the function most often assigned exclusively to local government by politicians and theorists of the localist persuasion. Although back-door aid to education (largely in the guise of defense or science) has become substantial, there is still no general national aid for classroom construction or teachers' salaries. What have the cities and states done on their own? (We can consider them together, for state aid is universally accepted even where Federal aid is anathema).

IN 1949-50, the average teacher salary was $4,200 in California, $3,700 in New York, $2,348 in Vermont and $1,416 in Mississippi. Ten years later (1959-60) the figures were: California, $6,600; New York, $6,537; Vermont, $4,466; and Mississippi, $3,314. A distinct improvement, yes; enough to attract a fair share of the best talent into public school teaching, no. In coping with the classroom space squeeze, state-local action has produced more than 400,000 classrooms, since 1955. Yet a need for 127,000 additional classrooms existed as of the fall of 1961, according to Office of Education figures. The state-local effort rates "A for effort," but it has not entirely solved the problem, and what has been accomplished in construction may have been partly at the expense of teachers' salaries.

One of the compromises between state and federal action is the unemployment compensation program. Through Federal inducement (forgiveness of a projected contribution to a federal system if the state enacted its own), every state has its own program. But in the recessions of 1958 and 1960-61 it was necessary for the federal government to supplement the benefits provided by the state systems with an additional period of benefit paid for by Congress. The state systems were proved inadequate to the challenge of long - term unemployment. Even apart from the special problem of recession, the period of benefit under the state systems varies from 39 weeks in Oklahoma to 22 weeks in South Carolina and Tennessee. The maximum dollar benefits range from $1,700 in Wisconsin down to $640 in Virginia.

Medical care for the aged again illustrates the absence of state action until Federal prodding. While those on welfare grants can obtain some kind of medical care in every state, the aged who were able to stay off relief had no public medical care program until the Kerr-Mills legislation of 1960. By 1964, 33 states had availed themselves of the Federal contribution — although the amounts and coverage remain inadequate even in the participating states.

IN the nineteen-fifties a program of Federal grants for community sewage plants was started. After it had been in operation two years, President Eisenhower wanted to discontinue it and return this function to the towns and cities. He ran into an insuperable obstacle, however: the grant-in-aid program had worked and the rate of new sewage plant construction had jumped upward. The prodding effect of Congressional action was so pronounced that the legislators could not be persuaded to end the program and chance a sudden slackening in effort to solve the worsening pollution problem.

The record suggests, the closer one looks at it, that the real issues have not been what to turn back to the states and cities, but what national programs to initiate and whether the national Government should administer them directly or bribe the state-local governments into participation through matching grants. Until Congress acted, too often nothing at all was done.

(Continued on Page 132)

(Continued from Page 130)

Instances of individual state leadership have been known—Wisconsin and New York were pioneers in labor standards legislation, for example, and in health and safety regulation — but the seeds have usually fallen on barren ground until the national Government took up the cause. After all, it is much easier to pass required legislation through one Congress than through 50 state legislatures or thousands of city councils. The pattern now is for Washington to initiate a response to a problem, then lead the localities into continuing participation.

Suppose — and it is a wild supposition—that we left the general welfare to the states and cities, what major obstacles would remain, what needs might be unfulfilled even if they set out enthusiastically to do the job?

One major problem is the lack of capable personnel. The national civil service not only outbids most states and all cities for professional talent (when associated with a university program of graduate training in public administration, I found that most students initially oriented toward local government careers nevertheless took jobs with such national agencies as Housing and Home Finance), but is a model of appointment and promotion by merit when compared to the states and cities.

ONE advantage of Federal grants-in-aid has been that they carry with them administrative standards that compel the receiving agencies to curtail the spoils system. Of course, the Federal Government has difficulty in recruiting a sufficient number of trained professionals itself, but the difficulty is compounded in most local jurisdictions.

A major need that would go unmet is that of equalization of standards. Compare the levels of unemployment benefits among the states, as given above, or unevenness of medical care availability, or discrepancies in teachers' salaries, or per pupil expenditures, which vary from $698 in New York to $268 in Alabama and $297 in Mississippi (1959-1960 figures). Granting some cost differentials, it is still beyond belief that education in the South can be as good as in New York or California in these circumstances. And it is not proportionate lack of will that makes the Southern record so poor; it is lack of resources: Mississippi, for example spends a higher share of its revenues on education than does New York.

Why does the unequal education of Mississippians and Alabamians matter to the rest of us? There are two reasons, both resting on the premise of national citizenship in a national community.

First, I would argue the ethical claim to equality of opportunity for all Americans, wherever they live; and a good education is the key to equal opportunity. Practically, also, we are national as regards mobility of population: the Mississippi boy of today is likely to be the California, Ohio or Michigan citizen of tomorrow. Federal aid that makes equalization possible therefore benefits the giving as well as the receiving states.

While equalization may be a controversial goal, everyone desires curricular excellence. It is in the development of the best possible textbooks, teaching materials and conceptual approaches to subjects as diverse as mathematics, foreign languages, English and social studies that national efforts are most patently necessary.

NO local school board could pull together leading university scholars and outstanding public school teachers to make such efforts. Yet they have been made, with outstanding success, by the School Mathematics Study Group and the Physical Science Study Committee, both underwritten by the National Science Foundation in cooperation with major universities. Many of us have already experienced the "new math" thus developed, by grappling with our children's homework. Now the Office of Education is sponsoring a similar project to improve instruction in English from kindergarten through college.

NATIONAL MATH — The "new mathematics" being widely taught

It is a national interest that is expressed in these projects, and also in the science and you want:

a camera with a Fully Automatic CdS Electric Eye with dual ranges for the dimmest indoor or brightest outdoor light. Complete Versatility that —as to these first graders—was developed by groups underwritten by the National Science Foundation.

foreign language work done under the post-Sputnik National Defense Education Act. As a recent report of a special Presidential panel on educational research states, the model texts and materials "can indicate new paths in education without interfering with traditional local responsibilities." Whether to use the new materials is a choice still held by local officials; making them available is a legitimate national task.

Increasingly, the public welfare depends upon scientific and technological advance. Nuclear power and desalination, perhaps combined in single plants, exemplify the costly areas of research involved. Neither states nor cities are going to take on these tasks, for both cost and national benefit compel national expenditure. So far as basic research and graduate education centered in universities are concerned — and without these all advance ceases—a 1960 report of the President's Science Advisory Committee put the matter bluntly:

"Either it [the national Government] will find the policies — and the resources — which permit our universities to flourish and their duties to be adequately discharged—or no one will." As this committee pointed out, "There is not one physics for California and another for Texas."

THE states and cities have already gone heavily into debt trying to meet the financial demands of the public welfare, yet the conditions of our educational system, of urban transit, of water pollution and of medical care and unemployment insurance all demonstrate the inadequacy of these valiant efforts. Of even greater importance, what is done with the money is better planned and better managed when the national Government underwrites the use of the best professionals and sets standards which call forth a stronger local effort (as with the Urban Renewal Administration's requirement that each community seeking Federal aid submit a workable program of community development).

The merits of national involvement and the genius of the grant-in-aid as a device to create a Federal-state-local partnership are, in my opinion, beyond dispute. Why do the cries of states' rights and localism continue almost unabated? I believe there are three primary reasons.

ONE is ignorance of what national action has accomplished and has stimulated throughout the nation. Another is the desire of local leaders, public and private, to maintain their familiar hold on the power structure of their communities, which they fear will undergo change and be opened up to a wider segment of interests if "outsiders" have to be permitted participation.

Finally, the cry of localism is often a "front" for those who do not really want many of the general welfare programs at any level of government—sometimes on financial grounds, sometimes because of a denial of need. Since it is demonstrably harder to obtain approval for public welfare expenditures in many states and cities than in Congress, anti - welfare strategy calls for leaving it to the local jurisdictions in the hope that nothing at all will be done.

But history does not easily reverse itself. The experience of the Eisenhower Administration, which ideologically wanted to cut away at Federal involvement, yet created one of the largest Federal grant programs (the $40 billion Interstate Highway System—90 per cent national, 10 per cent state funds), suggests that—despite the vehemence of campaign rhetoric — the national Government will continue to promote the general welfare and to recognize the limits of localism.

'Pak-nit' a trademark of Con

World Faces Food Surplus And Mass Starvation

By OVID A. MARTIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Technological advances in agriculture now provide the world with tools to free itself of hunger. There is, however, no assurance that these tools will be utilized sufficiently to prevent widespread starvation.

This is a somewhat pessimistic view expressed by the Agriculture Department in the 1964 edition of its annual yearbook entitled "Farmer's World."

In fact, the 592-page book says that many farm specialists fear that, during the next several decades, world population will expand at a greater rate than increases in good production.

The book, published today, comes out shortly after a prominent scientist-economist — Dr. Raymond Ewell, vice president for research, State University of New York at Buffalo — predicted for the near future a world famine striking hundreds of millions of human beings.

The yearbook sees a long period of hunger particularly for the underdeveloped countries. The developed countries, such as the United States, Canada, most of Europe, Japan, Australia and New Zealand are expected to continue to enjoy abundance.

One of the authors, Dr. Raymond P. Christensen, a department economist, writes:

"Increases in food production in underdeveloped countries, even though accelerated, are not likely to be large enough to meet requirements for rapid economic growth. . . . It should be possible to step up rates of increase in food production to 3 to 3.5 per cent a year in a decade, but that still will be short of the annual increase of 4 to 5 per cent required in many countries to meet rising demands due to growth in population and income."

The book emphasized that it takes much capital and much time to educate farmers in backward countries how to utilize the technological advances which mark farm production in this country.

"In the less developed countries, farm people cling to traditional farming methods because they feel sure these methods will provide enough food for survival. Many cannot afford to take risks and try new methods because they do not have resources to fall back on if the new methods fail," Christensen wrote.

In a foreword, Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman says that "at no time in 30 centuries has world agriculture faced greater problems, greater challenges and greater opportunities.

"And at no time," he adds, "has American agriculture been so closely connected as now with world agriculture in its gigantic task of feeding and clothing more people; husbanding and developing its various resources; expanding its trade; sharing in and contributing to the upsurge of modern science; undergirding economic growth; and, by doing all this, assuming an even larger role in mankind's long struggle for freedom and plenty."

Christensen says adoption of new technology in underdeveloped areas will require drastic changes and the learning of new skills and management from outside teachers.

"Even when benefits from improved farming methods are known and economic incentives have been provided through land and marketing reforms, the means of carrying out the new farming program may be lacking," he adds.

Another contributor to the yearbook, Robert D. Stevens, an economist with wide experience in international agriculture, says industrialized countries have shown that, insofar as they are concerned, Rev. Thomas Robert Malthus was wrong when, in 1798, he wrote that man will be unable to increase food production as fast as population increases with the result that many would starve to death.

"For the low-income countries, Malthus' prediction that food supplies cannot keep pace with food needs remains a serious prospect," Stevens says.

He notes many countries have shortages of productive land and other handicaps.

"Major hindrances to increased production and food—generating exports are lack of the necessary social and governmental institutions, lack of education, and lack of technical knowledge.

Complicating the problem of preventing possible increased starvation, Stevens adds, is the likelihood that rates of population growth will remain high for some time, as there is little evidence yet of declines in birth rates.

Another expert, Charles E. Kellogg, deputy administrator of the Soil Conservation Service, says failure of many countries to give high priority to agricultural needs—in the way of credit, education, machinery and fertilizers and the like—may also contribute to the famine danger.

Correspondence

The New Republic welcomes communications in regard to subjects of current interest. Those of 300 words or less are most suitable for publication.

The Great Unemployment Fallacy

Sirs:

Edwin Dale's piece on "The Great Unemployment Fallacy" (Sept. 5) is another in a long series of attempts to wish away the problem of persistent unemployment. It would take a longer article than he has written to expose the fallacies in his futile efforts to deny the existence of an unemployment "problem." One can point out, however, that the three examples he chose to buttress his case are far from convincing.

It is true that in World War II aggregate demand was high and unemployment was low. But Mr. Dale ignores the fact that some 12 million men of prime working age were withdrawn from the civilian labor force at that time. Mr. Dale also cites the case of West Germany to support his contention that we do not have an unemployment problem in the United States. It is interesting that he selected one of the first countries in Western Europe to initiate an active manpower policy to support his view that sufficient aggregate demand alone will eliminate unemployment. More careful research on his part would also have shown that there was a substantial amount of localized unemployment in West Virginia prior to 1953.

Mr. Dale apparently thinks that he is advancing a new and daring idea when he suggests that adequate aggregate demand alone will eliminate unemployment. It is actually an old idea which was advanced with monotonous regularity years ago when we knew much less about the operation of the labor market than we do today. Mr. Dale is about a decade behind the times in his assessment of the current "conventional wisdom."

Perhaps it would be asking too much to suggest that Mr. Dale read the voluminous hearings and reports of the Clark Subcommittee on Employment and Manpower, or even the most recent Manpower Report of the President. He might, however, read the article by James Tobin in The New Republic of March 7, 1964. As Tobin pointed out the demand stimulant is necessary but by no means sufficient to eliminate long-term unemployment. I would suggest that the conventional view among economists today is that both adequate aggregate demand and an effective manpower policy are needed if we are to solve the unemployment problem.

William H. Miernyk
University of Colorado

Mr. Dale reassures us that the new technology is a paper tiger, at least as far as its effect on jobs is concerned. We have nothing to worry about except boosting demand, he says. A few of the many considerations that appear to have escaped his notice:

Automation-cybernation is not in full spate but only beginning to bite in. E.g., 99 percent of the machine tool operations susceptible to cybernation remain to be cybernated. The invasion of middle management processes has yet to start on any large scale.

Official figures seriously understate unemployment, failing to take into account the underemployed, those not looking for work, and most of those in the great poverty sink.

High aggregate demand is not an automatic good, it is only assumed to be by economists who cannot believe in the possibility of radical change and who cannot think of any other way of distributing income.

Mr. Dale's assertion that nothing essential in economic organization has been altered by the new technology has parallels, of which only one need be mentioned. A good many politicians still talk as though the hydrogen bomb and its siblings have not effectively proscribed war, as if nuclear war might still serve some rational purpose.

What has not changed are unimaginativeness and devotion to ancient bro-

333 EUROPEAN HOTELS

140 cities, 19 countries covered in handy list of excellent, inexpensive hotels. Prices, Addresses. $1.

BON VOYAGE
Box 24684NR
Los Angeles 24, Calif.

REALITY AND MYTH IN AMERICAN FOREIGN POLICY statements by

John F. Kennedy
Senator J. W. Fulbright
President Lyndon B. Johnson

also

THE SOVIET ECONOMIC OFFENSIVE IN WESTERN EUROPE: OIL AND INITIATIVE IN THE COLD WAR

The Document Press — Box 597
1.00 each — Newark, Del.

For Catholics Only?

WHAT ABOUT:

BIRTH CONTROL?
BUSINESS ETHICS?
INTERRACIAL MARRIAGES?
COLLEGE MORALS?

AMERICA analyzes all the issues that shape the American way of life and, directly or indirectly, affect you and your family. It sets down guidelines to help you form your own opinions based on intelligent understanding of the problems. You may not always agree with AMERICA's point of view, but you will respect what it has to say. Readers of AMERICA, the National Catholic Weekly Review edited by Jesuit Fathers, include leaders in business, government and education. AMERICA is often quoted in the press, radio and television. Join its influential list of subscribers today!

SPECIAL GET-ACQUAINTED OFFER
Just send $2 along with your name and address, and you will receive the next 15 issues of AMERICA at less than half the newsstand price.

AMERICA — NR-3
920 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10010

☐ Enclosed find $2 for my 15-week trial subscription.
☐ I would like an annual subscription at $8.
☐ Payment enclosed ☐ Bill me

Name.....
Address.....
City.....
State..... Zip.....

ASPECTS OF APPLIED PSYCHOLOGY AND CRIME

By A. A. Roback

326 pages—30 illustrations (MANY ON INDIRECT NEWSPAPER PROPAGANDA) Chapters on "Moral Issues in Applied Psychology," "Selling," "Prejudice," "Social Alertness," "Psychology Applied to the Natural Sciences," "Crime and The Values," and a dozen other topics, mainly on the crime situation and what to do about it.

$7.00
(Add 25c postage)
Limited edition, numbered and autographed

IN ALBERT SCHWEITZER'S REALMS

45 chapters—70 beautiful pictures. Important and interesting contributions by the world's foremost in honor of the great humanitarian who will be 90 in a few months. A handsome volume. 6 x 9.
Edited by A. A. Roback

$10.
(Add 30c postage)

Order now from
SCI-ART PUBLISHERS
6 Sacramento St.
Cambridge 38, Mass.

YOUNG DEMOCRATIC CLUBS! Make money for your organization's contribution to the campaign. Sell Lexon's popular bumper stickers: HELP GOLDWATER STAMP OUT PEACE or GOLDWATER '64→HOTWATER '65. You can sell these stickers for 50c each. Your cost: $10 for 50, $15 for 100 and $60 for 500. (Your own slogan printed for small extra fee) Write: Lexon, Box 183 X, Colvin Sta. Syracuse 5, N.Y. (This offer available to any group.)

MAJOR ART BOOK PUBLISHER seeks young man interested in books and fine arts, free to travel. Drive art bookbus visiting libraries, colleges, universities for promotion and sales. Excellent beginning publishing experience, with future increase in position and pay intended. Send resume and background information. Box 1309, Greenwich, Conn.

"PAINTING" WITH LIGHT. Fantasmagoric rendering of your portrait on canvas dipped in photographic color emulsion and "painted" with light. Size 11 x 14, $35.00. Rendering made from any color or B & W print, slide or negative. For color slide sample of our creations send 50c to Portable Color Studio, 10 St. Marks Place, NYC, 10003.

GLOUCESTER, original oil painting famous lighthouse. 20" x 24". Beautiful frame. $22.50 Gloucesarts, P.O. Box 538, Gloucester, Mass.

THE AMERICAN IDEA. Sample copy 25c P.O. Box Two, Magnolia, Mass.

IS THE COMMUNICATIONS BARRIER FRANGIBLE? The Friendly World, GPO Box 1004, Brooklyn, N.Y. 11201.

mides leaned on by the majority of economists, political scientists, and writers on economic issues when confronted with any phenomenon that looks even faintly novel.

W. H. Ferry
Santa Barbara, California

I regret that Mr. Dale, whose writing always deserves thoughtful consideration, should have chosen to present what I believe to be a generally sound analytical argument in irrelevant joinder with a highly conjectural forecast of the future of unemployment in the United States.

Surely Mr. Dale is right to reject the fundamental reasoning of the cybernation fanatics.

Almost equally certainly, he is right to deny that a deficiency of labor skills is a significant present cause of the level of American unemployment.

Less certainly but, I believe, highly probably, he is right to assert that some complex of conventional (Keynesian or post-Keynesian) fiscal and monetary policies is quite capable of reducing United States unemployment to the level of his modest goal, "3.5 percent or less of the labor force."

But he has not the beginning of a reasoned basis for asserting, as he does, that two or three years from now American unemployment will in fact be at a level of 3.5 percent or less. That level depends on future economic developments (particularly in labor supply, in productivity and in the level of total demand) not now precisely measurable, and on future public actions not yet determined.

Mr. Dale's forecast may turn out correct or incorrect. But neither he nor any other economist has a basis, in present knowledge, for asserting that it is correct or incorrect. Let us separate his economic analysis from his venture in prophecy.

Oscar Gass
Washington, D. C.

"Goldwater for Halloween"
Bumper Stickers
Mail 50 cents each
24½ Dudley Street
Venice, Calif.

Senate Apportionment

Sirs:

I must take exception to TRB's assertion (August 22) that "Some day or other the wildly malapportioned US Senate, like the British House of Lords, has got to be reformed." In the first place, by the express provision of Article V of the Constitution, any amendment that would change the basis upon which the Senate is apportioned – even if a way could be found to submit it – would have to be ratified, not by merely three-fourths of the states, but by all of them. Of course, we could get around this by calling a new constitutional convention, which might carry out needed reforms in other areas as well, but not without running the risk of having some hard-won gains of the past compromised away.

Another approach would be to do what the British have done with the House of Lords and start taking away some of the special prerogatives of the Senate. Eventually that body, though left unchanged in its outward form, might find itself reduced to playing a distinctly subordinate role in the legislative process.

However, I am not in the least convinced that this would be a good thing. Whereas it might be expected to be a sanctuary of privilege, the Senate is today and has been for some time made up of men who are, by and large, more progressive and less parochial in their thinking than most members of the House of Representatives.

Norman W. Johnson
East Lansing, Michigan

Mississippi

Sirs:

Last February I participated in the Hattiesburg Ministers' Project in Mississippi. Since then I have read a great deal about SNCC, Mississippi, and the civil rights struggle in the South. The two articles by Christopher Jencks (July 25, August 22) were the most perceptive and candid that I have yet seen. I salute him and The New Republic for excellent reporting.

Rabbi A. James Rudin
Champaign-Urbana, Illinois

Unions score on job rates

Meatpacking unions win contract clauses maintaining pay rates for jobs that may be downgraded through automation

Automation has trimmed 30,000 jobs out of the meatpacking industry over the past six years. In the process, many high-skilled, high-paid workers have been replaced by lower-paid machine attendants. But now a large part of the industry has hit upon a unique way to maintain pay levels in a trade where jobs have been changing drastically.

Under new meatpacking industry contracts, the end product of a job, not its changed nature, will determine the rate of pay when processes are automated. Existing pay rates will be maintained even if the changed job requires less skill.

The United Packinghouse Workers and Amalgamated Meat Cutters & Butcher Workmen negotiated the clause in recent bargaining with Armour & Co. [BW Sep.5'64,p88].

Bar against cuts. According to the two unions, "scores and scores" of job rates have been cut during the past several years after technological changes. Many reductions have amounted to 25¢ an hour or more.

Typically, hides formerly were removed from carcasses by men with knives. This was one of the most highly skilled jobs in a packinghouse. The men received $3.325 an hour, according to UPW. Now, a machine pulls the hide off carcasses mechanically. Operators need less skill and experience. And, according to UPW, the job rate was cut to $2.72 when the new equipment went into service.

Under the changed contract, the rate wouldn't be cut under the same circumstances, even if a veteran skilled employee is replaced by a new man with different knowhow but less skill. The end products are the same—a hide and a skinned carcass. End on busiout the k main-nagazine as avail-

eporting
Hill Pub-

Memo from BARBARA PATTERSON

9/21/64

LE:

The mimeographed NEWS from the Labor Dept. is filed under Labor in the material files in the file room. In the past we have not kept them all - only those which relate specifically to race interests. Henceforth would you like to keep accumulating a complete file in your office?

Other Labor Dept. publications -
Farm Labor Market Developments
Employment and Earnings
Monthly Report on the Labor Force
Occupational Wage Surveys (by city) - are filed chronologically on a shelf in the library room.

bp

U. S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY

WASHINGTON

LE ✓

BP: Let me know if these reports are received on a regular basis, and how they are disposed of - i.e., filing, or ..., etc.

LE.

Enclosed are News Releases from the Department of Labor which may not have come to your attention.

Sincerely yours,

Arthur A. Chapin

Arthur A. Chapin
Special Assistant to the Secretary of Labor

Enclosures

Memo from LLOYD ELLIOTT

From: USDL Weekly News Digests

9/14/64 – "Negro High School Graduates and Dropouts Fair Worse Than White Counterparts."

9/28/64 – "Teenage Unemploy't Rates, by Color and Sex"

8/31/64 – "Manpower Utilization for Males 25-64 Years Old, by Color"

"Typical Displaced Worker not a Negro"

"Man Hours Req'd to Produce Cotton Down 77% in 30 years"

9/7/64 – "Secretary Wirtz Discusses Race and Technology"

OVER!

9/21/64 –
Negro Employment – Unemploy't
Shows Improvement July to August.

Employment - Gen

Job Outlook

At Last, the Boom Is Creating Openings for Some Long-Idle Groups

Steel Mill Recruits Unskilled Workers; Piper Aircraft Is Hiring Many Teen-Agers

Women, Negroes Sought Too

WSJ 10-2-64

A WALL STREET JOURNAL News Roundup

The long U.S. business boom finally is creating more job openings for some groups that have had a prolonged high level of idleness—the unskilled, the less educated, women, teen-agers and Negroes.

That's the most striking finding of a survey of the hiring plans of 66 companies, big and small, from coast to coast. Not too surprisingly, in view of the accelerating pace of business, an overwhelming majority—48—are increasing their work forces. Another 13 are holding employment steady, and only five are cutting payrolls. A couple of these hope to restore some of the cuts soon.

[The Labor Department reported that the U.S. unemployment rate was 5.15% of the labor force in mid-September, almost unchanged from 5.14% in mid-August. It termed the slight fluctuation "statistically insignificant." See chart in column 4 and story on page 2.]

The size of some current hiring programs is more unexpected. Many companies plan to increase employment 10% or more by year's end, and General Dynamics Corp. plans to double the work force in its Quincy, Mass., shipyard to 6,000 in the next year. The yard's employment already has doubled from 1,500 in the last nine months, as construction has been pressed on four nuclear submarines. Now the yard has a contract for repair work on three tankers that will require many more men.

Broadening Demand

But more surprising still is the fact that hiring demand is no longer confined to skilled workers, such as welders and machinists—or even to adult men with high school diplomas and experience in the industries seeking them. Companies still fight each other fiercely to hire all such men that they can find. But they can't find many, and their sales are rising fast enough to require more workers in a hurry.

So the boom, in its 43rd month, is finally beginning to create openings for the following groups of people who earlier had great trouble finding jobs:

The unskilled. Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., heading for a production record along with the rest of the steel industry, ran out of laid-off workers to recall in July. So it's now looking in "areas where there's an excess of manpower" for workers who haven't been inside a steel mill before. To recruit a "couple of hundred" such men for its Chicago-area works, it's sending scouts into such areas as Kentucky and South Bend, Ind. Company em-small, from coast to coast. Not too surprisingly, in view of the accelerating pace of business, an overwhelming majority—48—are increasing their work forces. Another 13 are holding employment steady, and only five are cutting payrolls. A couple of these hope to restore some of the cuts soon.

[The Labor Department reported that the U.S. unemployment rate was 5.15% of the labor force in mid-September, almost unchanged from 5.14% in mid-August. It termed the slight fluctuation "statistically insignificant." See chart in column 4 and story on page 2.]

The size of some current hiring programs is more unexpected. Many companies plan to increase employment 10% or more by year's end, and General Dynamics Corp. plans to double the work force in its Quincy, Mass., shipyard to 6,000 in the next year. The yard's employment already has doubled from 1,500 in the last nine months, as construction has been pressed on four nuclear submarines. Now the yard has a contract for repair work on three tankers that will require many more men.

Broadening Demand

But more surprising still is the fact that hiring demand is no longer confined to skilled workers, such as welders and machinists—or even to adult men with high school diplomas and experience in the industries seeking them. Companies still fight each other fiercely to hire all such men that they can find. But they can't find many, and their sales are rising fast enough to require more workers in a hurry.

So the boom, in its 43rd month, is finally beginning to create openings for the following groups of people who earlier had great trouble finding jobs:

The unskilled. Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., heading for a production record along with the rest of the steel industry, ran out of laid-off workers to recall in July. So it's now looking in "areas where there's an excess of manpower" for workers who haven't been inside a steel mill before. To recruit a "couple of hundred" such men for its Chicago-area works, it's sending scouts into such areas as Kentucky and South Bend, Ind. Company employment already has risen to about 25,000, from an [illegible] average of 23,815.

[illegible]ingham steel maker, which has raised employment 18% in the past eight months and is still hiring, has turned to the Alabama State Employment Office for the first time in five years to find applicants. It's seeking men to lay the fire brick that lines steel-making furnaces, and has asked specifically for six trainees in their early 20s, as well as 12 experienced men.

Such demand isn't confined to steel. Emden D. Schultz, Cleveland area manager of the Ohio State Employment Service, says his whole area "is seeing a pickup in demand for unskilled and semi-skilled labor, which indicates the supply of skilled workers is pretty well picked over." So, he adds, his office's unemployment compensation case load has dropped to the lowest level for this season "in seven years."

The less educated. Conley Frog & Switch Co., Memphis maker of railroad supplies, is increasing employment from 125 two months ago to a goal of 170 by year-end. And it's now hiring, for semi-skilled jobs, applicants who have finished only two years of high school. It formerly had insisted on a high school diploma, but "we had to lower the standards to get trainable people," says William Riley, personnel director.

Women. City Stores Corp., a major department store chain, is operating some suburban stores three nights a week. So, like many other department and discount stores, it's juggling staff schedules and hiring many part-time employes to work about 22 hours a week. A spokesman says the company is focusing especially on housewives because they often are well-educated, learn fast, are reliable and willingly settle for part-time work while their children are growing up.

Teen-agers. Piper Aircraft Corp., a maker of private planes, is hiring "a lot of teen-agers" at its Lock Haven, Pa., and Vero Beach, Fla., plants, says C. W. Pool, treasurer. Piper needs new workers, he says, because it ran out of furloughed employes to recall two years ago. And it "feels better" about hiring young men because of declining military draft calls, he says. Piper since June has hired 162 new workers, raising its work force to 2,892, and aims to have 3,000 on the payroll by year's end.

Norton Co., Worcester, Mass., machine tool maker, can't find enough skilled workers, such as lathe and milling machine operators. So it's hunting unskilled men it can train and, like Piper, looking especially for youngsters. "We take every graduate we can get out of Boys' Trade School in Worcester," a spokesman says. Norton also hires students for a part-time on-the-job training program while they're still going to school.

Negroes. Spiegel, Inc., Chicago mail order house, is hiring about 8,500 people for the Christmas season. And it has a complaint about the scarcity of help rarely, if ever, heard in business circles before. "With more firms doing non-discriminato[illegible] hiring this year, a company like ours w[illegible]h has used fair employment for 20 years has a more difficult time hiring Negroes," an official says. "We have a little more competition."

Obviously, these just-beginning employment

Please Turn to Page 15, Column 3

Job Outlook: Boom Now Is Opening Places for Some Long-Idle Groups

Continued From First Page

trends could be nipped in the bud if the current strike against General Motors Corp. drags on long enough to bring a general economic letdown. But if the trends continue, they could bring the U.S. by far the most cheering job news it has had in years.

Though the national unemployment rate dropped earlier this year from the 5.5% plateau on which it had long been stuck, it has shown no further improvement since early summer. The mid-September jobless rate, rounded off by the Labor Department to 5.2%, actually was a bit higher than the four and a half year low of 4.9% touched in July.

Washington and private economists have warned that, as more youngsters reach working age and the business upswing lures more housewives and others into the labor market to offset rises in the number of jobs, further inroads into the jobless rate may be difficult to come by. And they clearly will be especially difficult to make if employers only compete more vigorously to hire the dwindling supply of unemployed skilled workers and adult men generally. The Government estimated early this year that only about 3% of the unemployed are skilled workers. The unemployment rate among all adult men was only 3.7% last month; among married men, the family breadwinners, it was a still lower 2.9%.

But increased hiring of the unskilled workers who now throng unemployment compensation offices, and of women, teen-agers and Negroes could do much more to cut into joblessness. Last month's unemployment rate for adult women was 5%, and teen-age unemployment was a towering 14.2%. The Negro unemployment rate has long been over 10%.

Trends Likely to Last

There's evidence the new employment trends, given a reasonably quick settlement of the GM strike, will in fact continue. While U.S. industry still had much idle plant capacity employment gains were slow, and confined to skilled workers, or at most to experienced men who had been on layoff. Past surveys by this newspaper found many companies that were increasing output sharply, but doing so by opening valves a little wider in automated plants, or running machines faster and longer; their hiring was at a minimum.

The current survey turns up only one such report—from the paper industry, which is raising production but cutting factory employment slightly by using more efficient machines. Other industries generally have already squeezed all the production possible out of their present workers, and are having to hire new men to fill rising orders.

Appliance-making Admiral Corp., for instance, is hiring workers for the first night

York-based Flintkote Co. also is hiring workers to add extra shifts in several departments.

New Men for New Plants

Other companies, finding demand pressing on capacity, are opening new plants, expanding existing ones, or both, and hiring workers to man the new facilities. Beaunit Corp., a fiber and textile producer, has hired over 100 employes in the past two months. "We plan to hire about 500 more in the remainder of 1964, and this will bring our work force to 8,500, a record," says Irwin S. Meltzer, president. "This is because we're building a new nylon plant and a new rayon plant, and expanding our polyester (fiber) operation."

U.S. Plywood Corp. says hiring caused by new plant openings, plant expansions and acquisitions will raise its work force to 16,000 by year's end. It employs 15,000 now, up from 13,771 in July and about 12,000 in mid-1963.

Redman Industries, Inc., Dallas maker of house trailers, will hire 150 workers shortly to open a new plant in Ohio, another 100 to expand a Georgia plant, and still another 200 to start double shifts at plants in Pennsylvania and Michigan, says Wendell Logan, personnel director. Redman already has increased employment to 1,300, from 1,200 at the end of 1963.

Many companies even seem to have reached the limit of the extra production they can get by working present employes overtime. Union leaders and some Government officials have long suspected many employers used overtime to avoid hiring new men, who would have to be paid costly fringe benefits in addition to their wages, and past surveys by this newspaper have turned up evidence they might have been right in some cases. But now the situation is changing.

True, overtime is still heavy. Factory employes worked an average of three overtime hours a week in August, the highest since this figure was first compiled in 1956, and some reports indicate overtime has increased since then. Ajax Magnethermic Corp., Warren, Ohio, maker of induction heating and melting equipment, is working many employes 50 hours a week, or 10 hours overtime. Standard Products Co., Cleveland auto parts maker, is "working six full days and part of the seventh day" weekly and has "some people working 12-hour (daily) shifts," says Charles Gue, personnel manager.

But these firms echo the complaint of Thomas B. Leech, assistant general manager of Yuba Heat Transfer Corp., Tulsa, that heavy overtime is costly and "a kick in the pants when you're trying to run an efficient plant." Every company queried that's working overtime is hiring people, too. Most, indeed, say they are scheduling overtime only because they can't find as many new workers as they need.

When workers can be found, some companies are hiring them specifically to cut, or at least limit, the overtime their present employes are putting in. A Koehring Co. division that makes heavy construction equipment recently reopened a Chattanooga plant that had been closed for three years, and expects to have 240 employes there by early 1965. The plant was reopened, and the new men hired, largely to ease the overtime load at the division's Milwaukee factory, where employes now are working 10-hour daily shifts, says K. R. Chandler, division president.

"Can't Stand More"

Ronson Hydraulic Units Corp., a North Carolina maker of aircraft hydraulic units, plans to hire 24 new workers, half of them unskilled, by year's end to begin a new night shift, says R. E. Fuller, vice president. Ronson would prefer to raise overtime, he says. But its workers already are putting in a nine-hour day, he says, "and I don't think they could stand more."

About the only exception to the bright employment trend is the defense industry, and specifically its aerospace segment, which has been hit by changes in Government procurement programs lately. In New York, Republic Aviation Corp., builder of jet fighter-bombers, has cut employment to 7,000, from an 18,000 peak in late 1963, and is going lower still. California's unemployment rate rose to 6.3% in mid-August, from 6% in mid-June, largely because of aerospace layoffs.

But there's a chance some furloughed aerospace workers can get jobs elsewhere. Paul Schrade, Los Angeles district director of the United Auto Workers, which represents many aerospace employes, expects some displaced aerospace workers to land in West Coast auto assembly plants. New UAW contracts, he points out, give assembly-line workers 36 minutes of relief time a day, against 24 previously. So he expects assembly plants soon to begin hiring more "relief men," to fill in on the line for regular workers taking their breaks.

What makes workers migrate

Mobility has long been cited as a means of matching up idle workers with areas of job plenty. But not much has been known about it until a recent Labor Dept. study

In theory, one way to solve unemployment is to increase job mobility—so that workers out of a job in one area can move easily to another community with more "help wanted" signs. But little has been known about mobility except some commonsense assumptions.

Now the U. S. Labor Dept.'s Bureau of Labor Statistics has contributed some scholarly evidence to the discussion: a statistical analysis of migration patterns among a sample group of men 18 to 64 during the year from March, 1962, to March, 1963. Essentially, it confirms the commonsense theories—with a few surprises.

Of the men studied, some 7% had moved across a county line during the year. Logically enough, the migration rate was almost twice as high for unemployed workers as for others. Some 11% of those who were unemployed in March, 1962, had moved to another county by March, 1963, compared to only 6% of the employed. The unemployed who moved fared better than the unemployed who didn't; 72% of the former were employed by March, 1963, compared to only 55% of the latter.

Younger. As a group, the migrants tended to be younger than the men who stayed put, and to have shorter job tenure. In fact, the under-25 group was the only one in which the migration rate for employed men was equal to that for unemployed—11% in both cases.

In part, this statistic is unrelated to the labor market. Many of the under-25 group were in college or the armed forces in March, 1962; their change of residence a year later involved military transfers or a return home.

Other moves in this group represented the shopping around for jobs characteristic of new entrants into the labor force, the results of marriages to residents of other areas, and follow-ups on job connections made in college. In general, this group not only was twice as likely to move as the average, but it moved farther, often crossing state lines.

Seniority ties. At the other extreme, men over 44 were only half as likely to move as the general average. The BLS researchers attributed this reluctance to job seniority rights, fear of prolonged unemployment, and family, home, and community ties.

Marriage made a man less willing to move, but—the study's biggest surprise—children did not add to this unwillingness. The migration rate for heads of families (6%, a third lower than that for other men) was the same whether or not they had children under 18. Presumably family ties, home ownership, or jobs held by wives were the operative factors.

Nonwhites had lower migration rates than whites, whether or not they were employed—although they moved more often within their home counties. The BLS researchers speculated that their generally lower earnings prevented them from accumulating the money necessary for longer moves.

Mobile professionals. An occupational breakdown of the migrating group showed the same proportions as in the population at large, with one significant exception. Professional and technical workers accounted for 19% of the migrants, but for only 12% of all employed men. The researchers offered several explanations: With higher educational attainments than most other groups, they were more likely to be aware of job opportunities elsewhere; because of a nationwide demand for their skills, they were more likely to get job offers from far afield or to be transferred by their employers; and with higher incomes and less risk of unemployment than most, they could afford to move.

Half of all migrants moved for economic reasons—to take a job (30%), to look for a job, to make a job transfer. Among the unemployed migrants, 70% moved for economic reasons. Almost half of these moved to take a job.

Economic motives also weighed heavily with agricultural workers who migrated. Some 75% of these moved for job-connected reasons—many of them to non-farm jobs, as part of the national movement from agricultural to manufacturing employment.

Color aspect. As a general rule, white migrants moved to take a job, non-white migrants to look for one; professional, technical, managerial, and sales workers moved to take a job, farm and non-farm laborers, operatives, and service workers moved to look for one.

An even stronger pattern emerged in the new jobs to which the migrants moved, or which they found after migration. Most migrants remained in the same occupational group no matter how many county or state lines they crossed. Nonfarm laborers were the major exception. Only 35% of them were still laborers in March, 1963. Some 30% had become operatives, 8% had become craftsmen, and 18% had become white collar workers.

The extent to which the surveyed workers benefited by migrating can be assessed only provisionally, the BLS researchers warned. The survey's cutoff date was, at most, only a year after their move. A later check might show different results. Moreover, only half the migrants moved for work-related reasons; for the others, a new job was merely a by-product. Even among the work-related migrants, the social and personal gains of greater labor market efficiency should be weighed against possible contrary personal desires, the BLS said. End

Labor briefs

BW

Truck industry gets warning from Hoffa that IBT will seek increase in pensions

James R. Hoffa, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, has warned the trucking industry that it, too, will be asked to increase pensions and make early retirement of truckers more inviting. Bigger pensions and incentives for early retirements are a key gain in auto contracts and are a demand in farm equipment, can, steel, and other industries.

Hoffa wants $300-a-month pensions paid by employers for all who retire early (those who quit at 57 with 20 years' service now get $250) with the amount paid by employers dropping after five years, when social security starts, to $135 (now $110). The IBT plan lets unionists carry pension service credits from one employer to another.

AFL-CIO unions in paper industry are beaten by newly formed independent on West Coast

An independent union less than five months old has defeated the two dominant AFL-CIO unions in the paper industry to win bargaining rights for almost 22,000 workers in 50 West Coast pulp and paper mills.

The victory of the Assn. of Western Pulp & Paper Workers in two National Labor Relations Board elections last week dealt a bitter blow to the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite & Paper Mill Workers and the United Papermakers & Paperworkers. Some 30 locals from the two AFL-CIO internationals form the nucleus of the new union. They broke off last May—after months of conflict—in a dispute over procedures during negotiations with the Pacific Coast Assn. of Pulp & Paper Manufacturers [BW Jun.6'64,p76].

When the internationals proceeded with bargaining, producing a 16¾¢ package offer, the membership first rejected the proposal, then—in response to the independent union's plea not to vote—failed to register enough votes to put the contract into effect.

The ensuing battle raged from San Diego to Ketchikan. Disaffiliating locals transferred the bulk of their treasuries to the new union. The two internationals obtained injunctions to reverse the move. AFL-CIO Pres. George Meany warned that the new union would be barred from the AFL-CIO. The employers' association (whose uniform labor agreement covers 49 of the 50 mills) first proclaimed neutrality, then issued a statement reminding workers of 30 years of labor peace under the internationals.

Last week two elections told the tale. In the first, workers covered by the Pacific Coast Assn. of Pulp & Paper Manufacturers contract voted 10,653 for the new union; 8,130 for the two internationals (combined on the ballot); and 91 for no union. In the second, employees of the Ketchikan Pulp Co., in Ketchikan, Alaska, voted 254 for the new union, 34 for the old ones.

Stronger demands for improved pensions, health and welfare provisions, and protections against automation presumably lie ahead. These were the points emphasized in campaigning by the new union and its president, William Perrin, an electrician at the Crown Zellerbach Corp. mill in Oregon City, Ore.

Drive to counteract 'backlash' among workers is making headway, AFL-CIO reports

AFL-CIO's counter-offensive against the racial "backlash" that threatens to provide laborite support for Republican Presidential nominee Barry Goldwater is "showing results—the threat is substantially reduced," according to the federation's political director, Alexander E. Barkan.

The problems of the backlash were a big worry for union officials at a political meeting in Washington early in September; many conceded that they might have trouble delivering union votes to the Democrats [BW Sep.12'64,p49]. Labor launched a broad and expensive campaign to counteract discontent over the Administration's civil rights position.

Its focus is on "the whole Goldwater—not just the man who voted against the civil rights law." Union arguments stress the GOP nominee's position on medicare (perhaps labor's No. 1 legislative objective) and against a higher minimum wage.

Labor has its reservations about Lyndon B. Johnson as, at best, only lukewarm for unions. But it isn't letting the reservations show in its anti-Goldwater fight to offset the civil rights backlash.

United Rubber Workers reelects Burdon, but fails to go along with dues hike

George Burdon won election to his third term as president of the United Rubber Workers last week, but delegates to the union's 24th international convention in Chicago turned down most of his recommendations. Among the proposals defeated were a 50¢ dues increase [BW Sep.19'64,p148]; three-year terms for international officers instead of two; a three-year interval between conventions instead of two, and an increase in weekly strike benefits from $25 to either $30 or $40.

Burdon and other international officers and field representatives did achieve salary increases of $20 a week. This brought Burdon's annual salary to $18,060. Vice-Pres. Peter Bommarito and Secy.-Treas. Ike Gold—also reelected—will each receive $15,060.

Present monthly dues of the 456 URW locals range from $4 to $5.75. The proposed increase would have boosted the union's revenue by nearly $1-million a year—half to remain with the locals, half to go to the international. Administration spokesmen argued that present revenues were inadequate. Among the burdensome expenses cited: conventions every two years, at a cost of $100,000 to the international union each time.

LOOKING AHEAD

Monthly Report of Nat'l Planning Asso.

Oct 1964 Vol 12, No 7.

Has data + projections on demand for farm operators to 1970, and also on farm migration.

Rec'd 11/2/64

looking ahead

. . . . A monthly report by the National Planning Association on forward-looking policy planning and research — announced, underway, and completed — of importance to the nation's future

In This Issue—

FARM OPERATOR CAREER ADJUSTMENTS AND FARM POLICIES

ECAFE REGION FACES PRICE OF GROWTH

EDUCATION FOR WORK

the people of NPA

October 1964 Vol. 12, No. 7

An Agriculture Committee Statement and a Report

Farm Operator Career Adjustments and Farm Policies

STATEMENT

THE Agriculture Committee of the National Planning Association recommends vigorous action to combat the problems of rural poverty and to improve economic and social conditions in rural America. The Committee calls attention to the report by G. S. Tolley and W. E. Johnston as a significant contribution to discussion of the farm poverty problem. We suggest these lines of action: [1]

1) Flexible monetary and fiscal policies are essential as a first line of attack in reducing national unemployment and in improving the economic opportunities for rural youth who seek to transfer to nonfarm occupations. In the long run the best way to combat low-income farming and rural poverty is to attract into nonfarm vocations youth who have poor opportunities in farming.[2] The rate of farm-to-nonfarm migration is sensitive to national unemployment. This is especially true for the youth. When there is a change in the total number of farms, the associated change in farm operators under 25 years of age is five times as great as for operators who are between 25 and 34 years of age. The maintenance of a strong and vigorous economy, with expanding opportunities for employment, is an important means of reducing rural poverty.

2) Rural youth must have equal educational opportunities with other youth if they are to participate fully in the national economy. Rural youth have not had as good an

[1] Joseph W. Fichter: The Agriculture Committee Statement refers to the report by G. S. Tolley and W. E. Johnston as being significant. The part of the Tolley and Johnston report that is significant and commendable is the latter part which suggests higher price supports to small farmers than to large farmers, and income payments to small producers.

The parts of their report which suggest that young people be steered away from farming are short-sighted and are discouraging to participation in one of the great vocations of life. These parts of their report are also a repetition of the time-worn theme of farm policy which would foster an aristocracy of large landowners.

[2] Reuben L. Johnson: To suggest that youth with poor opportunities in agriculture be given special training for nonfarm employment is sound logic and if this is the intended thought I do not object. However, I do object to the suggestion that the removal of youth from the farm is the answer to poverty and low farm prices and incomes. The matter of economic survival and the preservation of the family farm structure of agriculture are deserving of more thoughtful study and action, including the kind of farm programs and policies needed to assure maximum opportunity for entry of young people into farming.

Citizen-Government Cooperation

• The very high degree of cooperation between citizen and government—between private, voluntary organizations of Americans on the one hand and agencies of the Government on the other—is, I believe, a uniquely important development in the United States. . . . I believe that the Congress acted very wisely when it enacted, in the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, legislation to provide that the Agency for International Development should, wherever appropriate, make use of especially competent resources that may be found in the private sector and in other agencies of Government. By this action it recognized the need for the most efficient use of our most valuable resource—the ability and competence of those called upon to do the work. It also recognized the value of the American tradition of partnership between citizen and government which is, in my opinion, an important part of America's answer to the conflict of ideologies in the world.

Excerpt from the address made by Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman before the Conference on International Rural Development, held at Washington, D. C., July 27–28, 1964.

© National Planning Association, 1964

education as those with whom they are competing, and their education has not usually prepared them for nonfarm jobs. The need for higher quality general education and for expanded vocational training directed toward the preparation of a majority of rural youth for nonfarm careers is widespread and is particularly great for nonwhites.[3] Higher levels of general and technical education will be necessary for efficient management of tomorrow's farms as well as for productive employment in nonfarm vocations. The gap between the education of rural youth and other youth must be closed.

3) There is a clear and definite need for Federal aid to education to assure the rural youth of the nation of more nearly equal opportunities for education and training. Returns from the development of human resources in the United States compare favorably with returns from investments in other resources. A greater national commitment to expanding investment in our human resources is a necessary condition for coping with rural poverty.

4) Low-producing farmers and inefficient commercial farmers form perhaps the largest group of vocationally misfitted individuals in the nation.[4] This group is destined to remain large for many years. An expanded program of vocational rehabilitation, employment retraining, personal counseling, and technical assistance, carried out in conjunction with an expansion in part-time farming, should contribute greatly to greater economic opportunities for these people.[5]

5) The programs provided for under the Manpower Development and Training Act, the Area Redevelopment Act, and the Rural Areas Development Program are highly important to many farm people. Modifications should be made in these programs to enable them to serve better the needs of rural people. In particular, the programs should be opportunity-oriented to a greater extent. The challenge in these programs should be to identify and to foster development of viable rural communities.

More emphasis should be placed upon the potential for growth and development, giving due consideration to the mobility of labor and other resources. For those low-income areas where past out-migration has drained the pool of productive labor, a different approach may be needed. These areas may be doomed to economic stagnation or decline. Some means must be found for providing more adequate social services to the people who remain in these areas. Federal grants may be necessary to support local governments, education, and social services during the economic decline and transition.

6) Current farm price and income support programs seek to meet the needs of both high-management-level operators and those less efficient commercial farmers who are disadvantaged by recent technological changes. These policies treat all people as if they were in comparable circumstances. The cold, hard facts are that the benefits are derived in large measure in proportion to resources owned.

Some means must be found whereby those who have little to sell and who are trapped in their present circumstances because of age, lack of training, and other conditions beyond their control can live out their lives in personal dignity. In order for this to be accomplished in a manner that will not perpetuate poverty, it may be necessary for society to make special grants or to provide higher subsidies on production for farmers who face such circumstances. Such special treatment, however, should be accorded only to those who are now unable to make the necessary adjustments to become productively employed in other occupations and who are unable to acquire necessary resources to generate a reasonable income from farming. Such special programs should cease with the expiration or retirement of the farm operator. Programs of this type could likely be administered with less cost to society than many of the welfare programs currently in use.

[3] Joseph W. Fichter: The implication in the Agriculture Committee Report that the education of rural youth has been a preparation for farm jobs and not for nonfarm jobs is not a valid implication. With the exception of the instruction offered to the relatively small number of young people enrolled in vocational agricultural classes, the education which most rural youth have received has been nonfarm oriented.

The Agriculture Committee Report recommendation which calls for expanded vocational training directed toward the preparation of a majority of rural youth for nonfarm careers is based on a restricted concept of education for living. All youth, rural and urban, should be exposed to many kinds of work, and agriculture should not be minimized.

[4] Joseph W. Fichter: The assertion that "low-producing farmers and inefficient commercial farmers form perhaps the largest group of vocationally misfitted individuals in the nation," is an extravagant statement. They are the victims of low prices of what they sell and high prices of what they buy.

[5] Reuben L. Johnson: It is hazardous to call any group whose personal income is lower than the national average "vocationally misfitted." I think what paragraph 4 should convey is that many subsistence farmers drifted accidentally into farming because of lack of formal education and training needed before they can be employed elsewhere. In this sector of the economy there are many individuals who are vocationally fitted to farming as an occupation but who urgently need opportunity for additional training and the capital needed to acquire land and other resources essential to earning an adequate income.

MEMBERS OF THE NPA AGRICULTURE COMMITTEE SIGNING THE STATEMENT

LAUREN K. SOTH
Chairman; Editor of the Editorial Pages, "Des Moines Register and Tribune"

ROBERT K. BUCK
Vice Chairman; Waukee, Iowa

FERRIS OWEN
Vice Chairman; Director, Nationwide Mutual Insurance Company

CHARLES EDWIN BISHOP
Agricultural Economist, North Carolina State College

SAM HENRY BOBER
Newell, South Dakota

HARRY B. CALDWELL
Executive Secretary, Farmers Cooperative Council

ARVAL L. ERIKSON
Economic Advisor, Oscar Mayer & Co.

JOSEPH W. FICHTER
Farm Consultant, Oxford, Ohio

EARL HEADY
Executive Director, The Center for Agricultural and Economic Adjustment, Iowa State University of Science and Technology

OSCAR HELINE
Marcus, Iowa

A. C. HOFFMAN
Vice President, Kraft Foods

LOUIS B. HOWARD
Dean and Director, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois

REUBEN L. JOHNSON
Director, National Farmers Union Legislative Services

ARTHUR MOORE
The Washington Bureau, McGraw-Hill Publications

DONALD R. MURPHY
Contributing Editor, "Wallaces Farmer"

LOWRY NELSON
Department of Sociology, University of Minnesota

HERSCHEL D. NEWSOM
Master, National Grange

R. J. ODEGARD
O. J. Odegard Potato Company

PAUL D. SANDERS
Editor, "The Southern Planter"

THEODORE W. SCHULTZ
Professor of Economics, University of Chicago

FRANK J. WELCH
Vice President, The Tobacco Institute

OBED A. WYUM
Rutland, North Dakota

WILLIAM H. YAW
The Farm Clinic of the United States

RALPH S. YOHE
Editor, "Wisconsin Agriculturist"

GORDON K. ZIMMERMAN
Executive Secretary, National Association of Soil Conservation Districts

* See footnotes to Statement.

REPORT by G. S. TOLLEY and W. E. JOHNSTON

AS THE TOTAL number of farms in the United States has declined, the average age of farm operators has gradually been creeping upward. Many have hopefully eyed the time when the increasingly large number of older operators will retire. Their retirement in sufficient numbers could help reduce tendencies toward surplus agricultural production and might even lead to expanding opportunities for youths who wish to enter farming. For these events to occur would require that the total number of farms decline no more rapidly than retirements occur. Unfortunately, the projections below do not indicate that these events are on the horizon.

In addition to depending on age considerations, adjustments in farm operator numbers depend on the existence of farm operators with different kinds of managerial ability. The new technologies are favoring high-level management. High-level management is driving lower-level management out of farming. But those with less management ability who have already entered farming do not flow instantaneously into nonfarm jobs. The process of driving out promises to be long and to continue to involve income pressures for some.

These adjustments are an integral part of the story of the rapidly rising productivity of agriculture. While the attempt to foresee future age and managerial adjustments does not give hope for early elimination of adjustment problems, it helps to identify groups within farming, each experiencing different problems. Greater recognition of the different problems could lead to more effective farm policies.

Age

If every farm family had one son and one daughter and if the number of farms remained the same or increased over time, each rural youth could expect to find a place in farming. The number of young men coming of age on farms would not exceed the number of older men leaving farming.

For the first "if" to be fulfilled, farm birth rates would have to be lower than the average of the nation. But they are higher. The second "if" has not been fulfilled since World War I. The rate of decline in the number of farms has been accelerating, and it is by now common knowledge that the 27 percent decline in number of farms during the 1950s is the greatest percentage reduction that has ever been experienced.

To obtain an idea of the process of adjustment as farm numbers decline, consider what happens through time to the number of farmers who were born in a given decade. As an illustration for one group, in 1920 there were 388 thousand operators between the ages of 15 and 25 just entering farming. They had been born between 1895 and 1905. All farm operators born in this decade are connected by a diagonal line in Table 1. By 1930, farm operators born within this interval were 25–34 years old and numbered 1,085 thousand. The nearly 700 thousand increase from 1920 to 1930 reflects life career experiences. While a few persons born in the interval had become farm operators by the time they were 15–24 years old, at that age most who were destined to become farm operators were still in school or were working as family laborers on their fathers' farms. By the time they were 25–34 years old, the majority who were ever going to become farm operators had done so. A net of about 100 thousand additional persons born between 1895 and 1905 became farm operators in the next decade, resulting in 1,207 thousand farm operators being between the ages of 35 and 44 by 1940. Most of the persons were then committed to their chosen careers and were not inclined to change. The smallness of change for this group during the next 10 years is indicated by the fact that there were 1,234 thousand farm operators in the 45–54 age group in 1950. Retirement and death are reflected in the decline to 1960, when there were 851 thousand who were 55–64 years old. For the same reasons, figures for operators over 65 in 1970 would indicate further substantial declines for persons born between 1895 and 1905 under any projection.

TABLE 1

Farm Operators, Past and Projected*

(in thousands)

Age group	1920	1930	1940	1950	1960	Projected 1970
15 to 24	388	384	244	175	65	58
25 to 34	1305	1085	992	844	428	283
35 to 44	1608	1504	1207	1266	858	424
45 to 54	1502	1512	1491	1234	1047	716
55 to 64	1007	1103	1198	1066	851	728
Over 65	592	701	865	794	683	611
Totals	6448	6289	6097	5379	3933	2820

* Farm operator numbers for 1960 and 1970 have been adjusted to 1950 census definition of a farm to make them comparable with earlier years.

Follow any other diagonal in Table 1, and you will find a similar pattern. A glance across the row for operators 15–24 years old suggests what has been happening. The effect of reduced farm numbers occurring in each decade has been reflected in reduced number of farm operators 15–24 years old who are just becoming of working age. Once a given number begins, the general pattern is traced out reflecting the life career cycle that has been described. In other words, the brunt of a change in total number of farms is felt in a change of entry rates for young farm operators. Operators who have already begun farming continue their careers much as they would in the absence of any change in total farm numbers.

While the age patterns along each diagonal are similar, they are not exactly the same. As a result of the unprecedented 27 percent decline in farm numbers during the fifties, numbers in every age group appeared to be lower in 1960 than expected solely on the basis of previous patterns. This suggests that career patterns respond to some extent to adjustments affecting total farm numbers. A regression analysis applied to all decades confirms that each age group shares in adjustments. That is, in moving from one decade to another, the exact amount of change along any diagonal is related to the decline in total farm numbers. The diagonal change from 15–24 to 25–34 is most closely associated with total farm numbers, and then the association declines sharply with increasing age. The only exceptions to decline in response to increasing age are for the Midwest and West, where there appears to be some influence of total farm numbers on retirement age.

The age patterns can be projected into the future. Several studies have indicated that the percentage decline in total farm numbers during the sixties will be about equal to that of the fifties. This is because the adoption of more efficient production techniques is expected to continue at recent rates at least until 1970. The resulting increase in output per person will lead to continued pressure to reduce the number of persons employed in agriculture. The age patterns consistent with these projections of total farm numbers imply that the average age of farm operators will continue to advance. For the first time, farmers aged 55–64 will become more numerous than any other group. There will be a further reduction of young farmer entries, and some who have only recently taken up farming will leave. Projections have been carried out for several decades into the future under a wide variety of assumptions about changes in total number of farms. The age distribution in 1970 is about the same for all projections. The same general result is obtained for each region. Almost all the projections indicate further advance in the average age of farm operators beyond 1970.

TABLE 2

1960–70 Migration of Rural Farm Males

(in thousands)

1970 Age Group	Rural Farm Males Remaining from 1960 if No Migration	Projected 1970 Farm Operators	Other Males Expected to be on Farms in 1970*	Implied Net Migration between 1960 and 1970
15 to 24	1887	58	692	1137
25 to 34	1234	283	144	807
35 to 44	684	424	66	194
45 to 54	944	716	65	163
55 to 64	949	728	151	70
Over 65	1090	611	359	120

*Includes nonoperator farm residents who are (a) employed on or off farms or (b) not employed for reasons including going to school, being disabled, and being in retirement.

Table 2 compares a 1970 projection of farm operators with numbers of males on farms in 1960 who can be expected to survive to 1970. From the farm males expected to survive to 1970, subtract the projected number of farm operators for 1970 and also subtract males expected normally to be on farms in addition to farm operators. The result is an estimate of the number of 1960 rural farm males who will have left farms by 1970. The result implies that between a half and two thirds of rural farm males in younger age groups will have moved off farms by 1970.

Only one farm boy in two or three who is today between the age of 5 and 14 has a chance of still being on a farm in 10 years, when he will be between 15 and 24 years years old. If farm numbers continue their decline at a similar rate in the seventies, only one in two or three of those remaining in the 15–24 group 10 years from now will have a chance of remaining another 10 years. Probably less than a fifth of boys now on farms will remain on farms for

(Continued on page 6)

The People of NPA

Charles F. Phillips

Twenty years ago last month, Charles F. Phillips—a long-time member of the NPA Business Committee—assumed his present position as president of Bates College.

After earning an A.B. degree at Colgate University in 1931 and a Ph.D. in economics at Harvard University in 1934, Dr. Phillips taught economics first at Hobart College in Geneva, New York, then—until 1941—at his alma mater, Colgate University.

During World War II, Dr. Phillips held positions in Washington, D. C., with the National Defense Advisory Commission and the Office of Price Administration. In May 1944, he was appointed Deputy Administrator for Rationing throughout the United States. He became president of Bates College in September 1944, at the age of 34.

In the early 1950s, Dr. Phillips was a member of NPA's Committee of New England, which sponsored a series of reports analyzing New England's economic status. He was also author of an NPA Planning Pamphlet, A Tax Program to Encourage Puerto Rico's Economic Growth, published in 1958.

Dr. Phillips has served the state of Maine as a civilian aide to the Secretary of the Army, and as chairman of the Maine Tax Revision Committee; currently he is a member of the Governor's Committee on Educational Television. He is past president and board chairman of the New England Council; a member of the State Executive Committee of the Maine YMCA; a public governor of the American Stock Exchange; and a director of the Central Maine Power Company, Union Mutual Life Insurance Co., Bond Stores, Inc., Diana Stores Corp., W. T. Grant Co., Sperry & Hutchinson Company, and Eastern Shopping Centers, Inc.

In 1953 and 1954, Dr. Phillips traveled to India and Pakistan on a mission for the U.S. Department of State. He participated in an international economics conference in Switzerland in 1956, and studied economic and social conditions in Poland, Finland, and Russia during 1960 and in the Far East, Australia, and New Zealand during 1961–62.

A frequent contributor to professional journals, Dr. Phillips has been author, coauthor, or editor of several books, including Marketing; Government Spending and Economic Recovery; The American Neutrality Problem; Retailing: Principles and Methods; Marketing by Manufacturers; and Marketing: Principles and Methods.

An Unused Resource

In a letter to Looking Ahead, Mr. William H. Dreier, a member of the Iowa State Commission on Aging, writes:

> I am a retired farmer and find deep satisfaction in reading Looking Ahead. A challenging world we are living in.
>
> Your article, "Housing for the Aged: Some Realities" [April 1964], calls for serious reflection. So many of our retired citizens have wealth, health and brains but are all rested up and rarin' to go but no place to go to.
>
> Here in Iowa, for the past ten years, we have spent a million dollars a year building mental institutions for our elderly. We won't spend ten dollars finding ways to get them busy so they won't have to go to mental institutions.
>
> I am a member of the local Kiwanis. An article in our magazine spoke of folks having a gold mine between their ears. We wish that Looking Ahead might investigate this gold mine to see if the gold in it could be used to build better communities . . . [and] . . . to lift the sights of our community leaders so they would see the wealth of brains rusting away in these fine retired citizens.

We regret that Looking Ahead can do little more than to call to the attention of our more reflective citizens the existence of this American natural resource. Looking Ahead's role is somewhat like that of a hunting dog—we can point to the game but we cannot shoot it down.

Education for Work

THE impact of technological change on jobs and job-seekers points up nothing more strongly than the need for vocationally oriented education. Yet it is in precisely this area that today's schools are failing. This is the contention of Grant Venn, public school administrator and former director of field training for the Peace Corps, in Man, Education, and Work: Postsecondary Vocational and Technical Education.

More than a million young Americans under age 22 are presently out of school and out of work—victims of the rapid disappearance of available jobs for the unskilled and undereducated. At the same time, there is a growing manpower shortage at the skilled, technical, and semiprofessional levels. Dr. Venn argues that, with two or three years of occupation-directed education at the high school or junior college level, many of these unemployed and virtually unemployable youth could be placed in the jobs where they are so desperately needed. "That so many of today's youth did not receive adequate occupational education," he says, "attests a serious shortcoming of the educational system."

Dr. Venn blames a false sense of values for this failure of education to keep pace with modern needs. The prestige attached to the baccalaureate degree and the lowered status of the "blue collar" worker leads most high schools to concentrate on the strictly academic subjects required for college entrance, even though only 20 percent of the nation's students finish college. This forces the remaining 80 percent to study subjects for which they often have neither interest nor aptitude, and the staggeringly high drop-out rate from high schools and colleges is a result.

For the school drop-outs, moreover, possibilities for productive and fulfilling careers grow progressively smaller. Dr. Venn says of them: "Turned out of an educational system oriented toward someone else's college degree rather than their own work needs, and entering a labor market whose jobs require constantly higher levels of education and skill development, their prospects are bleak."

The solution to the problem, according to Dr. Venn, is a greatly stepped-up program of vocational education, not only in high schools but at the important "less-than-baccalaureate level" in two-year and four-year colleges. He emphasizes that such a program should be made an integral and equal part of the nation's educational system, rather than being shunted to the separate and second-class position it has often occupied in the past, and that not only the quantity but the quality of vocational education must be increased. Terming many of the old-style training programs "narrow and lacking in rigor," Dr. Venn stresses that "the tests that the new technology will put to our traditional institutions require that the education of technical workers be of a depth and breadth appropriate to their crucial work and citizenship roles in the years ahead."

Grant Venn, Man, Education, and Work: Postsecondary Vocational and Technical Education. Washington, D. C.: American Council on Education, 1964, xiii and 184 pages, $1.50.

Business Motivation

In The Dynamics of Business Motivation: Its Impact on the Economic Climate, Eric D. Bovet seeks to explain economic instability, stagnation, and mass unemployment by characteristics inherent in the price and profit system. When consumer demand changes in relation to supply, prices and profitability change for the production of the goods. However, prices and profit expectation for the raw materials or semimanufactured goods that are used for the production of the consumer goods do not change at the same time. Because of these time lags or lack of synchronization, some goods remain unsold or some scarcities appear.

The author regards these distortions as the main general cause of business fluctuations in private enterprise economies. He proposes several ways in which a better synchronization could be brought about. One is a price-reporting procedure, with particular emphasis on raw materials and consumer goods. Another set of proposals would reduce the time period between purchase and sales at the different stages in the process of production and sales.

The book conveys interesting insights into business motivation and practices, but this reviewer has not been persuaded that the lack of synchronization in price and profit changes is the major general cause of economic instability, nor that improved synchronization can bring about the desired steadiness in economic growth and employment.

—Gerhard Colm

Eric D. Bovet, The Dynamics of Business Motivation: Its Impact on the Economic Climate. Washington, D.C.: Spartan Books, 1963, 357 pages, $8.75.

ECAFE Region Faces Price of Growth

THE dual processes of import substitution and export diversification in the 22-country ECAFE region are explored in the 1963 Economic Survey of Asia and the Far East, seventeenth in a series of reports prepared annually by the secretariat of the UN Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East (ECAFE).

"A broad survey of policy measures in ECAFE countries reveals the governments' determination to accelerate the process of economic growth and to achieve a viable balance of payments position through planned import substitution and export promotion," says the UN report. However, progress in import substitution and export diversification has not yet brought about reductions of imports or trade deficits. Rather, imports of material and capital goods to the region have been "much increased." The result has been a larger total trade deficit for the region as a whole, and for most individual countries in the region. Despite quantity increases in exports between 1953 and 1962, the trade deficit of the ECAFE region trebled, and the "position seems likely to continue for many years to come."

Developing countries face "severe difficulties in trying to redress their present foreign exchange problems," according to the report. One of the main effects of import substitution programs is that they usually result in an increased demand for foreign exchange. Developing nations must pay a high initial price for the privilege of producing their commodities rather than importing them. Capital requirements for establishing new industries are often well beyond the resources of the individual economy. Furthermore, when new industries are in operation, their requirements for imported materials may be substantial. "These considerations," the Survey says, "emphasize the necessity for close scrutiny of proposals for domestic production of imported goods; import substitution is not invariably an unmixed blessing."

Despite their problems, most countries in the ECAFE region have achieved some diversification of their export products, and some countries were able to diversify export markets, the Survey notes. "Import substitution is being achieved through the domestic production of food in Ceylon and the Philippines, and of final consumption goods in most developing countries except the Republic of Korea. Imports of materials and capital goods are replacing imports of consumption goods, and the dependency on imported capital goods for domestic capital formation is increasing."

Economic Survey of Asia and the Far East, 1963, United Nations. New York: 1964, 238 pages, $3.00.

(Continued from page 4)

their adult lives. Even if the decline in farm numbers abates, high farm birth rates imply that the proportion of farm youths staying on farms will be small.

Three Kinds of Farm Managers

The hope that current force-out pressures might disappear before 1970 is not fulfilled because a decline of 25 to 30 percent within a decade in the total number of farms is substantially larger than the percentage of farms becoming available through normal exit of old operators. The projections imply essentially a repetition during the rest of the sixties of the age group experience of the fifties.

Why do any young operators at all enter farming when circumstances are so unfavorable as to be forcing out many who previously entered? Financially, some young operators are doing quite well as compared to those being forced out. This brings home the fact that age patterns alone do not explain force-out pressures. The farm operator age responses are averages for groups containing high and low levels of management with differing abilities to adapt to new techniques and with differing mobility characteristics.

Three kinds of farm managers can be discerned. First, there are low-income farmers. They produce little and compete for few land or other resources. Availability of nonfarm jobs affects whether they stay in farming, but they have too little connection with commercial agriculture to be much affected by it. A second group is composed of commercial farmers of only moderate productivity. They are at a relative disadvantage in agricultural production. One way in which they differ from low-income farmers is that they are affected by and affect significantly agricultural supplies, prices, and incomes. The third group is composed of relatively efficient farmers who have an advantage in agricultural production. The concentration of relatively young operators among farms of higher economic class is evidence of the third, in-moving group.

The inefficient and efficient operators (groups two and three) are in competition for land and allotments. Many new production practices are being adopted by a majority of commercial operators, both efficient and inefficient. Current tendencies toward surplus agricultural production are due to across-the-board additions to production from adoption of new production practices by virtually all commercial operators plus the additions to production from the increase in number of high-management-level farmers.

If the supply of high-management-level farmers were not too large, the foregoing additions to production could be less than production withdrawals due to normal exit rates associated with death and retirement for those already in farming. Then, in a full-employment economy, adjustment could be accomplished with relatively few farm-nonfarm income disparities through reduction of youth entry into farming. We do not have such a fortunate situation. Across-the-board adoptions of new techniques plus the supply of high-management-level operators plus a sluggish nonfarm labor market combine to bring income pressures. The age patterns considered earlier reflect the lack of mobility, in face of the pressure, on the part of those who have already entered farming.

Policies

Two findings particularly important for policy emerged from the age patterns. First, most farm youngsters will move off farms when they become adults. Second, most adults who have already entered farming will be on farms for the rest of their lives. The analysis of managerial capabilities indicated that relatively few of the adults who will remain in farming will be able to take full advantage of new technologies. Policies could be oriented in several ways to meet the needs suggested by these findings. The following possibilities are offered:

1. Monetary-Fiscal Policy in Relation to Rural Youths. The best way in the long run to combat low-income farming is to keep the young out of this way of life. Farm youths entering the labor market are often marginal workers who have the most difficulty finding jobs when they go to industrial centers, and slackness of aggregate demand is slowing the rate at which local area growth brings jobs to them, closer to home.

Many previous studies have shown that the rate of farm-to-nonfarm migration is sensitive to national unemployment, and the analysis of farm operator changes indicates the age selectivity of the response. When there is a change in the total number of farms, the associated change in farm operators under 25 is five times as great as for operators 25-34 years old. During periods of high national unemployment, youths enter into low-income farming due to lack of other opportunities and then are prone to stay even though alternative opportunities emerge later. Monetary-fiscal policies reducing national unemployment can make it possible for young persons susceptible to farm-to-nonfarm migration to make initial choices of careers with favorable lifetime earnings prospects. This can make a contribution to the remaining lifetime of their productivity.

2. Education for Rural Youths. Farm youths who are marginal in the labor market almost certainly have not had as good an education as those with whom they are competing, and often their education has not prepared them for nonfarm jobs. It has already been noted that less than a fifth of farm boys can be expected to find careers in farming. Furthermore, education will help determine whether those few who stay in farming are high-management-level operators who can look forward to a good living in farming. Finally, an educated labor force is an attractor of industry to a locality.

The need for higher caliber general education and for direction of vocational training toward preparation of the majority of rural youths for nonfarm careers is great, particularly for nonwhites. During the fifties, about 40 percent of the decline in man-hours devoted to agricultural production in the United States was in cotton and affected nonwhites predominantly. Cotton adjustments have not fully run their course yet. Furthermore, it seems inevitable that total labor use in tobacco production—which has remained relatively high due to lack of mechanization—will eventually follow the course of cotton. We project nearly a 50 percent decline in the number of nonwhite operators between 1960 and 1970. The likelihood of a Negro youth's remaining in agriculture may be approaching nil. A large portion of those leaving will be employed or seeking employment in northern cities.

There could be special efforts to direct some of the expanding industrial education activities at rural Negroes. Many of these activities are taking place outside the regular public school system. Therefore, as an additional possibility, special guidance and perhaps financial aid could be given in expanding vocational education programs in rural high schools attended by Negroes.

3. Vocational Rehabilitation. The low-income farmers and relatively inefficient commercial operators who have already entered farming form perhaps the largest group of vocationally misfitted individuals in the country. The age analysis indicates that this group will remain relatively large. A program concept of vocational rehabilitation combining technical assistance, personal counseling, and employment retraining and information, may be appropriate. Pilot endeavors could be started to obtain indications of the effectiveness of this kind of package. The entire package could be more effective than if the individual measures within the package were carried out separately. From pilot endeavors, experience would be gained helping to perfect the approach. Conceivably, the Farmers Home Administration could orient its activities to carry out this type of program.

4. Redirecting Area Development. Area development policies need to be directed to:

(a) concentrations of middle-aged farmers,

(b) pockets of rural youth in isolated areas who seem immune to outside culture.

To employ these low-mobility groups productively may require taking jobs to them in view of their reluctance to move far for productive jobs. Some persons recently and currently becoming farm operators are in the second group. An example is burley tobacco farmers in outlying sections of Appalachia. To bring manufacturing establishments to centers 20 miles away is not sufficient to lure them out of their unproductive situation. Regardless of whether labor pools are composed largely of the middle-aged or of immobile rural youths, a prerequisite is that the pools be large enough to support one or more manufacturing establishments. In short, there is a need to redirect area development efforts more emphatically toward immobile but productive labor supplies.

© National Planning Association, 1964

5. Relief to Local Governments in Undevelopable Areas. For low-income areas which, because of past out-migration, no longer have sufficient pools of productive labor, a different approach may be needed. In addition to individual grants, as under food stamp and other programs under way, grants to local governments could be useful. Areas which have lost their productive labor have high proportions of children and of elderly persons, who are the very ones for whom local government expenses are high for education and social services. Because of lack of local tax revenues, the education and social services provided in these areas are often inferior.

6. Price-Income Policies That Recognize Different Management Levels. Present price-income policies are trying to meet the needs of both high-management-level operators and those less efficient commercial operators disadvantaged by recent technological changes. But the needs of the two groups are dissimilar. The age analysis indicates that, even with the best success in programs of adjustment aimed at the less efficient commercial operators, most of this group will remain in farming. A whole farm soil bank approach may induce some persons to leave farming who would otherwise not leave. For the majority who will remain in farming, programs are needed that distinguish between the needs of the efficient and less efficient commercial operators. This distinction could be made through income payments to small producers, or through higher price supports to small producers than to large producers. This year's cotton legislation made a start in this direction. Desirable variations could tie the payments to people instead of land. Eligibility for some payments might be confined to persons over 40 years of age.

7. Stand-by Protection for Efficient Operators. When there are surplus tendencies, not even the most efficient commercial operators can make a living comparable to that in nonfarm occupations in the absence of programs to keep incomes from falling. The projections indicate that programs will be needed for some time. Even if demand-supply conditions were to change so that high-management-level operators could earn comparable incomes in a free market, there would always be the danger of recurrences of times when demand growth slowed or supply began to shift ahead a little more rapidly, leading to drastic price falls. Efficient commercial operators may wish to have stand-by programs that can be invoked at such times. The prolonged period of the fifties and sixties on the down side of the price roller coaster has led mainly to an unsystematic series of experiments attempting different ways to keep from sinking. These have been last-minute compromises satisfying to no one. We have been so busy improvising that there has been little recent thought about possibilities for permanent income protection programs.

Several different stand-by programs are consistent with an income protection approach. Compensatory payments and variants of diversion programs are examples. There might be provision for building up a fund to help defray costs of these programs out of proceeds from sales of farm products during good times.

LOOKING AHEAD is normally published 10 times a year. From time to time a supplementary issue may be published. For information on membership and available publications and reports, write NPA Membership Department.

NPA PUBLICATIONS STAFF

Editor of Publications: Eugene H. Bland
Editorial Consultant: Virginia D. Parker
Associate Editor: Marta Erdman
Assistant Editor: Barbara Mestetsky
Assistant Editor: Kay Roberts

NPA OFFICERS: Chairman, H. Christian Sonne; Chairman, Executive Committee, Wayne Chatfield Taylor; Vice Chairmen: Frank Altschul, Leland Hazard, Lauren K. Soth, Arnold S. Zander; Secretary, Donald R. Murphy; Treasurer, Charles J. Symington; Counsel, Myron M. Cowen; Assistant Chairman and Executive Secretary, John Miller.

looking ahead

October 1964 Vol. 12, No. 7

Nonprofit Org.
U. S. POSTAGE Paid
Washington, D. C.
Permit No. 1819

MR HAROLD C FLEMING
NEW SOUTH
5 FORSYTH AVE N W
ATLANTA GA

NATIONAL PLANNING ASSOCIATION
1606 New Hampshire Ave., N.W., Washington, D. C. 20009
Telephone: Columbia 5-7685 Cable: NATPLAN

Form 3547 requested

A NONPROFIT, NONPOLITICAL ORGANIZATION, ESTABLISHED IN 1934, DEVOTED TO PLANNING BY AMERICANS IN AGRICULTURE, BUSINESS, LABOR, AND THE PROFESSIONS

Nov. 1, 1964
Urban League Press release —

A survey of educational level of Negroes in the 68 US Cities where
UL has branch.

Ky. LABOR NEWS
11/14/64

XERO COPY

XERO COPY

TEENAGE UNEMPLOYMENT REMAINS HIGH, but Negro youth have been especially hard hit, as this U. S. Labor Dept. chart shows. Worsening situation in past seven years is attributed to the entrance of 1.2 million teenagers into the labor force and a relative decline in unskilled and semi-skilled jobs, the kind they used to find first. Discrimination, less education and inferior education put an extra burden on Negro youth pushing the jobless rate for boys to 24.4 per cent and for girls to 33.6 percent.

The MORE American Scientists Extend into Space and Involved Instrumentation . . . the MORE TMI Tubing Proves its Worth!

The people of Tube Methods are trained to consider every tubing problem important and every inquiry worth careful attention. The reason is clear: TMI quality cold-drawn tubing, produced to EXACT, full-test specifications is usually the best buy for our customers. Perfect fit means less hand-work! Faster, surer assembly! The ultimate in product performance! These should be the kind of good reasons for your people to know our people.

TUBE METHODS INC.

Engineers, Metallurgists, Manufacturing Specialists in cold-drawn seamless and welded stainless steel. High Temperature and High Corrosion Alloys including Haynes, and Huntington Alloys, to highest precision standards in small diameters; .050" to 1.250" O.D. Nationwide distribution. Write, wire, phone.

BRIDGEPORT, MONTGOMERY COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA

Why service workers are less productive

They've lagged behind factory and farm workers because of lower quality labor and less room for mechanization, says National Bureau study

Why have the productivity gains of workers in the service sector—trade, insurance, government, and health—consistently lagged behind improvements in the goods sector?

This question has bothered economists and policymakers since the 1950s, when services took over from goods as the country's No. 1 employer and their slowly rising productivity seemed a potential drag on economic growth.

According to a report published last week by the National Bureau of Economic Research, service productivity, measured in output per man-hour, rose only 1.6% a year from 1929 to 1961. Meanwhile, in the goods sector—manufacturing, farming, transportation, mining, and construction—productivity rose 2.6% a year.

Personal angle. Many economists consider such a gap unavoidable. Technical innovation and new capital, they reason, can readily increase the output of a factory or a farm, where the finished product is all that interests consumers. However, in services that range from education to shoe shining, the consumer wants personal care; and room for mechanization is relatively limited.

But the bureau's report gives weight to a handicap in the service sector that previous studies have either overlooked or played down: the quality of labor. According to the bureau, the quality of service workers hasn't improved so fast as the quality of labor flowing into the goods sector.

Economist Victor R. Fuchs, author of the report, says this factor alone could account for 30% to 40% of the difference between productivity trends in the two sectors. Lags in technical change and in capital input probably account for the rest of the gap, he says, but these factors aren't all-important.

Education. The report is a preliminary survey of the bureau's study of service productivity, which will be completed in two years. So far, the bureau is convinced that service labor in recent years has been drawn increasingly from less skilled groups—women, Negroes, the old, and the young. Also, the educational level of service workers has not been improving so fast as for goods workers.

The bureau isn't sure yet what's behind the quality lag. But Fuchs suspects that services are fast becoming the last resort of the marginal worker. Formerly, a man who couldn't find a job could stay in the goods sector as a self-employed farmer. Now, he is more likely to enter self-employment in a service.

If these findings hold up, efforts to improve labor quality through the antipoverty and manpower training programs could assume new importance. Anything that improves the skills of the marginal worker, says Fuchs, should also help to narrow the productivity gap.

More jobs. Some economists worry that increased output would involve the elimination of too many service jobs and that this would intensify the unemployment problem. But Fuchs says raising labor output in this sector will result in better services at prices more people can pay, which should create demand and generate jobs.

A number of economists think the bureau and the Ford Foundation, which is backing the study, are attempting the impossible. Measuring productivity requires measuring the output of labor; and in many services this is a tricky task.

For example, they ask, what is the output of a doctor? Is it health? And if so, how is it measured? There is no obvious answer to such a question. Thus the analysis inevitably must introduce arbitrary judgment.

Fuchs is well aware of the problems. "I don't underestimate the difficulty of doing this . . . but I do think we can get a good understanding of services which may help in framing public policy." End

Employment - Gen 11-16-64

L.C.

THE NEW YORK TIMES, MON

U. S. Finds Negroes Trapped in Menial Jobs

By M. S. HANDLER

The obstacles in the Negro's path to fuller participation in American affluence have been underscored by Census figures on the economic status of Negroes in 68 selected cities.

The figures, based on the 1960 Census, cover employment, wages, education and housing. They show that 50 to 84 per cent of Negro wage earners fall into four menial and unskilled categories. The categories are operative, household, service and laborer.

An operative is an unskilled mill or factory worker.

The Census figures, supplied at the request of the National Urban League, show that in New York City alone 63 per cent of Negro wage earners are in the four categories—273,997 classified as operatives, household and service, and 60,207 as laborers.

It is the view of the National Urban League, the Association for the Advancement of Colored People and other civil rights organizations that raising the economic status of the Negro population will require a major national effort because it may be beyond the scope of local resources.

In the 68 cities studied, Negro families with an annual income of less than the Government "poverty line" figure of $3,000 ranged from 15 to 62 per cent.

There were proportionately fewer Negro families living below the "poverty line" in Hartford and in Englewood, N. J., than in any other urban center.

In Hartford, 15 per cent, or 1,810 Negro families in a total of 6,328, had incomes of less than $3,000. In Englewood, 251 families, or 15 per cent of the 1,719 Negro families, were in the same classification.

Poverty Percentage High in 68 Cities, Figures From Census Bureau Show

At the other end, 50 per cent of the Negro families in Tulsa, Okla.; 51 per cent in Tampa, Fla.; 51 per cent in New Orleans, 57 per cent in Memphis and 62 per cent in Little Rock, Ark., earned less than $3,000 annually.

Even in the industrial cities, with their varied job opportunities, the percentage of Negro families living in poverty was exceptionally high. The 1960 Census showed the following percentages of Negro poverty:

Los Angeles 23, San Francisco 23, Newark 24, Chicago 27, New York 27 (77,711 of 291,262 families), Cleveland 28, Columbus 30, Philadephia 30 (45,003 of 148,992 families), Baltimore 32, Buffalo 33, Detroit 34 (42,688 of 125,911 families), Kansas City 35, Pittsburgh 36, Cincinnati 36, St. Louis 41 (27,161 of 65,988 families), Miami 42, Phoenix, Ariz., 46, Atlanta 49 (24,714 of 50,020 families).

An encouraging statistic was the percentage of Negro families in the middle-class, or those earning more than $6,000 annually.

Englewood led the country with 45 per cent. Then came Seattle, 44 per cent, and Morristown, N.J., 40 per cent.

The percentages for middle-class Negro families were Chicago 35, Cleveland 33, Newark 32, New York 30 (86,947 families), Philadelphia 27. Little Rock, Memphis and Atlanta were low with 8 per cent each.

The highest median incomes for Negro families were reported in Englewood, $5,686; Racine, Wis., $5,414; Morristown, $5,380; Seattle, $5,332; San Francisco, $5,186, and Los Angeles, $5,163. These were the only urban centers reporting median Negro incomes above $5,000.

New York City was 28th in the list with a median family income of $4,484. The city that reported the lowest Negro family median income was Tulsa with $2,455.

New York reported that 31,243 Negroes earned their livelihoods as professionals and in the technical trades, 15,553 as managers and officials, and 71,277 as clerical help. There were also 12,519 salespeople and 32,636 craftsmen and foremen.

New Orleans had the highest percentage of Negroes employed in menial tasks and as laborers—84 per cent of the wage earners. Miami was second-highest in the list with 83 per cent.

Another set of telling statistics concerned the percentage of school dropouts among Negroes 25 years of age or over. The figures ranged from 54 per cent in Denver and Seattle to 88 per cent in Muskegon, Mich. The percentage of droupouts in New York was 68. A total of 474,962 in a 25-or-over group of 721,960 had not completed high school.

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
ROOM 432, 63 AUBURN AVENUE, N. E. ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA

GEORGE S. MITCHELL,
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

A Council to attain, through research and action, the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South.

INTEROFFICE MEMO

Date November 17, 1964

To: Self From:

Subject: Notes on speech by Wm. Harris of local OMAT

1. President~~s~~ submits ANNUALLY, a MANPOWER REPORT to Congress.

2. Dilemma of automation: Automation decreases employment, at the very time when increases in the population, especially among late teens age group, is increasing the labor force rapidly (because of new entrants.).

3. Unemployment rate for the TEEN-AGED is now at an ALL TIME HIGH.

4. A current "skill shortage crisis", i.e., unskilled cannot fill skilled job openings, therefore, skilled jobs go unfilled because there are no skilled, trained people to fill them.
(Q: ARE JOBS NOW EXPECTING TOO MUCH OF PEOPLE???)

5. Projection of manpower req'ts: In the future, only skilled jobs will expand at a rate equal to the expansion of the L.F. Demand for people in the professions will expand faster than pop'n & L.F. Semi-skilled demand will increase, absolutely, especially in personal services areas.

6. We haven't been able to measure technological change (rate of) directly. However, indirect measurement available in productivity indices (per man-hour rates of output).

7. Need not only more educational facilities for the young, but also supplementary, remedial, and re-training educational programs for ADULTS.

8. Need new approach to vocational education and secondary education. Present secondary educational programs are too "college prep" oriented.

9. Harris claims that training (re-training) programs under MD&T Act have proven themselves, successful. HmmmmmHHHHH?

10. Good Quote, re: Manpower::: "No one really knows the answers; we're looking for them."

QUOTE OF THE WEEK

Automation

Economy – Hes

IAM President Al Hayes spoke last week before the Fox Valley Chapter of the Society for the Advancement of Management, Manitowoc, Wis. Here are excerpts:

AUTOMATION is in its infancy. Yet the scientists working in the field of cybernation are already convinced that there is no office, factory or laboratory function, currently performed by human beings, that machines cannot be built to do.

If automation is to be a blessing, many people in government and industry are going to have to search their souls and arrive at some new attitudes about the traditional relationships between work and income, between men and their jobs, and between work and leisure. Thus far, unfortunately, there has been only the barest recognition that in automation we are not dealing with just a new kind or degree of mechanization.

You may be interested to know that the Communist world is watching technological developments in America with cynical anticipation. They are convinced that automation will do what the class struggle could not: destroy the free enterprise, capitalistic system. They say so at every opportunity.

I am realistic enough to know that not all managements accept unions as a necessary part of capitalism. But unions recognize that capitalism is a necessary part of unionism. We developed as a natural and necessary part of this system and we have a valued stake in it. No matter what inequities or weaknesses it may have, union men and women have prospered under American free enterprise and we will fight to preserve it.

There is much that we, we in unions and you in industry, can do together to make the transition period less brutal to the individual and less traumatic for the economy. We can, for example, negotiate a whole series of contract clauses relating to reemployment, retraining, relocation, early retirement, maintenance of fringe benefits during periods of layoff, and so forth. But the problems we anticipate are too big for labor and industry alone.

Government also has a legitimate and necessary role to play. As we increase our productive potential through automation, we must make a national decision also to raise the levels of human dignity and decency. I don't see how we can preserve the American system, or maintain the conditions necessary for continued technological progress unless we upgrade the lives of people as we upgrade the techniques of production.

We must, of course, view our technology as a means of releasing the trap which now holds 38 million Americans, or one-fifth of our population, in a permanent state of poverty. In this case our concern for people goes hand-in-hand with our concern for providing mass purchasing power sufficient to consume the product of our automated factories.

The facts of automation also demand that we revise our concepts of education. If young people are to compete with these machines they must have far more education.

Along with the reduction of the general workweek, which we view as a necessary counter-balance to the productivity increase which we are experiencing, organized labor is convinced that we must also aim for a more or less general reduction in total hours any person puts in during his working life.

This means in the future generally longer vacations, more holidays, more long weekends, a system of worker sabbaticals, more generous sick leave, later entry into the labor force for the young and earlier voluntary retirement for the old.

Unlike the unhappy men who roamed the English countryside a century and a half ago smashing the machines that were destroying their jobs, American labor has no desire to smash the machines. However, we are determined that the machines shall not smash our way of life.

* * * * * *

Race Problem a Poverty Problem Too

It is popular to say, when discussing race relations, that conditions will change little until the "hearts and minds of men" are altered.

But that argument ignores the fact that hearts and minds are affected by what the eyes of men see.

One's opinions and one's prejudices are naturally influenced by experience. If a white man's experience brings him into contact only with illiterate, unskilled and unambitious Negroes, it is not so surprising that he concludes all Negroes are like that. He may also conclude that there is also a class of "poor whites" who are inherently shiftless and uneductable.

The more fortunate people are not the only ones who draw such conclusions. Poverty and ignorance are self-perpetuating. They discourage ambition and self-government.

Congressman Charles Weltner put it well at a regional Health and Welfare Workshop last Thursday:

". . . those born in poverty, brought up in poverty, rearing their families in poverty and dying in poverty, have for so long accepted it as their fate that their attitudes of listlessness and defeat border on the morbid." That is a truth that knows no color distinction.

One of the most encouraging facets of the 1964 Economic Opportunity Act is that it provides the tools to begin breaking this vicious circle of despair.

Those who have heretofore dismissed the antipoverty act as "politics" or a "waste of money" would do well to reexamine the problem and consider the advantages to Georgia and the nation if the circle can be broken.

Unemployment among Negroes is about twice as high as among whites in Georgia, and the median income of Negroes is $1,500 a year less than that of whites. Imagine how the economy would improve if these unemployed and poorly paid persons were full-fledged taxpayers and consumers.

More than 185,000 Georgians a year draw public assistance of some sort. With education and opportunity, many could become self-supporting citizens.

Ignorance and unemployment are fuel that helps keep basically good citizens down. Programs to promote education and job opportunities are good investments all around.

* * * * * *

Towards Lessening That Income Gap

Per capita income of Georgians continues to rise at an encouraging rate. The region, according to the Atlanta Field Office of the U.S. Department of Commerce, showed an average gain in per capita personal income of 106.1 per cent from 1947 through 1963, compared to the national average of 86.1 per cent.

Georgia's gain was 110.9 per cent, an increase of $980 per person during the period. In 1947, per capita income in the state was $884. In 1963 it had more than doubled, to a total of $1,864.

In spite of percentage gains, however, Georgia's and the South's per capita incomes still lag far behind the nation. The differential in dollars actually has increased. Georgians' per capita income in 1963 was $585 less than that of the nation while in 1947 the gap was $422. Our rate of income increase, however, has paced the nation.

We can be proud of our accomplishments but until the differential between the national average and our region is erased we must continue our efforts to spur growth and development.

* * *

Const – 11/23/64

44 L

Labor

Gary-Hammond Leads 10 Cities In Wage Scales for Negro Men

11-29-64

Special to The New York Times

CHICAGO, Nov. 28—A study by the National Urban League shows that the median income for Negro men is higher in the Gary-Hammond area than in any of 10 large cities across the nation.

That area, just across the state line in Indiana, is a big steel and refining center where wage rates are high. The median income of Negro men there is $4,173, compared with $3,332 in New York.

Albin Prejean, deputy director of the Chicago Urban League, said that relative conditions in the selected cities had changed little since the 1960 Census. The study is based on that census.

Washington ranks ahead of Chicago in five of eight status categories. Los Angeles leads in the percentage of "sound" owner-occupied dwellings for Negroes. That city also has the lowest rate of substandard Negro housing.

The following table was prepared from information supplied by the Chicago Urban League. "Poverty" means a family income of $3,000 a year or less. "Middle class" means a family income of $6,000 a year or more.

City	Poverty	Middle Class	Unemployed	Unskilled Job Class	Sound Owner-Occupied Homes	Sound Rental Units	Median Family Income	Median Male Income
Chicago	27%	35%	11%	53%	71%	67%	$4,786	$3,763
Atlanta	49	8	5	77	69	50	3,033	2,256
Cleveland	28	33	12	64	86	67	4,768	3,858
Detroit	34	27	17	64	82	67	4,385	3,804
Gary-Hammond	23	28	7	62	81	61	4,699	4,173
Los Angeles	23	39	9	52	92	81	5,163	3,856
New Orleans	51	12	10	84	75	53	2,977	2,327
New York	27	30	7	63	86	65	4,484	3,332
Philadelphia	30	27	10	57	83	61	4,291	3,262
St. Louis	41	20	10	64	68	54	3,622	3,029
Washington	24	36	5	54	88	79	4,763	3,260

VIRGINIA TAKING UP ... of northern Virginia and the

NY T 11/30/64

F.E. Labor

CORE HINTS AT PLAN FOR NEGRO UNIONS

The possibility of organizing Negro labor unions in New York and other cities was discussed yesterday by James Farmer, National Director of the Congress of Racial Equality, on the WNBC-TV "Searchlight" program.

Mr. Farmer said that a pilot project was underway in Boston and that a decision to organize Negro unions in New York would depend on the results of the Boston experiment.

The national director of CORE said the question was under consideration because of the practices of certain unions in excluding Negroes from their membership and apprenticeship programs. He said that if Negro unions were organized, they would be open to whites, who he contended were also victims of discrimination by craft unions.

Mr. Farmer accused the steamfitters', the sheet metal workers', bricklayers', and plumbers' unions of discriminating against Negroes.

No Dignity Left in Farm Work

AGRICULTURE By SUZAN MANN CATHOLIC WORKER Nov. '64

(Ed. note: Mrs. Mann, as secretary of the West Oakland Farm Workers Association, has been in touch with the farm labor problem at the closest possible range. The appeal which follows is a direct result of her experience in farm work in California.)

We the consumers are as much to blame for the conditions in the field as anyone else. You, Mrs. America, hop in your new car and run down to the store, you buy fruits and vegetables, you come home, put them away and think no more about it. You don't stop to think that the fruit we pay 29c or 39c a pound for, someone picked for half a cent a pound. Sometimes less.

We don't know and we don't care. No, not as long as we can sit in our warm houses, eat our well-balanced meals. We talk about the skid rows and the crime waves, and feel righteous when we give a few dollars to the poor. This gets us off the hook: we feel that we are no longer responsible.

Let's go back to 1936. What were you making? How much did your food cost? Your income has improved since then, and the cost of food has gone up, but the wages of the farm worker are the same. There is no dignity left in farm work. Did you ever think what would happen if all the farm workers refused to work? In two years or less, we would have a major depression.

No Way To Make It

The average wage of a farm worker here for a twelve-hour day is from five to eight dollars. From this is deducted the cost of hauling him to the fields from the cities: $.75 to $1.50. Since he returns from the field about 7:00 p.m. when the larger stores are closed, he must buy his food at a small store and pay an outrageous price. Then he rents a hotel room for a dollar and half to two dollars. He has to be back in the field next morning at four. What is left of his money? When the rain begins and winter starts, he has no work. He has no money saved to tide him over to the next season, nor does he get unemployment compensation. There is no way for him to make it.

These men eat in missions and beg for a few pennies for a bottle of wine. You ask why the wine? Did you ever sleep in a doorway with the rain beating down on your face? A bottle of wine makes it easy to go to sleep. It also allows you to forget that you are hungry, lonely and forgotten.

The women turn to prostitution or shop-lifting. Some of the more fortunate manage to get on welfare. But there is no place to go when you are a farm worker. When the rains start you are no longer of use to the grower or to anyone. The very sight of you is offensive. Somehow you make it through to spring. Here is what you can expect then. These are our actual work experiences this season in various crops:

Horsebeans. The average daily wage was $1.52. The field was growing wild with weeds and nettles. The beans were few and far between. There was no toilet in the field, and no water until after 1:00 p.m. After working all day we had to drive into town to get paid.

Peas. The average daily wage for a 12-hour day was $6.00. There was one toilet to serve two hundred people. It was cleaned about once a week. There was one water tank with warm water. One morning it was raining in the field, but the grower wouldn't let the people quit. They knew if they did they wouldn't have a job the next day.

Apricots. Our best picker made $12.80 on his best day. He made $6.00 to $8.00 on other days. The bus fare was $1.00. The grower would call and say that there was real good picking, but when we got there we would get only half a day's work.

Onions. The daily average was $9.00. The bus fare was $1.00. We have to charge our members the actual full cost of running our bus and station wagons, because we have no outside financial support and no cash reserve.

Bushberries. $1.00 per hour. The temperature was 107 degrees at noon. Harassment by the foreman was very bad. For instance, they made us work in flooded rows and docked workers' pay without explanation. They did these things because they wanted to use braceros instead of domestic workers. The braceros will work like machines and not complain about bad conditions.

Cucumbers. $1.15 per hour. The worker has to stoop throughout the day. When a worker stood up to stretch his back, the farmer would come over and say "What's the matter; why aren't you working? You're here to work, not to stand up." That night, he might be laid off.

Snap beans. The average wage was $5.00. There were about three hundred people in the field and only one water tank, with a few cups, about a half mile from the workers. There was no toilet.

Pears. Maximum wage was $1.25 per hour. This was good work, but it lasted only about two weeks, and we could place only a very limited number of workers in the pear orchards.

Prunes. The average wage was about $4.50. At the end of the day the grower refused to pay our men, because he did not think there was anything they could do about it. They waited until long after dark and were still not paid. We are suing for the wages; our lawyer says that, to his knowledge, this is the first wage suit filed by a farm-labor group in Californa.

Onion Topping. The average daily wage was $3.70. The grower wanted to withhold the wages until his entire crop had been harvested.

Squash. $1.15 per hour. The foreman pushed the men to the point where they were forced to quit. He did this so that the grower could hire Mexican nationals.

What Is To Be Done?

You can help, first, by keeping informed on what is happening. Farm Labor Magazine, P.O. Box 1173, Berkeley, Calif., costs $3.00 for a subscription of 12 issues. Our own newsletter is available without charge. Write Association News, 710 13th St., Oakland, Calif.

You can help, second, by accepting the fact of personal responsibility for this evil, and seeking your own personal means of discharging this responsibility. As one man puts it, you need to have a willingness, not to "serve" disinherited humanity, but to become a member of this portion of humanity. Social change has never come easily. It will never come at all unless each of us accepts the full burden of responsibility and strives to find practical means to make our own vision of what could be and should be become a reality.

Employ-Gen

N.A.M. PANEL BIDS BUSINESS END BIAS

Hiring of Negroes Is Called Good for U.S. Industry

NY Times 12-13-64

By FOSTER HAILEY

Two business executives, discussing equal employment opportunities at a meeting yesterday of the National Association of Manufacturers, said their companies had found nondiscrimination to be not only good ethics but good business.

George A. Spater, general counsel and executive vice president of American Airlines, said that since it had integrated at all levels three years ago, it had received only approbation from the riding public and no trouble from its white staff. Difficulties in both areas had been predicted.

"Discrimination in employment generally is inspired by fear of public reaction," he said.

Richard E. Cross, general counsel and chairman of the board of the American Motors Corporation, said there seldom was any trouble when top management took an affirmative attitude toward the problem.

Amity in Detroit

Detroit industry, as a whole has adopted this attitude, he said, and he credited the good communication between the races there with having kept the city free last summer from the disorders that swept other areas.

The two businessmen were on a panel with Whitney M. Young Jr., the Negro executive director of the Urban League.

Mr. Young praised business for what it already has done to eliminate discrimination against Negroes and other minority groups. But it is not enough, he said.

"There is a lot of ground to be made up for past discrimination," he said.

All three were agreed that equal opportunity could be instituted if American business wanted it to be.

"There now is a vicious circle," Mr. Spater said. "The Negro is not hired because he isn't qualified; he isn't qualified because he has no incentive to seek an education or learn a skill; and there is no incentive because business and industry has not shown its readiness to hire the best qualified man regardless of his race."

Community Effort Urged

Mr. Young suggested that businessmen should not be content just to institute a policy of nondiscrimination in their offices or shops. They should also take an active part in their communities in providing decent housing and in backing welfare programs.

Questions from the audience were friendly in the main. One man with a Southern accent said that since there probably would be no more jobs, "won't white hiring go down if Negro hiring goes up?"

A direct answer was not given, but Mr. Cross, who took the question, said that business was harming itself by discriminating against a part of the working force and that if hiring of Negroes went up, sales also would advance.

The moderator was John Waddleton, chief counsel and head of employe and community relations for the Allis-Chalmers Company of Milwaukee. He praised the voluntary approach to equality of opportunity. He said that a survey of 103 of the 281 companies that subscribed to Plans for Progress, initiated by the late President John F. Kennedy in 1961, showed that 40,000 new jobs had been filled by minority groups.

The N.A.M. annual meeting, called the Congress of American Industry, is the 69th. It opened yesterday morning at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel and continues through tomorrow. There are 1,500 in attendance.

In opening the conference at the morning session, W. P. Gullander, the association president, said that "additional tax cuts, designed to encourage capital formation and investment in production facilities, is the course most likely to insure the continuance of basic economic progress."

The Most Rev. Fulton J. Sheen, Auxiliary Bishop of the Archdiocese of New York, urged American businessmen at the luncheon meeting to turn their attention to Asia and Africa as well as Europe in seeking investment and sales.

Bishop Sheen said the poor of the world were a burden that more affluent societies must take up. These "new poor," he said, are impatient; they want help now.

XERO COPY XERO COPY

hE

econ.-negroes

FINANCIAL

NYT 12-4-64

Computer Seen as Boon to Negro

Thomas A. Wood, the president of Decision Systems, Inc., examines a taped computer program prepared for a client.

By WILLIAM D. SMITH

"Automation can be a boon as well as a curse to the American Negro," a tall young man with the lithe appearance of an athlete remarked the other day.

Many would think this to be the statement of an uninformed person. It wasn't.

Although most seers warn that the specter of automation clouds the economic future of the Negro in this country, this man's dissident opinion was backed by knowledge—both technical and personal.

The speaker was Thomas A.

Continued on Page 56, Column 8

Continued From Page 55

Wood, president of Decision Systems, Inc., of Teaneck, N. J., an expert in the computer field and a Negro.

Mr. Wood conceded that the unskilled — both white and Negro — would lose jobs as automation increased. But he quickly added the following statement:

"Computers will open employment doors to the educated Negro. The only criterion needed to pass through them will be ability."

"This is an age of new technology and it demands new talents," he observed. "Computer people are in short supply, and if a company needs a good programer they don't care what his race, creed or color are as long as he can do the job."

Mr. Wood believes another reason the computer industry is relatively free of prejudice is that it is a young field.

"Electronic data processing is barely 10 years old and most of the industry's leaders are younger people who have grown up without the prejudices of previous generations," he said. "I am considered an old man in this business."

Mr. Wood's own age and position lend weight to his statements. He is 38 years old and president of a publicly owned company in the $50 million-a-year computer programing and systems engineering field.

Decision Systems and other companies in the field design the programs that direct computers in solving difficult problems.

Such companies supplement the capabilities of concerns that already have computer personnel and supply computer knowledge to companies that have no background in the field.

There are several hundred companies in the field. However, only a handful are publicly owned. The rest are for the most part two or three-men operations.

The larger companies in the field include C-E-I-R, Inc.; the International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation data processing center; Computer Usage, Inc., and the service bureaus of the computer manufacturers. Many of the companies sell computer time as well as programing capabilities. Decision Systems is in the programing end of the business.

Decision Systems was formed in 1960 by Mr. Wood and the company's three vice presidents: George Morgenstern, Arnold Siegel and Sheldon F. Best.

In the fiscal year ended April 30, Decision Systems earned $151,461, or 46 cents a share, compared with $82,228, equal to 25 cents a share, in fiscal 1963. Sales revenues rose to $1,530,165, from $791,997.

Mr. Wood was born in Harlem. He attended New York City public schools where his talent with books and his ability with a basketball brought him to the attention of Columbia University.

He enrolled there in 1944. In addition to his studies, he played on several good Columbia College basketball teams. After graduation in in 1949, he continued his studies at the University of Michigan where he received an electrical engineering degree in 1951.

Following a stint with the Government as a designer of fire-control simulation equipment for tanks, he joined the staff at I. T. & T. in Paramus.

Mr. Wood has a wife, Barbara; they have four children —two girls and two boys.

Decision Systems employs several other Negroes on its staff. "They were hired because we needed their talents and for no other reason," Mr. Wood emphasized. "One of our vice presidents is also an orthodox rabbi, he noted wryly.

THE JOB SEARCH: A REASSESSMENT

Re Employment

City Programs for Negroes and Others Find Progress Is Slow and 'Painful'

N.Y. Times

By FRED POWLEDGE

12-14-64

In the summer of 1963, New York's political, civic and labor leaders were alarmed by lines of picketing Negroes who contended they were being discriminated against in the city's labor market.

Dozens of programs were started by public and private agencies to find jobs for those who had been denied them either because of their color, because they were high school dropouts, or because they lacked the necessary skills. Some of the programs were titled 'breakthroughs" by their creators, even as they were being announced.

Now, one and a half years after the picket lines, the city has discovered that breakthroughs come hard. Not only has it been difficult to find jobs for the thousands of able-bodied Negroes and other disadvantaged New Yorkers who do not have them, but there is also a controversy starting over whether too many are being placed in jobs that are temporary, menial or dead-end.

There is also concern that some are being trained for jobs they will stand little chance of getting.

A young man lounged in a dry-cleaning shop in Harlem not long ago and explained why he was not at work:

"I enrolled in one of the job-

Continued on Page 24, Column 1

Job Programs for Underprivileged Find Progress 'Painful'

Continued From Page 1, Col. 2

training courses," he said. "I forget who was running it—it was the city or the state, or maybe the Federal Government.

"Anyway, they taught me how to be a printer. I got good grades, and they said I had turned into a good worker. Then I finished the course, and now I can't get a job."

He was asked what he did now. "Nothing," he said.

Some of the job programs have met with shallow success, and some have produced cynicism, not excitement, in the people they were designed to serve.

Youth Population Rising

And at the same time that they are struggling to find the best way to help the unemployed, the directors of job programs know that the demands on them are likely to increase, not decline. There is one estimate that the number of persons between the ages of 16 and 21 in Central Harlem will increase by 40 per cent between 1960 and 1970.

There is no way of telling how many people in the New York area need to find jobs or need to improve their occupational status, but some estimates indicate that the number would be staggering.

While there are many white persons among the city's unemployed and underemployed, most of those affected are Negroes and Puerto Ricans. All of the job agencies that have been formed recently aim their efforts at those minority groups.

Lawrence R. Houston, an economics specialist on the staff of Haryou-Act, the antipoverty program in Harlem, estimated that 40 per cent of the city's nonwhite population over the age of 16 was in need of job improvement.

He said he also believed that there were 10,000 persons between the ages of 16 and 21 in Central Harlem who needed help.

Income and Status Lag

All the programs grew out of a basic understanding that Negroes made less money than whites in New York and that they had more difficulty finding good jobs.

Figures from the 1960 and other Government studies show that:

¶The median family income in Harlem is about $4,000, almost $2,100 less than for New York City as a whole.

¶Two-thirds of the male labor force in Central Harlem works as operatives, service employes or laborers, while one-third of the city's total labor force works in these categories.

¶More whites than Negroes are employed in the "high-prestige" jobs, such as the professional, clerical, sales and crafts occupations. Forty-one per cent of Negro males aged 18 and 19 were employed in these categories in 1960, compared with 61 per cent of the whites.

Construction Sites Involved

Much of the current concern over jobs stems from demonstrations in the summer of 1963 at construction sites. Hundreds of Negroes and whites were arrested, political figures were embarrassed and pressure was put on the building trades to integrate their unions.

A labor committee was formed to screen Negro and Puerto Rican applicants for jobs in the industry. Peter J. Brennan, the president of the Building and Construction Trades Council, said at the time:

"There have been Negroes in some of our unions for many [illegible] historic pattern of Negro exclusion in the building trades."

"This is merely a limited and strategic adjustment by the unions to Negro protest and represents no significant gain for colored mechanics in New York City," he said.

Other agencies, designated as the anti-poverty program, have tried different approaches. These agencies — such as Haryou-Act in Harlem, Mobilization for Youth on the Lower East Side and Job Orientation in Neighborhoods, which functions throughout the metropolitan area — receive their funds from the Federal and city governments. A major aim of all is to find more and better jobs and to train people for them.

But some observers have challenged whether they are useful.

"All the programs are fake," said one outspoken observer in the city government, who asked to remain anonymous, "because they take these kids and build up their hopes and then they find them jobs as bus boys and stock clerks, and the kids are ripe to be replaced by automation."

Other observers are more charitable in their assessments of the programs, which have been in operation only a short time. There is widespread private comment, however, that the agencies overlap in their duties and in the numbers of persons they claim to have helped.

One of the agencies, JOIN, was born in June, 1963, when Mayor Wagner signed a contract with the Office of Manpower, Automation and Training of the United States Department of Labor. The Federal Government earmarked $2 million and the city allocated $1 million for the project.

9,780 Clients Aided

JOIN was asked to provide the vocational counseling, testing and basic and remedial education that would be necessary to secure jobs and job training. It was to set up a full-time employment service for its 16-to-21-year-old clients and to develop training programs with labor and government agencies.

The first JOIN office was opened last Jan. 2 in East Harlem. Eight Negroes and Puerto Ricans who had gone to the center for help were asked to step outside into a fierce snowstorm while Mayor Wagner and other dignitaries cut the ribbon inside and coffee and doughnuts were served.

From Jan. 2 until early this fall, according to statistics furnished by JOIN, the agency's 300 employes dealt with 9,780 clients. Of the total, 6,629 received counseling, remedial education and testing services; 2,419 job placements were made (in some cases, one client was placed in more than one job and in others the client got a job on his own) 179 persons were still in training.

Of those placed in jobs, approximately 37 per cent were placed in "service" jobs, 26 per cent in industry, 23 per cent in government, 9 per cent in clerical positions and 4 per cent in sales jobs.

About 66 per cent of those placed earn between $50 and $54 a week; 10 per cent $55 to $64; 7 per cent $65 to $69; 2 per cent $70 to $74 and 4 per cent more than $74 a week.

Between 40 and 47 per cent of the young people who asked for help dropped out of the program before they finished it.

Mobilization for Youth, the anti-poverty agency on Manhattan's Lower East Side, has a mission similar to that of JOIN. Martin Moed, chief of Mobilization's work program, said the goal was "to demonstrate a [illegible] that leads a vocational counselor to advise a Negro youth "to aim for that objective which might be below his potential, simply because it is currently available to him."

Haryou-Act proposes an employment program that will concentrate on training young people for jobs that will not disappear in the trend toward automation.

What Haryou-Act does not want to do is find jobs that are similar to those being found now. The Federal-city agency noted that "the principal and apparently sole employment resource available to young people of Harlem" at the moment is the Youth Employment Service (YES) of the New York State Employment Service.

When youths are placed in jobs by YES, said Haryou-Act, most of the placements turn out to be "low-level jobs in service industries which do not hold promise of any future—jobs such as delivery boy, messenger, dishwasher, counter girl, checker, stock clerk, laundry worker and factory worker."

The YES program started in April, 1960, and is now operated through 33 centers in low-income neighborhoods.

Alex Altheim, senior manager of the youth placement office of the State Employment Service, said recently that 64,054 applicants had sought the office's services since the YES program began. They received a total of 57,108 counseling interviews (some applicants got more than one interview, some got none), and there were 72,806 referrals to jobs.

There were 32,215 actual job placements; some of the applicants were placed more than once.

In the YES program, as in many of the others, there are no complete statistics showing just what happened to the youths who were placed. But Mr. Altheim acknowledged that a "significant number of the jobs are probably short-range," obtained for young people who are out of school and out of work and getting somewhat desperate.

One follow-up study, performed by YES in 1960, showed that 28 per cent of the young men and 41 per cent of the young women stayed on the jobs three months or longer; 9 per cent of the boys and 4 per cent of the girls stayed two to three months; 30 per cent of the boys and 20 per cent of the girls stayed one to two months, and 33 per cent of the boys and 35 per cent of the girls stayed less than one month.

While Mr. Altheim does not defend a system that produces menial jobs, he does feel that some of the less promising jobs can be beneficial to youths in the long run. He recalled one case in which a high school dropout with artistic ability was referred by a counselor to a bus boy's job at the Fashion Institute of Technology, a state college.

There the youth's ability was noticed, Mr. Altheim said, and the institute offered the young man a scholarship on the condition that he finish his high school work. Mr. Altheim feels that the youth has been rescued from a drab existence.

Other programs that offer employment of still shorter range have been started by the city and state governments, and they are believed by many observers to be providing adequate, but not necessarily imaginative, opportunities for those who take advantage of them.

Shortly after the racial rioting last summer in Harlem and Bedford-Stuyvesant, Mayor Wagner asked city agencies to create 1,000 summer jobs for young members of minority groups. The jobs lasted only a few weeks, but 1,097 persons were placed in low-level jobs paying $1.50 an hour in seven city agencies.

Follow-Up Studies Lacking

Few attempts have been made to follow up their summer experiences. A city official, asked if any of them had stayed on as full-time workers, said: "I doubt it. They'd have to go through the full Civil Service routine for that."

The City Labor Department established a Job Talent Center in July, 1963, and it has handled applications from about 6,000 persons, mostly Negroes. George J. Bowens, director of the center, said that more than 200 persons had been placed in white-collar jobs and about 700 others in other occupations.

Another program, operated by the New York Botanical Garden, has had considerable success with securing meaningful employment for members of minority groups, but the program has become snagged in City Hall's red tape.

Thomas H. Everett, assistant director of the quasi-governmental agency and its senior curator of education, said that the park entered into an agreement with the City Board of Education in September, 1963, to help prepare young men in the field of horticulture.

The park board went to private sources and raised the $40,000 that was needed to send 30 young persons through the program. The trainees spent half their time at high school and half at the Bronx garden, working under foremen in the various horticultural fields.

"It was amazing, the change that has taken place in these boys," said Mr. Everett. "When they first came, they were uncommunicative. Now they're doing as fine a job as anyone. I think it's because we treated them as men, and we expected them to act as men. Their high school principal says their schoolwork has improved, too."

Some of the young men, he said, voluntarily enrolled in the garden's evening adult education courses. Some used part of their $52 weekly salary to purchase horticultural encyclopedias, so they could learn more about their work.

Mr. Everett feels that by the end of their second year of training the youth will be "valuable and competent people in the field of horticulture," a field where skilled workers are in short supply.

The city government expressed pleasure over the Botanical Garden project, and last September it asked the garden to take on 30 more youths. The city promised to underwrite the cost of the program.

But as of now, the city funds have not come. Officials at the garden say they feel sure that the money is on its way, that it is simply going through channels.

In the meantime the garden is supporting the program by shifting its own funds from other projects.

persons among the city's [illegible] employed and underemployed, most of those affected are Negroes and Puerto Ricans. All of the job agencies that have been formed recently aim their efforts at those minority groups.

Lawrence R. Houston, an economics specialist on the staff of Haryou-Act, the antipoverty program in Harlem, estimated that 40 per cent of the city's nonwhite population over the age of 16 was in need of job improvement.

He said he also believed that there were 10,000 persons between the ages of 16 and 21 in Central Harlem who needed help.

Income and Status Lag

All the programs grew out of a basic understanding that Negroes made less money than whites in New York and that they had more difficulty finding good jobs.

Figures from the 1960 and other Government studies show that:

¶The median family income in Harlem is about $1,000, or [illegible] less than for New York City as a whole.

¶Two-thirds of the male labor force in Central Harlem works as operatives, service employes or laborers, while one-third of the city's total labor force works in these categories.

¶More whites than Negroes are employed in the "high-prestige" jobs, such as the professional, clerical, sales and crafts occupations. Forty-one per cent of Negro males aged 18 and 19 were employed in these categories in 1960, compared with 61 per cent of the whites.

Construction Sites Involved

Much of the current concern over jobs stems from demonstrations in the summer of 1963 at construction sites. Hundreds of Negroes and whites were arrested, political figures were embarrassed and pressure was put on the building trades to integrate their unions.

A labor committee was formed to screen Negro and Puerto Rican applicants for jobs in the industry. Peter J. Brennan, the president of the Building and Construction Trades Council, said at the time:

"There have been Negroes in some of our unions for many years. But if we have to put on a theatrical display to prove we don't discriminate, we'll do it."

Four months later, in December, 1963, a total of 3,121 persons had applied to the screening committee. The committee referred 682 of them to local unions; the locals found 111 of them acceptable, but only 27 of them actually were admitted to journeyman status or allowed to enter apprenticeship programs.

Then the referral committee went out of business. Recent efforts to ask Mr. Brennan what has happened since then have met with no success. Other sources say little has changed in the construction trades.

'Sort of Checkerboard'

Stanley H. Lowell, chairman of the New York City Commission on Human Rights, said recently:

"What has evolved out of the construction thing was a sort of checkerboard, in which people who belong to minority groups and who already belonged to the unions, were moved around. And in a few instances, there was a continuation of the very slow entry of Negroes and Puerto Ricans into some of the trade unions where they weren't before."

One of the trade unions, Local 28 of the Sheet Metal Workers Union, was ordered last summer by a State Supreme Court judge to desegregate after 76 years of all-white membership. The union recently worked out a plan to open its apprenticeship programs to anyone.

The next apprenticeship class will begin on March 15. Sixty-five persons will be chosen to start the four-year program that leads to journeyman status and the union is under order not to discriminate.

But in the construction industry as a whole, change is coming slowly. Julius C.C. Edelstein, executive assistant to Mayor Wagner, commented recently that "some progress has been made" and that "there has been a definite unfreezing of some unions that had been totally exclusionary."

But the progress, he said, had been "very slow, very painful."

Herbert Hill, labor secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said the admission of a handful of Negroes into local unions "has not changed the persons they claim to have helped.

One of the agencies, JOIN, was born in June, 1963, when Mayor Wagner signed a contract with the Office of Manpower, Automation and Training of the United States Department of Labor. The Federal Government earmarked $2 million and the city allocated $1 million for the project.

9,780 Clients Aided

JOIN was asked to provide the vocational counseling, testing and basic and remedial education that would be necessary to secure jobs and job training. It was to set up a full-time employment service for its 16-to-21-year-old clients and to develop training programs with labor and government agencies.

The first JOIN office was opened last Jan. 2 in East Harlem. Eight Negroes and Puerto Ricans who had gone to the center for help were asked to step outside into a fierce snowstorm while Mayor Wagner and other dignitaries cut the ribbon inside and coffee and doughnuts [illegible]

From Jan. 2 until early this fall, according to statistics furnished by JOIN, the agency's 300 employes dealt with 9,780 clients. Of the total, 6,629 received counseling, remedial education and testing services; 2,419 job placements were made (in some cases, one client was placed in more than one job and in others the client got a job on his own) 179 persons were still in training.

Of those placed in jobs, approximately 37 per cent were placed in "service" jobs, 26 per cent in industry, 23 per cent in government, 9 per cent in clerical positions and 4 per cent in sales jobs.

About 66 per cent of those placed earn between $50 and $54 a week; 10 per cent $55 to $64; 7 per cent $65 to $69; 2 per cent $70 to $74 and 4 per cent more than $74 a week.

Between 40 and 47 per cent of the young people who asked for help dropped out of the program before they finished it.

Mobilization for Youth, the anti-poverty agency on Manhattan's Lower East Side, has a mission similar to that of JOIN. Martin Moed, chief of Mobilization's work program, said the goal was "to demonstrate a method by which one can work with youngsters from a poverty background and help them find stable employment; we're not purely interested in just getting a kid a job that he'll lose two weeks later."

Mobilization has an urban youth work corps program, budgeted at about $1 million a year, which supervises improvements in parks and public buildings. There is also an on-the-job training program, in which youngsters learn skills by working for private employers. They earn regular wages, and Mobilization reimburses the employers for the cost of supervision, waste and materials.

In another program young people attend trade schools under private grants.

Mr. Moed said that 1,038 young people had taken part in the urban work corps program during a 21-month period that ended last July. The figure represents all who took part in the program; some stayed a short time, while others stayed a long time.

During the same 21-month period for which statistics are available, 397 youths participated in the on-the-job training programs. Eighty-nine young persons are taking part in the trade-school programs. Of those who have graduated from the school program, said Mr. Moed, 73 per cent found employment later as barbers, dental technicians, practical nurses, beauticians and undertakers.

During the 21-month period, Mobilization's employment service found 1,032 jobs for a total of 733 persons. Some of them were found with the assistance of the State Employment Service. Mobilization has a staff of about 300 professional persons, of whom 76 are involved in the work program.

Another of the Federal-state agencies, Haryou-Act, is developing a similar program now for use in Central Harlem. A recent report describing the proposed program there reflects some of the criticism of scattergun employment techniques. The report states:

Statistics of private and government agencies serving Central Harlem youth show that, increasingly, they are abandoned to the scramble for diminishing numbers of unskilled, unfulfilling and undesirable jobs."

This results in a "community pathology," says the report, office's services since the YES program began. They received a total of 57,108 counseling interviews (some applicants got more than one interview, some got none), and there were 72,806 referrals to jobs.

There were 32,215 actual job placements; some of the applicants were placed more than once.

In the YES program, as in many of the others, there are no complete statistics showing just what happened to the youths who were placed. But Mr. Altheim acknowledged that a "significant number of the jobs are probably short-range," obtained for young people who are out of school and out of work and getting somewhat desperate.

One follow-up study, performed by YES in 1960, showed that 28 per cent of the young men and 41 per cent of the young women stayed on the jobs three months or longer; 9 per cent of the boys and 4 per cent of the girls stayed two to three months; 30 per cent of the boys paying $1.50 an hour in seven city agencies.

Follow-Up Studies Lacking

Few attempts have been made to follow up their summer experiences. A city official, asked if any of them had stayed on as full-time workers, said: "I doubt it. They'd have to go through the full Civil Service routine for that."

The City Labor Department established a Job Talent Center in July, 1963, and it has handled applications from about 6,000 persons, mostly Negroes. George J. Bowens, director of the center, said that more than 200 persons had been placed in white-collar jobs and about 700 others in other occupations.

Another program, operated by the New York Botanical Garden, has had considerable success with securing meaningful employment for members of minority groups, but the program has become snagged in City Hall's red tape.

Thomas H. Everett, assistant director of the quasi-govern-tanical Garden project, and September it asked the gar to take on 30 more youths. city promised to underwrite cost of the program.

But as of now, the city fu have not come. Officials at garden say they feel sure the money is on its way, it is simply going thro channels.

In the meantime the ga is supporting the program shifting its own funds from er projects.

U.S. GIVES $458,000 TO TRAIN NEGROES

Grants Will Aid Philadelphia Self-Help Job Project

12-19-64

By JOHN D. POMFRET

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18—The Labor Department authorized grants of $458,000 today to help support a massive effort being developed by Negro leaders in Philadelphia to train congenitally unemployed, uneducated men and women to hold jobs.

The self-help project, which is attracting increasing attention from Negro leaders in other communities, grew out of the successful selective patronage program that Negroes in Philadelphia conducted from 1961 to 1963. Selective patronage involved boycotting the products of concerns to force them to hire more Negroes.

The boycotts produced more job offers than the Negro leaders could find qualified workers to fill. Eleven months ago, they set up Opportunities Industrialization Center to train Negroes for jobs.

Basic Premise

Negroes, according to the basic premise of the center program, can be trained successfully in large numbers if the training programs originate within the Negro community, rather than being imposed from outside. The Rev. Leon Sullivan, chairman of the center board and pastor of the Zion Baptist Church in Philadelphia, regards the program as essentially moving the struggle for equal rights from the streets into the classroom.

The same kind of appeal to pride used in organizing the selective patronage program and street demonstrations is being used to make the training program work.

Some 126 men and women have graduated from the center, which is housed in an old police station. Of these, 106 have been placed in jobs running machines in plants, working in restaurants, doing sheet metal, drafting and electronics work and as teletype operators. Three hundred are in training.

There are 6,000 on the waiting list to get into the center. Approximately $333,000 of the Labor Department grant will be used to help establish a "feeder" program to prepare people on the waiting list and others for enrollment in the center.

Self-Confidence Stressed

The main emphasis of the feeder program will not be on vocational training, which is done by the center, but on such things as reading, writing, mathematics, how to talk, how to walk and other things required to develop the self-confidence necessary to absorb vocational training and get and hold a job.

The Labor Department is making funds available under the experimental and demonstration project clause of the Manpower Development and Training Act.

Seymour L. Wolfbein, director of the department's Office of Manpower, Automation and Training, said the department's interest was to determine whether it was possible, in a Negro section like North Philadelphia, with a history of racial unrest and poverty, to rehabilitate thousands of people.

"We want to make an effort to get people into training and retraining that the manpower program hasn't reached so far," Mr. Wolfbein said.

Draw Welfare Payments

About 20 per cent are drawing welfare payments and 25 per cent unemployment compensation. The rest live off funds supplied by their families.

"These are people who have been taught from childhood that white was right; brown, stick around, and black, get back," Mr. Sullivan said. "We're trying to show them that genius is color blind; that they are not part of an inferior group."

Of the funds that the department has made available, $125,000 will be used to set up an on-the-job training project through the center. Philadelphia employers have already promised jobs for the trainees.

The Negro leaders have asked the Philadelphia city government to request $2 million in Federal antipoverty funds to help set up the centers.

They have already received grants of $200,000 from the Ford Foundation, $50,000 from the Area Redevelopment Administration, $50,000 from an anonymous donor and about $350,000 in cash and machinery from business concerns for the program. In addition, they have raised $100,000 from the Negro community, mostly in small contributions from adults and school children.

Booklet:

Tuskegee Institute

Conference on Disadvantage

Tuskegee Inst. Press

1964

Articles -

"The American Population"

35-45 DONALD J. BOGUE

"Structural Transition in the American Economy and Disadvantage"

V. W. HENDERSON

46-56

W. Ellison Chalmers

"A More Productive Role for the Negro in the South's Economy" —

Staple-bound, mimeo or offset report (no date) —
Returned to Research 12/2/63

Mucho on Negroes & Jobs no statistics
some bibliography

Non-White Unemployment in the United States, 1947-1958: An Analysis of Trends, 1958. N.Y. State Commission Against Discrimination, Division of Research, 270 Broadway, N.Y. 10, N.Y. (Free)

Sec of Labor

1964 Report on Labor

Manpower & Rock

The fact of unemployment reduces the L.F. by causing those who are unemployed to stop seeking work, Negroes?

THE NEW YORK TIMES, MONDAY, JANUARY 11, 1965. Integration - mesa

Programs on Three Fronts Press for Integration in Business and Industry

By FRED POWLEDGE

The problems of automation and poverty in the industrial North cut clearly across all class lines. But the Northern Negro, the lowest man on the employment totem pole, finds himself in the usual predicament of worrying more than anyone else.

His one consolation, if there is one, is the knowledge that the entire Northern society for once realizes his plight.

Many leaders of Negro and civil rights organizations believe that the March on Washington of August, 1963, and related demonstrations at construction sites through the North helped bring about this realization. For the first time, concerted efforts have been started by all the civil rights groups, by liberal white organizations and by politicians to obtain jobs for qualified members of minority groups.

Some of the programs have gone even further, to what many students of civil rights consider the foundations of the Northern struggle: The preparation of Negroes and other minority groups for meaningful jobs. This includes adequate education, from kindergarten up, and entry into the training and apprenticeship programs that offer the only way into some industries and businesses.

What Is Being Done

The problem is no longer one of convincing the public and the employers that a change is needed. Rather, it is: What is being done about the problem?

Dozens of organizations are using a variety of techniques to improve the Negro's chances of obtaining a job comparable with his ability. There are sporadic boycotts against manufacturers who assertedly discriminate against minority groups. An effort is under way in Harlem to convince white merchants to take in Negroes as partners.

A few labor unions have tried to achieve greater communication between whites with power and Negroes with ability. Several white organizations, notably the American Jewish Congress, have been trying to [illegible] owned and operated by Negroes.

The major efforts of the past year may be placed into three categories: The relative success of integration in private, white-collar industry; the lack of success in the construction trades, and the initiation of the joint Federal-local antipoverty programs.

Motives Sometimes Cloudy

It is likely that most of the success achieved in 1964 occurred in the white-collar industries, but proof of such success is hard to find. This is because it is not yet considered desirable among employers to boast publicly about their efforts in the field of race relations.

The businesses that function in the fields of communication, advertising, finance and the more sophisticated sciences, however, have been unable to conceal their eagerness to find and hire Negroes.

Their motives are not always clear. One employer confided privately: "At first, we thought we ought to have a Negro in the office, well, simply because we knew it would be good to have a Negro in the office.

"I'm afraid we were thinking in terms of hiring a Negro and 'putting him in the window' so everybody could see him and know that we don't discriminate.

"It's gone further than that now. I suppose we were also a little worried about the reaction of our other employes. At any rate, it's become a moral thing with us now, and we have several Negroes on the payroll. In fact, I don't think about them as Negroes any more, but just as employes."

There is also concern among some public-relations-minded industries over boycotts — either organized economic withdrawals or passive ones that might stem from the Negro's misplaced [illegible] a particular concern was not doing all it could to improve race relations.

Ralph White confers with his fellow engineers at Western Electric. The company's Negro recruitment effort, begun years ago, is under Plans for Progress.

Market Draws Advertisers

The Negro market in the United States is generally regarded at more than $20 billion a year; by 1980, some students of finance say, it will be worth $38 billion a year. Awareness of the growing market has been reflected during the last year not only in employment practices, but also in increasingly integrated advertising campaigns.

Stanley H. Lowell, head of the New York City Commission on Human Rights, said recently that he felt private industry's effort to hire Negroes was "the best thing that has happened" in civil rights in a long time.

"Large and small employers have undertaken programs in order to find personnel," he said. "Some have even gone beyond this to set up their own training programs.

"Over the past 15 months, I would say, I have gotten 15 personal pleas from people I have met with, people saying 'How can we find some Negro employes?' This has resulted in many jobs—nobody knows the number—and I think it'll result in a kind of geometric progression in the future."

In the construction trades, success has been singularly lacking. Scarcity of jobs, the father-to-son nature of many unions, and an often denied but obvious fear and dislike of Negroes have combined to make any "breakthroughs" in the skilled construction trades very difficult.

No Change in Pattern

The feeling of civil rights groups is expressed in a recent analysis by Herbert Hill, the labor secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, who said:

"The admission of one or two Negroes into some local unions, less than even a token of genuine progress, has not changed the historic pattern of Negro exclusion in the building trades. This is merely a limited and strategic adjustment by the unions to Negro protest, and represents no significant gain . . ."

The Federal-city antipoverty programs are relatively new on the scene. Those that are in operation must prove, in a short period of time, their effectiveness to the men who allocate their budgets. This has caused some concern that too much emphasis is being placed on short-range projects that look good, rather than long-range projects, less likely of success, that actually rehabilitate the people who are abandoned by society and all but abandoned by themselves.

There is a general awareness in these organizations—such as Haryou-Act, Mobilization for Youth, and Job Orientation in Neighborhoods—that the emphasis on quick results is bad and must be overcome.

Until late 1964, there was frequent criticism of the civil rights organizations for not playing a greater part in the rehabilitation and training of the people they represent. The National Urban League stood almost alone in the field of job training and placement.

The organizations almost always answered such criticism by saying that it was not their job alone to correct a disease that had been contracted by white society. Now, however, there appears to be more willingness to accept self-improvement as a legitimate aim of the civil rights movement.

The N.A.A.C.P. recently announced that it wanted to get to work squarely in the middle of President Johnson's war on poverty, and is drawing up a program designed to do just that.

LACK OF TRAINING FOR JOBS DECRIED

20 Million Below Minimum Standard, U.S. Reports

Emp. Sec.

N.Y.T. 1-24-65

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23 (AP) —The Labor Department said today that about 20 million Americans did not have even the minimum training required for most jobs today.

This bodes "possible serious consequence for the future," the department said.

The department based its conclusions on the first nationwide study of the job training and educational backgrounds of adult American workers.

"If the nation continued at its present pace in the fields of education and training, it could anticipate having some 32 million adult, non-high school graduates in the labor force in 1975," the report said.

"Again, 20 million of these would have no formal job-training experience," it said.

The survey covered 52.1 million workers with less than three years of college training, the department said. The total labor force numbers over 73 million.

The survey was conducted by the Bureau of the Census under a contract from the Labor Department's Office of Manpower, Automation and Training.

"A high proportion of the labor force has failed to reach the minimal educational levels required for most jobs today," the report said.

"Around 29 million of the 52.1 million workers, or some 55.8 per cent, had not received a high school diploma," it said.

"Some 20 million of these had undergone no additional formal job training whatsoever," it added.

The survey found also that there was a much higher rate of some kind of training among younger workers, showing a steadily rising trend to formal occupational training over the last 50 years.

Ages 22 to 64 Covered

The survey covered workers from 22 to 64 years of age.

"Only 31 per cent of those aged 55 to 64 had received such training in their lifetimes while 57 per cent of the 22- to 24-year-olds had," the report said.

Among high school graduates, 65 per cent also had formal job training experience. Among workers with eight years or less of academic schooling, only 16 per cent had formal job training.

"These percentages underscore the fact that high schools remain by far the most important single source of formal vocational training," the report said.

Other sources of job training are the armed forces, company schools, correspondence schools, special schools, technical institutes and apprenticeship programs, it said.

The report concluded that "in the development of future manpower policies special efforts should be made in two important areas — in increasing the holding power of the schools, and in providing more extensive occupational training opportunities for workers with the lowest levels of educational attainment."

The department also said that two out of every three jobs in the United States today were in services, such as trade, transportation, finance, insurance and real estate.

The department said that less than one-third of nonfarm jobs today were in goods-producing industries such as mining, construction and manufacturing.

"Half a century ago, nearly half of nonfarm jobs were goods-producing," the department said.

EXCERPTS FROM REMARKS OF ROY WILKINS, OF NEW YORK CITY, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR OF THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF COLORED PEOPLE, AT THE THIRD NATIONAL CONFERENCE OF THE PLANS FOR PROGRESS, SHERATON-PARK HOTEL, WASHINGTON, D. C., JANUARY 26, 1965.

The Negro community throughout the United States is today faced with a crisis of unemployment.

The U. S. Department of Labor Manpower Report of the President for 1964 puts this grave matter in a capsule paragraph: "In 1963, there were more than 22 million nonwhites in the United States, most of whom were Negroes. Nonwhites comprised 11.7 percent of the population, 11 percent of the work force, and 21 percent of the unemployed. These stark figures serve to dramatize the disadvantaged status of Negro workers, for their disproportionately high rate of unemployment is essentially the climax of all the discriminatory forces shaping the lives of Negroes. . ."

The New York Times has added its estimation: "Unemployment of these proportions, were it general, would be a national catastrophe." Negro Americans, then, already are in the throes of their own catastrophe, one that, unless checked, will spread, inevitably, to the rest of Americans. Indeed, it is touching them at this moment, through a dozen channels: health, housing, welfare costs, taxes, insurance rates, police and sanitary budgets, special schools, etc.

This is why Negroes are so shrill in demanding jobs. This is why we have picketing of construction projects in Philadelphia and other large cities. This is why, despite a boom period, despite the sight of Negroes in white collar and technical jobs, the clamor goes on.

By the end of 1964 the NAACP Labor Department had filed over 900 complaints of discriminatory hiring policies and practices with the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity. This represents 35 percent of all complaints received by the Committee. In most cases these complaints were filed directly by Herbert Hill, in charge of our labor work, with the Executive Vice-Chairman of the President's Committee, on behalf of NAACP members.

These cases involved major multi-plant industrial corporations operating with Federal government contracts in virtually every part of the United States. Our documented complaints were filed against the largest corporations operating in the following sectors of the economy: oil refining and chemicals, textiles, shipbuilding, paper and pulp manufacturing, steel, railroads, electrical, aerospace, automotive, public utilities, brewery, food processing, and against agencies of Federal and State governments.

If real significant gains are to be made for Negroes, not just token and symbolic breakthroughs, then something much more vigorous and pattern-oriented than the hesitant approach that is suggested by the term "voluntary compliance" is required.

For the most part, Executive Orders 10925 and 11114 have been nullified as a result of non-enforcement in the building and construction industry. These orders bar racial discrimination on all federal and federally-assisted construction projects. They require all contractors on such projects to take "affirmative action" to assure equal opportunity in recruitment, employment and apprenticeship.

Soon after the Plans for Progress approach was announced, the leaders of America's major trade union organizations, including the powerful building trades unions, signed a similar agreement and publicly pledged to eliminate the historic pattern of Negro exclusion from the skilled craft occupations in the important building and construction industry. But now, years later, we see that little or nothing has happened; nothing has really changed for Negro workers.

Thus on December 17, 1964, NAACP leaders in Cleveland wired the Secretary of Labor, requesting that steps be taken to cancel the contract for a $32 million Federal office building to be built by the General Services Administration because "AFL-CIO unions in control of hiring halls have imposed a Nordic closed shop in Federal construction operations."

On April 6, 1962, in an appraisal of the first year of operation of the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity, the NAACP stated:

> "The 'Plans for Progress' have not produced the large-scale job opportunities for Negro workers that have been so long denied them. It is our experience that major U.S. Government contractors, operating vast multi-plant enterprises, regard the signing of a 'Plans for Progress' as a way of securing immunity from real compliance with the anti-discrimination provision of their government contract."

In January, 1963, the Southern Regional Council confirmed the judgment of the NAACP regarding "voluntary compliance" and concluded with the following statement regarding the operation of the "Plans for Progress" in the Atlanta area:

> "Most contractors felt -- and readily stated --- that the Plan was not applicable to them. Some did not even know of the existence of a 'Plans for Progress' while others who knew, and who did employ a few Negro janitors or porters on their staffs, felt they were thereby upholding the object of the Plan."

The employment study made by the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights confirms the opinion that very little progress has been made by the Southern Negro in heavy industry. The Commission's findings are summarized in part in its published report as follows:

"This Commission's investigation in three cities -- Atlanta, Baltimore and Detroit -- and a Commission hearing in Detroit revealed that in most industries studied, patterns of Negro employment by Federal contractors conformed to local industrial employment patterns."

A major problem for Negro workers in Southern industry is the operation of separate seniority lines in collective bargaining agreements entered into by management and labor unions. Investigations of the status of Negro workers in pulp and papermaking operations, in chemical and oil refining, in steel and tobacco manufacturing as well as in other important sectors of the Southern industrial economy clearly indicate that Negroes are usually hired exclusively in classifications designated as "common laborer" or "yard labor" or "non-operating department" or "maintenance department."

The picture is not a completely negative one, of course, although the percentage improvements is more marked in white collar and technical brackets than in the lower echelons.

In 1964, the Negro employment picture improved in the automobile industry, particularly in the General Motors Corporation which previously had lagged behind its competitors on this issue. Demonstrations and conferences were held by the NAACP with the major manufacturers in automotive centers, with the result that all companies, Ford, Chrysler, American Motors, as well as General Motors showed gains for 1964.

The National Labor Relations Board in December ruled that discrimination by a labor union is an unfair labor practice. The ruling came down against a local of the Rubber Workers Union in East Gadsden, Alabama, in support of the complaint of eight Negro union members that the local had refused to process their complaints of bias in separate seniority lists, and in dining and toilet facilities.

There is a new note of progress, too, in the report showing noticeable increases in Negroes in government jobs --- gains in the salary brackets of $5,000 to $24,500.

The AFL-CIO renewed its pledge last fall to press more vigorously its campaign to eliminate bias in unions and the report of the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity last summer indicated clearly, in the words of President Johnson, that "we meant business" in the anti-bias campaign.

The serious distrubance that could occur, unless more than routine remedial steps are taken, has its roots in the generations of racial proscription that have operated on the Negro-white situation in such a widespread, complex, rigid and implacable fashion as to present our country today with an explosive condition.

This portent is reflected in unanswerable statistics, extending over decades, of which the eruption protests of 1963-64 are but an inevitable symptom. To paraphrase an old, but descriptive cliche, The chickens of neglect, or contrived and imposed inequality, and of plain, unvarnished racial prejudice are coming home to roost.

No one even faintly acquainted with President Lyndon B. Johnson's record in the offices of Vice President and President can doubt the commitment of himself and his Administration to the elimination of barriers to equality of opportunity.

He has placed action as well as speeches behind that commitment. None of his speeches, not even his moving call to the Congress and to the nation on the tragedy-laden November 27, 1963, has registered more deeply than his eloquent Inaugural Address of January 20, 1965. Poverty, hunger, illness, ignorance and the prejudice of color and creed are the targets in his crusade in behalf of the Great Society.

"If we succeed," he declared, "it will be --- because of what we believe. For we are a nation of believers. Underneath the clamor of building and the rush of our day's pursuits, we are believers in justice and liberty and union, and in our own Union. We believe that every man must some day be free. And we believe in ourselves."

If we here give support to this kind of leadership, the Sheriff Clarks, the plethora of Societies, Crusades, Councils and Associations, the recalcitrant unions and the non-complying employers will be driven from their prominence and power in the national scene. We can join our energies, our skill and our hearts in building an America for all Americans.

Emp - Plans for Prog

3 Negroes Find 'Equal Opportunity' Is Real

NY T 2-13-65

Western Electric's Policies Symbolic of Breakthrough

By IRVING LIPNER

Reginald A. Durden, Leon E. Butler and Jules Devalsaint have three important things in common: They are skilled, they have come to work for the Western Electric Company within the last year and they are Negroes.

Each man is a symbol of the opening of corporate employment doors—to some degree—to the highly educated Negro under Plans for Progress, an accord affirming non-discriminatory hiring practices.

A recent survey of 103 of 281 companies that subscribed to Plans for Progress, which was initiated by President Kennedy in 1961, showed that 40,000 new jobs had ben filled by members of minority groups.

This was not always so. The employment picture was painted grimly for Mr. Durden when the nonprofit group for which he worked closed. He lost his position as office and business manager and began to make the rounds.

Disappointments Cited

"You soon get to know when it's a waste of time with a particular company," Mr. Durden commented recently. "You send out a resumé, get a reply, make an appointment, walk in—and then you get the stare when they find out you're a Negro."

"Some interviewers took more time than others to compose themselves," he recalled.

The 38-year-old graduate of New York University's School of Commerce sketched the period of frustration that he endured. A year ago, he said "the man from the agency" called about an opening at Western Electric.

"'Oh, forget it,' I answered. I had just had several disheartening interviews, and this looked like another one. But my wife and the agency man advised me to give it a try. I did, and I found out that Western was serious."

Today Mr. Durden is working as a personnel-studies as-

Continued on Page 27, Column 3

Jules Devalsaint is the center of attention as he and his associates review specifications for equipment installation at Western Electric Company. Mr. Devalsaint, 25, is studying at night for electrical engineering degree under company's tuition-refund plan.

Reginald A. Durden, right, a 38-year-old graduate of New York University School of Commerce, is personnel-studies associate, involved with company planning and research.

Leon E. Butler, 28, who has a Howard degree, was hired for training in management.

THE NEW YORK TIMES, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 13, 1965.

3 NEGROES FIND EQUALITY ON JOB

Continued From Page 25

sociate. He is involved with planning, research and execution of tasks vital to the organization. He says he is "totally optimistic" about increasing possibilities for the Negro in industry.

"I have seen progress," he said, "particularly among the Government agencies. When I was in Washington in February, their sincerity really showed. And some of the companies to which I applied several years ago are now looking hard for Negro recruits."

A little under a year ago, Leon Butler was nearing graduation at Howard University. As a psychology major, he had no intention of going into industry—an area that has not been particularly fruitful for Negroes with liberal-arts degrees.

His avenue seemed clear: Work for a master's degree, and if possible a Ph.D., and then probably end up in teaching, an area considered relatively "safe" for the Negro.

The "big joke" on the campus, Mr. Butler recalls was that alumni with law degrees generally wound up working at the Post Office in Washington.

"But during the past two years," he said, "there has been a fantastic rise in the number of corporation recruiters coming to Howard's campus."

Five Interviews Later . . .

One, a recruiter from Western Electric, suggested that the Howard senior might find a future with his concern. While he "wasn't seriously interested" at first, Mr. Butler said, he went along with the idea. Five interviews later, he was convinced that Western seriously wanted him as a training assistant in its management-training program.

Because the position offered challenges and an opportunity to use his schooling, the 28-year-old Negro took the job after his graduation last June.

There was a hint of a Haitian accent in the words of Jules Devalsaint as he traced his work and his plans. In the five years since he left his native Haiti, Mr. Devalsaint has wasted little time.

Within a few months of his graduation from the R.C.A. Institute as an engineering associate, he landed a job with Western Electric, writing specifications for equipment installation. His department includes 24 employes, of whom two are Negroes who have been hired recently.

Mr. Devalsaint, who is 25, says this is just a beginning. He is studying at night for a full electrical-engineering degree, taking advantage of Western's tuition-refund program for employes.

Moving to Baltimore

One problem looms, though. At the end of 1965, his division is slated to move to Baltimore. "I've been told that it's not like Mississippi," he said, "but I want to go myself and find out." He has already agreed to move.

Each man's experience is testimony to Western Electric's drive for action on the Plan for Progress, which was adopted several years ago.

On July 1, 1961, the company had 14,708 managerial and supervisory employes, of whom only one was a Negro. Three years later, there were 41 Negroes out of 15,468 in this category.

The ratio in the clerical and stenographic group changed from 301 Negroes among 26,421 workers to 789 Negroes in 25,665 workers last year.

As part of Western Electric's special effort to recruit Negroes, it has placed employment advertisements routinely in Negro publications, guaranteed that ads in campus publications show Negro engineers and management personnel at their jobs and expanded its recruitment at predominantly Negro college campuses.

Labor - San 1968

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 26

RACE ISSUE SNAGS TEXAS DOCK TALKS

Negroes Fear Elimination of Their Foremen

NY Times

A new dock strike issue with segregation overtones snagged settlement talks in Galveston, Tex., yesterday just as an agreement appeared near.

Thomas W. Gleason, president of the International Longshoremen's Association, who had been attending a convention of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations in Miami, left for Galveston by air in the hope of bringing the long talks to a successful end.

The new problem involved a management demand that the contract eliminate one of two "walking foremen" who supervise dock gangs handling cargo on ships.

Major Issues Settled

In the past it has been the custom in Gulf ports to separate white gangs and Negro gangs, with one working one end of the ship and the other at a hatch at the other end. Each group had a "walking foreman," and the Negro union members fear that if one is eliminated it will be theirs.

Assistant Secretary of Labor James J. Reynolds, the top Federal mediator in the talks, said two days ago that the bargainers had agreed on major issues, including the prime dispute over the size of work gangs. At that time the committees were working on "final contract language."

The strike in Gulf ports will go into its 46th day today. All South Atlantic ports below Virginia are also on strike and are not bargaining, although a Galveston settlement for all Texas ports would probably serve to reopen talks in Miami for the other Southern ports.

Efforts Called Too Slow

Mr. Reynolds said in Galveston that he thought settlement efforts were proceeding far too slowly and that failure to reach an agreement thus far was "a serious failure in collective bargaining."

The strike began along both coasts on Jan. 11. The dockers have gone back to work in all ports where local contracts have been written—New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Norfolk, Mobile and New Orleans.

Before they went back to the docks in New York the National Labor Relations Board had obtained in Federal Court a temporary restraining order on a petition from the New York Shipping Association alleging an unfair labor practice.

The argument was that the union and the management group had a contract and that the union was not abiding by it. A hearing on extending the order as an injunction had been scheduled yesterday, but it was postponed to March 18 by Judge Richard Levet.

Rec 3/1/65

Employment
SERVICES DEPARTMENT bulletin

PROJECT EQUALITY PROJECT EQUALITY PROJECT EQUALITY PROJECT EQUALITY PROJECT EQUALITY PROJECT EQUALITY PROJECT EQUALITY PROJECT EQUALITY

February, 1965 Thomas H. Gibbons, Jr./Director

LFV
BP

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal..."
Thomas Jefferson, Declaration of Independence

* * *

OBSERVATIONS ON THE DISPARITY BETWEEN WHITE AND NONWHITE UNEMPLOYMENT AND INCOME SINCE WORLD WAR II

Statistics abound in limitless quantities, and a few can sometimes be quoted to "prove" a point. However, anyone reading to any extent in the field of employment and unemployment is struck by the consistency of stark contrast in white and nonwhite unemployment and income figures over the past twenty years. Here to be observed for the picture of reality they portray are some figures extracted from the U. S. Census and Bureau of Labor Statistics reports, and quoted by eminent authors in the employment field. Future Employment Services Department bulletins will present other examples of the unconscionable differences in employment and income of American citizens based on their race. Translated into food, clothing, health and shelter these statistical discrepancies become painful, humiliating, discouraging everyday experiences for millions of our nonwhite countrymen. Consider the following:

UNEMPLOYMENT

In 1947 the nonwhite unemployment rate was 64% higher than that for whites.
In 1952 the nonwhite unemployment rate was 92% higher than that for whites.
In 1962 the nonwhite unemployment rate was 124% higher than that for whites.

Making up less than 10% of the country's potential labor force, Negroes accounted for 20% of its unemployment in the past year.

TEENAGE UNEMPLOYMENT

Since 1955 the unemployment rate of white teenagers has increased 30%.
Since 1955 the unemployment rate of nonwhite teenagers has increased 60%.

In 1947 the unemployment rate for nonwhite youths (ages 14-19) was below that of whites.
In 1963 the unemployment rate for nonwhite youths was more than double that of whites.

POPULATION

The white population of the United States increased 17.5% between the 1950 and 1960 census.

The nonwhite population of the United States increased 28% between the 1950 and 1960 census.

OCCUPATIONS - 1963

30% of white workers were employed in professional, technical, managerial and sales occupations, but only ...
10% of nonwhite workers were employed in professional, technical, managerial and sales occupations.

47% of white workers were in white collar occupations, but only ...
17% of nonwhite workers were in white collar occupations.

25% of white workers were in semi-skilled or unskilled occupations, while ...
43% of nonwhite workers were in semi-skilled or unskilled occupations.

INCOME - LIFETIME

The average Negro with four years of college, under present circumstances, will earn less in his lifetime than the average white who never went beyond eighth grade.

A Negro boy, under present circumstances, has one-seventh the chance of earning $10,000 a year as a white boy, and twice as much chance of becoming unemployed.

INCOME - ANNUAL

In 1960 39% of white families had incomes below $5,000.
In 1960 71% of Negro families had incomes below $5,000.

In 1960 the annual median money wage for whites was $5,425.
In 1960 the annual median money wage for Negroes was $3,058.

In 1962 17% of white families had incomes of under $3,000.
In 1962 44.5% of Negro families had incomes of under $3,000.

INCOME - HOURLY WAGES

In 1949 the average earning for whites was $1.90 an hour.
In 1949 the average earning for Negroes was $1.00 an hour.

In 1959 the average earning for whites was $3.20 an hour.
In 1959 the average earning for Negroes was $1.75 an hour.

"There is little value in a Negro's obtaining the right to be admitted to hotels and restaurants, if he has no cash in his pocket and no job."

John F. Kennedy

Equality in Employment Opportunity will not happen automatically. It will not come about solely due to the Presidential executive orders, the Civil Rights Act, and States Fair Employment Practice legislation. Job equality will not take place only because there are Presidential committees, Title VII Equal Employment Opportunity commissions, and similar state bodies.

There must be a further commitment. There must be a witness to the immorality of discrimination on the part of the religious community in the United States. Church bodies and institutions must employ their lay personnel on a nondiscriminatory basis, and must utilize their tremendous purchasing power -- second only to the federal government itself -- to assist those firms which supply them with goods and services to adopt enlightened merit hiring policies.

PROJECT EQUALITY offers such a program service to the Roman Catholic church institutions in the United States.

* * *

"We must act to remove obstacles that impede the rights and opportunities of our Negro brethren."

Catholic Bishops of the United States,
August 25, 1963

GOVERNMENT

In Washington

LBJ works for cool summer

President hopes voting law and job program will minimize racial troubles later in year

Atty. Gen Katzenbach will be charged with enforcing the voting rights bill.

Civil Rights Commissioner Collins hopes persuasion will ease problems.

The Negro's drive for voting rights and economic opportunity is reaching a crescendo. The nation is approaching another long, hot summer, and Pres. Johnson is determined to keep it from erupting into one of turmoil on the streets.

A special government task force on "summer activities," headed by Civil Rights Commissioner LeRoy Collins, will try to head off some of the problems. Among other things, it will try to speed enrollment of Negroes in job training, and will work with civil rights leaders to keep things orderly.

Complexities. But an aide points out that the civil rights movement has gone way beyond the point where you stop riots by going around the country doing little things. Dr. Martin Luther King phrased the tenor of the drive when he declared after the Selma to Montgomery march: "If physical death is the price some must pay to save us and our white brothers from eternal death of the spirit, then no sacrifice could be more redemptive."

I. Double barrel

By summer, the government probably will have two new weapons in the war against discrimination:

- A stringent voting rights law that puts the power of the federal establishment squarely behind the Negro's drive for access to the ballot.
- A new equal employment opportunity commission, similar to state fair employment practices commissions, which begins business in July. It was provided for by the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

The voting rights bill will give Atty. Gen. Katzenbach about all the legal power needed to get Negroes to the polls; from then on, it will be a matter of making the new authority effective against resistance from diehard communities.

The problem of finding jobs for Negroes—and preparing Negroes to fill jobs that become available—is subtler and more challenging.

Action now. Pres. Johnson took a big step last week with a statement making "indelibly" clear that federal agencies throughout the country must not discriminate. He acted after receiving a report from Collins that U. S. agencies, particularly in the South, had not been doing all they could. Why they had not was not explained, even though an equal employment directive has been in effect for years.

On Tuesday, Vice-Pres. Humphrey suggested to 100 mayors meeting in Washington that they should create committees for fair employment practices in city construction jobs "along the same lines" as the White House committee.

The problem of finding jobs for Negroes threatens to become more acute. According to Hobart Taylor, director of the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity: "Within the next five years the ratio of Negro youth coming into the labor force will be almost double what it has been."

Business view. But as one hopeful sign, Taylor sees a "turnabout" in the attitude of business on this issue. While much remains to be done, the business community is going for this, he says.

More than 300 major corporations have signed up for the voluntary Plans for Progress. A report to be released shortly will show that while all employment between 1962 and 1964 went up 2.9%, employment of Negroes rose 4.9%. More significant, while employment in white collar jobs gained 8%, the number of Negroes in such jobs jumped 30%.

II. Manhunt

The federal government has a powerful handle on business through the executive order banning discrimination in employment by government contractors. Business recruiters have actually scoured Negro campuses for qualified employees.

Companies with government contracts must make periodic reports on actions they have taken to end discrimination. So far, no contracts have been cancelled, and only in a dozen cases has the point been reached where a company has been notified that it would get no further contracts without first mending its ways.

Everybody in. The new Equal Employment Opportunity Commission will reach almost all businesses—not only those with government contracts. More important, it will give the federal government a handle on labor unions, some of which have remained stubbornly lily-white. Even though top labor leadership has supported the civil rights move, many locals have not.

For its part, the National Assn. of Manufacturers has conducted a score of meetings in the South to acquaint businessmen with the law.

However, the commission can act only on the basis of complaints, and then must give state FEPCs first crack at the case for a period of 60 days. Even after that, the commission's rulings can be appealed through the courts.

Employment - Gen

RIGHTS CRISIS LAID TO MECHANIZATION

Professors Note Plight of Negro Tenant Farmers

4-25-65

By AUSTIN C. WEHRWEIN

Special to The New York Times

CHICAGO, April 24 — Mechanical cotton pickers, tractors and chemical weed-killers that have driven hundreds of thousands of Southern Negroes off the farm were cited today as an explanation for the civil rights movement that has erupted in both South and North over the last decade.

This explanation, advanced by Profs. Harry C. Dillingham and David F. Sly of Central Michigan University at the Population Association of America convention here, is a departure from the usual view.

Many observers contend that the current racial crisis stems from the Negro's rising hopes that segregation and discrimination would soon be ended.

According to the Dillingham-Sly theory, mechanization of cotton farming has displaced so many Negroes since 1950 that it has affected Negro job opportunities throughout the nation.

"The future look bleak for the Negro's access to employment," the professors said. They went on to quote from an article entitled "Who Needs the Negro?" by Sidney M. Wilhelm and Edwin H. Powell in a publication called "Trans-Action." It said:

"The tendency to look upon the racial crisis as a struggle for equality between Negro and white is too narrow in scope. The crisis is caused not so much by the transition from slavery to equality as by a change from an economics of exploitation to an economics of uselessness."

"The recent surge has been commonly attributed to a changing 'Weltanschauung,'" they said, using a German word meaning a personal or racial philosophy of the world.

"In contrast evidence is presented here that the changing technology of Southern agriculture has largely displaced the Southern Negro agriculturalist from his job."

They noted the Southern Negro cotton tenant farmer started from a low base anyhow, with an average yearly cash income of $800. They reported a "staggering reduction" in Negro tenant farmers in the Mississippi Delta region, where 81 per cent of the cotton is harvested by mechanical pickers compared with 27 per cent in 1958.

Even a small mechanical cotton picker can harvest an acre of cotton in six man-hours compared with 74 man-hours of hand labor, and the tenant laborer supports at least four other family members.

The professors focused on 17 Arkansas counties typical of the Southern cotton economy and found "drastic" job losses. In 1952 these counties had 482 cotton picking machines. By 1963 they had 5,061. In the 15 of the 17 counties containing Negro tenant farmers, the number dropped between 1959 and 1959 from 21,862 to 6,587.

The integrationist movement for civil rights is indirectly an answer to unemployment, Professors Dillingham and Sly said. They believe, however, that growing Negro political power, even if used to the maximum, does not appear capable of opening to Negroes large numbers of current jobs, nor does it appear capable of creating new jobs.

Southern Negroes displaced by farm machines are "propelled" or "pushed" off the land, rather than being "pulled" by job prospects in Northern cities, they said. They said jobs for Negroes in the North were declining or, if growing, only at a declining rate.

They said Negroes were becoming skilled faster than skilled jobs were opening for them. Northern Negro political power can open up welfare benefits and government jobs, but "direct action upon economic organizations to achieve more jobs is impossible," the professors asserted.

THE COMING ECONOMIC REVOLUTION

by EDWARD T. CHASE

AN IMPORTANT argument on national economic policy, smoldering for months now in academic corridors, in Congressional hearings, in foundation symposia, and in ignored position papers, has begun to break out into public view.

The argument is about unemployment and automation. It pits the President's Council of Economic Advisers against some of our leading university economists. The argument is addressed to the question of whether American economic malaise is structural in some new sense. And most particularly, it is about the nature and extent of measures required to reduce unemployment to a four per cent rate or less.

What is being argued is whether or not a radically different approach is needed to overcome the poverty afflicting the fifth of all American families with annual incomes of under $3,000, and to scotch the threat of such poverty spreading and deepening. Press discussion of President Johnson's new "poverty package," a comprehensive plan to combat poverty (the rediscovery of poverty is sweeping the country in faddist proportions), has lately stimulated widespread lay interest in the argument over the most effective cures for joblessness and privation.

One is tempted to say that the argument has not been equaled since the Keynesian revolution of the Thirties. In common with that revolution, which reversed classical doctrine by asserting the priority of mass consumer demand and the admissibility of government spending to stimulate it, the consummation of this one, in the sense of official acceptance of a position, may be achieved haltingly. A consensus in the current controversy may come agonizingly just too late. The impetus for today's argument is the spectacle of long-term unemployment—or, more precisely, the spectacle of conventional wisdom, now Keynesian, failing to adjust to the facts about such unemployment.

The argument ultimately touches upon everything from the gold drain and the growth rate to administered prices, cost-push inflation, and civil rights. But one can best enter into it by focusing on unemployment. Perhaps the most interesting aspect of the controversy has to do with the fresh evidence of the importance of capital investment in people in contrast to industrial plant.

Who are the antagonists? Well, we have, on what is now the right, Walter Heller and his Council of Economic Advisers, stigmatized as the cyclicalists and the devotees of aggregate demand. And, over here, we have the structuralists, a mixture of thinkers-about-cybernation, the younger bloods in the Department of Labor and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, and an array of academicians. The most formidable of them is Professor Charles C. Killingsworth, the manpower expert from Michigan State University. Killingsworth has starred in the discussions before Congressional hearings and at recent symposia on unemployment and labor market policy. There is reason to believe he has Heller and company on the defensive as they also begin to acknowledge the significance, if not quite the primacy, of the structuralists' case.

But an old-timer in the Labor Department, Ewan Clague, the U.S. Commissioner of Labor Statistics, has put forth, in a brutally simple demonstration, some of the key data that go to the heart of the matter. Clague raises questions about the ability of the $11 billion tax cut to invigorate the economy in the light of the following: In the past decade, both in prosperous years and in slump years alike, the percentage of the unemployed defined as the "very long term unemployed," six months or more, has increased steadily. At midyear in 1953, they numbered 58,000, or 3.7 per cent of all unemployed; in 1957, they numbered 260,000, or 9.6 per cent; in 1960, 411,000, or 11.9 per cent; and in 1963, 643,000, or 15.8 per cent.

Half the rise in unemployment over the past decade, Clague demonstrates, is attributable to the longer duration of joblessness of those out of work, rather than any incidence of new unemployment deriving from cyclical slumps. This is an entirely new experience for the United States, with confounding implications for those whose faith rests upon fiscal and monetary manipulations. Meanwhile, corporate profits are at an all-time high, while about thirteen per cent of our industrial capacity goes unused, casting further doubt on the need or the likely efficacy of a tax cut as an incentive for business investment.

The conventional assumption has

EDWARD T. CHASE interprets economic and social developments for a number of publications, including Harper's, The Atlantic, The Commonweal, and Saturday Review.

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

been that the labor market in a market economy has a self-regulating nature akin to the self-regulating character of the market itself. If this assumption is valid, then a tax cut, successfully stimulating the economy generally and nourishing demand and the requisite purchasing power, would melt away hard core, "structural" unemployment. But what has become increasingly evident, claim the structuralists, is that rapid and pervasive technological and demographic changes have decisively altered the character of the labor market so that it is much less responsive to overall market forces.

To begin with, in the decade after World War II, the U.S. economy produced an average of 902,000 new jobs annually. From 1957 until 1962, however, it produced an average of only about 464,000 new jobs annually, a calamitous drop unmatched elsewhere among the industrialized nations save for Canada. Meanwhile, over this postwar period, the U.S. labor force substantially increased, at an average rate of 1.6 per cent yearly, or almost one million persons annually from 1957 on. In consequence, unemployment hit a peak of seven per cent in 1961. The economic pickup of 1962 and the boom of 1963 temporarily halted this disastrous trend, with the economy producing something more than a million new jobs yearly, or a bit more than the net addition of new matriculants into the labor force. This is only a partial and brief respite because we are on the verge of a spectacular increase in the number of young entrants into the labor force.

Furthermore, productivity per worker increased by about 2.4 per cent yearly before 1961, and since then by more than three per cent annually. We now must create 10,000 new jobs daily, or about ten million in the next two and a half years, just to keep from slipping behind. Another way to say this is to point out that we require 158 new jobs created today for every 100 we needed in the 1950's, simply to stay even.

What is more, and this is at least equally important, the kinds of job opportunities that are being created today (as well as their location) are radically different from what they were only a few years ago, and they are more difficult to anticipate. Notoriously, the unskilled, the young, the old, the immobile poor, and the disadvantaged minorities are not finding job openings. Their plight deepens as the simple tasks they traditionally performed are taken over by machines.

The structuralist argument is pressed further by additional evidence of various types. For example, according to the Labor Department's manpower expert, Seymour Wolfbein, although unemployment hovers at about six per cent the existence of available job openings can be documented. Such evidence, a prerequisite under the Manpower Development and Training Act for establishing training programs for the unemployed in any given area, has not been a limiting factor in setting up training projects. A job survey in Philadelphia, as a typical instance, revealed 15,000 job openings in thirty-two categories for which there were no locally available qualified applicants. Labor bottlenecks of this nature are being reported in various industries and cities across the country.

To date, the structuralists' case has not notably altered the basic position adopted by the Council of Economic Advisers, though there is occasional wavering, or perhaps ambiguity is the better word, in their public utterances. (The Washington scuttlebutt is that, in private, Council members express grave doubts that their policies will reduce unemployment to four per cent.) C.E.A. member Gardner Ackley, in a widely reported speech before the Vermont-New Hampshire School of Banking in Hanover, New Hampshire, recently gave the Council's position as one of still doubting that the pace of new technology was making today's unemployment problem any different from what it had been, and of being convinced that the proposed $11 billion tax cut would suffice to bring unemployment down to four per cent in 1966. As his chief, Walter Heller, has done so often, Ackley went out of his way to spurn the notion that modern automation is significantly new in its impact on the labor market. Once again he made explicit the C.E.A. view that monetary and fiscal manipulations were adequate to the task of controlling unemployment.

Flannery in The Baltimore Evening Sun

"Still . . . ill-housed, ill-clothed, ill-fed"

The main point at which the structuralists attack the Council of Economic Advisers' position is the latter's implicit assumption of the homogeneity of the labor force. It is a crucial element in the structuralists' argument. They cite, to begin with—and our Swedish uncle Gunnar Myrdal also comes down heavily on this note in his new book, Challenge to Affluence—the high figures for overtime worked by the highly skilled and the managerial elite. Accordingly, a tax-cut stimulated rise in business activity would not absorb any significant portion of the unemployed, they claim, but would produce further bottlenecks by aggravating the shortage of the highly skilled. Indeed, assert the structuralists, should a tax cut create the desired greater investment in new and more productive plant and equipment, it would be certain to enlarge the surplus of underdeveloped (i.e. inadequately educated and trained) manpower, those not equipped for the tasks of designing, installing, and running modern labor-saving machines.

The unreality of the cyclicalists' traditional notion of the homogeneity of labor was pungently emphasized at a recent Washington conference on poverty—they are almost daily affairs now—by John Kenneth Galbraith. While welcoming efforts to stimulate economic growth, he went on to say: "But on one point there must be no doubt. If the head of a family is stranded deep on the Cumberland plateau, or if he never went to school, or if he has no useful skill, or if his health is broken, or if he succumbed as a youngster to a slum environment, or if opportunity is denied to him because he is a Negro, then he will be poor and his family will be poor and that will be true no matter how opulent everyone else becomes."

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

Another structuralist, University of Chicago economist Theodore W. Schultz, in his presidential address, "Investment In Human Capital," at the recent annual meeting of the American Economic Association, traced the faulty concept of labor's homogeneity back to the early industrial period. It is a concept that has persisted in the face of more and more conflict with reality. "The failure to treat human resources explicitly as a form of capital, as a produced means of production, as the product of investment, has fostered the retention of the classical notion of labor as a capacity to do manual work requiring little knowledge and skill, a capacity with which, according to this notion, laborers are endowed about equally." "This notion of labor," said Schultz, "was wrong in the classical period and it is patently wrong now. Counting individuals who can and want to work, and treating such a count as a measure of the quantity of an economic factor, is no more meaningful than it would be to count the number of all manner of machines to determine their economic importance either as a stock of capital or as a flow of productive services."

Is the growth in employment in service activities, as employment in production jobs declines, absorbing the hard-core unemployed as hoped? No, say the structuralists. For as Professor Killingsworth testified recently before Senator Joseph D. Clark's Subcommittee on Employment and Manpower, "The fundamental effect of automation on the labor market is to 'twist' the pattern of [the] demand [for labor]"—that is, it pushes down the demand for workers with large amounts of training. The shift from goods to services is a second

Dowling in The New York Herald Tribune

Water, Water Everywhere

major factor which twists the labor market in the same way. There are some low-skilled, blue collar jobs in service-producing industries, but the most rapidly growing parts of the service sector are health care and education, both of which require a heavy preponderance of highly-trained people.

Killingsworth is especially critical of the Council of Economic Advisers for its repeated assertion that technological changes today have no worse an influence on employment than in earlier periods. He demonstrates, for example, that automation is in fact creating a new kind of havoc because, quite apart from whatever intrinsic characteristics automation has that differentiate it from earlier technological change, it is occurring in a new economic environment, our highly developed mass consumption society.

When Henry Ford introduced the moving assembly line in 1913, thereby reducing direct labor requirements for each automobile by ninety per cent, the impact on employment was more than compensated for by the fact that there was, in 1913, only one automobile registered for every 100 people in the country. The potential market was tremendous. By the 1950's, however, when a technological change roughly comparable in its labor savings to the assembly line hit Detroit—I refer to the transfer machine which automatically advances the car's engine block and other parts from unfinished to finished form, without employing machine operators—there was one car registered for every four Americans. In short, while the market was not saturated, its growth potential by then was vastly more limited than it was in 1913. By 1960, with one car for every three persons, saturation no longer seemed remote.

The point Killingsworth makes is the simple but ignored one of the increasing inelasticity of demand in the private consumer sector of our advanced economy; that "when an industry has reached maturity—for example, when there is already one car for each three people—it just is not possible to achieve further dramatic increases in sales, even with the largest price cuts within the realm of reason. The improved productivity made possible by labor saving machines simply enables the industry to keep up with the normal growth of the market while employing fewer production workers. This is what happened in a number of our major industries in the 1950's." Items: 99.5 per cent of homes now have electric refrigerators; 93 per cent have TV sets; 83 per cent, electric washing machines.

Sales of electric toothbrushes and electric hairbrushes may be starting to grow rapidly. But the growth of employment in such typical new "industries" will not offset the decline in the older, basic, larger consumer goods industries.

"The doctrine that 'machines make jobs,' to the extent that it rests on research rather than faith," testified Killingsworth before Senator Clark's subcommittee, "is drawn primarily from studies of the periods 1899-1937 and 1899-1953. These were mainly years when the growth potential of most markets for goods was still very great." A "major source of error" is the assumption that our great mass-production industries will grow at the same prodigious rate in the second half of the Twentieth Century as in the first half.

At least three basic policy conclusions are being drawn from all this by manpower experts in Washington. For one, while a tax cut, and especially tax reform, are deemed desirable, they cannot prevail as the answer to hard core unemployment without concomitant "structural" interventions. The latter must include large-scale and intensive retraining of the unemployed and underemployed, government underwriting of the costs of their training and relocation, and a vast acceleration and up-dating of vocational education. (Interestingly, 1963 ended with remarkable progress on this front: Congressional passage of an extraordinarily ambitious education bill carrying increased funds for vocational education, as well as substantial expansion and improvement of the Manpower Development and Training Act program, with the latter to include not only money for relocation but also stepped-up programs to combat illiteracy.)

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

Secondly, because inelasticity of demand characterizes so much of our private consumer economy, there must be recognition that America's predominant unmet needs are found in the public sector. At present these needs cannot be expressed as "market demand" since the requisite purchasing power is lacking. Among the beneficiaries of housing programs, of more and better schools, better mass transportation, health care, and recreational facilities, are the thirty million poor whose needs can be converted to demand only by direct Federal subsidy. What will be involved in changing the poor into paying customers is a program of public works on a much larger scale, especially in such areas of sustained economic torpor as Appalachia, the upper Great Lakes region, and parts of the Ohio Valley region.

The argument also is being pressed that the single expedient promising the speediest result would be a massive national urban redevelopment program, desirable both in coping with the deteriorated areas of our largest cities and because construction, and especially housing, uses a higher ratio of labor to materials than our other big industries.

The third conclusion is that there must be a revolution in our labor market policies resulting in what Charles Killingsworth, Gunnar Myrdal, Professor C. W. Bakke of Yale, and other structuralists call a "positive" labor market policy. Besides the retraining, vocational education, and relocation allowances, there must be a vastly improved national employment service to assist labor mobility at all levels. Today, the U.S. Employment Service is Federally financed but run by the states. Its operations are locally oriented and its offices stigmatized as "unemployment offices" rather than centers for employment.

A reformed U.S.E.S. would provide up-to-the-minute regional and national employment trends information in all its 1,900 offices; expert interviewing, testing, counseling, and placement services for all skill levels; and a real source of information on job openings. The latter could be achieved by making it compulsory for larger firms to list openings with the U.S.E.S. (but with no compulsion that firms have to hire only applicants referred by the U.S.E.S.). If the current cutbacks in armament programs increase, the likelihood of such reforms will be enhanced because only a first rate, national employment service can deal effectively with sudden major manpower dislocations.

In sum, then, such American economic malaise as prevails will not be cured by the Council of Economic Advisers' monetary or fiscal measures unless accompanied by significantly substantial government intervention of a structural nature. That means vastly stepped-up retraining and relocation of the unemployed; public works in the area of such unmet needs as housing, education, health care, urban mass transportation, and recreation; and an expanded, reformed national employment service dedicated to a positive labor market policy. Nothing less will suffice.

The Moral Crisis of the 'White Liberals'

by JAMES A. WECHSLER

FOR A LONG time it has been the fashion of Northern spokesmen to lament the silence and passivity of white men of good will living in the cross-fire of the Southern civil rights conflict. Where, one kept asking, were the voices of decency in Alabama, Georgia, and Mississippi when men, women, and children were subjected to racist violence and intimidation? Why did so few leaders of the white community speak out in protest? Was there neither conscience nor chivalry left in the respectable Southern community? Had valor and virtue become the almost exclusive possession of the embattled Negro freedom fighters and a handful of white companions (many of the latter actually young Northern volunteers who had enlisted in the Southern struggle)?

The questions have come back to haunt us now in many Northern cities and suburbs. For the civil rights revolution has landed on our doorsteps and refuses to go away. And now we begin to wonder what has happened to some of the non-combatant warriors in our midst who gave so much verbal—sometimes even financial—backing to the Southern liberation movements. It was so simple for comfortable people in even our most plush suburban refuges to

JAMES A. WECHSLER is editor of the editorial page of The New York Post. He is the author of five books: "Revolt on the Campus," "War Propaganda and the United States," "Labor Baron," "The Age of Suspicion," and "Reflections of an Angry Middle-Aged Editor."

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

The Great Society

A New Kind of Balance Sheet Is Needed

by Leon H. Keyserling

President Johnson has instructed his top experts to begin work on a legislative program for 1966, uninhibited by considerations of cost or politics. They are to look at what our resources permit and what the nation needs. But even as the President is initiating what could become a great planning effort, a source long dedicated to planning has blown retreat, in a study prepared by Dr. Leonard A. Lecht, director of the National Goals Project of the National Planning Association and entitled "The Dollar Cost of our National Goals."

The study starts with 15 national objectives originally set forth qualitatively in a 1961 Report of President Eisenhower's Commission on National Goals. To these it adds President Kennedy's aim "to put men on the moon and bring them back." It then quantifies the "costs" of these 16 goals, and concludes that their achievement by 1975 would "cost" in that year about $1,131 billion, or $150 billion more than the $981 billion Gross National Product which the study sets as a target for that year. To lift GNP higher, the study says, would impose "severe strains on our social and economic institutions," require "a much greater degree of decision-making vested in the federal government than most Americans have been willing to accept in peacetime," and, in all probability, involve such unpopular measures as a longer work-week and price and wage controls.

I disagree and shall try to explain why.

Goals or "needs" are not absolutes; they vary with our productive capabilities, which in turn are greatly affected by the "needs" we serve. Thus, "needs" and capabilities are two sides of a balance sheet interacting upon one another in the very process of formulating them. When the NPA study adds up the disconnected estimates of specialists in a dozen or more fields, and then tells the American people they are beyond our productive potentials, it reduces national goal-making to a burlesque. By this method, one might just as easily find that our "needs" by 1975 will exceed our potentials, not by $150 billion, but by $300 billion or even $3 trillion.

In any event, the study's GNP target of $981 million by 1975 assumes an average annual GNP growth rate of only 4 percent and unemployment averaging 4 percent. This contrasts with the 2.9 percent unemployment rate which I and many others equate with maximum employment; and even this lower figure is much higher than unemployment in other advanced industrial nations. As to growth, the President's 1965 Economic Report depicts, during recent years, an average annual advance of 3.5 percent in productivity, and indicates between now and 1970 an average yearly increase of 1.7 percent in the civilian labor force. Just to absorb these two factors, we need an annual GNP growth of 5.2 percent (not the NPA's 4 percent), which might be reduced to about 5 percent by some gradual reduction in the working week. Moreover, in view of the excessive unemployment now, we need for a couple of years an average annual GNP growth of 8-9 percent to restore reasonably full resource use by 1967.

Weighing these considerations, I arrive at a 1975 GNP target of about $1,100 billion, or about $119 billion higher than the NPA's. This difference would cover about 80 percent of the $150 billion worth of programs which the NPA study says we must forego. And the other 20 percent could be covered by a more desirable distribution of GNP than the study projects. In view of the new technology, the study allocates too large a portion of GNP to private investment in plant and equipment. The study also implies too rapid a rate of expansion of consumption by those who already enjoy opulence.

Let us turn to matters of fundamental emphasis. Today, we are confronted by enormous idleness of manpower and other productive resources; and few competent analysts would say that current and prospective programs will bring us much closer to full use of our resources in the foreseeable future. Under these circumstances the NPA warning is like rushing to slow

---

LEON H. KEYSERLING was Chairman of President Truman's Council of Economic Advisers, and is now President of the Conference on Economic Progress.

New Republic
6/12/65

down a train which is hardly making the grade.

The study also warns that we had better be careful, lest some attempt to go too far or too fast toward the Great Society results in too much planning and other activity by the federal government. For a "national planning" group to denigrate, if ever so softly, the role of the government seems to me to cap error with irony. It is as if there were no such thing as the Employment Act of 1946, which requires for its proper implementation that goals and capabilities of the kinds treated in the NPA study be set forth annually by the President and examined by the Congress.

Current euphoria about "the longest uninterrupted upward movement in our history" seems to me to ignore some hard facts, the most important being: We have made no striking progress toward solving our chronically deficient economic growth rate. Indeed, a hardly noticed sentence in the 1965 Annual Report of the Council of Economic Advisers admits that the current upward movement has been unusual in length but not in progress toward restoring reasonably full resource use. "Recovering" for so long means that we have not achieved anything near full recovery; we have been "stretching out" high level stagnation."

Persistent Unemployment

Unemployment today, officially stated at around 5 percent of the civilian labor force, is two-thirds higher than it ought to be. But this 5 percent figure itself tends to mislead. Since unemployment hits different people at different times of the year, a 5 percent average means that about a fifth of the workers are out of work on the average for about three months in the year and thus lose a quarter of their regular annual income. The 5 percent average also means a Negro unemployment rate about twice as high as among whites – and 15 to 20 percent among young people just entering the labor market. Nor is the average really 5 percent. Taking account of the full-time equivalent of part-time unemployment, and the concealed unemployment resulting from those not actively looking for work because of the scarcity of job opportunity, the true level of unemployment now is certainly in excess of 8 percent.

Aside from the human tragedy of unemployment, is the public aware of its other costs? Unemployment from 1953-1964 cost the US about $590 billion in lost production, measured in 1963 dollars. The gap between actual production and potential maximum production is now about $80 billion (annual rate).

And let no one now think we are coming out of the woods. The unemployment rate today is lower than at the trough of our most recent recession, in 1961, but it is much higher than at the crest of any previous recovery movement since 1953. Thus, there has been no significant interruption of the chronic trend toward rising unemployment. In its January Report, the Council of Economic Advisers forecast a 1964-65 economic growth rate of about 4 percent (contrasted with the 8 to 9 percent needed for about two years to restore maximum employment), and it forecast unemployment averaging about the same this year as last. In May, an important group of business analysts forecast almost no further expansion in 1965. In the next year or two, the jobless rate is likely to be higher than now.

Getting employment down and the growth rate up depends upon bringing consumption into line with our burgeoning productive powers. Even in purely economic terms, this requires that we reduce rapidly the glaring disparities between the 40 percent or so of our people who live in poverty or deprivation, and the 5 to 7 percent who live in "affluence"; and part of this task is to strike a better balance between production of luxury goods and production in the public sector (schools, health care, recreation, transportation, resource development). The wars against poverty and low economic growth and unemployment are really one; their fragmentation is a main reason why we are faltering on all three fronts.

Manpower training, retraining and education, while desirable, have been given altogether too high a priority. All experience shows that a high enough level of aggregate demand (not obtained by training individuals) quickly reduces unemployment to minimum levels, educates many people on the job, and tells us what to train others for. Similarly, the anti-poverty war under the Economic Opportunity Act attributes far too much poverty to personal characteristics of the poor requiring corrective treatment, rather than to systemic defaults in our general economic performance and programs. There are only three ways to get more income to the poor: (a) reduce unemployment to minimum levels, (b) enlarge the incomes of those employed but receiving substandard pay, and (c) allocate larger shares of the national income to those who cannot be employed, like most of our older people and women with small children but without husbands. These three tasks, requiring not only many private adjustments but also greatly expanded public services, are only lightly touched by the Economic Opportunity Act, and inadequately dealt with under other programs.

Much in point are the tax reductions of 1962 (by administrative action) and of 1964 (by legislation) having an annual value of about $13 billion. More than half of this $13 billion cut, according to my calculations, was designed to increase saving for investment purposes by corporations and relatively high-income individuals. Since savings for this purpose were already ample, this part of the tax reduction has been diverted substantially to frozen savings, to bidding up stock prices, and to investments overseas which have complicated our balance of payments and gold problem. The smaller part, which flowed into immediate stimulation of personal consumption, should have been almost the whole.

But even if most of the tax reduction flowed into immediate spending at home, this would make a relatively little dent upon the problem of creating the 22-27 million new jobs which will be needed over the next decade to take care of population expansion and those displaced by automation. No feasible expansion in the demand for the kinds of products bought with tax reduction money is likely to outrun the advances in productivity and technology in the industries which turn out these products. The only way to create these millions of new jobs is to shift much more of our total production toward unmet national needs – needs so great that appropriate expansion of output in these areas would far outrun the technological advances. These areas manifestly call for more public spending instead of more tax reduction.

Ill-conceived tax reductions at an annual rate of about $13 billion may have stimulated the economy some and prolonged the upturn. But $13 billion thrown into the streets, to be scrambled for by the first comers, would have done this for a while, and might even have distributed the proceeds better. The real question is how much more good could have been done – and can still be done – by alternative policies. Largely in exchange for these tax reductions, federal budget outlays per capita, measured in 1963 dollars, fell to $476.06 as proposed for fiscal 1966, compared with $482.37 in fiscal 1965, and $558.19 in fiscal 1954. Measured in ratio to total national production, total federal budget outlays declined from 18.72 percent in fiscal 1954 to 16.32 percent in fiscal 1964, and 15.25 percent in fiscal 1965. The ratio has been still lower in fiscal 1966; and, in exchange for another $4 billion of excise tax reduction over the next few years, and promises of other tax concessions to come, a continuing tight rein on federal spending is in prospect. This mix of fiscal policy may yield some sort of consensus, but the price paid is far too high.

The Money Supply

Next to tax reduction, the most important economic weapon employed since 1953 is the monetary policy, and its use has been inept. The unduly low rate of expansion of the money supply has been a major factor in repressing growth and enlarging unemployment. During the past decade or so, upward-spiraling interest rates have transferred more than $50 billion away from ordinary consumers and small producers who could have used this money most beneficially (to themselves and the whole economy), and away from the government budgets which could have used the money to war against poverty, and toward financial institutions and others who have not needed such additional income. Taking tax policies and money policy together, $10-12 billion a year is now being misdirected. This would be enough to pay for an effective offensive against unemployment, poverty, and low economic growth, for several years ahead.

Using an American Economic Performance Budget which reconciles all of our productive capabilities and "needs" (on the manpower side, the income side and the product side), I set forth on the next page what we can achieve by 1975. As I have used this Performance Budget for almost two decades, I have been able to test and revise it in terms of actual developments.

The main targets for 1975, in my judgment, should include the virtual liquidation of poverty in the US; a decent home for almost all families; a substantial rebuilding of our urban areas and mass transportation systems; education within the reach of practically all, up to the limits of their capabilities and ambitions; health services, in line with the advance of medical science and available to practically all at costs within their means; public assistance programs with income "floors" below which no families should be permitted to remain; labor and manpower programs to train and relocate those who need them; and natural resource development compatible with the needs of a growing population and rapid population shifts. This is not Utopia; much would remain to be done in 1975, but in terms of the standards of that year, not the standards of 1965.

Because the federal budget is the most powerful single economic instrument we have for meeting a large portion of our national needs and for galvanizing action at other levels of government and in the private sector, and because the decisions to be made in connection with the fiscal 1967 federal budget to be submitted next January are of such towering importance,

SUMMER SCHEDULE

During the summer months, The New Republic will not appear on:

July 17 July 31
August 14 August 28

Weekly publication will be resumed with the issue dated September 4

GOALS FOR THE FEDERAL BUDGET

(actual, fiscal 1966; goals, calendar 1970 and 1975)

	Per Capita (1963 dollars)			Total (billions of 1963 dollars)
	1966	1970	1975	1966	1970	1975
Housing and community development	0.05	15.61	16.49	0.01	3.3	3.8
Education	12.72	33.11	39.06	2.7	7.0	9.0
Health services and research	10.46	22.71	30.38	2.2	4.8	7.0
Public assistance	16.71	21.29	23.44	3.5	4.5	5.4
Labor, manpower, and other welfare services[1]	6.18	9.46	9.55	1.3	2.0	2.2
Natural resources	12.85	15.14	15.63	2.7	3.2	3.6
All domestic programs and services[2]	186.37	250.71	256.08	39.0	53.0	59.0
Total federal outlays, including defense, space, and international	476.06	638.60	677.08	99.7	135.0	156.0

[1] Excluding the Economic Opportunity Act, for which the $1.346 billion item in the fiscal 1966 budget should be doubled within a few years.

[2] Including also agriculture, veterans, commerce, interest, general government, etc.

I list above some goals for the federal budget, both on a per capita basis related to total population and on an aggregate dollar basis, taking the fiscal 1966 federal budget as the point of departure.

This proposed federal budget does not rely too heavily upon federal action. In a properly growing economy, the proposed federal outlays would be 15.4 percent of total national production in calendar 1970, and 14.2 percent in calendar 1975, compared with an average of 16.3 percent during the fiscal years 1954-1966. My proposals contemplate that the annual rate of federal outlays for goods and services be lifted to a 1975 level about $42 billion above the 1964 level, and that over the same period of time the annual rate of state and local outlays for goods and services be lifted about $32 billion. While I urge an increase in 1975 over 1964 of about $74 billion in the annual rate of outlays for goods and services by governments at all levels, there is projected an increase of almost $98 billion in gross private investment (including net foreign), and an increase of $317 billion in private consumer expenditures, adding up to an increase of about $489 billion in the annual rate of total national production.

Any further tax reduction should concentrate upon enlarging the after-tax incomes of low- and middle-income people, through much higher exemption credits in the personal income tax structure, and reduction of federal excise taxes on necessities, not luxuries. The policies of the Federal Reserve Board should be drastically revised, toward a more liberal money supply and lower interest rates. Conventional-type public works should receive at least $1 billion a year of additional federal support. Federal minimum wage legislation should be greatly improved, both as to coverage and standards. With federal aid, unemployment insurance should be made available to all who need it, with average benefit payments at least half the average full-time working wage. Old-age insurance benefits should be doubled within 5 years, and financed increasingly through general taxation. An entirely new farm program should be enacted, geared toward income rather than price parity, with help directed toward those who need it most, and with much more stress upon expansion of consumption both at home and through enlarged exports to the half of the world which still goes hungry. Developmental programs for the distressed areas should, with appropriate modifications, be lifted to the comprehensiveness which distinguished the TVA. And we need vast readjustments in price-wage-profit-investment relationships throughout the private sector. Toward this, some public "guide-lines" more realistic than the current one could emerge under the discipline of an American Economic Performance Budget such as I describe.

Not in detail but in outline, these are the standards to which one may hope the President's experts will turn, as they prepare for 1966 and the years following.

Education is now the last refuge of a scoundrel

By Robert M. Hutchins

DR. SAMUEL JOHNSON said that patriotism was the last refuge of a scoundrel. He was not against patriotism; no more patriotic man ever lived. He meant that people who are always talking about patriotism and using patriotism as an explanation of their perfidious acts are scoundrels. In our own day we have seen some pretty scurvy exhibitions of this kind. Civil liberties have been invaded time and again in the name of "national security."

Harry S. Ashmore of the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions has pointed out to me that education is now the last refuge of a scoundrel. It has become the most useful alibi in the language. Try this test yourself. Ask anybody to do something about peace, unemployment, poverty, the slums, race relations, or the undeveloped countries. If he tells you that the only answer is education, you may be fairly sure he is a scoundrel.

What he means is that he does not have the slightest interest in doing anything about the subjects under discussion. He has thought of a high-sounding, meaningless excuse for tolerating injustice. You will have a hard time answering him. Who can be against education?

Yet, if the people who got slavery and child labor abolished or who fought for free schools and social security had been content with this answer, none of these reforms would ever have been effected.

We forget that the law is itself a teacher, a means of disseminating new moral truth as it is formulated. The reason why nobody would think of hiring a 10-year-old child to make automobiles today is that for many years it has been against the law to do so.

The case that provoked Ashmore's wrath was that of the California Real Estate Association. In the recent election, that organization conferred on California the dubious honor of being the only state, outside the Deep South, in which the white backlash appeared.

The association created the backlash by a scoundrelly, hypocritical campaign in which it sought to convince the people that bigotry and racial prejudice were identical with freedom and justice. The constitutional amendment the association sponsored, and the propaganda it dispensed with a lavish hand, were so deceptively worded as to convince many Negroes that this was a civil rights measure, designed to promote fair housing. What it actually does is to prevent the legislature from passing any fair housing laws.

After the people had been hornswoggled into adopting this amendment at the polls, the association sanctimoniously announced that it was opposed to prejudice, discrimination, and segregation. It intended, it said, to proceed through education. It will now, having stirred up racial antagonism throughout the state, remove it through its benevolent educational activities.

Ashmore is right.

Research Urged Now

AUTOMATION TO WIPE OUT MOST WOMEN-HELD JOBS?

MIAMI BEACH, Oct. 15 (AP)—Mrs. Mary G. Roebling, a leading banker, predicted Thursday that automation during the next 20 years will eliminate most of the jobs now held by women.

In a speech prepared for delivery to the convention of the National Consumer Finance Association, Mrs. Roebling said the effect of automation on women's jobs could cause an economic disaster unless something is done to ease the impact.

Mrs. Roebling is chairman of the board of the Trenton, N.J., Trust Co.

"The economic force that allowed women to escape from the home and to work and to earn a livelihood will, within 20 years, turn like Frankenstein's monster and destroy the job opportunities which are now open to most women," she said.

Seventy per cent of working women hold clerical jobs, she said, and these will be hardest hit by computers.

She called for action by such groups as the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the merchants and manufacturers associations, and research organizations "to work immediately upon this problem to evaluate it and to seek ways and means of preventing what now appears to be a potential disaster."

The Older Negro in America Today

Monographs by:
Nat'l Urban League

We have copy.
Ordered by MA.

Louisville, City of Human Relations
Council (Commission) did a study on
Negro unemployment.

Source:
Thomas
SRC development
Committee

Question - Should you consider the effects of labor unions on negro employment opportunities?

Certainly, it is a facet.

Perhaps distinguish between:

nationals & locals

leaders & members

Check with Don Slaiman?

Idea - Educational Imbalance

Emphasis on college (arts, sciences, profession)

Deemphasis on technical training — except for agri.

Result —
80% of white youth
90% of negro youth
do not go to such colleges

End up with many unemployables

Must be supported by the other 10 + 20% — who were supported by massive spending of resources on their education — who resent "supporting" the unemployable

See V.V. Henderson

p. 20

Atlanta U – $900 grant from AIA
Econ. Dev. & Service Center

Henderson, J.R. – possible source of info on Negro employ't in South

Jackson – PHA – open occupancy – 661 units ready to cooperate with G.O.

Smith – Equal Employ't oppty
Surveying const ind, in Ga. + S.C.
[negro, & white rural school, graduates failing entrance tests to tr + empl. opp ties]

*Ransom – USDL – BES
Poss. source of info on Negro employables – along with Urban Lg.

Gaither – Urban Renewal

Bob Thompson – H+HFA

Equal Employment Oppty

Tables 9, 10, 11, 12, 13 -
pp. 186-109
Give distribution of employment, by type (industry) and by color - but only up to 1950-52, of course. However good lead to potential sources of current data.

What about:
NAACP men, e.g.

M.W. Day
Committee on Labor & Industry
Nashville Branch, NAACP

as sources of Negro insight into effects of automation

???

and women of the country. The Machinist publish

Make the most humane use of our technological progress

From the Labor Sunday message of the National Council of the Churches of Christ:

The National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. on this Labor Sunday invites all local congregations to direct their attention to the needs of all workers, those who are unorganized as well as those in the labor movement. We note especially the place of the labor movement in the rapidly changing world of work today. . . . We have honored the labor movement for providing its members a voice in the conditions of their employment and helping to shift the emphasis from labor as a commodity to a recognition of workers as persons.

It is fitting that we do this since churches and the labor unions hold in common a deep concern for people; we share the concept of brotherhood; and we strive to value people above things.

Turning first to those who are employed, we have a responsibility to try to understand and appraise their economic aims and objectives, sought both at the bargaining table and through their influence on national economic policy. As productivity has increased, workers have pressed their rightful claim to a fair share of the returns from their work. Thus wages and improved working conditions continue to stand high on the list of benefits sought in bargaining.

As machines are used in new and spectacular ways to do work formerly done by men, and as jobs in industry become fewer in comparison with the total work force, job security has passed even the rate of pay as the chief concern of most workers. What seem to be "scare words" to many not directly concerned—such as "featherbedding," double pay for overtime, shorter work week—ought also to be viewed from the perspective of the bitter fear that one's skill, and hence one's means of livelihood, may soon become obsolete.

Of still greater claim for understanding and help by all who have a deep concern for people is the plight of the growing number who are unemployed. In our society work is the primary avenue for achieving status and a sense of belonging. When we force a person to say "I am unemployed" we are in effect putting him outside the magic circle of our society.

For the able-bodied adults who find themselves out of work, today's rapid shifts in job requirements from production to service work, from blue collar to white collar operations, may demand drastic retraining and far-roving mobility, with all the dislocations to home and family life which this entails. For the older worker—"forty and over"—the loss of a job through automation, relocation of plants, and other causes beyond the control of the individual frequently means the abrupt ending of any further work in the occupation to which he has given many years of training and experience. Perhaps most tragic of all is the untrained and uneducated youth seeking to enter the world of work, only to find a world that has no place for him.

To the severe handicaps faced by white persons in each of these categories must be added the even worse plight which is the lot of countless Negroes and other non-white minorities. This disadvantage is not generally due to their personal lacks but to our own tragic denial of social justice, often resulting in despair which harms our entire society. Although organized labor has often taken the lead in securing advances toward equal opportunity in employment there are some instances in which labor unions are a major obstacle to fair employment procedures. When labor unions, management or churches fail to make good their claims to justice and fair play they not only bring rebuke upon themselves, but also provide an excuse for others to violate the high principles we together proclaim.

The needs of our fellow citizens who are seeking work should be a major stimulus to labor and the churches in their united efforts to secure social changes that will enable us to make the most humane use of our technological powers. We must make certain that our educational system prepares people for the jobs both available and necessary in our complex economy, for professions frequently understaffed and for enriched use of leisure. Much can be done to improve the preparation of young workers now tending to drop out of school and to retrain older workers. We applaud the pioneering of some employers and unions but there is great need for more. The establishment of Equal Employment Opportunity by law is an essential floor under all efforts to provide justice on the work front for Negroes. All Americans should make active and responsible use of their votes and their political influence in such constructive endeavors.

All of us who have heretofore sought to give dignity to all forms of useful work now face the challenge beyond providing work and equipping our people to do the kind of work demanded by our technical age. The new challenge includes broadening our view of man's potential contribution to our culture. We must expect him to use his talents fully in all phases of living, and honor whatever contribution he can make to the well-being of our communities and of the world.

3 Authors Call for More Jobs for Negroes

Find Action Lagging on Integration in U.S. Industry

Kheels Explains Law —Bids Employers Be 'Color Blind'

By ELIZABETH M. FOWLER

Although jobs are one of the keys to solving the racial problem in this country, not enough progress in job opportunities has been made yet, according to three recent books.

In the preface of one, the author writes: "As a recognized top-priority issue for American business the problem of integrating the Negro worker at all levels in U. S. industry is relatively new—so new indeed that few written studies on the subject are available."

It is true that most discussion and analysis have appeared in newspaper and magazine articles and thesis type of studies. Recent books have been few.

The following three books are among the latest and most pertinent attempts to put into form as-available-as-the nearest-bookshop answers to the Negro problem for businessmen:

Guide to Fair Employment Practices. By Theodore W. Kheel. $2.95. Prentice-Hall, Inc.

The Management of Racial Integration in Business. Ed. by Dr. Georges F. Doriot. $10. McGraw-Hill Book Company.

The Negro Challenge to the Business Community. Ed. by Eli Ginzberg. $1.65 paperback; $4.95 hardcover. McGraw-Hill Book Company.

Mr. Kheel has been active in the labor-management field for many years, and has served as arbitrator and mediator.

Dr. Doriot is a professor of industrial management at Harvard's Graduate School of Business Administration.

Series of Essays

Dr. Ginzberg is a professor of economics at Columbia. His book consists of essays written by himself and other experts, white and Negro, on business integration problem based on a symposium held early last year.

Stressing the need for faster action, Mr. Kheel explains the law covering integration and points out that "an employer's best guarantee against charges is to become and remain completely 'color blind' in employment practices." These words probably contain some wishful thinking.

He presents 11 corporate case histories involving such companies as Otis Elevator, American Oil and Manhattan Shirt, telling how they have handled the problem at factories and offices.

The often-heard complaint of many companies has been that they want to employ qualified Negroes but cannot find them. Dr. Doriot points out that in the past ambitious Negroes have tended to enter such professions as medicine, law, education and social work where the color line has not been drawn so noticeably. Discouraged by corporate rebuffs, they often do not bother to apply for company jobs.

Job opportunities for Negroes are dealt with in these books, among the latest works on the subject.

people of this caliber because of the limited job opportunities for Negroes, we run out of Lena Hornes and Ralph Bunches pretty fast. But we know that you have some jobs for ordinary, even dumb, white people, and we want some of those jobs too. We have some ordinary dumb Negroes, and we need jobs all up and down—for the whole group."

The point is often made in these books that time is running out for business to escape more violent efforts by Negroes to gain a foothold on better jobs. In case histories the authors describe the use of economic boycotts such as non-purchasing and picketing.

A Shift Discerned

The books stress that managements would fare better if they seized the initiative to convince Negro leadership that integration is being achieved. Dr. Doriot points out "a few companies discern a fundamental shift in Negro agitation from the courts to the streets."

Together, these three books constitute a good basic library for businessmen on integration. They explain the law, and provide case histories of companies that have succeeded and failed in handling the problem. By reading them businessmen will become aware of the deep-rooted bitternesses and determined aspirations involved.

Suggestions Offered

Revised testing methods and the chance for on-the-job training are suggested, plus more active recruiting and more assurance of equal chances for advancement.

In some forthright words in Dr. Ginzberg's book, Whitney Young, a Negro leader, speaks of the Negro's cynical and indignant reaction to the often-token efforts of businessmen at integration.

"They get in touch with us, but what they want are people like Ralph Bunche for accountants or Lena Horne typing 100 words a minute as a secretary. Now while we may have a few

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC.

July 1, 1957

Board of Directors

(With profession or current occupation given for purposes of identification.)

Aycox, Mrs. Nanie B.	Educator	Texas Southern University Houston, Texas
Bates, Mrs. L. C.	Civic Leader	1804 Bishop Street Little Rock, Arkansas
Bates, Mrs. W. F.	Church Leader	125 Atkins Street North Little Rock, Arkansas
Bond, Ulysses S.	Planter	Madison, Arkansas
Brazeal, B. R.	Academic Dean	Morehouse College Atlanta, Georgia
Brooke, W. C.	Clergyman	Trinity Episcopal Church Box 207 Staunton, Virginia
Brunini, Most Rev. Joseph B.	Bishop of the Catholic Church	123 North West Street Jackson, Mississippi
Bryant, Mrs. Myra J.	Civic Leader	432 - 12th Terrace North Birmingham, Alabama
Burney, I. H.	Sect'y, Afro-American Life Insurance Co.	P. O. Box 660 Jacksonville, Florida
Carter, Hodding	Editor	The Delta Democrat Times Greenville, Mississippi
Cartwright, C. S.	Clergyman	The Pulaski Heights Christian Church Little Rock, Arkansas
Christopher, Paul R.	Regional Director AFL-CIO	216 Flatiron Building Knoxville, Tennessee
Clement, Rufus E.	President	Atlanta University Atlanta, Georgia
Clingman, Rt. Rev. C.	Retired Episcopal Bishop - Diocese of Kentucky	421 South Second Street Louisville, Kentucky
Crate, Mrs. James S.	Civic Leader & past President of United Churchwomen of Texas	2410 Inwood Drive Houston, Texas
Crossman, Jerome	President	Ryan Consolidated Petroleum Corp. 3400 Republic Nat'l Bank Bldg. Dallas, Texas

Dabbs, James E.	Planter & Author	Mayesville, South Carolina
Davidson, Herbert M.	Editor & Publisher	Daytona Beach News Journal Daytona Beach, Florida
Dent, Albert W.	President	Dillard University New Orleans, Louisiana
Doggett, Caxton	Clergyman, - Former Director Student Work Board of Missions The Methodist Church	First Methodist Church Winter Park, Florida
Ellison, J. M.	Chancellor	Virginia Union University Richmond, Virginia
Foster, Luther H.	President	Tuskegee Institute, Alabama
Friedman, S. Thomas	Social Worker	P. O. Box 6747 Houston, Texas
Golden, Harry L.	Editor & Publisher	The Carolina Israelite 1229 Elizabeth Avenue Charlotte 1, North Carolina
Gomillion, Charles G.	Dean of Students	Tuskegee Institute, Alabama
Griffin, John A.	Director of Community Services	Emory University Emory University, Georgia
Haas, Joseph	Attorney	First National Bank Building Atlanta, Georgia
Hamilton, Mrs. Grace T.	Executive Director	Atlanta Urban League Atlanta, Georgia
Hammer, Philip	Director	Hammer & Company Planning Consultants 70 Fairlie Street Atlanta, Georgia
Hancock, Gordon B.	Professor of History	Virginia Union University Richmond, Virginia
Harris, M. Lafayette	President	Philander Smith College Little Rock, Arkansas
Hunter, Duncan	Methodist Clergyman	Alexander City, Alabama
Johnson, Guy B.	Professor of Sociology	University of North Carolina Chapel Hill, North Carolina
Kidd, A. L.	Professor and Assistant Dean	Florida A & M University Tallahassee, Florida
Larkin, John R.	Welfare Executive	State Board of Charities & Social Welfare Raleigh, North Carolina

Looby, Z. A.	Attorney	419 Fourth Avenue, North Nashville, Tennessee
Mays, Benjamin E.	President	Morehouse College Atlanta, Georgia
McCann, John	Businessman & Catholic Layman	11 Dove Street New Orleans 24, Louisiana
McDowell, E. A.	Professor	Southeastern Bapt. Seminary Wake Forest, North Carolina
McManus, Eugene P.	Clergyman	1911 Law Street New Orleans 19, Louisiana
Miller, A. C.	Exec. Dir. Christian Life Commission of the Southern Bapt. Convention	161 Eighth Avenue, North Nashville 3, Tennessee
Milton, L. D.	President	Citizens Trust Company Atlanta, Georgia
Moron, A. G.	President	Hampton Institute Hampton, Virginia
Penick, Rt. Rev. E. A.	Bishop, The Episcopal Church	802 Hillsboro Street Raleigh, North Carolina
Peters, E. C.	Retired President Paine College	2901 Rockingham Drive, N. W. Atlanta, Georgia
Rayzor, Mrs. J. N.	Civic Leader	3207 Groveland Lane Houston, Texas
Reddix, Jacob L.	President	Jackson College Jackson, Mississippi
Richards, J. M.	President	Columbia Theological Seminary Decatur, Georgia
Richardson, Harry V.	President	Gammon Theological Seminary Atlanta, Georgia
Rinehart, Hollis	Attorney & Member State Bd. of Control	Ingraham Building Miami, Florida
Robinson, Mrs. E. U.	Church Leader, Member Board of Missions The Methodist Church	P. O. Box 516 Gallatin, Tennessee
Rousseve, Numa J.	Businessman	4636 Willow Street New Orleans, Louisiana
Ruthenburg, Miss Dorcas	Director, Public Affairs Programs, WHAS	The Courier Journal Louisville, Kentucky
Shaw, Charles A.	President	Watchtower Life Insurance Co. 2206 Dowling Street Houston, Texas

Siceloff, Courtney	Director	Penn Community Center Frogmore, South Carolina
Smith, J. Edwin	Attorney	505 Scanlan Building Houston, Texas
Solomon, W. E.	Exec. Sect'y Palmetto State Teachers Association	1719 Taylor Street Columbia 1, South Carolina
Sparling, Mrs. E. M.	Civic Leader	222 Thompson Building Hot Springs, Arkansas
Steele, Charles F.	Exec. Secretary Louisville Urban League	608 W. Walnut Street Louisville, Kentucky
Stewart, James E.	Businessman	548 N. E. 4th Street Oklahoma City, Oklahoma
Stroud, Mrs. Tommie	Chairman	Christian Social Relations United Churchwomen of Texas 2524 Old Oaks Drive Waco, Texas
Sytz, Miss Florence	Professor	School of Social Work Tulane University New Orleans, Louisiana
Tillman, Mrs. J. F.	President	The Woman's Division of Christian Service The Methodist Church Lewisburg, Tennessee
Trenholm, H. C.	President	Alabama State College Montgomery, Alabama
Wheeler, John H.	Attorney & President	The Mechanics & Farmers Bank Durham, North Carolina
Wheeler, Raymond (M.D.)	Doctor	Doctors Building Charlotte, North Carolina
Wilkins, Miss Josephine	Former Administrator Citizen's Fact Finding Movement of Georgia, Past Pres. Georgia League of Women Voters.	Biltmore H otel Atlanta, Georgia
Williams, Paul D.	Businessman Co-founder Catholic Comm. of the South Former President SRC	3320 Gloucester Road Richmond, Virginia
Wright, Marion A.	Attorney Past Pres. State Library Board of S. C. Past Pres. University of S. C. Alumni Association.	Top Knot Linville Falls, North Carolina

Young, Mrs. Morris	Civic Leader	P. O. Box 992 Anderson, South Carolina
Young, Thomas W.	President & General Manager	The Journal & Guide 719 E. Olney Road Norfolk, Virginia
Young, Whitney Sr.	President	Lincoln Institute Lincoln Ridge, Kentucky

EXHIBIT B

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

Comparison of 1955-56 Budget with Actual Income and Expenditures as of December 31, 1955

CENTRAL OFFICE ONLY

	Budget 1955-56	Actual as of 12/31/55	Percent of Budget realized
INCOME:
Contributions from Individuals, organization , churches, etc.	$ 14,000.00	$ 1,542.00	11.0 %
Dues	500.00	26.00	5.2 %
New South Subscriptions	6,000.00	1,666.00	27.7 %
Sale of Literature	3,000.00	368.96	12.3 %
Honoraria	1,000.00	200.58	20.0 %
Interest Income	800.00	300.00	37.5 %
Fund for the Republic	25,000.00	25,000.00	100.0 %
Unexpended balance in Duke and Field Funds	12,100.00	12,100.00	100.0 %
Surplus 1954-55 (Estimated)	2,500.00	2,500.00	100.0 %
Sub Total	$ 64,900.00
Anticipated Revenue from other sources to balance budget	28,180.00	-0-	-0-
TOTAL	$ 93,080.00	$ 43,703.54	46.9 %

	Budget 1955-56	Actual as of 12/31/55	Percent of Budget expended
EXPENSES:
Salaries	$ 61,600.00	$ 15,143.75	24.5 %
Social Security Tax	800.00	163.01	20.3 %
Travel	7,500.00	1,674.35	22.3 %
Printing New South & Postage	6,500.00	1,332.17	20.4 %
Printing other	2,000.00	53.90	2.6 %
Rent	1,680.00	420.00	25.0 %
Telephone & Telegraph	2,500.00	705.21	28.0 %
Postage	2,000.00	272.41	13.0 %
Books and Subscriptions	300.00	52.23	17.0 %
Accounting Fees	500.00	140.00	28.0 %
Insurance & Miscellaneous Expense	300.00	80.95	27.0 %
Office Supplies	2,900.00	342.54	11.8 %
Annual Meeting & Exec. Com. Meetings	2,000.00	1,099.06	54.9 %
Special Meetings in Connection with Women's Work	2,500.00		0.0 %
Consultants Fees		507.50	--
Office Alterations (1954-55)		200.00	--
TOTAL	$ 93,080.00	$ 22,187.08	23.8 %

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

Staff Forecast of Income for Remainder of Current Fiscal Year (October 1, 1955 - September 30, 1956)
And Statement of Income Received to Date

Budget for 1955-56		$ 93,080.00
* Amount received from individuals organizations, foundations, subscriptions, miscellaneous sources to date	$ 17,250.00
Surplus 1954-55 (Cash Balance)	2,500.00
Fund for Republic	25,000.00
Unallocated State Funds	4,000.00
Carry over from Duke & Field Funds	9,000.00
Sub Total on hand	$ 57,750.00
 Amount clearly expectable	16,600.00
Total Amount raised or expectable as of this date		$ 74,350.00
Contributions to be raised during remainder of fiscal year		$ 18,730.00

* Amount raised to date:
Marshall Field	$ 5,000.00
Duke Fund	7,000.00
Whitney Fund	1,000.00
Small Foundations	300.00
Episcopal Church	1,000.00
Personal Contributions	300.00
Associate Members	50.00
New South Subscriptions	2,000.00
Honoraria	300.00
Interest	300.00
TOTAL	$ 17,250.00

 Amount expectable:
Churches	$ 2,000.00
New South	4,000.00
Honoraria	700.00
Board Members	700.00
Interest	500.00
Sale of Literature	1,000.00
Small Foundations	700.00
Labor Organizations	7,000.00
TOTAL	$ 16,600.00

January 18, 1956

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

PROPOSED BUDGET

For Fiscal Year - October 1, 1955—September 30, 1956

CENTRAL OFFICE ONLY

INCOME:	Actual-18 mos. 4/1/54 to 9/30/55	Adjusted 12 mos.	Estimated 1955-56
Contributions from Individuals, Organizations, Churches, etc.	$ 36,106.30	$ 24,070.91	$ 14,000.00
Dues	1,405.00	936.67	500.00
New South Subscriptions	3,603.63	2,402.42	6,000.00
Sale of Literature	4,981.50	3,321.00	3,000.00
Honoraria	2,527.01	1,684.69	1,000.00
Interest Income	2,577.16	1,718.03	800.00
State Divisions	597.50	398.34
Fund for the Republic	80,200.00	53,466.67	25,000.00
Unexpended balance in Duke and Field Funds			12,100.00
Surplus 1954-55			2,500.00
Sub Total			$ 64,900.00
Anticipated Revenue from other sources to balance budget			28,180.00
TOTAL	$131,998.10	$ 87,998.73	$ 93,080.00

Estimated expenditures for fiscal year - October 1, 1955 to September 30, 1956, and comparison with actual expenditures for the 12 month period - September 1, 1954 to August 31, 1955

EXPENSES:	Actual 1954-55	Proposed 1955-56
Salaries	$ 57,404.94	$ 61,600.00
Social Security Tax	760.57	800.00
Travel	6,945.15	7,500.00
Printing	10,528.10	8,500.00
Rent	1,335.00	1,680.00
Telephone & Telegraph	1,813.01	2,500.00
Postage	1,378.17	2,000.00
Books & Subscriptions	905.99	300.00
Accounting Fees	420.00	500.00
Insurance & Miscellaneous Expense	170.51	300.00
Office Supplies	4,807.58	2,900.00
Annual Meeting Expense	2,663.42	2,000.00
Special Meetings in Connection with Women's Work	893.37	2,500.00
Manuscript on Cotton Tenancy	150.00
TOTAL	$ 90,175.81	$ 93,080.00

STAFF FORECAST OF INCOME FOR CURRENT FISCAL YEAR

October 1, 1955 - September 30, 1956

Received from the Fund for the Republic		$ 25,000.00
Carry-over from Marshall Field Grant, on hand or covenanted		5,250.00
Carry-over from Doris Duke Grant		6,850.00
Cash balance October 1, 1955, over and above current bills		2,500.00
Contributions:
Church Organizations
Methodist	$ 3,000.00
Presbyterian	500.00
Protestant Episcopal	1,000.00
Other	500.00	5,000.00
Labor Organizations
American Federation of Labor	3,000.00
United Steelworkers	1,000.00
United Automobile Workers	1,000.00
International Ladies' Garment Workers'	500.00
Other	500.00	6,000.00
Small Foundations		1,000.00
Dues of Associate Members		500.00
Sale of Literature		3,000.00
New South Subscriptions - non-state		1,000.00
New South Subscriptions - state		5,000.00
Honoraria		1,000.00
Board and Executive Committee		2,000.00
Interest Income		800.00
Total clearly expectable		$ 64,900.00
Hoped-for contributions
Further Grant from Doris Duke Foundation		7,000.00
John Hay Whitney Foundation		4,000.00
Other foundation aid		20,000.00
*Contribution to be raised by Finance Committee, net		15,000.00
TOTAL		$110,900.00

*In view of the importance of raising in this second grant period of aid from the Fund for the Republic a goodly sum to enable the Central Office and the Council as a whole to continue through the third grant period it is hoped that a much larger sum can be raised, mainly from contributions within the South.

FUNCTIONAL DISTRIBUTION OF EXPENSES

ADMINISTRATION AND OVERHEAD	ACTUAL 1954 - 1955	PROPOSED 1955 - 1956
Salary, Executive Director	$ 10,000.00	$ 10,000.00
Salary, Administrative Ass't		6,000.00
Salary, Sec'y to Exec. Dir.	3,000.00	3,100.00
Salary, Secretary-Treasurer	4,958.28	4,000.00
1/3 Salary, Clerk	1,000.00	1,000.00
Social Security for Central Off. Personnel	760.57	800.00
Annual Meeting & Exec. Committee Meetings	2,663.42	2,000.00
Travel	6,703.82	7,000.00
Rent	1,335.00	1,680.00
Telephone & Telegraph	1,813.01	2,500.00
Office Supplies & Equipment	4,500.00	2,500.00
Postage (not including New South)	1,378.17	2,000.00
Printing (other than New South)	6,335.48	2,000.00
Audit Fees	420.00	500.00
Miscellaneous Expense	127.29	300.00
Insurance	43.22
Sub-totals	$ 45,038.26	$ 45,380.00
* INFORMATION SERVICE AND NEW SOUTH
Salary, Ass't Dir. for Information	$ 6,833.48	$ 7,000.00
Salary, Editorial Assistant	1,791.52	5,000.00
Salary, Research Assistant	2,483.49	4,000.00
Salary, Clerk		2,700.00
2/3 Salary, Clerk (Circulation)	2,000.00	2,000.00
1/4 Salary, Clerk (Steno)	494.27	750.00
Salary Office Boy (Part-time)	328.50	300.00
New South, Printing & Postage	4,192.62	6,500.00
Envelopes, Addressograph, Plates, etc.	307.58	400.00
Books & Materials	705.99	300.00
Sub-totals	$ 19,137.45	$ 28,950.00

	ACTUAL 1954 - 1955	PROPOSED 1955 - 1956
LAISON - STATE ORGANIZATIONS
Salary, Ass't Dir. for State Organ.	$ 6,083.31	$ 7,000.00
Salary, Ass't Dir. for State Organ.	3,289.30	2,000.00
1/4 Salary, Stenographer	494.27	750.00
Sub-totals	$ 9,866.88	$ 9,750.00
PROGRAM DEVELOPMENT		**
Salary, Ass't for Program Development	$ 7,750.00	To be provided under state training Program
1/4 Salary, Clerk	494.27
Program Materials	200.00
	$ 8,444.27
Women's Work
Salary, Director of Women's Work	$ 5,000.00	$ 5,250.00
1/4 Salary, Clerk	494.25	750.00
Travel, Director	241.33	500.00
Meetings, travel of participants etc.	893.37	2,500.00
Sub-totals	$ 6,628.95	$ 9,000.00
Two Clerks - July & August 1955	910.00
SPECIAL PROJECTS
Manuscript on Cotton Tenancy	150.00
Grand Totals	$90,175.81	$93,080.00

* Of the total of $28,950.00 proposed to be spent for the Information Service and New South, $6,850.00 is available as an unexpended balance in the Doris Duke Foundation grant; $1,500.00 is available as an unexpended balance in the Marshall Field Foundation grant; and $5,000,00 has been promised us from the Marshall Field Foundation for the calendar year 1956. Of this $5,000.00 there will be $3,750.00 available for the current budget period.

 Salary for Ass't Director	$ 2,500.00
1/4 Salary, Clerk	500.00
Consultants, salaries &travel	4,000.00
Travel, Ass't Director	1,500.00
Total	$ 8,500.00

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

PROPOSED BUDGET

For Fiscal Year - October 1, 1956—September 30, 1957

CENTRAL OFFICE ONLY

	Budget 1955-56	Actual 1955-56	Estimated 1956-57
Income:
Contributions from Individuals, organizations, Churches, etc.	$ 14,000.00	$ 31,865.00	$ 45,970.00
Dues	500.00	356.00	350.00
New South Subscriptions	6,000.00	6,222.17	10,000.00
Sale of Literature	3,000.00	1,325.48	1,500.00
Honararia	1,000.00	1,567.80	1,000.00
Interest Income	800.00	2,432.00	1,000.00
Fund for the Republic	25,000.00	25,000.00	10,000.00
Unexpended balance in Duke and Field Funds - 1955-56	12,100.00	8,350.00	4,350.00
Unexpended Balance in Christopher Reynolds Fund - 1955-56			3,300.00
Unexpended Balance in State Funds for 1955-56			6,000.00
Surplus - Prior year	2,500.00	3,022.17
Sub-Total	64,900.00	80,140.62	83,470.00
Anticipated Revenue from other sources to balance budget	28,180.00	18,868.40	16,861.00
TOTAL	$ 93,080.00	99,009.02	100,331.00

Estimated expenditures for four months of fiscal year 1956-57 -- October 1, 1956 to January 31, 1957, in comparison with budget and actual expenditures for fiscal year 1955-56.

Expenses:	Budget 1955-56	Actual 1955-56	Proposed 10/1/56-1/31/ 4 Months	% Change in rate of Expenditures
Salaries	$ 61,600.00	63,122.74	23,317.00	10.8%
Social Security Tax	800.00	889.08	467.00	**
Travel	7,500.00	8,469.39	2,834.00
Printing New South & Postage	6,500.00	6,285.43	2,133.00
Printing - Other	2,000.00	1,146.28	400.00
Rent	1,680.00	1,680.00	560.00
Telephone & Telegraph	2,500.00	2,775.94	833.00
Postage	2,000.00	1,049.40	400.00
Books & Subscriptions	300.00	399.97	100.00
Accounting Fees & Legal	500.00	565.00	167.00
Ins. & Misc. Expense	300.00	244.61	100.00
Office Supplies & Equip.	2,900.00	2,243.45	833.00
Annual Meeting & Executive Committee Meetings	2,000.00	2,169.03	2,000.00
Special Meetings - Women's Work	2,500.00	1,000.00	2,400.00
Printing Special Pamphlet		1,004.22
	$ 93,080.00	93,044.54	36,544.00	11.0%

* Increase covers within-grades promotions for staff.

 Slight increase

STAFF FORECAST OF INCOME FOR CURRENT FISCAL YEAR

October 1, 1956 -- September 30, 1957

Central Office

FUND FOR THE REPUBLIC GRANT		$ 10,000.00
CARRY-OVER FROM 1955-56:
Marshall Field Grant	$ 1,250.00
Doris Duke Grant	3,100.00
Christopher Reynolds Grant	3,300.00
Unexpended State Balances 1955-56	6,000.00	13,650.00
CONTRIBUTIONS: (Expectable)
Individuals		4,000.00
Labor Organizations
United Steelworkers of America	1,000.00
International Ladies' Garment Workers Union of America	500.00
United Automobile Aircraft & Agricultural Implement Workers of America	1,000.00
American Federation of Labor & Congress of Industrial Organization	5,000.00	7,500.00
Churches
The Board of Home Missions & Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church	1,000.00
The Board of National Missions of the Presbyterian Church of the USA	250.00
The Board of Church Extension of the Presbyterian Church, U. S.	200.00
The National Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church in USA	1,000.00
The General Board of Education of the Methodist Church	300.00
Fisk Union Church	20.00
Women's Division of Christian Service of the Board of Missions of the Methodist Church.	1,200.00	3,970.00
Foundations
John Hay Whitney Foundation	2,000.00
Sigmund Silberman Foundation	300.00
Edgar Stern Family Fund	100.00
New World Foundation	25,000.00
Marshall Field Foundation	3,000.00
Community Work Shop Assoc'n	100.00	30,500.00
New South Subscriptions		10,000.00
Honoraria		1,000.00
Associate Members Dues		350.00
Interest Income		1,000.00
Sale of Literature		1,500.00
Total on hand and expectable		$ 83,470.00
Budget for 1956-57 projected for one year at present rate of expenditures		100,331.00
Total on hand and expectable		83,470.00
Amount to be raised during fiscal year		$ 16,861.00
Special Projects*
On hand as of 10/1/56
Fact-finding Project		32,000.00
John Hope Program (from New World Foundation)		15,500.00
TOTAL		$ 47,500.00

* Not included in budgeted items.

FUNCTIONAL DISTRIBUTION OF EXPENSES

	Budget 1955-56	Actual 1955-56	Proposed 10/1/56-1/31/57 (4 Months)
Administration and Overhead
Salaries	$ 24,100.00	24,912.65	8,534.00
Social Security Tax	800.00	889.08	467.00
Annual Meeting & Executive Committee Meetings	2,000.00	2,169.03	2,000.00
Travel	7,000.00	8,469.39	2,667.00
Rent	1,680.00	1,680.00	560.00
Telephone & Telegraph	2,500.00	2,775.94	833.00
Office Supplies & Equipment	2,500.00	2,243.45	833.00
Postage (other than New South)	2,000.00	1,049.40	400.00
Printing (other than New South)	2,000.00	1,146.28	400.00
Audit Fees	500.00	565.00	167.00
Miscellaneous Expense & insurance	300.00	244.61	100.00
Sub-Totals	$ 45,380.00	46,144.83	16,961.00
Information Services and New South
Salaries	$ 21,750.00	22,247.78	9,299.00
New South, printing & postage	6,500.00	6,285.43	2,133.00
Envelopes, addressograph plates, etc.	400.00	(Included in Printing & Postage)
Books and Materials	300.00	399.97	100.00
Sub-Totals	$ 28,950.00	28,933.18	11,532.00
Laison - State Organizations
Salaries	$ 9,750.00	10,086.42	3,417.00
Women's Work
Salaries	$ 6,000.00	5,912.36	2,067.00
Travel	500.00		167.00
Meetings	2,500.00	1,000.00	2,400.00
Sub-Totals	$ 9,000.00	6,912.36	4,634.00
TOTAL	$ 93,080.00	92,076.79	36,544.00
Special Project *
Program Development (John Hope)
Salaries	$ 3,000.00	4,270.00	1,500.00
Consultants Travel & Fees	4,000.00	3,899.89	2,167.00
Travel	1,500.00	1,883.24	1,500.00
Total	$ 8,500.00	10,053.13	5,167.00

* Funds available from 1956 grant of $17,000.00 from New World Foundation

11/10/56

Mailed to Exec. Committee July 1, 1957

FILE COPY

DRAFT - of proposed revised By-Laws

BY-LAWS

of the

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC.

ARTICLE I. NAME, AREA, AND PURPOSES

Section 1. Name. The name of this organization shall be the Southern Regional Council, Incorporated. The terms "Council" or "Corporation" used hereafter in these by-laws shall mean the "Southern Regional Council, Inc."

Section 2. Area. For the purposes of this corporation the Southern Region shall be defined as embracing the States of Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, and Virginia. All members of the corporation shall be residents of this area. This area may be increased or reduced at any annual meeting of the members as hereinafter defined.

(UNDERSCORED WORD OMITTED AND A SUBSTITUTE WORD ADDED)

Section 3. Purposes. The purposes of the Southern Regional Council are to exist and function as an eleemosynary organization, and more particularly to organize and maintain a Regional Council and to cooperate with affiliated (like) State organizations in the Southern Region for the improvement of economic, civic, and racial conditions, in the endeavor to promote a greater unity in the South in all efforts towards regional and racial development; to attain through research and action programs the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the region; to reduce race tension, the basis of racial tension, racial misunderstanding, and racial distrust; to develop and integrate leadership in the South on new levels of regional development and fellowship; and to cooperate with local, state, regional, and national agencies on all levels in the attainment of the desired objectives. The Council shall not engage in carrying on propaganda or otherwise attempt to influence legislation nor engage in any form of political activities.

ARTICLE II. MEMBERS

Section 1. Members.

A. The members of the corporation shall be as follows:

(UNDERSCORED FIGS. OMITTED SUBSTITUTE FIGS. ADDED)

1. Not more than 50 (74) or less than 40 (64) persons, hereafter called members, elected by the annual meeting at which these by-laws are adopted.

(ENTIRE PAR. TO BE OMITTED)

2. Two persons, hereafter called ex-officio members, from each affiliated State organization. These two persons from each affiliated State organization shall be the chairman of such affiliated organization and one additional member elected by the members of such organization.

(UNDERSCORED FIG. AND WORD OMITTED FIG. 3 SUBSTITUTED)

2. (3) The president, the vice-presidents, the treasurer and counsel, shall also be ex-officio members.

B. A member, as distinct from an ex-officio member, shall hold office for four years (except as provided in Section 1-C of this Article) and until his successor shall have been duly chosen and qualified and until he shall have resigned or shall have been removed in the manner provided by Section 8 in this Article. No such member shall serve more than two consecutive full terms of four years each (or, in accordance with Section 1-C of this Article, one short term and one full four-year term, consecutively.) Chairmen of affiliated state organizations shall hold ex-officio membership in the corporation as long as they are chairmen of affiliated State organizations, and ex-officio members elected by their affiliated State organizations shall hold membership in the corporation for not more than two consecutive four-year terms or portions thereof.

(UNDERSCORED SECTION TO BE OMITTED)

C. The members elected at the meeting at which these by-laws are adopted shall be divided by lot in such a way that the terms of one-half shall expire at the time of the annual meeting in 1955, and the remainder at the annual meeting in 1957.

D. Successors to members (as distinct from ex-officio members) shall, upon expiration of terms or death, resignation, or removal, be elected by all members of the corporation, including ex-officio members, at the next meeting, following occurence of such vacancy. provided that in such elections the executive director and the assistant directors shall not be entitled to vote.

(UNDERSCORED SECTION TO BE OMITTED)

Section 2. Notice of Meetings and Membership Rights.

A. Notice of the place, day, and hour of every regular and special meetings shall be given to each member and ex-officio member not less than ten (10) days before the meeting, by delivering the same to him personally, or sending the same to him by telegraph or telephone or by leaving the same at his last known post office address, according to the records of the corporation. It shall not be requisite to the validity of any meeting of the Council that notice thereof shall have been received by any member and ex-officio member who is present thereat or, if absent, waives notice thereof in writing filed with the records of the meeting either before or after the holding thereof. No notice of any adjourned meeting of the Council need be given.

B. The rights of any member in the corporation shall not be assignable or transferable, except in the case of proxies, as provided in Section 4 of this Article and his rights shall cease with death, resignation, or termination of membership for any cause.

Section 3. Voting. Each member or ex-officio member shall have one vote and, except in cases in which it is by the charter or by these by-laws otherwise provided, a majority of the votes cast shall be sufficient to elect and to pass any measure. Voting by mail may be conducted on such questions and in such manner as may be provided by the Executive Committee.

Section 4. Proxies. Any member or ex-officio member entitled to vote at any meeting of members may vote either in person or by proxy. All proxies shall be given to members of this body only, and each one shall designate the name of the member who shall act as proxy. Every proxy shall be in writing, subscribed by the member, or his duly authorized attorney, and dated, but need not be sealed, witnessed, or acknowledged. Proxies shall be delivered to the secretary of the corporation before such meeting or to the inspectors at the meeting.

(UNDERSCORED SECTION TO BE OMITTED)

Section 5. Annual Meetings. The corporation shall hold annually a meeting for the election of officers and for the transaction of general business at its principal office in Atlanta at ten o'clock a.m. on the second Wednesday in November in each year, if not a legal holiday, or at such other place and such other time within sixty days as may be designated by the Executive Committee, provided notice of such meeting, including day, hour, and place, shall be given each member of the Council in writing at least thirty days in advance. Such annual meetings shall be general meetings; that is to say, open for the transaction of any business within the powers of the corporation without special notice of such business, unless otherwise provided in these by-laws.

Section 6. Special Meetings. At any time in the interval between annual meetings, special meetings may be called by the president or any ten (10) members or ex-officio members.

Section 7. Quorum. Fifteen members and/or ex-officio members of the Council shall be necessary to constitute a quorum for the transaction of business at every meeting of the members; but if at any meeting there be less than a quorum present, a majority of those present may adjourn the meeting from time to time, but not for a period of over fifteen (15) days at any one time, without notice other than by announcement at the meeting until a quorum shall attend. At any such adjourned meeting at which a quorum shall be present, any business may be transacted which might have been transacted at the meeting as originally notified.

Section 8. Removal. At any meeting called with that purpose stated in the call, any member may, by a majority of the votes cast, be removed from office for cause, and another be appointed in the place of the person so removed to serve for the remainder of his term. Permanent change of residence or citizenship to a point beyond the area, as defined in or pursuant to Article I, Section 2, will automatically terminate the membership of one so changing residence or citizenship.

ARTICLE III. FELLOWS

The Council may award honorary fellowships, not exceeding one hundred (100) in number, to Southerners who have demonstrated exceptional talent for constructive leadership. Fellows shall be chosen in such manner as the Council may prescribe, provided they are well distributed as to race, sex, creed, occupation, and place of residence. The duties of fellows shall be to cooperate with the Council as observers, advisers, correspondents, and special representatives. Fellows may receive such honoraria or reimbursement of expenses incurred at the request of the Executive Committee as the Council may direct. The term of a fellowship shall be for two years, unless otherwise provided by the Council, and fellowships may be renewed or withdrawn at the discretion of the Council. Fellows need not be members of the corporation.

ARTICLE IV. AFFILIATES

Organized groups or agencies whose aims and methods are closely akin to the aims and methods of the Southern Regional Council may, at the discretion of the Council, become affiliates of the Council, upon such conditions as the corporation may prescribe. The by-laws of such organized groups or agencies shall be approved by the Council or the Executive Committee of the Council in advance of affiliation. Alterations in the by-laws of such affiliated organizations shall become valid only after written approval of the proposed altered language by or on behalf of the Southern Regional Council. The Council shall prescribe a uniform accounting and auditing system for all affiliated organizations and shall require adherence to such system by all affiliated organizations. Affiliated organizations may disaffiliate. The Council may require disaffiliation for breach of the by-laws of an affiliated organization, or in the event that (after a hearing by the Council) the Council deems the aims and methods of such organization to be no longer closely akin to those of the Southern Regional Council. In the event of disaffiliation, any property of the affiliate purchased with the proceeds of Council aid to such affiliate shall be at the disposition of the Council.

ARTICLE V. COMMITTEES

Section 1. Executive Committee. The Council shall provide for an Executive Committee of not more than nine (9) members in addition to the president and vice-presidents, treasurer and counsel. The Executive Committee shall serve during the pleasure of the Council and may be discharged and the Committee abolished at any time by the Council. Unless one of the members shall have been designated as chairman by the Council, the Executive Committee shall elect a chairman from its own number. During the intervals between the meetings of the Council the Executive Committee shall possess and may exercise all of the powers of the corporation, conferred by these by-laws or the charter of the corporation, in all cases in which specific directions shall not have been given by the Council. The Executive Committee shall keep full and fair accounts of its transactions. All action by the Executive Committee shall be reported to the Council at its meeting next succeeding such action, and shall be subject to revision and alterations by the Council; provided that no rights of third persons shall be affected by any such revision or alteration. Vacancies in the Executive Committee shall be filled by the Council or the Executive Committee itself during the interim between Council meetings. All vacancies shall be filled from among members of the Council.

Section 2. Meetings of Executive Committee. The Executive Committee shall fix its own rules of procedure, and shall meet as provided by such rules or by resolution of the Council, and it shall also meet at the call of the chairman or of any three members of the Committee. A quorum of the Executive Committee shall consist of not less than five (5) members of the Committee. If necessary, members of the Executive Committee may by written notice appoint a proxy from among the members of the Council to attend and vote on behalf of such members.

Section 3. National Advisory Committee. The Council may establish a National Advisory Committee, composed of persons who reside outside the area of the Southern Regional Council and who are sympathetic with the aims and policies of the Council, whose purpose shall be to advise the Council on matters pertaining to its work.

(UNDERSCORED SECTION TO BE OMITTED)

Section 4. Nominating Committee. There shall be a Nominating Committee of not less than five (5) members. Three members shall be elected by the Council from its membership at its annual meeting. and one of these shall be an "ex-officio" member of the Council from an affiliated State organization. Two members shall be appointed by the joint action of the President and the Executive Committee. The Nominating Committee shall meet not less than thirty (30) days before the annual meeting for the purpose of nominating: (1) members of the Council, (2) officers of the Council, (3) members of the Executive Committee and (4) three members of the succeeding Nominating Committee.

Section 5. Other Committees. The Council may by resolution provide for such other standing or special committees as it deems desirable and may discontinue the same at pleasure. Each such committee shall have such powers and perform such duties, not inconsistent with these by-laws, as may be assigned to it by the Council. If provision be made for any such committee, the members thereof shall be appointed by the Council. Vacancies in such committees shall be filled by the Council or by such committee or officer as the Council may authorize to fill such vacancies.

ARTICLE VI. OFFICERS

(UNDER-SCORED SECTION ADDED)

Section 1. Executive Officers. The executive officers of the corporation shall be a president; one or more vice-presidents, not to exceed four; an executive director; one or more assistant directors, a secretary, and a treasurer. The president, vice-presidents, and treasurer shall be chosen from among the members of the corporation. The executive director, assistant directors, and secretary shall not be members of the corporation. The offices of secretary and treasurer may be held by the same person, in which case the secretary-treasurer shall not be a member of the corporation. The president and vice-presidents shall be elected annually by the Council. The executive director and assistant directors, secretary-treasurer, and counsel shall be subject to confirmation annually by the Council, upon the recommendation of the Executive Committee. Officers shall hold office until the corresponding meeting in the next year, and until their successors shall have been fully chosen and qualified, or until they shall have resigned or shall have been removed, in the manner provided in Article II, Section 8. Any vacancy in any of the above offices shall be filled for the unexpired portion of the term by the Council, at any regular or special meeting.

Section 2. President. The president of the corporation shall serve as chairman of the Council. He shall, when present, preside at all meetings of the Council, and he shall perform such other duties as, from time to time, may be assigned to him by the Council.

Section 3. First Vice-President. At the request of the president, or in his absence or disability, the first vice-president shall perform all the duties of the president; and when so acting shall have the powers of the president; and shall perform such other duties as, from time to time, may be assigned to him by the Council.

Section 4. Additional Vice-Presidents. Each additional vice-president, if any, shall perform the duties of the office in order of his rank and shall have such powers and perform such duties as may be assigned to him by the Council.

Section 5. Executive Director. The executive director shall be charged with the execution of the program and policies of the Council as defined by the Council, and shall be responsible directly to the Council. He shall have general charge and supervision of the employed personnel of the Council, he may sign and execute, in the name of the corporation, all authorized deeds, mortgages, bonds, contracts, or other instruments, except in cases in which the signing and execution thereof shall have been expressly delegated to some other officer or agent of the corporation; and he shall perform such other duties as from time to time may be assigned to him by the Executive Committee or by the Council.

Section 6. Assistant Directors. The assistant directors shall work in cooperation with the executive director in the administration of the program and policies of the Council. In the absence or disability of the executive director, one of the assistant directors will be designated by the executive director, or by the executive committee, to perform, temporarily, the duties of executive director.

Section 7. Secretary. The secretary shall keep the minutes of the meetings of the Council and of the Executive Committee, in books provided for the purpose; he shall see that all notices are duly given in accordance with the provisions of these by-laws, or as required by law; he shall be custodian of the records and of the corporate seal or seals of the corporation; he shall see that the corporate seal is affixed to all documents, the execution of which, on behalf of the corporation, under its seal, is duly authorized, and when so affixed may attest the same; and, in general, he shall perform all duties incident to the office of a secretary of a corporation, and such other duties as, from time to time, may be assigned him by the Council or by the by-laws.

Section 8. Treasurer. The treasurer shall have charge of and be responsible for all funds, securities, receipts and disbursements of the corporation, and shall deposit, or cause to be deposited, in the name of the corporation, all monies or other valuable effects in such banks, trust companies, or other depositories as shall, from time to time, be selected by the Council; he shall render to the president and to the Council annually, and at other times whenever requested, an account of the financial condition of the corporation; and, in general, shall perform all duties incident to the office of a treasurer of a corporation, and such other duties as may be assigned to him by the Council.

Section 8A. Secretary-Treasurer. All or some of the duties contained in Sections 7 and 8 may be assigned to one person. This person will be designated Secretary-Treasurer.

Section 9. Controller. The office of controller may be created by the Council, and the duties and authority of such officer shall be fixed by the Council.

Section 10. Counsel. The duties and authority of the counsel shall be fixed by the Council, and he shall be a member of the Council, by virtue of his office.

[Adopted by the Membership Meeting of May 14, 1953, subject to implementation by the Executive Committee; made effective by the Executive Committee on April 6, 1954.]

Note: Includes all revisions through November 14, 1956.

BY-LAWS

of the

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC.

ARTICLE I. NAME, AREA, AND PURPOSES

Section 1. Name. The name of this organization shall be the Southern Regional Council, Incorporated. The terms "Council" or "Corporation" used hereafter in these by-laws shall mean the "Southern Regional Council, Inc."

Section 2. Area. For the purposes of this corporation the Southern Region shall be defined as embracing the States of Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, and Virginia. All members of the corporation shall be residents of this area. This area may be increased or reduced at any annual meeting of the members as hereinafter defined.

Section 3. Purposes. The purposes of the Southern Regional Council are to exist and function as an eleemosynary organization, and more particularly to organize and maintain a Regional Council and to cooperate with affiliated State organizations in the Southern Region for the improvement of economic, civic, and racial conditions, in the endeavor to promote a greater unity in the South in all efforts towards regional and racial development; to attain through research and action programs the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the region; to reduce race tension, the basis of racial tension, racial misunderstanding, and racial distrust; to develop and integrate leadership in the South on new levels of regional development and fellowship; and to cooperate with local, state, regional, and national agencies on all levels in the attainment of the desired objectives. The Council shall not engage in carrying on propaganda or otherwise attempt to influence legislation nor engage in any form of political activities.

ARTICLE II. MEMBERS

Section 1. Members.

A. The members of the corporation shall be as follows:

1. Not more than 50 or less than 40 persons, hereafter called members, elected by the annual meeting at which these by-laws are adopted.

2. Two persons, hereafter called ex-officio members, from each affiliated State organization. These two persons from each affiliated State organization shall be the chairman of such affiliated organization and one additional member elected by the members of such organization.

3. The president, the vice presidents, the treasurer and counsel, shall also be ex-officio members.

B. A member, as distinct from an ex-officio member, shall hold office for four years (except as provided in Section 1-C of this Article) and until his successor shall have been duly chosen and qualified and until he shall have resigned or shall have been removed in the manner provided by Section 8 in this Article. No such member shall serve more than two consecutive full terms of four years each (or, in accordance with Section 1-C of this Article, one short term and one full four-year term, consecutively). Chairmen of affiliated State organizations shall hold ex-officio membership in the corporation as long as they are chairmen of affiliated State organizations, and ex-officio members elected by their affiliated State organizations shall hold membership in the corporation for not more than two consecutive four-year terms or portions thereof.

[redacted]

C. The members elected at the meeting at which these by-laws are adopted shall be divided by lot in such a way that the terms of one-half shall expire at the time of the annual meeting in 1955, and the remainder at the annual meeting in 1957.

D. Successors to members (as distinct from ex-officio members) shall, upon expiration of terms or death, resignation, or removal, be elected by all members of the corporation, including ex-officio members, at the next meeting, following occurence of such vacancy, provided that in such elections the executive director and the assistant directors shall not be entitled to vote.

Section 2. Notice of Meetings and Membership Rights.

A. Notice of the place, day, and hour of every regular and special meeting shall be given to each member and ex-officio member not less than ten (10) days before the meeting, by delivering the same to him personally, or sending the same to him by telegraph or telephone or by leaving the same at his last known post office address, according to the records of the corporation. It shall not be requisite to the validity of any meeting of the Council that notice thereof shall have been received by any member and ex-officio member who is present thereat or, if absent, waives notice thereof in writing filed with the records of the meeting either before or after the holding thereof. No notice of any adjourned meeting of the Council need be given.

B. The rights of any member in the corporation shall not be assignable or transferable, except in the case of proxies, as provided in Section 4 of this Article and his rights shall cease with death, resignation, or termination of membership for any cause.

Section 3. Voting. Each member or ex-officio member shall have one vote and, except in cases in which it is by the charter or by these by-laws otherwise provided, a majority of the votes cast shall be sufficient to elect and to pass any measure. Voting by mail may be conducted on such questions and in such manner as may be provided by the Executive Committee.

Section 4. Proxies. Any member or ex-officio member entitled to vote at any meeting of members may vote either in person or by proxy. All proxies shall be given to members of this body only, and each one shall designate the name of the member who shall act as proxy. Every proxy shall be in writing, subscribed by the member, or his duly authorized attorney, and dated, but need not be sealed, witnessed, or acknowledged. Proxies shall be delivered to the secretary of the corporation before such meeting or to the inspectors at the meeting.

Section 5. Annual Meetings. The corporation shall hold annually a meeting for the election of officers and for the transaction of general business at its principal office in Atlanta at ten o'clock a.m. on the second Wednesday in November in each year, if not a legal holiday, or at such other place and such other time within sixty days as may be designated by the Executive Committee, provided notice of such meeting, including day, hour, and place, shall be given each member of the Council in writing at least thirty days in advance. Such annual meetings shall be general meetings; that is to say, open for the transaction of any business within the powers of the corporation without special notice of such business, unless otherwise provided in these by-laws.

Section 6. Special Meetings. At any time in the interval between annual meetings, special meetings may be called by the president or any ten (10) members or ex-officio members.

Section 7. Quorum. Fifteen members and/or ex-officio members of the Council shall be necessary to constitute a quorum for the transaction of business at every meeting of the members; but if at any meeting there be less than a quorum present, a majority of those present may adjourn the meeting from time to time, but not for a period of over fifteen (15) days at any one time, without notice other than by announcement at the meeting until a quorum shall attend. At any such adjourned meeting at which a quorum shall be present, any business may be transacted which might have been transacted at the meeting as originally notified.

Section 8. Removal. At any meeting called with that purpose stated in the call, any member may, by a majority of the votes cast, be removed from office for cause, and another be appointed in the place of the person so removed to serve for the remainder of his term. Permanent change of residence or citizenship to a point beyond the area, as defined in or pursuant to Article I, Section 2, will automatically terminate the membership of one so changing residence or citizenship.

ARTICLE III. FELLOWS

The Council may award honorary fellowships, not exceeding one hundred (100) in number, to Southerners who have demonstrated exceptional talent for constructive leadership. Fellows shall be chosen in such manner as the Council may prescribe, provided they are well distributed as to race, sex, creed, occupation, and place of residence. The duties of fellows shall be to cooperate with the Council as observers, advisers, correspondents, and special representatives. Fellows may receive such honoraria or reimbursement of expenses incurred at the request of the Executive Committee as the Council may direct. The term of a fellowship shall be for two years, unless otherwise provided by the Council, and fellowships may be renewed or withdrawn at the discretion of the Council. Fellows need not be members of the corporation.

ARTICLE IV. AFFILIATES

Organized groups or agencies whose aims and methods are closely akin to the aims and methods of the Southern Regional Council may, at the discretion of the Council, become affiliates of the Council, upon such conditions as the corporation may prescribe. The by-laws of such organized groups or agencies shall be approved by the Council or the Executive Committee of the Council in advance of affiliation. Alterations in the by-laws of such affiliated organizations shall become valid only after written approval of the proposed altered language by or on behalf of the Southern Regional Council. The Council shall prescribe a uniform accounting and auditing system for all affiliated organizations and shall require adherence to such system by all affiliated organizations. Affiliated organizations may disaffiliate. The Council may require disaffiliation for breach of the by-laws of an affiliated organization, or in the event that (after a hearing by the Council) the Council deems the aims and methods of such organization to be no longer closely akin to those of the Southern Regional Council. In the event of disaffiliation, any property of the affiliate purchased with the proceeds of Council aid to such affiliate shall be at the disposition of the Council.

ARTICLE V. COMMITTEES

Section 1. Executive Committee. The Council shall provide for an Executive Committee of not more than nine (9) members in addition to the president and vice-presidents, treasurer and counsel. The Executive Committee shall serve during the pleasure of the Council and may be discharged and the Committee abolished at any time by the Council. Unless one of the members shall have been designated as chairman by the Council, the Executive Committee shall elect a chairman from its own number. During the intervals between the meetings of the Council the Executive Committee shall possess and may exercise all of the powers of the corporation, conferred by these by-laws or the charter of the corporation, in all cases in which specific directions shall not have been given by the Council. The Executive Committee shall keep full and fair accounts of its transactions. All action by the Executive Committee shall be reported to the Council at its meeting next succeeding such action, and shall be subject to revision and alterations by the Council; provided that no rights of third persons shall be affected by any such revision or alteration. Vacancies in the Executive Committee shall be filled by the Council or the Executive Committee itself during the interim between Council meetings. All vacancies shall be filled from among members of the Council.

Section 2. Meetings of Executive Committee. The Executive Committee shall fix its own rules of procedure, and shall meet as provided by such rules or by resolution of the Council, and it shall also meet at the call of the chairman or of any three members of the Committee. A quorum of the Executive Committee shall consist of not less than five (5) members of the Committee. If necessary, members of the Executive Committee may by written notice appoint a proxy from among the members of the Council to attend and vote on behalf of such members.

Section 3. National Advisory Committee. The Council may establish a National Advisory Committee, composed of persons who reside outside the area of the Southern Regional Council and who are sympathetic with the aims and policies of the Council, whose purpose shall be to advise the Council on matters pertaining to its work.

Section 4. Nominating Committee. There shall be a Nominating Committee of not less than five (5) members. Three members shall be elected by the Council from its membership at its annual meeting, and one of these shall be an "ex-officio" member of the Council from an affiliated State organization. Two members shall be appointed by the joint action of the President and the Executive Committee. The Nominating Committee shall meet not less than thirty (30) days before the annual meeting for the purpose of nominating: (1) members of the Council, (2) officers of the Council, (3) members of the Executive Committee and (4) three members of the succeeding Nominating Committee.

Section 5. Other Committees. The Council may by resolution provide for such other standing or special committees as it deems desirable and may discontinue the same at pleasure. Each such committee shall have such powers and perform such duties, not inconsistent with these by-laws, as may be assigned to it by the Council. If provision be made for any such committee, the members thereof shall be appointed by the Council. Vacancies in such committees shall be filled by the Council or by such committee or officer as the Council may authorize to fill such vacancies.

ARTICLE VI. OFFICERS

Section 1. Executive Officers. The executive officers of the corporation shall be a president; one or more vice-presidents, not to exceed four; an executive director; assistant directors; a secretary; and a treasurer. The president, vice-presidents, and treasurer shall be chosen from among the members of the corporation. The executive director, assistant directors, and secretary shall not be members of the corporation. The offices of secretary and treasurer may be held by the same person, in which case the secretary-treasurer shall not be a member of the corporation. The president and vice-presidents shall be elected annually by the Council. The executive director and assistant directors, secretary-treasurer, and counsel shall be subject to confirmation annually by the Council, upon the recommendation of the Executive Committee. Officers shall hold office until the corresponding meeting in the next year, and until their successors shall have been fully chosen and qualified, or until they shall have resigned or shall have been removed, in the manner provided in Article II, Section 8. Any vacancy in any of the above offices shall be filled for the unexpired portion of the term by the Council, at any regular or special meeting.

Section 2. President. The president of the corporation shall serve as chairman of the Council. He shall, when present, preside at all meetings of the Council, and he shall perform such other duties as, from time to time, may be assigned to him by the Council.

Section 3. First Vice-President. At the request of the president, or in his absence or disability, the first vice-president shall perform all the duties of the president; and when so acting shall have the powers of the president; and shall perform such other duties as, from time to time, may be assigned to him by the Council.

Section 4. Additional Vice-Presidents. Each additional vice-president, if any, shall perform the duties of the office in order of his rank and shall have such powers and perform such duties as may be assigned to him by the Council.

Section 5. Executive Director. The executive director shall be charged with the execution of the program and policies of the Council as defined by the Council, and shall be responsible directly to the Council. He shall have general charge and supervision of the employed personnel of the Council, he may sign and execute, in the name of the corporation, all authorized deeds, mortgages, bonds, contracts, or other instruments, except in cases in which the signing and execution thereof shall have been expressly delegated to some other officer or agent of the corporation; and he shall perform such other duties as from time to time may be assigned to him by the Executive Committee or by the Council.

Section 6. Assistant Directors. The assistant directors shall work in cooperation with the executive director in the administration of the program and policies of the Council. In the absence or disability of the executive director, one of the assistant directors will be designated by the executive director, or by the executive committee, to perform, temporarily, the duties of executive director.

Section 7. Secretary. The secretary shall keep the minutes of the meetings of the Council and of the Executive Committee, in books provided for the purpose; he shall see that all notices are duly given in accordance with the provisions of these by-laws, or as required by law; he shall be custodian of the records and of the corporate seal or seals of the corporation; he shall see that the corporate seal is affixed to all documents, the execution of which, on behalf of the corporation, under its seal, is duly authorized, and when so affixed may attest the same; and, in general, he shall perform all duties incident to the office of a secretary of a corporation, and such other duties as, from time to time, may be assigned to him by the Council or by the by-laws.

Section 8. Treasurer. The treasurer shall have charge of and be responsible for all funds, securities, receipts and disbursements of the corporation, and shall deposit, or cause to be deposited, in the name of the corporation, all monies or other valuable effects in such banks, trust companies, or other depositories as shall, from time to time, be selected by the Council; he shall render to the president and to the Council annually, and at other times whenever requested, an account of the financial condition of the corporation; and, in general, shall perform all duties incident to the office of a treasurer of a corporation, and such other duties as may be assigned to him by the Council.

Section 8A. Secretary-Treasurer. All or some of the duties contained in Sections 7 and 8 may be assigned to one person. This person will be designated Secretary-Treasurer.

Section 9. Controller. The office of controller may be created by the Council, and the duties and authority of such officer shall be fixed by the Council.

Section 10. Counsel. The duties and authority of the counsel shall be fixed by the Council, and he shall be a member of the Council, by virtue of his office.

[Adopted by the Membership Meeting of May 14, 1953, subject to implementation by the Executive Committee; made effective by the Executive Committee on April 6, 1954.]

Note: Includes all revisions through November 14, 1956.

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
63 AUBURN AVENUE, N. E. ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA

This publication is sent to you with the compliments of the Southern Regional Council. The subject matter with which it is concerned is especially timely, and we felt that it would be of interest to you.

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
ROOM 432, 63 AUBURN AVENUE, N. E. ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA

GEORGE S. MITCHELL,
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

A Council to attain, through research and action, the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South.

November 7, 1956

To: Agencies represented at Tuskegee Meeting, October 24-25, 1956

It will be remembered that SRC agreed at the Tuskegee gathering October 24-25 to accept responsibility for alerting various agencies to the possible kinds of assistance they would give in the four cities in the special coordinating effort.

The cities were listed in the Minutes of the Tuskegee gathering and were Charlottesville, Nashville, Miami, and one in North Carolina.

To get the North Carolina one pinned down definitely, I have written to Tartt Bell and asked him to write you all as to which one it is to be.

What the group evidently had in mind was that each body should alert its key people in each of the four cities to press hard in that city for action in the way of a local citizen committee, white and Negro, to move through on public school desegregation. Actually such committees are at work in each of the four selected cities.

So the matter becomes one of alerting your key people in each of the four cities to cooperate with the existing committee. The names of the persons available for local coordination were:

Charlottesville, Virginia - Mrs. Sarah Patton Boyle, Box 3183, University Station

Piedmont North Carolina - Tartt Bell, American Friends Service Committee, 617 W. Market Street, Greensboro, North Carolina

Nashville, Tennessee - A. C. Miller, Christian Life Commission, Southern Baptist Convention, Baptist Building

Miami, Florida - Seymour Samet, American Jewish Committee 1208 Congress Building

There was at Tuskegee a good deal of spillover interest in designating Tuscaloosa, Alabama, as an additional city for coordinated effort. But the meeting specifically shrank from naming it as a fifth city. So our proper duty would be to assist with such help to Tuscaloosa as can be conveniently managed.*

It will not be enough if each agency simply writes to its key person and asks him or her so to concern himself or herself. Really best if each agency schedules the city for an early visit by some able person from the agency's central office; has present and future conferences with the existing local committee or its representatives; and explores ways locally to make available the best impetus which can come from that agency's local representatives.

I will be grateful if when you have taken action you will let us know what you did. It isn't necessary, but it would be helpful if some one spot knew the steps taken by each agency.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell

George S. Mitchell
Executive Director

GSM/eab

*Tuscaloosa, Alabama, the coordinator is Reverend Robert Hughes, 2921 Nineteenth Street, South, Apartment E, Homewood, Alabama.

UNITED STATES SENATE

Committee on Banking and Currency

August 26, 1957

Mr. Marion A. Wright, President
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
Office of the President
Linville Falls, North Carolina

Dear Mr. Wright:

I was more than pleased to have been able to place the materials about the Southern Regional Council in the Record immediately following the attack on the organization.

I have had some personal experience with unfair attacks and I was determined to have the answers appear with the charges.

Your organization has been of great service throughout this civil rights debate. It is true that you, as a private organization, have provided more information and more facts concerning the voting situation than has the Department of Justice. In fact, it is some reflection on the Department that it was necessary for us to turn to private groups for help, especially when that help demands such a high degree of courage on your part.

With best wishes,

Faithfully,

/s/ PAUL H. DOUGLAS

Paul H. Douglas

PHD:HSL

Wanted: The South's Future for the Nation

By Rupert B. Vance

No. 5

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC.

New South, March, 1946
Vol. I, No. 3

Price, 25 cents per copy
5 copies, $1.00
25 copies, $4.00
100 copies, $15.00

Wanted: The South's Future for the Nation

By Rupert B. Vance

Introduction by Governor Ellis Arnall of Georgia

Copyright, 1946

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
63 Auburn Avenue, N. E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

RUPERT B. VANCE, Kenan Professor of Sociology at the University of North Carolina and long-experienced student of the South, is a native of Arkansas. He has written several works on Southern problems, including Human Factors in Cotton Culture, Human Geography of the South, The South's Place in the Nation and Regional Reconstruction for the South. This pamphlet is condensed from his latest work, All These People: The Nation's Human Resources in the South, which is based on the study of the Southern people undertaken by the Institute for Research in Social Science of the University of North Carolina. Of his latest book he says: "This study was begun in the depths of the depression, when it seemed that if America had overproduced anything, it was good, standard Americans. The South with its surplus manpower was regarded as the 'Nation's Economic Problem No. 1.' It was carried on in the war period when every atom of manpower counted for national survival. It looks forward to a future when the men, women and maturing youth of the South may again be 'surplus.' " All These People is published by the University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, N. C.

Introduction

THIS STUDY of the South by Dr. Rupert B. Vance is of the utmost value to an understanding of the problems of the section, which must be solved if the Nation's economy is to develop to the interest of all Americans. Throughout the South today there is a feeling that the old era of this section's exploitation is at an end and that a new prosperity with an accompanying series of social gains will develop in our region.

This is justified by the recapitulation of the human and natural resources of which the South and Southerners have such an abundance. The elimination of the freight rate discriminations, the expansion of industries based upon our agricultural and mineral resources, the development of greater technological skill among our people, the inevitable expansion of Latin American trade utilizing our Southern ports, are factors that justify considerable optimism.

There is no problem in the South that does not have its origin in the poverty and exploitation of the section. Injustices, instances of racial friction, inadequate opportunities for education and lack of opportunity for economic advancement are all attributable to the low income of the people of our section. This is not only a matter of concern to the South but a matter of concern to every American, if our country must break the shackles of tradition of Imperial-East and Colonial-South-and-West, if we are to avoid the economic chaos and stratification of classes inevitable in a society where industry and financial power are concentrated in a single section.

Dr. Vance's study is stimulating and suggestive: every Southerner and every American should read it.

Atlanta, March 7, 1946.

ELLIS ARNALL
Governor of Georgia

Have and Have-Not

Problems and Potentials of the South

IN 1940 the eleven states of the Southeast contained over 28,250,000 people — 21.5 percent of the population of the continental United States. With more than one-fifth of the Nation's people the region comprised 17.4 percent of the Nation's area and was estimated to contain 11.5 percent of its accumulated wealth. Together with the Southwest, the Southern Region accounted for 28.9 percent of the Nation's people, 36.3 percent of its area and an estimated 16.7 percent of its wealth.

Although the question of social objectives is highly controversial, one conclusion can be generally accepted. This is simply that society should survive. Among the objectives that will enhance the survival-value of any economy there are two that stand out clearly: (1) The full utilization of human and material resources; and (2) the logical and fairly equitable distribution of incomes. By "fairly equitable distribution" we do not mean equal distribution of wealth and incomes but a range which, in addition to reflecting individual contributions to the total welfare, allows for a continuation of the economy at a level high enough to secure the objectives of full utilization of resources and thus of survival.

The weight and seriousness of this problem is no longer evaded. In 1936, John Maynard Keynes wrote: "The outstanding faults of the economic society in which we live are its failure to provide for full employment and its arbitrary and inequitable distribution of wealth and income. . . It is certain that the world will not much longer tolerate the unemployment which, apart from brief intervals of excitement, is associated—and in my opinion inevitably associated — with present day capitalistic individualism."[1]

Our Income Is Low

No region can reasonably object to a geographic division of labor that adjusts production to resources, meets the needs of the Nation, and returns an equitable flow of income to the regional and occupational groups involved. It is this last criterion that our regional and occupational hierarchy fails to meet. The Southeast's per capita income is usually only 60 percent of the Nation's average. Estimated income in 1940 ranged from

---

1. John Maynard Keynes, The General Theory of Employment, Interest and Money, pp. 372, 381.

OUR INCOME IS LOW

This contrast in per capita incomes (1940) reveals one of the basic problems of the South. Each coin equals $100. The South's low per capita income is figured as part of the national average, shown at the left, and is one reason why the U. S. average is not greater. Compared with the Nation's most prosperous region, the Far West, the Southeast's is small indeed.

$198 per person in Mississippi to $818 in Connecticut, a spread that hardly seems justifiable unless one part of the country is devoting itself to the accomplishment of unneeded tasks in an unskilled manner. The Far West and the Northeast attained an average income of $692 and $685 per person, but with a national average of $546 the Southeast fell to $317 per capita below both the Southwest and Northwest. Every state with a per capita income below $350 was Southern except North Dakota. While such disparities have natural antecedents in historical and economic causes, they find less justification in social values and social theory. The maldistribution of income continually threatens the functioning of our economic system, while malnutrition and low standards continually threaten the replacement of adequate human resources.

Income in our economy goes over into purchasing power whose circulation in the medium of money performs a two-fold function: (1) It helps to keep the economic mechanism going by continually calling forth supplies of goods and services, and (2) it replenishes human resources whose biological efficiency and cultural adequacy result from the wise consumption of such goods and services. These inequalities should not be considered exclusively in terms of regional grievances, although possibly there is no economic theory competent to silence such attitudes. More important, they should be considered as injuries to our on-going economic system.

We Have the Resources

More than anything else the future of the South depends on the development of resources and capacities that are as yet largely unrealized. The region has natural resources and human resources. These forms of wealth are primary, but for their development they depend upon the building up of technological resources, institutional resources and capital resources. The creation of these secondary forms of wealth, as Howard W. Odum has pointed out, are matters of organization, skill and previous experience. This is both an economic and a cultural task in which the Nation is as vitally concerned as the region itself.

The question is often asked: Did the war accelerate this development? One answer was recently given by the National Industrial Conference Board, an independent research agency. It pointed out that during the war the South was in process of the most important industrial growth in its history. This growth gained headway before the war; it was accelerated by the war program. Important sectors in this expansion were located all over the South: shipping in the Norfolk and Gulf areas; expansion of power and aluminum in the TVA area; heavy industry in Birmingham; textiles, rayon and nylon in Virginia and the southern Piedmont; refining and chemical industries plus synthetic rubber in the oil producing areas; pulp, paper and lumber products; minerals and the processing of metals — all increased throughout the region.

The great problem that faces this section is to retain a fair proportion of these wartime gains and to devote these industries to the spread of general well-being in the region. There will be inevitable post-war retrenchments; not all of the South's expansion will survive. There are many reasons, however, to believe that the South has basic resources for further industrialization in a nation that will develop and maintain a more complex economy after the war. For brevity, they may be listed in order:

RETAIL SALES REFLECT LOW LIVING STANDARDS

Our low income shows up in this comparison of retail sales per capita in 1939, a fairly normal postwar year. In the Southeast there was only $193 in retail sales for each man, woman and child in the region. In the Far West people had more than twice our purchasing power.

TOO MANY FARMERS?

Southern farms alone cannot provide for the South's growing population. "In 1930 it was figured that if every farm boy growing to maturity in the South tried to enter farming there would be three applicants for every farm left vacant . . ."

1. Proximity both to the already highly-industrialized areas of the Northeast and Middle States and to potential developments in South America.
2. Agricultural resources in climate, growing season, and land supply for a great variety of crops ranging from truck, fruit, livestock, and forest products to already developed staples such as cotton, sugar, rice, and tobacco.
3. Mineral resources of coal, iron, oil, gas, sulphur and non-ferrous minerals, with stone and building material of all kinds.
4. Adequate transportation facilities in its developed railroad network and public highway systems.
5. Low land values and site values as compared to more congested areas.
6. Large groups of basically sound and capable population, in need only of training, education and more adequate services to become a skilled labor supply.
7. Large potential groups of consumers for all goods and services, awaiting only better productive organization and increased purchasing power to become the country's best new market.

Can We Live on the Land?

The rural South has the largest population increases of the Nation, and it has tried to accommodate this increase on the land. In 1930 it was figured that if every farm boy growing to maturity in the South tried to enter farming there would be three applicants for every farm left vacant by death or retirement of its operator. This indicates the need for further migration and industrialization. What the South should do is to improve the quality of its agriculture while decreasing the number of people who must be supported on the land. Both service in the armed forces and employment in war industries offered material aid here; they introduced many rural youths to an industrial discipline they had never known before.

The South can expect for a long time to remain a major agricultural area. Nevertheless, any list of its main problems, such as those given here, will show that most are related to the region's agricultural background:

1. Loss of soil resources by leaching and erosion.
2. The gradual loss of a large share of world cotton and tobacco markets.
3. Threatened loss, through mechanization, crop reduction and improved practices, of agriculture's capacity to employ population at former rates.
4. The numbing effect of tenancy on the South's agriculture.
5. Inadequacy of the South's rural educational facilities to prepare farm children to meet needed changes.
6. The South's lack of capital, economic organization, patent rights, etc., to finance needed development in new fields. The South appears to be still in the stage of a colonial economy.

The South's Gain is the Nation's Gain

The Nation and the South need to agree that the region can do the greatest possible service by increasing its income and expanding its markets. Leon Henderson once said that for the South to attain a normal American standard of living would create an annual market worth ten billion dollars to the Nation. This is a duty the South owes the whole Nation. It is a simple exercise in arithmetic to show that as a 140 billion dollar income country we will have a much better chance to meet the obligation of our war debts than as an 80 billion dollar country. As the section with the lowest incomes, the South has the duty of meeting the deficit by raising its income to more normal levels. To agree on this goal, both the Nation and the region should rid themselves of certain complexes. The Nation should come to realize that, in the long run, further industrialization of the South will aid, not injure, the national well-being. The South in its turn should recover from its low-wage complex and realize that a rising level of wages in the area will create greater markets and increased well-being. This, it should be realized, applies also to the Negro, who has the lowest level of living of any large group in America.

Farmer in the Well

A Look at Agriculture and Its Future

In the future development of the South agriculture will continue to play a dominant role. It occupies a position of critical importance, offering problems and opportunities for those who farm and those who seek to direct the forces of scientific research in increasing the wealth and welfare of the region. These conditions pose basic questions for the developing science of land utilization which, we assume, is the connecting link between the physical and the human factors in agriculture. It is a fallacy to think of either farming or land use analysis as simple procedures to be worked out by rule of thumb. Many factors must be considered from the point of view of the national wealth and welfare in land-use studies. The South must make the best possible use of science in all its phases, if it is to make the best possible use of its agricultural resources.

